"Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal. Avoid bathing when the body is cooling after perspiration; but bathe when the body is warm, provided no time is lost in getting into the water. Avoid chilling the body by sitting or standing naked on the banks or in boats, after having been in the water. Avoid remaining too long in the water, but leave it immediately when there is the slightest feeling of chilliness. Avoid bathing altogether in the open air if, after having been a short time in the water, there is a sense of chilliness with numbness of the hands and feet. The vigorous and strong may bathe early in the morning on an empty stomach; but the young and those who are weak had better bathe three hours after a meal; the best time for such is from two to three hours after breakfast. Those who are subject to attacks of giddiness and faintness, and those who suffer from palpitation and other sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without first consulting their medical adviser."

CARE OF THE TEETH.—Rousseau said that no woman with fine teeth could be ugly. The too early loss of the first teeth has an unfavorable influence upon the beauty and duration of the second. The youngest should accordingly be made to take care of them. All that is necessary is to brush them several times a day with a little ordinary soap or magnesia and water. After eating, the particles of food should be carefully removed from the teeth by means of a tooth-pick of quill or wood, but never of metal. Camphorated and acid tooth powders are injurious, both to the enamel and the gums, and if employed, every particle should be removed from the gums by carefully rinsing. The habit which some ladies have of using a bit of lemon, though it may whiten the teeth and give a temporary firmness and color to the gums, is fatal to the enamel, as are all acids. No one, young or old, should turn their jaws into nut-crackers; and it is even dangerous for women to bite off, as they often do, the ends of the thread in sewing. It is not safe to bring very hot food or drink, especially if immediately followed by anything cold, in contact with the teeth.—Country Gentleman.

SUMMER DRINKS.—Perry is a delicious beverage made from cherries, and will keep a year or more. Take six pounds of cherries and bruise them; pour on a pint and a half of hot water and boil for fifteen minutes; strain through a flannel bag, and add three pounds of sugar. Boil for half an hour or more, or until the liquid will sink to the bottom of a cup of water (try it with a teaspoonful of the liquid); then turn into jelly cups and cover with paper dipped in the white of an egg.

To prepare the drink: Put a spoonful of the jelly into a goblet of water and let it stand about ten minutes; then stir it up and fill with pounded ice. Currants and raspberries made into "shrub" furnish a pleasant and cooling drink when mixed with ice-water. Pounded ice is also an agreeable addition to a saucer of strawberries, raspberries or currants. Pound it until it is almost as fine as snow and spread it over the berries. With fruit it is also an excellent substitute for cream.—Scribner's Monthly.

PRESERVING THE DEAD.—Bro. Grant:—I wish every one could know the benefit of using turf, dug on moist ground, to keep friends that die, for their burial. Nothing else is so good. Dig a turf large enough to reach from the neck down over the chest, wrap with one thickness of thin cloth, and lay it next the person. In extreme cases, lay one also on each side up under the arms; also one each side the face. It will take away the unpleasant smell, and prevent persons from turning dark, and turn it back in a great measure when it has already turned. It will also stop purging. Change for new ones two or three times a day. By all means try it.

MRS. S. PROCTOR.

IT is beginning to be suspected now that digestion and indigestion have a good deal to do with "a christian spirit and temper;" but investigations of this kind proceed very slowly, as it is so nice to eat and drink what we like, and so trying only to eat and drink what likes us. Rich dishes look like that fruit in Eden, "pleasant to the eyes," and we forget the shadows behind them. This morning I met our excellent and worthy church-warden, quite in low spirits about "church-rates," and other sublunary matters, and I know well the reason of it, but it wouldn't do to tell him. Entre nous, there was a supper last night, and the roast beef and strong ale have at last taken an ecclesiastical shape.—Good Health.

THE LITTLE GIRL AND HER COPY.

A little girl went to writing-school. When she saw her copy, with every line so perfect, "I can never write like that," she said.

She looked steadfastly at the straight round lines, so slim and graceful. Then she took up her pen and timidly put it on the paper. Her hand trembled; she stopped, studied the copy, and began again. "I can but try," said the little girl; "I will do as well as I can."

She wrote half a page. The letters were crooked. What more could we expect from a first effort? The next scholar stretched across her desk, and said, "What scraggy things you make!" Tears filled the little girl's eyes. She dreaded to have the teacher see her book. "He will be angry with me and scold, she said to herself.

But when the teacher came and looked, he smiled. "I see you are trying, my little girl," he said kindly, "and that is enough for me."

She took courage. Again and again she studied the beautiful copy. She wanted to know how every line went, how every letter was rounded and made. Then she took up her pen and began to write. She wrote carefully, with the copy always before her. But oh! what slow work it was! Her letters straggled here, they crowded there, and some of them looked every way.

The little girl trembled at the step of the teacher. "I am afraid you will find fault with me," she said. "My letters are not fit to be on the same page with the copy."

"I do not find fault with you," said the teacher, "because I do not look so much at what you do. By really trying you make a little improvement every day; and a little improvement every day will enable you to reach excellence by and by."

"Thank you, sir," said the little girl; and thus encouraged, she took up her pen with a greater spirit of application than before.

And so it is with the dear children who are trying to become like Jesus. God has given us a heavenly copy. He has given us his dear Son "for an example, that we should follow his steps." He "did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." "He is altogether lovely," and "full of grace and truth." And when you study his character, "I can never, never reach that," you say; "I can never be like Jesus."

God does not expect you to become like his dear Son in a minute, or a day, or a year; but what pleases him is that you should love him, and try to follow his example. It is that temper which helps you to grow, day by day, little by little, into his likeness, which God desires to see. God loves you for trying, and will help you.—Observer.

A HAPPY HEART.

My little boy came to me this morning with a broken toy, and begged me to mend it for him. It was a very handsome toy, and was the pride of his heart just then, so I did not wonder to see his lips quivering, and the tears come into his eyes.

"I'll try to fix it, darling," I said, "but I'm afraid I can't do it."

He watched me anxiously for a few moments, and then said, cheerfully:

"Never mind, mamma! If you can't fix it, I'll just be as happy without it."

Wasn't that a brave sunshiny heart? And that made me think of a dear little girl, only three years old, whom I once saw bringing out her choicest playthings to amuse a little home-sick cousin. Among the rest was a little trunk, with bands of silk paper for straps,—a very pretty toy; but careless little Freddie tipped the lid too far back, and broke it off. He burst out with a cry of fright, but little Minnie, with her own eyes full of tears, said,

"Never mind, Freddie; just see what a nice little cradle the top will make."

Keep a happy heart, little children, and you will be like sunbeams everywhere you go.—Young Reaper.

WHEN THE DARK COMES.

A little girl sat, at twilight, in her sick mother's room, busily thinking. All day she had been full of fun and noise, and had many times worried her poor tired mother.

"Ma," said the little girl, "what do you suppose makes me get over my mischief, and begin to act good, just about this time every night?"

"I do not know, dear. Can you tell?"

"Well, I guess it's because this is when the dark comes. You know I am a little afraid of that. And then, ma, I begin to think of all the naughty things I've done to grieve you, and that perhaps you might die before morning; and so I begin to act good."

"Oh," thought I, "how many of us wait till 'the dark comes,' in the form of sickness, or sorrow, or trouble of some kind, before we 'begin to act good!'" How much better to be good while we are enjoying life's bright sunshine! and then, 'when the dark comes'—as it will, in a measure, to all—we shall be ready to meet it without fear.—Well-Spring.

"STEALING OFF."—"I spend my evenings part in study, then I talk with father," said James, a boy whom I knew.

"I wish my father would let us talk with him," said Fred; "but he gets the newspaper after tea, and then it is nothing but 'Keep still, boys.' So we steal off."

"Where?"

"Ah! that's telling," said Fred.

This "stealing off" is generally bad business, for there is nobody so busy in the night-time as Satan, who always contrives to find "some mischief still for idle hands to do."

MORNING DAWNS.

Dawn of morning! is it near?
Night so long, the way is drear;
Do the signs of day appear?
Yes, morning dawns.

Time declares earth's years grow old,
That the last is nearly told;
Signals mark night's hours enrolled;
The morning dawns.

Lo, the "worse and worse of sin"
Speaks the truth in battle din;
Darkest hour when day begins,
And morning dawns.

Voyagers make their reckoning tell,
Skillful pilots show it well,
Time foretold to thoughts impel,
Of morning dawn.

Sounds come from the watchman's tower,
Heralding the coming hour;
Gospel herald speaks with power
Of morning dawn.

War-clouds gather, nations rage,
But the last they soon shall wage,
Filling up the sacred page;
The morning dawns.

Come, Lord Jesus, quickly come,
Gather thine elect ones home,
Never more in sin to roam—
Bright morning dawns.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER THIRTEEN.

This admonition not to worship the beast and his image, nor receive his mark, is the last warning voice of the church to the heedless multitudes drifting into Spiritualism; for with their acceptance of the mark, their day of mercy is over. The faithful servants of God, in view of the peril of their lives and the close of their labors with the world, now flee from worldly society to the wilderness and other places of retreat, to await the Lord's coming, where they "cry day and night unto him" for deliverance. How long they are to remain here, waiting thus, I am not able to say. I think it must be two or three years, or so. It will be, at least, while six of the "seven last plagues" are being poured out on their enemies; for the first one falls on those who have the mark of the beast (Rev. 16:2), and the Lord comes under the sixth, when the three unclean spirits have gone forth to assemble the nations to fight with him, in "the battle of the great day of God Almighty." The expression, "Though he bear long with them," while they are crying day and night, shows also a considerable time spent in this longing for deliverance from their trials.

It seems that two important purposes in the providence of God are served by the persecution which drives the faithful church away from worldly society to the wilderness. One is, that the world, being separated from the church, he can pour out his seven last plagues upon them without injury to the church. The other is, that the church being now separated from the world, and from all worldly interests, possessions, and friends, will thus be relieved of many of her usual "weights" and hindrances to devotion, and so be assisted to a growth in grace, and a preparation for the coming of the Lord. Hence we read of this time, "Here is the patience of the saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God and the faith of Jesus." v. 13. Here, and during the approaching warnings to the world, "the bride" will make "herself ready" for the "marriage of the Lamb." Here the "many shall be purified, made white, and tried." Here, and during the previous warnings, "the wise shall understand, but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand." Dan. 12:10.

Immediately after this conflict, in reference to worshiping the beast and receiving his mark, the Lord is represented as coming (Rev. 14: 14) in the language—"And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in hand a sharp sickle." Then follows an angel, "crying with a loud voice to Him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in thy sickle and reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe." Another angel followed with the command—"Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth, for her grapes are fully ripe. And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and gathered the vine of the earth, and cast it into the great winepress of the wrath of God." Rev. 14:15–18. This figure of "the harvest" refers to the gathering of the saints, no doubt, while the gathering of "the clusters of the vine," and casting them "into the great wine-press of the wrath of God" refers to the awful day of the gathering and punishment of the wicked.

Before dismissing these warnings of the church, I wish to show that the future ones are all linked together in one movement against Spiritualism. This seems evident from the nature of the case; for as the future warnings are all directed against Spiritualism, and each successive one is called out by some new and startling development among them, they are severally but so many voices in the church against Spiritualism. This appears evident, also, from the parable of the ten virgins (Matt. 25: 1–10), where these two prominent movements in the church are distinctly marked. The first is the Advent movement in the past, which was to be attended by a disappointment in expecting the Bridegroom before the true time for his coming, which would result in a state of slumbering and sleeping in the church. All this has been completely fulfilled among us. The last movement, according to the parable, will be the midnight cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." This language shows that after the time of slumbering and sleeping, the church receives new light on the Lord's coming, giving new life and energy to her expectations. But it must be manifest to every candid observer that there is among us a growing distrust of what we call "time arguments." Hence the new light, which gives such a stimulus to the drooping hopes of the church as it receives from the midnight cry, must be based on something that can command their confidence better than any arrangement of the prophetic periods alone.

The impending developments in Spiritualism, and particularly the rise of the two-horned beast, must needs convince all, who are watching, of our whereabouts in prophecy with such clearness and certainty that it will give rise to a new movement of the church, which, as it proceeds, will be more active, vigorous, and self-sacrificing, than we have ever yet experienced. And this movement will continue with growing interest, intensity and opposition, till the enforcement of the mark of the beast. If my position here be correct, "the foolish virgins" are likely to be that class of Adventists who cannot join with us in denouncing the doctrines of Spiritualism. I refer to those who hold to the immortality of the soul.

THE SEVEN LAST PLAGUES.

These "seven last plagues" are the same as the "seven vials of the wrath of God," as it will appear by reading the fifteenth chapter of Revelation, and especially the sixth, seventh and eighth verses, in comparison with the first verse. The sixteenth chapter is devoted to the effect of each vial, as they are successively poured out on those who worship the beast and his image, and have received the mark. There has been a great diversity in the application of these vials, by those who have attempted to show their fulfillment; and this diversity arises from a determination to put them somewhere in the past, while they belong in the future. But as the first vial is found to be a judgment or "plague" on those who have "the mark of the beast," and worship the image, we must not commence their fulfillment before the mark and worship of the beast are required of men.

But I have shown, in treating of the two-horned beast, that the mark and image of the beast are to be developed by the union of Catholics, Spiritualists, and revolutionists generally, through the instrumentality of the two-horned beast, and that all these things are in the future. I have also shown that the third angel's message—a warning not to worship the beast and his image, nor receive his mark, which must be given when the work is being enforced on men—must have its accomplishment in the future; for it comes in order after the Advent message, which we have been proclaiming for thirty-five years. They are, therefore, evidently in the future; are to commence immediately after the development of the confederacy of Catholics, Spiritualists, etc., will be poured out on those who accept of their mark and false worship; and will run parellel with their course of blasphemy and iniquity unto the judgment. This appears from their being called the "seven last plagues," which shows that they are among the last things in the world's history. It is evident, too, from the fact that the whole seven plagues are poured out on the same individuals—the generation of blasphemers who have rejected God, in choosing the worship of the beast, and in receiving the mark. This is shown in the eleventh verse, where the "darkness" of the fifth vial is attended with the "sores" of the first vial, while "they gnawed their tongues for pain, and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores." It appears too from the cry—"Come out of her, my people," as the reason given for coming out is, "That ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." But it is more especially manifest in the third angel's message, where those who receive the mark are warned that "the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation. The warning concludes with the statement that "they have no rest day nor night who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name." Thus it appears that during the reign of the false Christ over the confederacy, there will be no rest to his subjects on account of the "pains," "sores," and various sufferings, from these "seven last plagues."

Hence we may say in concluding this point, that while the evidence for a future fulfillment of the mark of the beast and his image, and their false worship, is overwhelming and unquestionable, so the evidence that the seven vials of God's wrath, or seven last plagues, are to be poured out in the future on these blasphemers who have the mark, is clear and decisive. And since these things, so terribly important to all, are so soon to become realities before our eyes, it is painful to behold the disposition so prevalent among us to trifle with the plain import of these solemn prophecies, by seeking a past fulfillment for them most anywhere, or in most anything.

Before we proceed to notice in order the seven vials or plagues as they are poured out on the last-day mockers and scoffers, we will call attention to one feature which stands out in terrible significance, as the moral which these plagues seem intended to teach those who suffer from them. It is well known that the Spiritualist philosophy acknowledges no God but Nature, and no guide but reason. A uniformity in nature's ordinary operations constitutes what we call nature's laws. Christians say that God, the Creator and Preserver of all, "upholding all things by the word of his power," can set aside any or all of these laws at his pleasure, and has done it to some extent on various occasions, as recorded in the Bible. But Spiritualists, denying a personal God and the authority of the Bible, say No; "nature's laws are infallible; they never change, nor can change." These plagues seem intended of the Lord as so many "hard arguments" against their philosophy, as well as a punishment for their blasphemy.

GABRIEL AND DANIEL.

J. S. GIDDINGS.

"At the beginning of the supplication the commandment came forth."

What is this commandment? In Dan. 9:2, reference is made to books. Daniel had been reading, and in verse four he speaks of a covenant and commandments; in the twelfth and thirteenth verses of the law of Moses, and the confirming of God's word or covenant (which was confirmed in the days of Daniel); so we see he had been reading Moses, and the prophets; and if he had read Isa. 44th and 45th chapters, he must have known that Cyrus was the man to "build the city, and let go the captives, without price or reward."

As Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus, he must have known the king; and knowing the seventy years were fulfilled, he looked to Cyrus for a commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem; and knowing also that the Lord held Cyrus' right hand (Isa. 45: 1), he called on the Lord (Dan. 9:3)—"And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes." There was but one way for Cyrus to fulfill the word of the Lord, as spoken by Isaiah (45:13), "He shall build my city"; and that was by proclamation, or commandment, to let the people go. Daniel prayed for that, and he says (Dan. 9:21–23)—"Yea, while I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation; and he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding. At the beginning of thy supplication the commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved." Blessed news for Daniel and his people, for that commandment was to bring deliverance to the captives, and it was the beginning of the sixty-nine weeks; for Gabriel said—"Know therefore, and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks; . . . . and after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself; and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood; and unto the end of the war desolations are determined."

It was not the prince that was to do this work, but the people, and they did do it, as Gabriel said they should; and yet the prince tried to save the sanctuary, but could not, for the people were determined to destroy it; and they did their work, that the Scriptures might be fulfilled. Now if the power that destroyed the city and the sanctuary is again referred to by any subsequent pronoun, it must be in the plural they, and not he. "And he shall confirm the covenant." This pronoun cannot refer to the power that destroyed the city and sanctuary; for it is in the singular number. Let us examine the sentence—"People of the prince." "People" is the active agent. Now place prince first, and then see,—Prince of the people. Now prince is the active agent; but as the republic of Rome presents itself to the prophetic eye, the people are seen destroying the city and sanctuary; therefore, any pronoun to represent that power must be in the plural.

The next noun in looking back is the Messiah; this is in the singular number. Now let us consider which of the two did the work. "And in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease." If Titus the Roman prince had done this, he should have known it; but he disclaimed it, so far as the sacrifice was concerned, and requested that it might be continued (see Josephus, page 743), for part of the Jews were loyal to the Romans, and did not want the sacrifice to cease. But those slain beasts had ceased to be valid when Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; so the house of Israel had passed away, and Christ, the minister of the new covenant, was set over his own house, to fulfill the word of the Lord by the mouth of Isaiah—"For the Lord God shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name"; "and the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch." Now did he (the Messiah) "confirm the covenant with many (not by himself, but with many) for one week." Titus disclaims the work. See if Jesus does. Mark 16:19, 20—"So, then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God; and they (the many) went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following." Rom. 15:8. "Now I say that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." This was the work of Jesus, not Titus.

Worcester, Mass.

HADES.

THE SOUL OF MAN; OR, THE "PSYCHE" OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

(Concluded.)

IX. But we must examine a little closer into this matter. We affirm that, whatever be the meaning of the Greek psyche in the New Testament, it should certainly have one uniform meaning throughout that New Testament whenever it is used as descriptive of a constituent part of human nature. We do not deny that it may have, when thus used, different translations; but we do contend that those different translations should be taken as expressive of one and the same idea. We find no fault with the word being sometimes translated "soul" and sometimes "life;" but then we do insist that "soul" and "life" should mean one and the same thing. To suppose the word psyche to have two different senses when spoken of as an important constituent part of human nature, and that we are sometimes to take it in one of these senses and sometimes in another, when the New Testament itself does not hint that it is to be differently understood, that we are to mix up and alternate their senses just as we please, is, to our minds, to interpret the language of God's word as we would not dare to interpret any book of man.

X. Let us take an example. Plato has written a book, his Phædo, upon the nature of the psyche or soul of man. This word psyche occurs in a great number of places throughout this book. He affirms and denies a great many things of this psyche. What would be thought of an interpreter of Plato who would venture to give to this important word of Plato two entirely distinct senses, and attribute now one sense and now another to the word, without the smallest intimation from Plato that he ever used the word in different senses, or the smallest clue from him to distinguish, if he so used it, in the various places? What, I say, would be thought of an interpreter of Plato, who would say that in one paragraph Plato used it in one sense, and another paragraph that he used it in another, while Plato himself never hinted anything of the kind? What would be thought of the interpreter of Plato who would in one sentence of Plato take this word in one sense, and in the very next sentence take it in a quite different sense, although Plato himself was proceeding in one unbroken line of argument? We confidently say that such an interpreter would be dismissed with contumely as assuming a task for which he had shown himself utterly unworthy, and held up to scorn as introducing a principle of interpretation which would throw into utter confusion all human thought. This principle of interpretation which would be rejected in the case of a commentator or translator of Plato, or any human author, is the very principle which the translators of our authorized version of God's word have gone upon, and hitherto without rebuke. Against it we, for one, raise our voice.

XI. A translation is to a considerable extent a commentary. When any word is capable of two different translations, and one is chosen rather than another, then the translator puts his comment upon the original. A translation is of all commentaries the most subtle. The reader fancies he is reading the words of the author when he is perhaps reading the words of the translator, putting into the author's mouth sentiments he never felt. It is on this account that, of all tasks that can be assumed by any man, the office of translating God's word is the most responsible. We will show our readers how our translators have treated the words of Christ when he speaks of the human soul.

XII. They have done what, we affirm with little danger of contradiction, no translator of any human author would dare to do. Christ speaks often of the psyche, the soul of man. He tells us of its value; how it may be saved; how it may be lost. This psyche of man is ever in his thoughts, for it was to save it he came into the world. And yet our translators have in the various discourses and warnings of Christ translated this psyche by two different words which, in their estimation, and so used for this very reason, convey two different and opposite ideas,—viz., "life," i. e., animal life; and "soul," i. e., an immortal principle. Now we say that throughout the Gospels there is no intimation given that our Lord ever uses this important word in such different senses; and that to use it thus differently is to do as great violence to his language as to attribute two different senses to the same term in the Phædo of Plato. But there are instances in which this is done of so flagrant a character that we venture to say no scholar will now stand up and defend them. To some of these we will now draw attention.

XIII. We will first draw attention to Matt. 16: 25–26, which runs thus in our authorized version: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will love his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" In these two verses, which follow one another, and in which one consecutive argument is followed out by Christ, "life" in the twenty-fifth verse is given by the translators as expressing a different idea from "soul" in the twenty-sixth. The one is given as expressive of animal life; the other as expressive of an immortal principle. And yet will it be believed by the English reader that the very same Greek word, psyche, stands for "life" in verse 25, and for "soul" in verse 26? Yet so it is. It is surely apparent that our Lord means the same thing by this word in these two consecutive sentences of a consecutive argument. Why, then, did not the translators use the same word in translation? Because a miserable philosophical theory of theirs about the soul forbade them. They could not give the true natural translation, that which must have struck them as obvious, without contradicting Plato. We will show this. We will suppose them to translate verse 25, giving there the word "soul" as in verse 26: "Whosoever will save his soul (his immortal principle) shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his soul (his immortal principle) for my sake, shall find it." Every one will see such a translation would be impossible to men imbued with the Platonic theory. For, according to them, "to save a soul" is not to preserve it from destruction or annihilation; since, according to their theory the soul cannot suffer such. To "save a soul" is with them to turn from sin to God, and so avoid the punishment of hell; and this they cannot deny that every one should do, and is commanded to do. Hence Scripture and their own knowledge of it forbids them to translate psyche by "soul" in verse 25, because they mean by "soul" an immortal principle in man.

But their own theory forbids them to translate it by "life" in verse 26; for, so translated, their theory would be contradicted. Thus translated it would run thus: "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own life?" This translation, we see, is forbidden by their own theory, for it would teach us the folly of those who have in this life prolonged their life by the denial of Christ, and even gained all that this world has to give; but who, in the scene of coming retribution after the judgment will lose their physical life which they had here prolonged. The Platonic theory forbids the idea that physical life will be lost in the scene of future retribution; and hence the translators were forced to translate psyche in verse 26 by "soul," meaning thereby an immortal principle whose immortality forbids the idea of its extinction; and hence forces upon the word "lose," and the phrase "lose his soul," an unnatural and absurd interpretation.

XIV. We defy any man to contend that psyche should have two different meanings in verses 25 and 26. We assume, then, that it cannot mean a physical life which may be terminated in verse 25, and an immortal existence which cannot be terminated in verse 26. We say that we must choose which of these two senses it is to bear in both places. We conclude that as no one can maintain it to mean an immortal principle in verse 25, but must mean their physical life; so it must mean physical life in verse 26. So translated the verses are harmonious and reasonable. "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his life? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his life?"

XV. We will now give another example of the violence done to the translation of the word psyche by the Platonic views of our translators. In Luke 12: 19–23 the word psyche occurs five times. In verses 19 and 20 it is translated by "soul," in verses 22 and 23 it is translated by "life." Now whoever reads this passage will see that it forms one consecutive argument. In verses 12–21 our Lord utters the parable of the rich man; from the 22nd verse he proceeds to draw the lesson deducible from it. The "therefore" of the twenty-second verse connects the entire passage. No one then can suppose that when he speaks of the psyche three times in verses 19 and 20, and then proceeds to speak twice of this same psyche in verses 22 and 23, he means by it two different things. But, as no one can contend that in verses 22 and 23 the word can mean an "immortal principle," they must needs confess that it cannot mean such an immortal principle in verses 19 and 20. The translation of psyche, therefore, in these latter verses should be "life," as it is rendered in verses 22 and 23; or, if we prefer the word "soul" throughout, we must at least confess that it means simply and only physical life.

XVI. These instances are sufficient to show us two things. First, the injurious influence which the Platonic theory has had upon our authorized version of the Scriptures: 2nd, that the word psyche has evidently, when spoken of a constituent part of human nature, one uniform meaning. We do not contend that it must always be translated by one and the same word "life;" though we think that such translation would bring out the sense of the original perhaps the most clearly. We have no objection to the old familiar word "soul." But what we do most solemnly protest against is such translation as our authorized version is not seldom guilty of, namely, in sentences and consecutive arguments giving to this word psyche two different translations, as though in these consecutive sentences it meant two different ideas, when it is plainly put for one and the same. We attribute no moral blame to our translators for this. They must have seen the violence they were doing to language. But they had firmly fixed in their minds a philosophical theory of the inalienable immortality of the soul, which they never dreamed of questioning; and hence this supposed truth forced them to do a violence to language of the grossest kind. But now, when we are promised a revised version of Scripture, and when the old Platonic theory of immortality no longer passes unquestioned, we solemnly call upon those learned and good men who have undertaken a much needed office, to see that they do not allow any philosophical predilections to cast upon their revised version the grievous slur they have brought upon King James' Bible. If they do, the Scriptures will require to be revised again.—Henry Constable, in Rainbow.

Kindle the Fire.—If there is a spark of fire left in a brand, run with it against the wind, and you will have a flame. So if there is any slumbering grace in your soul, take your stand against fashionable vice and folly, in yourself, in your family, in your church, and you will soon feel "that flame of living fire which shone so bright in saints of old." Lie down in quiet, and the fire divine will utterly go out.

WHY SHOULD I BE HOLY?

W. D. BRIDGE.

Attest the truth, let it ring out, speak it, sing it, pray it, that we must be holy. The Crisis is devoted in part to the exposition of the grand Bible truth that man may be, ought to be, is commanded to be, holy. Whatever you preach, preach this. Whatever doctrines you find in the word, this is there. It is there in its lustrous and heavenly guise, explained, simplified, enforced, illustrated; and every christian should say—

"The consolations of thy word
My soul have long upheld:
The faithful promise of the Lord
Shall surely be fulfilled.
Thy blood shall over all prevail,
And sanctify th' unclean;
The grace that saves the soul from hell,
Will save from present sin.
Then let us all thy fullness know,
From every sin set free;
Saved to the utmost, saved below,
And perfected in thee."

This should be, it may be, the christian's experience. Why so? I reply, first, because of personal needs. We need to get rid of bickerings, jealousies, petty grudges, narrow-mindedness, the thousand and one things that the heart and head unite in fostering and maturing; and it is found, by experience, that these and their kindred sins go not out but by "perfect love." The christian feels peevishness, undue fitfulness of temper, corroding and weakening care, and finds himself ofttimes conscious that the unholy sways him away from the line of his better nature and intents. What he needs is a pure heart. Not the nettlesome heart, which like the Noli me tangere plant spitefully discharges its seeds when touched; but the beautiful and tender heart, approachable and sweetly affected by all good influences. We need the purity of love, the genial and refreshing sympathies of holy nature, that our peace may be "as a river and our righteousness as the waves of the sea." Our unrest, fretfulness, discontentedness, murky doubts, distressing fears, will vanish, as we wish they would, if there be the rest of faith in its higher forms. Yes, we need holiness of heart for our own special and personal bettering.

Then, again, we need to be holy, we must be holy, if we would be sharpshooters in the army corps of God's militant Zion. How meagre the apparent results of christianity's power in comparison with what might be reasonably expected,—and is not much of this paucity of result due to this: the preacher, the lay-worker (male or female) is not so taught of the Holy Spirit that the arrow let fly goes when it should, and as it should? To change the figure, we need to be holy that sinners may see we are what the gospel claims to be able to make us, "living sacrifices, holy, acceptable unto God, . . . our reasonable service." The sinners say, and rightly, Why are you not "filled with all the fulness of God," if it be within the line of possibility? Why are you not "filled with the Spirit"? Why are not you, professor, sanctified, according to St. Paul's prayer—"The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless [mark the word] unto the coming [not after the coming, as a thing that is only to be] of our Lord Jesus Christ." How can we preach "justification by faith" to sinners, unless we preach the possibility and actuality of "being sanctified by the Holy Ghost." Rom. 15:16. Have we a right to preach low states of grace, and live in low states, when we are privileged to enjoy "the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ"?

But, again, we must be holy, or utterly perish. See the Word—"Holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." But, you say, is the truth of God brought to this? We reply, you have God's word for it; and as you unhesitatingly believe that word on other points, you must with equal fairness to your own soul undoubtingly believe it on this point. Christian brother, sister, let us act. Let us "go on unto perfection," "perfecting holiness in the fear of God." We may; we must, if our name is to stand registered among those who have "washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." We may be very bold, earnest, faithful and successful in declaring other Scripture truth; let us not shun to "declare all the counsel of God" on this grand, glorious, soul-enriching, sinner-convicting, Bible doctrine, which God has blessed, and will bless, to his own glory.

PRAYER.

D. EASTMAN.

What is it; a mere form of words? or is it breathing out the desires of the heart? The apostle James says, "The prayer of faith will save the sick." Let us see what prayer has done. It saved three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace. Not so much as the smell of fire was found upon their garments. He whose ears are open to the cries of his children could walk and talk with them there. It saved a Daniel in the den of lions. Not fearing the king's commandment, he offered his petitions three times a day, trusting in his God that bears prayer. Well might it be said, he had "an excellent spirit." Prayer saved the wise men of Babylon. Mighty kings trembled when they beheld the wonderful effects of prayer. It searched out interpretations of dreams, and interpreted the handwriting on the wall, showing Daniel what should befall his people in the latter days.

O what a powerful weapon! Who does not want it? It could save a Saul of Tarsus from his blindness, for "behold he prayeth." God sent a disciple of Jesus, whom he had been persecuting, for his relief. The prayer was short, but to the point. He asked for nothing more until his first prayer is answered—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" It was a prayer of faith. He believed the Lord would show him his duty, and the work he wished him to do. And when Ananias began to reason with the Lord about this pestilent fellow, he would not hear, but said, "Go thy way; for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings and the children of Israel. For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake." Acts 9: 15. He received the Holy Ghost, and arose and was baptized, according to the teachings of Christ. Then he could preach, and they received his testimony. He had a mighty experience. Singing and praying converted the jailer and all his house, loosed their feet which were fast in the stocks, and the doors swung open. What a mighty God to deliver.

Dear brethren, can you trust such a God as this? I feel that I can. At the end of the days, I believe Daniel and Paul will stand in their lot. When we love Jesus, we are led to pray, "Thy kingdom come." We sigh for it, we expect it very soon. The apostles met at one time, and the place was shaken. Will not the Lord hear his children who cry day and night for deliverance? He will. Have we on the wedding garment? Lord, help me to have it on.

THE FIG TREE.

GEO. E. STREETER.

"When thou wast under the fig tree, I saw thee."—John 1: 48.

Nathaniel thought it curious that Jesus should know him, having as he thought never seen him, when he said—"Whence knowest thou me?" "Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee." Nathaniel thought, as he was in that secluded place, hid away from the eye of man, no one could see what he was doing (it was not a wrong act he was committing, for Jesus said of him, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile). He was true to his profession. There was no hypocrisy about him. He was indeed what he professed to be. Jesus had seen him in his secret place when he was alone. His acts were before the Lord. He not only made great professions when he was seen of men, but alone he was good; so Jesus says—"In whom is no guile." What a blessing, to have our secret acts praised of Him who knoweth all things.

Lonely, sad, tired pilgrim, remember that one eye is on thee, although you may seem to be forsaken by men. The passer-by may not notice you in your lone retreat. Then be content; shine brightly, just as brightly as though men were looking on; for He who saw Nathaniel "under the fig tree," sees thee also; and the time is coming when the same voice will say to thee, When thou wast alone on that sick bed, amid those heavy trials, "I saw thee." When thou wast enduring those trials with ungodly friends that were near, "I saw thee." When called to drink of the bitter cup of affliction alone, "I saw thee." When at home, caring for the "stuff," and husband at work for me, "I saw thee." Thou wast indeed a christian, "in whom was no guile." Thy secret acts I approve. What a thought! Will this be so? It will. It is our place. That lone prayer, that lone sigh, that kind act to the sick, tempted one, and to that enemy,—"I saw thee." Now hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father."

Brethren and sisters, let us all remember our private acts are seen. As the good ones are noticed, so are the bad ones. Do not think that, because no one sees that act, it will never be found out. He who never slumbers will see you, and it will be brought to light. So let all be right, then we shall feel well, and God's Spirit will comfort us. Jesus is coming soon. Let us all be ready, is the prayer of your Bro. in Christ.

HOLINESS.

N. M. WELLS.

Bro. Grant:—I rejoice to learn in the Crisis that a wish is expressed that the subject of holiness be made specially prominent at the coming National Campmeeting. Praise the Lord! The glorious work is going on, and will go on, for God is in the movement. He will have a pure church presented to Jesus at his coming. Our lamps must be full of oil, burning brightly, and others will be led into the light—"the way of holiness." None but those who have had experience in this path of light and sweet rest of faith in Christ can fully understand it.

May the Lord move upon his people, who are walking in this beautiful light and freedom in Jesus, to go to the meeting and be instrumental in bringing others into this "great peace." God calls upon all who are experienced in this blessed state to witness to this glorious truth. I trust the Lord will have many witnesses of entire consecration to the Lord at this feast of tabernacles; and pray that many more may be sanctified through the truth. Let us pray for mighty, prevailing faith, that there may be a great work done in the name of the Lord. Praise God. I believe a great number will be able to say, I am all given up to the will of God, saved now from all sin, and sealed unto the day of Jesus' coming. Blessed be the name of the Lord. We will make known to his people this glorious truth. What a sweet rest of faith in Christ it gives to the wavering ones.

Ashley, Pa.

Working for Christ.—My brother, opposite to your name on the church roll stand these words: "Servant of Jesus Christ." Underneath it methinks I see a pierced, blood-stained hand write, "Occupy till I come. If thou art faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." The night cometh when you cannot work. Keep your hand to the plow until death loosens its grasp; and when the night comes on, you will find that the sleep of the laboring man is sweet.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler.

We often speak of being "settled in life." We might as well think of casting anchor in the midst of the Atlantic Ocean, or talk of the permanent situation of a stone that is rolling down hill.

AG'T.

A FAST.—We would propose, to those who are interested, that Friday, Aug. 16th, be observed as a day of fasting and special prayer to God that our National Campmeeting at Springfield, and all the other campmeetings to be held this year, may be the best and most profitable we have enjoyed during the past thirty years. Let this fast day be noted not only for earnest prayer for the general interests of the campmeeting, but as the time when those who purpose to attend it shall consecrate themselves entirely to the Lord, without the least reserve, so that they may be able at once to enter heartily into the various religious exercises, appropriate for the camp-ground. It is time to be in earnest, if we would be ready to meet our coming King.

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

We are evidently approaching very stirring events, which must result in great distress of nations. Dark shadows are stretching themselves over this planet. A storm of no ordinary character is most surely approaching when it will be terrible for those who have not taken shelter in Christ. The omens are very strong in favor of the speedy coming of Christ. While the enemies of the cross are rallying for the defense of their delusions; all of every denomination, who truly love Jesus, should unite in christian efforts to meet with holy boldness the advancing foe, with his embattled legions. It is time every sectarian wall, that has hitherto separated the friends of Jesus, should be leveled to the ground in perpetual ruins. The more there are of these walls the weaker is the defence against the invading enemy. The more parties and factions there are in any body of men, who are advancing to meet an approaching enemy, the less the probability of successful resistance. This is emphatically true of those engaged in the christian warfare; and this fact is well known to Satan; hence he is sparing no pains to divide the flock of God.

It would be shocking arrogance for us, as a people, to assume that none are true christians but those who believe as we do. So far as we know, it is not disputed but that there are christians in all of the evangelical churches. Of course, such would be saved if Jesus should come now. When the best of these, from the various denominations come together in love and union to worship God, and to consecrate their all to Christ, renouncing the pleasures, honors, fashions and follies of the world; shall we refuse to meet with them in devotional exercises, because they do not see all doctrinal points just as we do? Will such a course please Jesus? If he dwells in them, giving them perfect love and peace, because of the presence of his Spirit, shall we be more particular about our associates and friends than Christ? When he has prayed that we may be "one," and is doing all he can to increase and strengthen this union, shall we refuse to co-operate with Him, and thus unfit ourselves for the great events that are about to burst upon a wicked world and a lukewarm church? We say, if there are, as must be admitted, some true christian men and women in all the various evangelical churches, who truly love the Lord; if we refuse to unite with the best of these, because they do not see all doctrinal points as we do, should we not be manifesting a sectarian spirit calculated to build up party walls, instead of pulling them down? And will not such a course grieve our Savior! Let us think soberly of these things. We are rejoiced to know that the attention of many devoted men is being directed to the importance of this subject, in these last days; and that they feel the necesity of doing what they can to promote true christian union on the basis of real genuine christian character manifested in holy living. Shall we have any other test of fellowship?

TREMONT CAMPMEETING.

It was our privilege to be at the Tremont campmeeting from Thursday forenoon till its close the next Monday morning. The meeting was larger than in any former year. Eight wooden buildings have been erected during the season. The ground is pleasant, being well shaded by pine trees. There were about thirty tents. In the last part of the meeting a deep interest was manifested on the subject of holiness of heart, and a complete preparation for the coming of Christ. Quite a number sanctified themselves wholly to the Lord and were most signally blest. Some sought the Lord and found him; and seven were baptized by Bro. Hook. We had some precious prayer and conference meetings. Great good was accomplished by this meeting. It was truly a feast from the Lord. The best of order prevailed. A very large audience was present on the Sabbath, and behaved with becoming decorum. This meeting has left a hallowed influence that will produce lasting benefits. We have rarely had a meeting where there was more earnest desire to be just right, than was manifested by a number at this meeting. Some who had been serving the Lord for many years, here received the richest blessings they had ever enjoyed. They seemed to stand on Pisgah's top. Their peace was truly like a river, and the sky of their mind was without a cloud. They could say with a warm heart, "Come, Lord Jesus," "come quickly."

During the meeting, one point was made very clear: that the doctrine of holiness of heart is "meat in due season" to the church. The Lord is giving a special appetite for purity; a real hungering and thirsting after righteousness. The impression is deepening on the minds of the saints that we are very near the coming of Christ; and at the same time they are being strongly impressed that they must have clean hearts in order to be ready to meet him in peace. It is not Satan's work to stir up any such feelings. He would lead all into a lukewarm state if he could. Praise the Lord, the bride is getting ready to meet our dear Savior.

CAMP FURNITURE.

Those who are not in the habit of attending campmeetings may be pleased to receive a few hints as to their outfit for the campground. Wear plain clothing, that is not too good to come in contact with the straw in the tents. Leave all the jewelry at home; and never put it on again. Every one should bring a shawl or an overcoat for cool nights and mornings. Be sure and bring overshoes and umbrellas for the rainy weather, and two or three extra pair of stockings. It will be well to have one pair of woolen ones. Bring combs, brush, towel, soap. For bedding, a quilt, shawl and pillow case will be sufficient. The pillow can be filled with straw or hay. To make the bed, arrange the straw, lay down the quilt and shawl, then lie on one half, and throw the other half over you; or if there are two persons, lie on the straw under the quilt and shawl. If the weather is warm, either the shawl or quilt will answer.

In addition to these, every tent's company will need a shovel, hoe, axe, saw, hammer, crowbar, nails, matches, looking-glass, wash basin, pail, small cord, augur, dipper, drinking cup, lantern, etc. Bring lamps if you can. There will be some lamps on the ground to let; and oil can also be obtained. Bring no neighborhood troubles, or church grievances to the meeting; for they are as bad on the campground as small pox in society, and leave worse pits on the spiritual man than does small pox on the physical. Leave worldly cares at home, as there will be no use for them at the meeting. Trust home matters in the hands of the Lord, and while at the meeting, enter heartily into the service of our divine Savior, and expect glorious results. Come at the beginning of the meeting and stay till the close.

DELEGATES.—It should be remembered by all churches interested in the business to be transacted by the Advent Christian Association, at the National Campmeeting in Springfield (see notice), that it is necessary for them to appoint delegates to represent and express their wishes in relation to all matters connected with the Association. It is important that every church should send delegates. They should be appointed at once, so that they can make due preparation to be present.

After the appointment, a certificate should be given them, something like the following:

This is to certify that ——— was duly appointed by the ——— church as a delegate to the annual meeting of the Advent Christian Association, to be held at the National Campmeeting, in Springfield, Mass., Aug. 19th, 1872.

The certificate should be signed by some official members of the church, or by the one who presided in the meeting at the time of the choice.

Every church can send one delegate, and an additional one for every fifty members above twenty-five.

All ministers, in good standing, who are willing to co-operate with the Association, are considered as members without any further appointment.

"THY FELLOW SERVANT."

"Will you please give your opinion on Rev. 19:10? The voice said, 'I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren.' The question is, Who was this?"

A SISTER IN CHRIST.

This is the angel whom Jesus sent to show John "things which must be hereafter." It is the same one mentioned in Rev. 22:8, 9, who says, "I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets"; or, as Tyndale's old version reads: "I am thy fellow servant, and the fellow servant of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book. But worship God." The plain idea is this: The angel who appeared to John had been a servant of the prophets and of those who "keep the sayings of this book." He was not one of the prophets, but was sent to serve them, as he was sent to John by the Savior. Paul says these angels are "ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation." Heb. 1:14.

This angel was a real personal organism, having a form resembling man. John says he "fell down to worship before the feet of the angel" who had been showing him "these things." The feet of men do not live on after death, and return to walk on the earth before the resurrection of the dead. If living feet were there, then the whole person must have been present. This proves that angels are real persons, having bodies. Indeed, that without a body is nobody.

CHRISTIANITY AND SKEPTICISM.—This is a work for the times. It consists of a series of nine able lectures, called "Boston Lectures," delivered in Boston last winter, for the purpose of meeting the skepticism of the age. For sale by H. M. Sargent, 13 Cornhill, Boston. Price, $1.50. Mr. Sargent has for sale also the "Boston Lectures" of 1870, and 1871, delivered for the same object.—Price $2.00 each.

IMPORTANT DOCUMENT.—In another column may be found "The Pope's Protest," which contains some important statements. He admits his "temporal dominion" is despoiled, after being possessed "more than eleven centuries." He says: "Our heart has been torn by the sight of the sufferings of the church. Reduced to a powerless condition, and unable to, in any way, stay the progress of these misfortunes, we can only bemoan them." He speaks "of the miserable condition" to which he has "been reduced, and of "the pain of drinking daily of this bitter chalice." All this is very significant of things still more bitter yet to come upon that power.

"IT MEANS FIGHT."

New movements are developing themselves which keep increasing the evidence that startling events are not far in the future. It is more and more apparent that all who expect to stand against the enemies of the cross of Christ will need to be wholly consecrated to the Lord, being clothed with the "whole armor of God." The perils increase every day. Let us all hide in the Rock of Ages, before the coming storm bursts forth upon a wicked world, as did the flood upon the antediluvians, and the fire and brimstone upon Sodom.

The following is from the Watchman and Reflector:—

ROMAN CATHOLIC INTERNATIONALS.

The Internationals, of whom we have heard so much of late years, would exalt human brotherhood above the accidental distinctions of race and the factitious distinctions of rank. But, however good their end, they aim at it by the worst of means. They would succeed, not by a universal diffusion of the idea and spirit of brotherhood, but by the extirpation of the classes above themselves and the abrogation of all law. They would establish anarchy, and call it peace. They would repeat the reign of terror and the deeds of the Communists all over the world, only they would push both to a bloody success.

But a new and worse class of Internationals are springing up. The name of the organization is "The Catholic Militant Union of the Cross." It was first suggested by the Pope, and the thing is being pushed by the bishops. It proposes to include within it all male Catholics fifteen years old and upward throughout the world. Females eighteen years old and upward form themselves into auxiliary societies. Children who have had their first communion become Aspirant Members, and children from their birth up to their first communion are enrolled as "Co-operative Members." Each member avows his belief in the Pope's infallibility. Its object is to defend the church and the pontifical chair; i. e., to labor for the restoration of the Pope's temporal rule, and the universal recognition of his infallible authority. Its means are prayers, instructions, sermons, and EVERY ACT APPROVED BY THE POPE. Its name, "Militant Union," suggests what some of these acts will be, whenever the Pope issues his infallible order as "Commander-in-Chief" of all the papal hordes throughout the world. We may as well look this thing in the face. It means fight. It means war to the knife with carnal weapons of the latest and most effective patterns, and with ample material, whenever the right moment shall come. It means the plunging of all Europe into war, so soon as the necessary combinations can be effected, and its support by contributions from all lands.

Some may ridicule all this, but it is only in keeping with the whole past history of Popery; and this history, with all its holy wars, and inquisitions, and auto da fes, and unprincipled strategy, is now fully accepted, from Pope to priest, as involving the true ideal of church. It boldly rejects all the current ideas respecting the spirit of the age, human progress and civilization. The Pope claims to be, as God's vicegerent, not only head of the universal church, but the supreme ruler of the nations; and every Roman Catholic bishop is pledged by oath to do his utmost to securing the recognition, and when the time is right for it, the assertion of these claims by force. Hence, the Pope calls on all Catholics to lay aside all national and personal views, and to enter heart and soul into the work of the Militant Union.

We regard both classes of Internationalists, with all their lofty professions, as equally enemies of the human race,—the latter, however, as vastly the worse of the two.

"THERE is no greater mistake," says an eminent divine, "than to suppose that christians can impress the world by agreeing with it. No; it is not conformity that we want; it is not being able to beat the world in its own way; but it is to stand apart from and above it, and to produce the impression of a holy and separate life; this only can give us a true christian power."

IS CHRIST'S SECOND ADVENT IN THE PAST?

To prove the second coming of Christ a past event, two texts are arrayed against scores of witnesses on this topic; and after these two texts are perverted to teach the second advent of the Savior in the past, it is assumed that he must have come in a spiritual sense; for the boldest enemies of truth admit that Christ never has literally returned from heaven; and they go so far as to say he never will. These scriptural quotations read thus:

(1) "There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom." Matt. 16:28. But in the next breath Matthew adds, "And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, and was transfigured before them; and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. . . . Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead." Here the disciples, in fulfillment of the promise made to them, did see, in "vision," the Son of man in his glorified state, or royal grandeur—a prophetic miniature of his coming kingdom; and thus it was understood by Peter, who afterwards refers to the scene in these words: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty [or, kingly appearance]. For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." 2 Pet. 1:16–18. Here was a "vision" of royal grandeur for the Son of man, far surpassing that of any earthly monarch; but being only a vision to illustrate what should hereafter be a permanent state, it soon faded away, and Jesus, instead of being a glorified King from that time forward, soon fell into the hands of his enemies, and suffered death. But they had enjoyed a glimpse of his future glory which his sufferings could never obliterate from their memory, chiming in with the "more sure word of prophecy," which portrays a future King on David's throne, to reign forever. Peter, James and John saw it in vision.

(2) "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled." Matt. 24:34. The conclusion deduced from this text is, that the generation then living should not pass till Christ should come; and that consequently he must have come at the destruction of Jerusalem, in some spiritual manner. But the truth is, Jesus made this statement applicable to the class that should live to see the signs which he had just been giving, which signs were to be seen under the sixth seal, near the judgment day; for in the preceding verse he said, "When ye shall see these things, know that it is near"; and in this verse, still addressing himself to the same class who should live to "see these things," down under the sixth seal, he adds: "I say unto you, this generation shall not pass." The generation then living did not "see these things," but were in their graves centuries before the sixth seal was opened, where the Revelator locates the same signs (Rev. 6:12); hence, as Jesus' statement was intended to be applicable to those who should be alive at the time these signs should appear, it cannot apply to the then living generation. And so this argument falls before the power of truth.

We now present our scriptural reasons for insisting that Christ did not come at the destruction of Jerusalem, by specifying the events that are coupled with his coming, and which must be witnessed at his advent, but which were not seen at the destruction of Jerusalem.

1. Angels affirmed: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1:11. As the "same Jesus" that went up did not come in "like manner" at Jerusalem's destruction, he did not then come at all, for if the angels told the truth about the "manner" of his coming, he will never come except in the manner specified—literally—especially as he was only to "appear the second time" (Heb. 9:28); which restricts his coming to one event then future, and that one not spiritual, but literal. Such an event did not occur at Jerusalem's destruction.

2. The resurrection is connected with Christ's appearing. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4:16. Did the "dead" arise at Jerusalem's destruction?

3. The judgment comes at his appearing. "I charge thee, therefore, before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing." 2 Tim. 4:1. Were the "dead" judged at Jerusalem's destruction?

4. The reward of dead and living saints comes at his advent. "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22:12. The same "reward" is located under the seventh trumpet. "And thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great." Rev. 11:18. Were the "dead" rewarded at the destruction of Jerusalem, including the ancient prophets, and saints great and small?

5. Christ was to change the bodies of his saints at his coming. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 3:20, 21. Who experienced this "change" of body at the destruction of Jerusalem?

6. Christ was to receive the saints unto himself at his coming. "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself." John 14:3. Whom did he receive unto himself at the destruction of Jerusalem? Not the disciples, for they were scattered.

7. Christ is to be accompanied by angels at his coming. "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels" (2 Thess. 1:7); "and all the holy angels with him" (Matt. 25:31). Did all the holy angels come down from heaven at Jerusalem's destruction? Were the wicked Romans meant by the holy angels?

8. The long predicted restitution is due at the coming of Christ. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution." Acts 3:20, 21. Did "times of restitution" come when Jerusalem was laid in ruins?

9. When Christ comes, the saints are to enter glory. "When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:4. Did any body appear with Christ in glory when Jerusalem was overthrown?

10. The saints were to receive crowns of glory at the appearing of Christ. "And when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5:4. Were any thus crowned at the fall of Jerusalem?

11. We are to be like Christ when he comes. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is." 1 John 3:2. Who were made like Christ at the downfall of Jerusalem, and who then saw Christ "as he is"?

12. Every eye will see Christ at his coming. "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him." Rev. 1:7. Did they thus see him then?

13. When the Lord comes, thenceforth the saints are to remain with him. "We which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (precede) them which are asleep. . . . Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them [who are asleep] in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4:15–18. Were any living ones, and sleeping ones, jointly caught up into the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, at Jerusalem's destruction, to forever remain with him?

14. At the Lord's coming, the old heavens and earth will pass away, the sea give up its dead to be judged, the wicked enter the lake of fire, and a New Jerusalem, and new heaven and earth, become the abode of the resurrected saints. "And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them. And I saw the dead small and great stand before God. . . . And the sea gave up the dead which were in it. . . . . And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire. And I saw a new heaven and a new earth. . . . . And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men." Rev. 20:11–15; 21:1–4. What heaven and earth passed away,—what dead ones came out of the sea,—what lake of fire was seen,—what New Jerusalem descended, at the destruction of Jerusalem?

15. When Christ comes, all earthly power and authority will be exterminated, and death itself. "Afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. 15:23–26. Was "all rule and all authority and power" overthrown, and death obliterated, at Jerusalem's fall?

Thus it appears, upon investigation, that the events due at the coming of Christ did not occur when Jerusalem was destroyed; therefore Christ did not then come, for the events interwoven with his coming will surely be witnessed when he does come. None of these events are in the past; consequently Christ's coming is not in the past. His coming will introduce a change in the affairs of this globe of a world-wide nature. Sin and sorrow will no longer flourish here, but the divine Life-giver will "swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God shall wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth; for the Lord hath spoken it." Isa. 25:8.

Christ will come as the King of glory; for "when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit on the throne of his glory." Matt. 25:31. If his coming is to introduce the heavenly kingdom, let us pray—"Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven."

VILE BODY.—In Phil. 3:21, we have the promise of the change of our "vile body." But in what sense is the body, then to be "changed," pronounced "vile"? Certainly not in the sense of being sinful, but simply in the sense of being corruptible. The original word here rendered vile (tapinosis) is translated "low estate" in Luke 1:48; "humiliation" in Acts 8:33, and "made low" in James 1:10., and never means a state of sinfulness. Our body of "low estate," our body of "humiliation," our body "made low" by the fall, will be changed to a deathless state when Jesus comes, and be fashioned like his glorious body. It will be the "repemption of the body."

PUBLIC SLANDER.—When in the eastern part of Maine, a few weeks ago, we were asked various questions by brethren, which brought out that it was currently reported among them, and many brethren had believed, that the "Maine Mission Tent" committee of 1868 claimed, and demanded of the Mt. Vernon mob, $125.00 damages. It is due to many good brethren, whose minds are thus abused, to say, the tent-committee, or their agent, never claimed nor demanded any sum, nor did they threaten or intimidate, but took of the mob what they were glad to give. The correspondence is in writing, and will show the facts in the case.

I. C. WELLCOME.

NOT SO.—Bro. Grant:—A paragraph appeared in the Boston Herald, and was copied by a Salem, and also a Marblehead paper, stating that the chief of police compelled us to leave Marblehead with the tent. This is false. The citizens and chief of police treated us with courtesy and respect, and did all we could ask for our welfare while there; for which they have our thanks. We staid a week longer than we intended, and left with the best of feeling.

ENOCH MORRILL.

OUR great Leader is calling for valiant soldiers, who will fearlessly declare the truth as it is in Jesus, losing their lives for Christ's sake and the gospel's, that they may find them unto life eternal. Nothing short of the whole armor will answer in these perilous times. O, let christians be found at their post doing battle for God.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TO THE A. A. MISSION SOCIETY, BOSTON.

DEAR BRN.:—I suppose you are looking for my first quarterly report as missionary. I commenced labor under your appointment the first of April, and have spent the whole of the time in new fields, only visiting one place more than once. I see the first work here is to break down prejudice; this done, the floodgates will be opened, and we will march triumphantly into the citidal of men's hearts. Where I have preached I generally continue in each place at least four days, preaching each day. By this method the people have had time to question and investigate. The result has ever been that some have been convinced, while the mouth of the scoffer has been shut. I have traveled mostly on foot, and have failed only in two appointments, caused by sickness. There is in some places a great demand for books. I have them now. I obtained a few cash-paying subscribers for the Crisis, with the promise of many more when I go around again. I am to start over the same ground the first of July, with books and tracts to scatter.

I am convinced that the next three months will be more successful. That bitter feeling heretofore existing against us is gradually giving way to a better and more christian-like spirit. This comes principally from a meek, lowly, and friendly disposition manifested toward all. Glory to God for the help of his Holy Spirit, by which we have been able to manifest to all the love that passeth knowledge. How good to have that love to enable us, in the presence of those who hate us, to say—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." It is this that will triumph after all opposition fails. The Methodists at Lake Butler have kindly tendered their house of worship, for which I am truly thankful. At Stark, I have a spacious hall free, with a man to light it up and ring the bell. At this place much good will be done. At other places I have the Baptist houses, and in thinly settled districts I preach in school-houses. I have not yet been compelled to preach in the open air.

In one place the preacher invited me to his house, expressing a desire that I would stay a few days and use his pulpit. He thought the entire church would sign the covenant. I have not been there, but will attend to that in my round in July. He said to me that what we preached was the Bible, and that was all he wanted. There will be a few ready for the kingdom when the King shall come to sit on his throne. I have traveled about two hundred miles, mostly on foot, in carts, etc. My labors heretofore have been confined to three counties, viz., Columbia, Bradford, and Baker. The Lord has opened the door in many other places where I am to go the first opportunity.

Dear Brethren, pray for my success. I am happy to acknowledge the receipt of seven packages of books and tracts. They were just what I wanted. Please accept my humble thanks for them. God will bless you for your timely aid. Your help to us here will be the means of saving many in the day of judgment, soon coming. Pray for me. Yours in gospel bonds,

THOMAS J. GREENE.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

I think by the letters I have for tents, there are many new ones coming this year; and for the benefit of such, I would say I have no tents to rent, but there will be provision made for all that have no tents, in the large tents, which will afford accommodations if you provide your own bedding. The large-tent owners bring on and put up these tents, at their own expense (which is considerable), and charge each ten cents a day for tent room. This is very cheap indeed; more so than any other way you can get a shelter, and no trouble about pitching, watching, or lighting. This is the best arrangements we can make for such as have no tents. Bro. Day has a few tents to rent, when the other meeting is out, which is August 15th. Such as want to hire will address a line to Bro. J. C. Day, in care of Thos. R. Weaver, Springfield, Mass., and you will get an answer about the price. His tents are 12 by 15, suitable for six or eight persons. His price last year, left with me, was $5.00, delivered on the ground; and the tent-frame and pitching was two to three dollars more. This would be about one dollar each for tent-room. I am thus particular, because you want to know these facts.

Another way to get tent-room: Let some five to ten people put in a strip of good cotton sheeting, each ten yards long; for this is the right length for a good shaped tent, and the pattern for a pair of sheets, which is just as good for use after the meeting. One strip of ten yards will lodge two persons, one each side of the tent. Five strips will make a tent when pitched, 15 by 18, enough to lodge ten to twelve persons, or that proportion if larger or smaller. If you wish it double, your strips for the fly need to be seven and a half yards, just the length for sheets also; so there is no waste, except for the ends. Such an arrangement will not cost scarcely anything, except your tent-frame, and your labor of sewing it together, and putting up the frame, which can be bought on the ground. Probably for ten persons, it would not cost more than twenty-five cents each to have a good tent through the meeting, and water-proof, with a fly, or double roof.

Directions for pitching such a tent: Middle pole eleven feet above the ground, eave poles four feet, and nine feet from the centre pole; this will make a good pitch, and the ten yards will reach the ground, or to a board, or a slab on the ground; and the cloth tacked to it, is the easiest way to fasten and strain the tent at the same time. These simple facts may be of use to some in the way of getting a good tent cheaper than to hire.

We would say there is plenty of good level tent-ground, near a good well of water, and three stoves for the special benefit of such families as wish to board themselves. All kinds of necessary provisions can be bought on the ground as cheap as at your homes, and save you the trouble of bringing it. We have done the best we can to accommodate you. Now come, and enjoy the meeting, for we shall have but a few more. I am much obliged to such as send stamps to answer their own letters.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Correspondence.

From Bro. D. Crouch.

BRO. GRANT:—I see in the Crisis of the 17th inst., your description of a "National Campmeeting for Holiness," which is the first and best exhibition of true christian and vital godliness, that I have seen or read of for many a long year; and which I had despaired of ever finding, or even reading of, this side of the first resurrection; having come to the conclusion in these last days of time God had taken most of his restraining grace, as well as his sanctifying power, from the earth.

That is my idea of the thing. That is what I want, what I am struggling for,—inward holiness, and outward conformity to the rules of the gospel, to the best our frail natures will enable us to do; and God requires nothing more. Without this we can never be where God is, or see him in peace. And yet you say, even these pious, devoted people are ridiculed and scoffed at. And so, mark it, it will be, with increasing virulence, until the Lord comes, with any and all who seek for deep-toned piety, the meek and lowly spirit of Jesus, and most sincerely and earnestly desire to live so every day of their life.

Since our "mission" was given up here, the church has been scattered so that seldom enough can be gathered for a prayer-meeting. For seven years I have stood aloof from the popular churches, because pride, popularity, and conformity to the world, has, in the aggregate, drank up their vital piety. I have preferred to do what I could, single handed and alone, scattering tracts and papers among those who never go to church, talking and praying with them, sometimes preaching in the street, and relieving the poor, sick, and destitute temporally as well as spiritually. During the last four years I have relieved a great amount of suffering.

St. Louis, Mo.

From Bro. D. N. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—I came up here a few days since. Although the meeting is not specially for holiness, yet that is a prominent subject in all the meetings. I should think three quarters of the professors have either enjoyed this blessing, or are seeking for it. I think the effect of the National campmeeting here a few years ago is still apparent. One man, a class-leader, said he had given up his class-book, and should not attempt to lead the class again until he had a pure heart, and he had come to the meeting to get it. I am more and more convinced that the bride is preparing for the "marriage supper"; and a pure heart is the only qualification for that event. At the campmeeting at Sea Cliff Grove, there was a test taken which should convince the most skeptical of this higher life. A request was made for all who had received this blessing after conversion to rise. Several hundred rose up. Then all those who had received it at the time of conversion were desired to rise; not one responded. The doctrine of sanctification was a distinctive feature of Methodism in its early history. The presiding Elder in the love-feast this morning, spoke of a campmeeting many years ago, where they had two altars, one for those who were seeking for pardon, and the other for those seeking a pure heart.

Sanctification makes a man child-like. He has no self-will. His will, which is the last thing he will give up, is swallowed up in God, and he can say, "Abba Father." The meeting is prospering very well, and a strong tide setting toward this blessing of perfect love. So may it be.

Round Lake, N. Y., July 20th.

From Bro. C. Pike.

BRO. GRANT:—I am quite sure that some would like to hear how I am getting along in my new field of labor, and some how the church at Massena is prospering spiritually; therefore I hastily pen a few lines for that ever noble, and ever welcome weekly visitor, the World's Crisis. Heaven is full of blessings, and the great Giver of them has not been forgetful of this dear and well-tried people in Massena. I think, like David, many of them can say—"It is good that I have been afflicted." How true the apostle's saying: These light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out "for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." How prone we are to faint and become discouraged when Father's chastening rod is applied, for such we must consider many of our afflictions. We forget the exhortation which speaketh unto us as unto children: "My son, despise not thou the chastening rod of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him. For whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he recieveth." O! how many there are who cannot endure chastening; cannot endure trials; cannot bear and forbear; cannot forgive and forget; cannot conceal in their own minds the faults of others. O brethren, sons and daughters of the Father of Christ; and he your elder brother. But stop; is it so? If you do not possess all of the above characteristics, and many more, you can answer. Hence the apostle says—"If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the Father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons. . . . . Now no chastening for the present seemeth joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby." Such has been the case with many in this place. Their trials were grievous, but now begin to yield "the peaceable fruits of righteousness," because they have been exercised thereby.

The Lord is blessing this people. Our meetings are well attended, and the power of God is manifested in all our sessions. Last Sunday was one of the best days of my life, and I trust many of the brethren and sisters here can say the same. As we drew near the water's edge, the Spirit of our Master seemed to witness with ours that we were his, and that we were in the line of duty as we burried four happy souls into Christ's death, and raised them in the likeness of his resurrection, thus making seven who have put on Christ by immersion since I came to preach the word to this people. From the water we returned to partake of the Lord's supper, when God manifested himself in power again. Six were added to the church, and received the right hand of fellowship. It was good to be there.

"Then we'll watch and we'll pray, as our vessel bears away,
And we ne'er will be disheartened any more;
For the port is getting nearer, and I hear the Leader say,
We soon shall reach the harbor and the shore."

Massena Centre, N. Y.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Bro. Grant:—I have just returned from holding a meeting at Sutton's Corners, Crawford Co., Pa. I had a good time in presenting the precious truths that we love so well; also of gathering at the place where there was much water. As there was a beautiful grove by it, and a good chance for the people to be seated on the saw logs, while waiting for a part of the candidates, I took the opportunity of preaching to the multitude gathered, after the friends had sung a beautiful hymn: "Shall we know each other there?" Yes, bless the Lord. Jesus was known after his resurrection, and John the beloved says we shall be "like him." O, that the blessed hope that we cherish may cause us to see to it, that we are purified by obedience to the truth. Five willing souls put on Christ by baptism, and others will soon. I found quite a number that were almost persuaded, and could hardly go away from the water; others that were sick that could not go, and others that were away that intended to obey the Lord in this ordinance. The place is one where sectarianism has a strong hold.

A short time ago the Methodists got one of their preachers to come and preach on the immortality of the soul. He would not discuss the subject, but would preach five discourses on it for $50., and did so. "A wonderful and horrible thing is committed in the land." The teachers "teach for hire and divine for money;" also "they say the Lord saith when he hath not said it." Thank the Lord, that the truth is mighty and will prevail. The above is the result, mostly, of the labors of Bro. C. F. Sweet and J. Wendell.

From Sr. S. A. Ingham.

Bro. Grant:—I left home the tenth of June to take a little girl to her mother in Lawrence, Mass. I left Salem the tenth of July, and arrived home the thirteenth, and found my family as well as when I left them. It is the first time that I have been from home since my husband has been an invalid. He appeared glad to see me, and said he had worried some about me. I was very glad of the opportunity of leaving home and care for a little while, but still more so to return again. Give me old Nova Scotia, with its refreshing sea breezes to live in, through the summer season. I never experienced such hot weather, nor witnessed such terrific storms of lightning and thunder before. I do thank the Lord for his increasing care over me and mine, and that he is so mindful of our wants. It was remarked there, that I would get between one and two hundred dollars. I received forty-five dollars from the brethren and sisters, as near as I can recollect, and ten dollars from other friends. I lost my account book. If I left it at any house where I visited, I wish they would please send it to me. I wanted to go to North Abington, and a few other places very much, but I was not well one week, and my time being limited, I had to give it up.

[We hope the friends of Bro. and Sr. Ingham will remember their necessities, and send them something to gladden their hearts. Their condition is a sad one.—Ed.

Bro. B. P. Manning writes from Goffstown, N. H., Aug. 1st:—"I am very sick at this time. I have been doing the best I could to pay up for my board and other things. I have made twenty-one wheelbarrows in about one year and a half, and sold them very cheap to pay for lumber and iron, etc.; but cannot labor any longer. I am in debt some $20 or more. Do not know what to do; still my trust is in God and not in man. When I lost my money last year the dear brethren helped me after a godly sort. I am trying to keep ready every day to meet the Lord when he comes. I am not able to travel and preach as I used to do. I was seventy-four the 28th day of last March. I am old and gray-headed, and my work is about done for this world."

[Who will help Bro. Manning in his necessities?—Ed.

MEXICO.

General Amnesty Proclaimed.

Matamoras, Aug. 1. The military authorities today announced that general amnesty has been proclaimed in the City of Mexico, embracing all engaged in the recent revolution, restoring them to civil and political rights. Congress has also ordered a general election for President of the Republic, to occur shortly.

The Collector of Customs at this port has issued an official notice of the extension of the old tariff on the frontier in time of peace, and imposing a higher duty. The whole country is quiet. The insurgents are laying down their arms and submitting to the Government, which is extending all leniency to secure perfect peace. Dispatches report that the interior is quiet.

A Narrow Escape.—A disaster of frightful proportions was narrowly escaped by the extra train returning to Chicago from the Springfield Convention. At 11 o'clock P. M. on Thursday, a long train, laden with fully one thousand people, left the city for the north, and, as was well known, contained the Greeley delegates. Many of the foremost men of Illinois were also on board. Shortly after leaving Springfield most of them had retired in the sleeping cars. Six miles northward of the city, while the train was running at the rate of twenty-five or thirty miles an hour, the engineer, looking out into the blackness ahead, saw the track cumbered with a great stack of timber. Instantly the machinery was reversed and the air brakes sprung, and the train brought to a stop with a shock that routed the crowd from their seats, causing the wildest confusion. The engine had not stopped a second too soon. A series of massive ties were firmly spiked to the rails, and beyond them a great heap was carefully laid to secure beyond the possibility of failure the utter destruction of the train and its passengers. The engine tore up three or four before coming to a final halt, but fortunately, the reduced impetus prevented a leap from the track. The local press makes little speculation on the matter, and the most curious indifference is manifested as to penetrating the mystery of the dastardly affair. It is generally thought that vindictive political spite is at the bottom of the attempt, and that its authors will be found to have been suborned for the atrocious work.—N. Y. Tribune.

New Postal Law.—The new Postal Code, passed at the late session of Congress, was approved by the President on the 8th of June.

The most important new feature is that authorizing postal cards. These are to be of such size, form and quality as the Postmaster General directs, with postage stamps impressed on them, and are to be sold at one cent each. The communications sent thereon may be printed or written, with ink or pencil. There does not seem to be any good ground for the fear that these cards will be used to shame or insult people. The mailing of cards bearing words, pictures or devices of a vulgar, indecent or scurrilous character, is made a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. The cards, like stamped envelopes, must be furnished by the Post Office Department, and no others can be admitted into the mails. In view of the fact that unsealed circulars can be sent anywhere at one cent each, we do not apprehend that there is any great danger of overloading the mail with postal cards used for advertising purposes.

The most important change in the code is that respecting miscellaneous matter—transient newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, etc. On this class the postage is just half what it was under the old law—that is, such matter can now be sent, in parcels not weighing over twelve ounces, at one cent for each two ounces. A one cent stamp will therefore carry any magazine or package of newspapers which does not weigh more than two ounces. Book manuscripts and proof sheets go at one cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, but this only between author and publisher, and manuscript for publication in newspapers and magazines must be paid for at letter rates, which remain as heretofore. Nothing weighing more than four pounds, except Congressional documents, will be received into the mail.

The rates for money orders are now as follows: Orders not over ten dollars, five cents; over ten and not over twenty, ten cents; over twenty and not over thirty, fifteen cents; over thirty and not over forty, twenty cents; over forty and up to fifty, twenty-five cents. This is a reduction of one-half on orders not exceeding ten dollars. Any mail matter intended to go at the one cent or two cent rate must be so enclosed that it can be examined without tearing the wrapper. Circulars enclosed in sealed envelopes with the corners cut are to be charged letter postage. Letters paid one full rate of three cents, even if more should have been paid, must be forwarded, unless the postmaster is satisfied that the underpaying was intentional, but deficient postage will be collected before they are delivered. Nothing but matter sent at letter rates can be returned to the sender free. Newspapers to subscribers go as heretofore.

Letters may be sent free to Mrs. Lincoln, the President, Vice President, members of the Cabinet, Heads of Bureaus, Chief Clerks or franking officers of either of the Executive Departments at Washington, Senators, Representatives or delegates in Congress, the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House. So too may petitions to Congress, copyright matter to the Librarian of Congress if so marked, and publications to the Smithsonian Institution, if marked "Smithsonian Exchange." The scope of the franking privilege is not changed by the new code. Free mail matter must not weigh over four ounces, except in the case of petitions and public documents. No matter can be franked except by the written autograph signature of the sender. Persons having the right to receive matter free, on receiving, inclosed to them, any letter or package addressed to a person not having that right, must return it to the post office that postage may be collected. And newspaper exchanges go free as under the old law.—Advertiser.

We would recommend our readers to preserve the foregoing, as they will find it convenient for reference.—Ed.

Communism in Georgia.—The Augusta (Ga.) Constitutionalist says a colony of fanatics from Massachusetts have settled recently near that place. Their Brigham Young is named Joseph T. Curry, hailing from Springfield, Mass. He is invested with autocrat powers. Not only does he officiate as chief executive officer of the community, but as judge in settling disputes, and as bishop or pope in regulating religious ones, and he practically owns all the property of his associates. Curry has bought a tract of land on the Washington road, about eleven miles from Augusta. There is a picturesque old mansion there, with a little village of surrounding cabins, and with useful and pleasant adjuncts of wood, water and fine scenery, in which Curry has ensconced himself, while the cabins furnish homes for his followers. The colony numbers at least fifty members. Apart from the community of goods, these people believe in the Scriptures, as interpreted by themselves—that baptism by water is superfluous, the Holy Spirit acting in its stead; that Saturday is the true Sabbath; that Fanny Wright and Horace Greeley are to be revered as the typical male and female representatives of communists' doctrines; but that Curry is the great Apollo of their immediate circle, and is to have his pick, whether of chattels or anything else desirable that may be contained therein.

Result of the Strikes.—An intelligent letter writer from London says that the necessaries of life in England are growing day by day dearer and dearer, rents have increased fifty per cent., aspecially as it relates to that class of houses occupied by the laboring classes. The workman after lying a long time idle, and losing the savings of years, has perhaps increased his nominal pay sixpence a day, but by this very course he has so raised the cost of living that he is poorer than ever, and his sixpence goes but half as far as it did a year ago. Some workmen realize this, and are loud in their expressions of regret that they have been thus deceived. The striking business is a sad mistake as it regards the laborer's interest.

Obituaries.

Shepard. Died in Palmer, Mass., July 24th, 1872, with the infirmities of age, Bro. Jacob Shepard, aged ninety-three years, four months, and eighteen days.

For many years, Bro. Shepard was a member of the Baptist church; but a number of years before his death, he embraced the hope of the second coming of Christ and resurrection from the dead as the only hope of eternal life. Bro. S. maintained a good christian character to the end, and he has fallen like a shock of corn fully ripe. He leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss, but they sorrow not without hope. The funeral was attended by the writer.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Advent camp-ground, commencing Thursday, Aug. 22d, at 9 o'clock A. M.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Brn. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:—Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. Hancock.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, the Conn. tent will be pitched at Woodbridge, Conn., Saturday, August 10th, to hold over Sunday the 18th. It is hoped that there will be a general gathering to the meeting of all the lovers of Jesus and his truth. Brethren and sisters in adjoining towns, come and assist us. Those not wishing to bring provisions with them can procure board reasonably at the Hotel near by. Elders H. K. Flagg, Ripley, Steele, Woodruff, and others, are expected to be present. Z. D. Baird.

Grove Meeting.—There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, Sept. 1st, by Eld. J. G. Smith If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Refreshments will be furnished by Mr. Smith, the proprietor, to all who wish.

S. O. Welch.

We wish to request those that have tent-ground at the National Campmeeting to mark on a board the name of your tent, before coming to the meeting; then put it up as soon as your tent is pitched. This will enable others to find your tent. This will be a great convenience to me in directing. Again, some leave their ground without any frame or marks to know where their tent stood. Such as take their frames away should stick a stake in the centre of their lot, stating the size of their tent, or you will be liable to be encroached upon. All grounds with nothing on them will be forfeited after Tuesday, the 20th, unless described by letter. Also if any have ground, and you are not coming, please drop me a line.

Hiram Munger.

☞ As I advertised Bro. Day's tents to rent last year, the brethren are writing to me this year. I would say I have no tents to rent. Bro. J. C. Day says he can furnish some to such as use them well. Some last year injured them by driving nails through them; such need not apply. His tents are 12 by 15. Address J. C. Day, Springfield, Mass., care of Thomas R. Weaver.

H. Munger.

Special Notice.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Saturday, Sept. 7th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter. Eld. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., has the superintendence of the tent department. All wishing to rent or sell, hire or purchase tents, can correspond with him at that place. Prices should be stated. To save confusion, all who purpose to build permanent tents this year, whether they have spoken for a lot or not, are requested to notify Bro. Smith of the size of tent and location of lot by the first of August.

J. Couch, for the Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.—We have leased the beautiful grounds at Bethel, and our annual camp will be pitched about Aug. 31st. Particulars soon. The committee feel the need of funds for improving and lighting the ground, and building a preacher's stand large enough to store our lumber after the meeting. Who will help? Let those who have a mind send money or pledges to me, or J. H. Harding, Ely, Vt.; Geo. C. Arms, Waterbury, Vt.; Stephen French, Rutland, Vt.; or S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt. Pray much for this meeting, for good order, power, and salvation.

H. F. Carpenter, for Committee.

☞ The Springfield American Life and Advent Campmeeting will be held in Springfield, in Carew's grove, commencing Aug. 4th, and continue to Aug. 15th. Ample accommodations will be provided for all that come with board and lodging on the ground. Board, 80 cents per day. Fare on the Boston and Albany Railroad, Conn. R. R. and Hartford and N. H. R. R. will be reduced the same as last year, from July 25th to Aug. 27th inclusive. We cordially invite all to come who love the Lord and his coming, and desire a preparation for translation when Jesus comes. Thos. R. Weaver, Secretary of Campmeeting Committee.

New York State Campmeeting.—The undersigned committee, appointed at the recent annual conference in Springwater, have decided upon the ground near Fairport for the State Campmeeting. But, on account of other meetings being held there, were obliged to appoint it one week earlier than was decided on by conference. It will therefore commence August 10th, the Lord willing, and hold to the 19th. Let all bear this date in mind, and so arrange business as to be able to take a respite at this time, and come out to this feast of tabernacles. We may well hope for the best general meeting ever held in this State. To this end let us have the united prayers of the church.

The grove is a beautiful one, one mile and a half north from Fairport station. Fairport is on the N. Y. Central (direct) R. R., ten miles east of Rochester. The brethren and citizens agree to run free teams for passengers and baggage the first two days (9th and 10th), and the last day of the meeting. At other times ten cts. will be charged.

A boarding tent will be on the ground furnishing potatoes, meat, bread, etc., to those who board themselves, and plain table board at $1.00 per day to those who do not. Cooking stoves for general use will be on the ground. Let all come well supplied with over-coats, over-shoes, thick shawls, coverlids, straw and pillow ticks, etc., etc. The large tent will furnish sleeping quarters for a few strangers, and those unable to procure berths in family tents. Let all desiring tents, correspond immediately (enclosing a stamp for the answer) with Bro. D. T. Cooper, 72 Mt. Hope Avenue, Rochester, N. Y., who will see that their tents are on the ground in season.

Wm. E. Brown.
Sam'l H. Withington.
Perry M. Grinnell.

The New York A. C. Conference will hold its next quarterly session, the Lord willing, in the large State Tent, on the Fairport camp-ground, during the forthcoming campmeeting. The first meeting will be called to order at nine o'clock Wednesday morning (Aug. 14th), when Bro. Warren Vreeland will give the opening address. After which, the meeting will be held at such hours as shall least interrupt the general course of the campmeeting, or disturb its devotional interests. Plans are being perfected, and will be submitted, for districting the conference. Let every church be represented. Take the collections and appoint the delegates early. Milton R. Miles, Pres.
Wm. E. Brown, Sec.

I would say, for the further information of the brethren and sisters of the New York State Conference and Campmeeting, that every thing will be in readiness. A boarding tent will be up in time to supply all who may want. Those who come from the East will please take the train that arrives at Fairport at 10.45 A. M., and those from the West at about the same time. Also in the P. M. from the East at 5.15, from the west 3.27. Teams will be run to the above trains. A general gathering is expected. Come one and all to the feast. S. C. Gove.

Grove Meeting.—A grove meeting will be held in Woodbury, Vt., known as Logtown, on land of Abraham Holmes, commencing Aug. 30th, at six P. M., to continue over the Sabbath. Elder D. Carr and others will preach the word of life. Come, brethren, to the feast. Per order of Com.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Particulars hereafter.

Basket-Meeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a basket-meeting at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Aug. 18th, to commence at half-past ten o'clock. Picnic dinner, and another sermon at one o'clock. All are invited to attend.

The Yearly Grove Meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence in the grove of Bro. J. T. Ongley, in Rootville, Crawford Co., Pa., Aug. 22d, 1872. Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present, the Lord willing, to preach the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus, having the spirit and the cause of the Master at heart. We expect the meeting to continue about a week. Friends from the East and West can take the express trains to Union, on the A. and G. W. R. R., connecting with the train that leaves Union on the U. and T. R. R. at 1.45 P. M. for Lincolnville, arriving at L. 2.20 P. M. Friends from the South on the O. C. and A. R. R. arrive at 11.30 A. M. and at 7 P. M. There will be a team to take friends to the ground from L. on the arrival of the train at 2.20 P. M., it being 2½ miles west of Lincolnville. In case of rain a barn near the grove will be prepared.

Also, there will be a grove-meeting in Beaver County, Pa., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may appoint, to commence the evening of Aug. 30th, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a grove-meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport, and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa., commencing evening, Sept. 5th, and continue about a week.

Also a grove-meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., Pa., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Bro. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing evening of Sept. 12th, and continuing about a week. All are invited. Elders C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (D. V.) will attend to preach the word at the above meetings. J. T. Ongley.

Tent-Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting held at Elida, Ill., eight miles south west of Rockford, commencing Aug. 16th, and continuing over the 25th. Eld. W. L. Himes is expected to assist. Let all in the region come up to this meeting in the spirit of the Master, to labor for the salvation of the perishing.

For the church, C. C. Marston.

Conn. Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting on the ground occupied for that purpose the past two years, near Plainville, Conn., commencing Aug. 31st, and continuing till Sept. 9th. On the New Haven and Northampton R. R., the 6 A. M. and 4.45 P. M. trains from Williamsburg, and the 6.50 A. M. train from New Haven, will stop opposite the camp-ground, ONLY when there are passengers for the meeting, and they must tell the conductors they wish to stop, or they will be carried by. Remember this. The morning train up reaches the camp-ground about 8 o'clock, the morning train down at 8.30, and the evening train down at 7.20. Those from the north by these trains, buy regular tickets to Southington; those from the south to Plainville. Those coming by other trains must stop at Plainville, and Mr. T. F. Clark will take them to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. In all cases, buy regular tickets, and free return passes will be furnished at the meeting. On the H. P. and F. R. R. fare is reduced thirty per cent from Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville. Buy regular tickets to Plainville, and tickets at reduced rate can be had on the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates.

We hope all who can, will bring tents, and come early to the meeting, and those who have no tent, bring a blanket or bedquilt, and not depend on your neighbor for one. It is our heart's desire and prayer to God that our brethren and sisters may be moved by a self-examining, sanctifying, consecrating spirit, that will bring us to this meeting ready, at the beginning, to serve the Lord, and not come like a rickety wagon to the shop for repairs. Let there be a cleasing from worldly conformity, pride, hatred, jealousy, foolish conversation, and such like, before coming to the meeting. Do not burden and kill the meeting with these instruments of the devil. As a people, we profess to carry the judgment message and last crowning light of truth to the world; and with the final, most essential, and brilliant proclamation of the entire gospel, our meetings should prove a means of salvation to sinners. May the Holy Spirit overshadow the encampment, and fall upon the people. May faith triumph, and God be glorified. Amen.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.—The campmeeting at Belfast will commence on the 18th of August, and continue over the 25th. It is desired to have the tents erected on the 19th. We shall be on the ground the week previous to fit up, so that if any wish to erect on the 17th they can do so. The fare will be reduced on the Maine Central R. R. from Portland on both routes. Tickets can be obtained at the following named places:—Portland, Lewiston, Monmouth, Winthrop, Kendall's Mills, Richmond, Gardiner, Hallowell, Augusta, Burnham, Pittsfield, Newport, Corinna, Dexter, Carmel, and Harmon. Reduced tickets on the steamboats Cambridge and Katahdin, leaving Bangor for Boston every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at 11 A. M. Will leave Boston for Bangor every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, at five o'clock P. M.

Inside steamboat, City of Richmond, will leave Portland every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, at ten o'clock. Leaves Bangor every Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, at six o'clock, for Portland. Call for Campmeeting tickets for Belfast Advent Campmeeting.

Passengers going east on the Maine Central R. R. will change cars at Burnham for Belfast. Tickets will be good from Aug. 16th to Aug. 27th.

All those on the line of the Maine Central Railroad, will purchase regular tickets to Belfast, and receive free return tickets on the camp-ground.

Come, all who can, and worship in the beautiful grove in sight of Belfast bay, and enjoy another feast of brotherly love, laying aside all vain ambition and speculation, and seek the good of all. Bring your tents, and provide for yourselves and others as much as possible, remembering that love is the fulfilling of the law, and that God blesses the cheerful giver. Shall we all seek to get nearer to Him who died for us, and to save others from death? Our work is almost done. Shall we have it said to us, "Well done"?

In behalf of the committee, Israel Damman.

Mechanic Falls, Me., Campmeeting.—If the Lord will, this meeting will be held in the beautiful grove where it was held last year, commencing August 26th, to continue one week. This ground is easy of access, pleasantly located, about one mile from the depot, and is a most desirable spot for campmeeting. This year the ground has been much improved, a commodious boarding-tent erected, the stable enlarged, and both put into competent hands for good management. Good board, horse keeping, and pasturage, will be afforded at the lowest possible rates, so that none can justly complain. "The Mission Tent" will be ready for use on the ground, Aug. 24th. This tent affords excellent shelter for meetings in stormy weather, and makes a comfortable lodging place by night for several hundreds, if necessary. Straw will be provided for bedding, and all things done that can be for the comfort and well-being of all who attend. All who wish to erect wooden or cloth tents will find the most desirable lots for that purpose.

The fare on all parts of the Maine Central and Buckfield railroads will be one half the usual rates; and on the Grand Trunk about the same. Those coming from Bangor, and intermediate places, should stop at Danville Junction; and those coming from Augusta and other places on the Kennebec, should stop at Yarmouth Junction. At both Junctions, take the Grand Trunk R. R. for Mechanic Falls.

At all stations on the Grand Trunk Road, call for Campmeeting tickets. At all stations on the Maine Central roads, full fare will be paid to Danville and Yarmouth Junctions, and free return tickets furnished on the camp-ground by the committee.

Come to the meeting from east, west, north and south. Come to do and get good. Let there be a general gathering of the watching, waiting ones, and of all who wish to be ready for the coming of "our King." Bro. J. Couch is expected to be with us a part of the time.

Campmeeting.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Sabbath, Sept. 1st, and hold over Sabbath, the 8th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow men in these last moments of time. Particulars hereafter. E. R. Wood, for the Com.

ALL THINGS FOR OUR GOOD.

Oft times we meet with trials
And toils upon our way;
We're pressed to self-denial,
And know not what to say.
The path seems rough and strong,
Ourselves misunderstood;
'Tis then we must remember
All things are for our good.

Sometimes our life seems dreary,
A sad and lonely one;
Our feet are worn and weary,
We wish that it was done.
But when we see the shadows
Of this approaching mood,
We ought to hold the promise—
All things are for our good.

Christ says "he will not leave us"
To grope our way alone;
He always will relieve us,
And keep us, every one.
But we must all be tested,
And stand, as christians should,
Amid the fiery furnace;
All things are for our good.

—Earnest Christian.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

C. R. BARNES.

"He which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."—PHIL. 1:6.

There is a precious truth herein contained, which, if more fully realized would give comfort and strength to many who are subject to fears and doubts. You sometimes fear you will fall, and fail at last of a home in the kingdom of God. You do not doubt but what you were converted a certain time ago; you remember perfectly well when you underwent a complete change of heart, when you felt a distaste for sin, and a strong, earnest desire to be free from it and be perfected in holiness. You remember this and other instances in your life which assure you that you were converted, yet notwithstanding this, you sometimes feel as though you would be unable to endure to the end, and so fail at last of the salvation you have desired, and still do desire. Now this passage of Scripture is designed to give aid to a person when in this very state of doubt. Paul tells the Philippians he is confident of this very thing, that God will perfect that work of grace he begun in them when they were converted; and if it were true concerning them, it is no less true concerning us at the present time, and it is to illustrate this truth that we write.

It is a well known fact that the more time we devote to any worthy object, the more our interests are drawn out in its behalf. When the sculptor first begins his work upon the rough marble, he is interested in his task, but not so much as he will be as it draws near its completion after weeks and months of toilsome labor. He begins his task with heavy blows upon the stone, to a careless observer seeming almost reckless; but watch still further. Soon the heavy mallet and chisel give place to lighter ones, and his blows upon the stone seem more gentle than before; and instead of a shapeless piece of marble, we begin to see a resemblance to the model by which the sculptor is guided, and at last it reaches that point where progress is scarcely discernable, so delicately does he strike the stone before him. And the nearer it is brought to completion, the more anxiety does he feel lest by any inadverdant blow he shall spoil the work which has so long engaged his attention. He was interested in it when it was a rough, unhewn stone, but how much more must he now be. He has spent care, time, labor, thought and anxiety upon it, till at last it approaches that completion he desires. Will he now leave it, after having brought it so near what he originally designed?

Again, a man is walking in the forest, and sees a shrub or bush which he thinks could be trained so as to be an ornament in his garden. He has it transplanted; he waters it; he watches its growth; he trims it; he supports its weak branches; and at last, through his care and attention, buds begin to appear, and finally develope into beautiful flowers, filling the air with their pleasant odor. This man was interested in the plant when he first took it from its home in the wild woods; he was interested in it while it was in his garden, even before it had given a sign of budding; but now, when the buds do appear, when it begins to approach that beauty which he had anticipated, how much more is he interested in it! how much more careful lest a careless foot should trample it in the ground. His interest, instead of diminishing, only increases daily.

These two incidents will illustrate God's care and anxiety for us. You, christian reader, was once like this rough, inhuman marble. If left to yourself, you would always have remained such; but the great Sculptor, God, looked upon you, and formed the design of bringing you into conformity with his dear Son. He began the work upon you many years ago, perhaps, but whenever it was, it was interest in you that led him thus to do. Since then he has been gradually changing your character. You had many things which were unbecoming in his sight, and many of them you know are gone. In doing this, sometimes hard blows were required, and sometimes gentle. Sometimes Gods' providences have been severe, at others they have been mild and pleasant; but whatever their nature, they have all been designed to further his desire concerning you, namely, to have you conformed to the image of his dear Son, Jesus Christ.

But now you fear lest he should not complete the work; you feel that his interest in you may cease, and you, after all, be left without having gained the likeness of the divine model. But think a moment; has God less perseverance than the human sculptor? has he less patience than a man? Is it reasonable to think that he, after having taken you, a rough, unhewn stone, and spending so much time, love and care upon you, will now leave his work undone? No, no; far from it. Although the work may be as yet incomplete, although you are not yet possessed of the desirable qualities and traits which he designs you to have, you may be confident with Paul that "he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

Christian reader, once you was a vine of unfruitfulness growing in the wilds of sin. In that condition God saw you, loved you, and pitied you, and determined to transplant you into his own vineyard, that you might bear fruit to his glory. You was then unlovely; but in course of time, after nourishing you, after caring for you, and pruning you, and strengthening you, you began to give signs of fruitfulness. The fruit may not yet be ripened; it may perhaps give no tokens perceptible to human eyes, but God sees the effects of its training better than you yourself can; and though the plant may be far from what he designs it, still it is tending that way, and therefore he still cares for it. Then remember this when next you are tempted to give way to despondency. Think how a gardner watches and tenderly cares for his plants, and then think how much more tenderly your heavenly Father will care for you if you will but be passive in his hands. "Cast not away, therefore, your confidence, which hath great recompense of reward."

ABIDE IN ME.

MINA WALKER.

I have in my window a beautiful vine, and daily, as I water it, I see new beauties, as one leaf after another puts forth and develops into maturity. It is to me a source of instruction, as well as profit; for it is constantly suggestive of that beautiful lesson of our Savior, recorded in the thirteenth chapter of John, which may be applied as an infallible test to determine whether we are in Christ or not; and to the young christian there is perhaps, no other chapter in the teachings of Christ or his apostles, that defines the relation of Christ to his church more clearly and at the same time so sweetly, so simply, and so easily to be understood. "I am the vine, ye are the branches." In my little teacher in the window, I find in the vine strength and nourishment, which is latent power. At length, a leaf puts forth, small at first, and frail, yet if it abide in the vine, it soon becomes strong and healthy, developed into a thing of beauty. Just so with the young christian. When taken from the miry pit and placed upon the rock Christ Jesus, he is in Christ; past sins are all washed away in the blood of the Lamb, yet only babes; and like the little leaflet, very frail. A rude touch would mar its beauty if not destroy it forever. Very many of the lambs make a mistake right here, that costs many tears and prayers. They feel very small and weak, and instead of abiding where strength is obtained, begin to compare their weakness with Sr. A's strength, or Bro. B's power with God, and feel that they are so small they can do nothing, and in consequence the Spirit is grieved, and the tender leaf is severed from the vine only to die.

Never mind Sr. A., or Bro. B., but abide in the vine. "He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." The secret of their strength is in the abiding. When we take up a shrub and transplant it, at first there is no apparent growth; but it is all the while sending down strong roots, that get a firm hold on the soil; then it begins to shoot upward; just so with the Christian, when taken from the miry-clay state, and placed on the Rock; settle down first on the Rock. The next thing after being rooted and grounded is to be built up. This need not consume years nor months. Let go of everything that has not Christ in it, and rest in him. Take him at his word. Believe that he is able to save now; able to keep all that is committed to him.

Abide in him. To abide is to dwell constantly; not in Christ to-day, and some where else to-morrow, upon the mountain and in the valley. It is not a thing unusual for young christians—babes—to live in this state; but many others that have been longer in the way, know not what it is to be kept. But there is a more excellent way. We are exhorted to leave those things that are behind, and go on to perfection; to grow in grace; abide in Christ; drink from the fountain. Trials will come, but we need not be overcome by them. We are on the Rock. Let the storm toss and fret; Jesus himself is in the hinder part of the ship. Temptations will assail, but we are fortified. Christ is within; the old avenues of temptation close as Jesus melts our hard hearts by his gentle, loving Spirit; while the enemy rages without, we have peace within. Thus abiding in the living vine, nurtured by the divine Spirit, rough places become plain. We can rejoice in tribulation, because it worketh patience; and "count it all joy when we fall into divers temptations." Go from grace to grace, until it is swallowed up in glory at the revelation of Jesus Christ.

HOOSICK VALLEY CONFERENCE.

Our third quarterly meeting was held in the new H. V. tent, in Woodford, Vt., July 17th to 21st, 1872. The President, Bro. A. W. Sibley, called a business session Saturday, the 20th inst., at four P. M. The clerk being absent, J. Wilbur was appointed secretary pro tem. It was voted that we receive Bro. Walter O. Higley, of Bennington, Vt., as a member of this conference.

Voted, That we hold our next annual meeting with the church in Hoosick, N. Y., commencing Oct. 16th, and continuing over Sunday. The meeting then adjourned.

JACOB WILBUR.

P. S.—The above gathering of the friends of Jesus proved a success for the cause of truth in W. The brethren were strengthened, sinners were awakened, backsliders reclaimed, several arose for prayers, and two were buried with Christ in baptism.

Sunday evening, by unanimous request of the church in Woodford, Bro. Walter O. Higley was set apart for the work of the gospel ministry, by ordination. Prayer by H. K. Flagg, charge by A. W. Sibley, and right-hand of fellowship by the writer. J. W.

LONG SERMONS.

T. W. GILE.

Long sermons are productive of more injury to the cause of Christ than many imagine. They have a tendency to drive people away from meeting. A long, spiritless discourse produces listlessness among the hearers, and kills out the spirituality of our worship. Ministers of the gospel should be persons of deep piety, good judgment, and close observers of human nature, to fit them for the arduous duties that devolve upon them. Observation and experience in the past corroborate the fact that short sermons are preferable to long ones, inasmuch as lengthy discourses generally have a more extended repetition of language and ideas, than short ones. We find, by investigation, that those churches who listen to sermons of thirty or forty minutes, are far more prosperous and spiritual minded, as a general rule, than those who are compelled to listen to sermons of an hour or more in length.

A minister's influence upon a congregation is great, and adds greatly to the prosperity or declension of the church, as the most talented members of a church will endeavor to imitate his example, especially in their devotional exercises. If the minister is long and tedious, they will be. If short and interesting, the same trait will be observable among the members. Perhaps some may consider me a croaker; but far be it from me to indulge in fault-finding. These sentiments are my honest convictions, and written with a desire for the general good of the church.

CAMPMEETING.

E. OWEN.

Who is going to the meeting
Of saints the present year;
Exchange the friendly greeting,
And before the Lord appear?

Who is going there to worship
In Spirit and in truth,
Not to spend their time in gossip,
Old, middle-aged, or youth?

Who is going in the Spirit,
To weep, and sing, and pray,
Not to take the time to visit
One single blessed day?

Who feels the need of spending
Some time before the Lord,
Because their course is tending
Contrary to his word?

Who knows the fire is dying
Within their spirits now,
And really feel like trying
To renew their cov'nant vow?

How many feel to promise,
If spared to meet again,
To act as when a novice,
Their first love to regain?

How many will go willing
Their first works for to do?
Nor wait, each meeting killing,
Till nearly or quite through?

But go, and be in earnest,
And take the anxious seat;
You will not long remain unblest,
Low down at Jesus' feet.

Come, brethren, let us not delay;
Come, sisters, one and all;
While mercy lingers, now obey,
This may prove your last call.

THE POPE'S PROTEST.

Letter of the Pope to the Cardinal Secretary of State—The Italian Guarantees and the Desecration of the Eternal City—No Reconciliation Possible.

In the following letter, the Holy Father sets at rest forever all the rumors that have been so industriously circulated regarding a possible reconciliation with Italy. The Holy Father reviews in this masterly state paper the whole Italian situation, and shows how futile and empty are the absurd guarantees. To every Catholic whose ignorance has been so great as to lead him to imagine that the Pope can be at once independent and a slave, we commend these teachings of our father.

PIUS IX., POPE.

To the Most Reverend Cardinal James Antonelli, our Secretary of State:—Forced by the sad circumstances which at present surround us, to witness each day the cruel sight of fresh and violent attacks directed against the church, we feel obliged to-day, as an absolute duty, to testify to your eminence the profound bitterness which we feel on learning the decision recently made by the President of the ministers of the usurper's government, who has announced his firm resolution to present to the Chambers a bill for the suppression of the religious orders of this our city, the seat of the See of the Vicar of Jesus Christ and the metropolis of the Catholic world.

This decision, which reveals more clearly than ever the true end which they had in view when they first began to despoil the Apostolic See of its temporal dominion, is a fresh outrage inflicted, not only on us but on all Catholicity. Who can deny effectively that the suppression of the religious orders, or the arbitrary limitation of their existence, is not a direct attempt aimed against the liberty and independence of the Roman Pontiff, taking, as it does, out of his hands one of the most powerful and efficacious means of governing the universal church?

All the world knows that as the centre of Christianity is in Rome, so the religious houses which have been established there for centuries, are, so to speak, the centres of all the orders and all the congregations which are spread over the entire Catholic world. They are, as it were, so many seminaries built by the indefatigable care of the Roman Pontiffs, and endowed by the generosity of pious donors, native as well as foreign, and are governed by the supreme authority of the Sovereign Pontiffs, from whom they receive their life, counsel and direction. These houses were instituted with a view to furnish workers and missionaries for all parts of the world, and, without turning to history, it will suffice, in order to point out the advantages received by the Christian republic from the counsel of these evangelical laborers, to glance over the various countries of Europe, the most distant and inhospitable shores of Asia, Africa, America and Oceanica, where, even in our days, these zealous ministers of God consecrate themselves with exemplary self-abnegation to the interests and good of the flocks, and sacrifice their health, and even their lives, in the fulfillment of their duty.

Now, if they suppress the religious orders or limit their existence, it will be no longer possible for the world to experience, as it does now, the benefits of these charitable and pious institutions. It is in Rome that are established the principal noviciates, destined to prepare new soldiers for the faith. It is in Rome and under the shadow of the apostolic throne that all the business, even foreign, of the various committees is transacted. It is in Rome that are elected, in the assembly of the religious of different nations, the generals and dignitaries of the various provinces. How then can we hope, unless these great centres continue in their present condition, to see their beneficent work continue to obtain the same results? No, to suppress the religious houses of Rome is to leave without life the various communities dispersed over the entire world, and to despoil them in Rome of their property is to dispossess the entire orders of their rights. The suppression in Rome of the religious orders is not only an act of manifest injustice against well-deserving persons, but also a real attack against the international right of all Catholicity.

Besides, it is our duty to state that the suppression of the Roman religious houses is exceedingly prejudicial to the Apostolic See, for it is from among the most distinguished subjects of these houses that are chosen our most useful fellow-laborers in the sacred ministry, as well as assistants for the various ecclesiastical congregations which serve the church most zealously, either by the light of their judgment in the various missions confided to our care, or by giving themselves up to profound studies, whereby they are able to refute errors, or again by giving wise councils in matters of discipline to each of the various churches of the Catholic world.

It is manifest, therefore, my Lord Cardinal, that the real object of the ministers of the usurping government in the project of law which they are now preparing, is nothing more or less than a continuation of the sinister and subversive plans which they hypocritically pursued since the day they took violent possession of Rome, and by means of which they intend not only to attempt the destruction of our temporal authority, but also that of our supreme apostolate, to the greater advantage of which, said they, they undertook the charge of our temporalities by the annexation of the patrimony of the church, a patrimony given to the Popes by an admirable dispensation of divine Providence, and which they have possessed for now more than eleven centuries, by the most just and sacred of rights, for the good of all Catholicity.

And who can now entertain the faintest illusion as to the true nature of this plan, which tends to overthrow the authority of the Supreme Chief of the church, and to degrade the dignity of his august ministy, and to completely upset the organization of the Apostolic See, which has been in existence for so many centuries?

Every day, my Lord Cardinal, you have beheld these usurpations, which, now for one reason and now for another, are being perpetrated in spite of all morality and justice; and all these usurpations tend to the carrying into execution of the destroyers' plans. To whom then, if not these, are we to attribute decrees, which are being incessantly multiplied, and which have gradually subtracted from our authority all the institutions of charity and benevolence, the colleges of education and establishments of public instruction in the city, which seemed to be objects of our most particular care, as also that of our predecessors? To what, if not to this, ought we to refer that iniquitous law which drives into involuntary service in the army those youths who have dedicated themselves to God and the hopes of the church, thus depriving the cloister and the ministry of a battalion of new and laborious missionaries? To what, if not to this, are we to impute this rage for spreading horrible errors by teaching with impunity every kind of anti-christian doctrine, either in the public schools, by incredible scandalous lectures, delivered with wicked boldness, by apostates and men who are rebels to the authority of the church? To what this relaxation of morals?—this insolent toleration of lewd spectacles?—these frequent profanations of things holy, and this diabolical and persistent derision of the most sacred and inviolable of things, and, in short, this systematic persecution of all honest persons who are faithful to the church and to the Pope?

You know, my Lord Cardinal, how each day our heart has been torn by the sight of the sufferings of the church. Reduced to a powerless condition, and unable to, in any way, stay the progress of these misfortunes, we can only bemoan them; but, at the same time, we publicly raise our voice in protestation against the evils of which the church is the victim, so as to convince the whole world of the miserable condition to which we have been reduced. It is true we could have saved ourselves in part the pain of drinking daily of this bitter chalice, and of witnessing in person such sad sights, by seeking an asylum in some foreign country.

But if reasons of great religious interest have caused us, in the present state of things, not to abandon our dear city, the seat of the Roman Pontificate, it is certainly not without a particular purpose of divine providence that we have not done so, provided that we might be able to convince the world thereby of the fate reserved to the church and to the Roman Pontiff, when the liberty and independence of his supreme apostleship are compromised by the change in that condition, which was providentially ordained by God. And in fact how, in the new order of things, can the Pope be called free and independent? It is not sufficient for him to say that for a moment he is free, and regards his personal liberty; he must be, and appear so to the eye of every one, independent and free in the exercise of his supreme authority. Now the Pope is not, and never will be, free and independent as long as his supreme power is subjected to the caprice of a contrary authority, or as long as his sublime ministry is submitted to the influence and domination of political provisions, as long as his laws and decrees can be suspected of partiality or of offence toward the various nations.

In the state of things which have environed the Pontificate since the usurpation of the patrimony of the church, the conflict of the two powers has been inevitable. Harmony, in this state of affairs, is not dependent on the will of man, for the relation between the two powers being based on an absurd system, resulting in elements so much at variance with each other, can only end in a perpetual state of painful antagonism.

History itself is full of the conflicts between the two authorities, and of examples of trouble in the Christian family, each time the Popes have, even for an instant, been subjected to the authority of a foreign power. The reason is obvious. The world being divided into a considerable number of States independent of each other, some of them being great and powerful, others small and weak, the faithful cannot have their conscience in peace unless they are convinced of the impartiality of the common father of all Catholicity, as also of the independence of his acts. But how can this be now-a-days if the actions of the Roman Pontiff are continually exposed to party agitations, the arbitrary will of governors, and if he is in peril of seeing at each step his peace troubled, and the tranquility of his counsellors and ministers constantly menaced.

In the same way the liberty of the sacred congregations, to whom falls the duty of resolving the questions and all the difficulties of the entire Catholic world, is of the highest importance to the security of the church, as also for the legitimate wants and imperious necessities of every Christian nation. It is the most important that no man should suspect the freedom and independence of the decisions and decrees promulgated by the common father of the faithful. No one should have his conscience disturbed by the thought that foreign pressure can influence Pontifical resolutions. It is imperative that the Pope, the religious orders and congregations, and the conclave, should be perfectly free, as also that this new freedom should be manifest and evident, and that there should be no doubt or suspicion respecting it in the mind of any one. This religious liberty of Catholics having as an indispensable condition that of the Pope himself; it follows that the Pope, supreme judge and living organ of the faith and law of all Catholics, not being free, every Catholic is likewise not sure of the independence and freedom of his actions.

Hence the doubts and the anxieties which trouble the minds of the faithful; hence those religious perturbations of the various States; hence those outward demonstrations of Catholic faith; which are the evident external proofs of the internal disturbance of the Catholic mind, and which, rather than decrease, will continue more and more evidently as they have hitherto done, from the hour that we were violently deprived of our temporal dominion, until that in which the head of Catholicity shall be reinstated in his rights, and restored to his real independence.

This being the case, it is not easy to understand how people can seriously speak about a reconciliation between the Pontifical government and that of the usurper. What reconciliation can there be in the present state of affairs. It is not a simple question which has risen up in the order of politics, or in that of religion, and which can admit of a favorable solution by means of official negotiations. On the contrary, it regards a violent situation forced upon the Sovereign Pontiff, and which entirely destroys that indispensable liberty and absolute independence which is of vital importance to the government of the church. In these conditions, for the Roman Pontiff to lend himself to conciliation would be equivalent to a renunciation of the rights of the Holy See, which he has received as a sacred deposit from his august predecessors, and to resign himself, by an act of his will, to the frequent encounter of innumerable obstacles in the exercise of his supreme ministry; to leave the conscience of the faithful in a condition of anxiety and trouble; to close the way to all free manifestations of truth; in a word, to abandon spontaneously to the caprice of a government that sublime mission received by the Roman Pontificate directly from God, with the strict obligation to defend its independence by every human means in its power.

No, we cannot stoop to approve these assaults against the church, this usurpation of our most sacred rights, this culpable interference of civil authority in ecclesiastical concerns. Firm and immovable, we will defend with honor, and by every means in our power, the interests of the flock entrusted to our charge. We are ready to face the greatest sacrifice, and, if necessary, to shed our blood rather than betray any one of the duties imposed upon us by the supreme mission we have received from on high. With the help of God we will never fail to give an example of strength and courage to the other pastors and ministers of the church, who, by reason of the adversity of the times, sustain so nobly and so many struggles in the cause of God and for the welfare of souls, for the defence of the sacred legacy of faith, and for the integrity of the principles of eternal justice and morality. What shall we say, my Lord Cardinal, further about these so-called guarantees which the usurper's government pretends to have given the head of the church, with the manifest intention of misleading the good faith of the simple-minded, and to offer as an arm to those political parties who neither care for the independence of the Roman Pontiff nor for his liberty.

Leaving on one side every other argument, does not what is now happening in Rome, at a time when it would be most necessary to show in the face of Europe the force and efficacy of the so much vaunted laws of guarantees—does not what now happens daily in Rome prove how futile and powerless they are? Truly, it is well to proclaim the person and residence of the Roman Pontiff inviolable, when the government has not the power to guarantee us from a thousand insults to which our authority is daily exposed; when we are, like all other honest persons, doomed to be sad spectators of the unfair way in which justice is administered. What would be the use of our not keeping the door of our residence shut, when, if we attempt to go forth, it would only be to assist at scenes of revolting impiety, or to expose ourselves to the outrages of persons accustomed to excite immorality and disorder, or run the risk of being the involuntary cause of conflict among the people? Of what use is the promise of personal guarantees to the dignitaries of the church, if they are forced to hide in the streets the insignia of their dignity, so as to avoid the danger of exposing themselves to every kind of ill treatment; if the ministers of God and the most sacred things are made the objects of contempt and ridicule, to such an extent that the most august ceremonies of our holy religion can no longer be celebrated in public; in short, if the saintly pastors of the Catholic world, who come to Rome from time to time to render up an account of the affairs of their churches, can no longer do so without being exposed to insult and even danger?

It is of no use proclaiming the liberty of our pastoral ministry when the whole legislation, even in its most important points, as for instance in the case of the sacraments, are in open opposition to the fundamental laws of the universal church? It is of no use recognizing by a law the authority of the supreme hierarchy, when they do not recognize the value of the acts which it publishes, and when, with unparalleled injustice, they do not permit its members to enjoy the revenues of the legitimate patrimony of their churches, or to enter their episcopal houses; to such a state of complete penury are they reduced but for the charity of the faithful which sustains us, and which enables us for the moment to share with them the alms of the poor. In a word, what guarantee can be given by the government for the execution of its promises, when the first fundamental law of the State is not only attacked with impunity by the first comers, but is rendered null and void by the government itself, which, at its step, as it chooses, upsets or changes, either by decrees or by new laws, its fundamental principles, and thus destroys all the respect with which they should be observed?

All this, my Lord Cardinal, we have explained to you, principally for the purpose that you should make known to those governments who have accredited representatives at the court of the Holy See, the pitiable condition to which this new order of things has reduced us, to the great prejudice of the Catholic cause. We charge you, my Lord Cardinal, to protest in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff against the attacks committed not only against ourselves, but against all Catholicity. Not less interested than ourselves in the tranquility and peace of mind of their subjects, these governments will take into consideration this want of liberty and independence in the exercise of our apostolic ministry, from which we are at present suffering. If each Catholic has a right to demand from his government a guarantee for his own personal-religious liberty, he has no less a right to invite that government to see that he who is for each Catholic the guide and interpreter of his faith and religion, shall also be free and independent. Moreover, it is the interest of all governments, Catholic or otherwise, to restore peace and tranquility to the great Catholic family, and to sustain our real independence. They cannot deny that, called by God to defend and sustain the principles of eternal justice, it is their duty to defend and protect a cause which is the most legitimate on earth, assured that by sustaining the sacred rights of the Roman Pontiff, they also sustain and defend their own rights. They cannot gainsay that the Roman Pontiff and the pontifical throne, far from being an embarrassment to the repose and prosperity of Europe, or "the grandeur and independence of Italy," has always served as a link of union between the princes and the people, and that it has ever in all times been the centre of concord and peace. To Italy in particular (it must be said) the Holy See has always been the cause of her true grandeur, the guardian of her independence, the defender and constant bulwark of her liberty.

Finally, as there can be no better guarantee for the church and for her Chief than that of prayer addressed to Him who holds in his hand the destiny of kingdoms, and who can by a sign stay the raging of the waves and calm the storm, we never cease to address the Almighty by continual and fervent prayer for cessation of all these evils, for the conversion of sinners, and for the triumph of the church, our mother. Let us unite, then, our prayers to those of all our dear sons throughout the entire Catholic world. We must not neglect, however, to call down upon them, as a duty of gratitude, a special benediction, which shall serve to protect them from fresh and more terrible chastisement, that they may remain firm in every principle of honor and virtue, so that they may be led by the intercession of the blessed and immaculate Virgin Mary, of her spouse, St. Joseph, and that of the holy apostles, Peter and Paul, to the peace and prosperity of other times.

Receive, my Lord Cardinal, on this occasion, our apostolic benediction, which we bestow upon you from our heart.

PIUS P. P. IX.

From the Vatican this 16th day of June, 1872.

HOLLIS JACKMAN.

BRO. GRANT:—I like Bro. Ross' ideas about getting to campmeeting, but I wish to say a word about going home. I would suggest that every one have their vessel well hooped, so that what little good they happen to get there shall not leak out; for I have noticed that many leave all the good they get on the camp-ground, or on the way home; for no one would mistrust they were the same persons at home they had seen and heard on the camp-ground. Now I believe religion that cannot be enjoyed at home is poor stuff, to say the least; but many have to go to these great meetings to enjoy any religion at all. On such will come an awful disappointment when the Lord comes, is my firm belief.

Webster, Mass.

A NEW YORK clergyman, having forgotten his notes the other Sunday, apologized to his congregation by saying that he would have to depend upon the Lord that morning for what he might say, but in the afternoon he would come better prepared.

Guard, my child, thy tongue,
That it speak no wrong;
Let no evil word pass o'er it:
Set the watch of truth before it,
That it speak no wrong.
Guard, my child, thy tongue.

Guard, my child, thine eyes;
Prying is not wise;
Let them look on what is right;
From all evil turn their sight;
Prying is not wise.
Guard, my child, thine eyes.

Guard, my child, thine ear;
Wicked words will sear.
Let no evil word come in
That may cause the soul to sin;
Wicked words will sear.
Guard, my child, thine ear.

Ear and eye and tongue,
Guard while thou art young;
For, alas! these busy three
Can unruly members be.
Guard, while thou art young,
Ear and eye and tongue.

THE BROKEN WINDOW.

"There, you've done the mischief now," cried Joe Harris; "you've broken that church window, real expensive too, such windows are."

Charles Mercer stood up and looked with regret and sorrow at the accident that had befallen him. He had broken the window, and the bare thought filled his young heart with dismay.

One little boy, hearing the crash, had started to run away, but seeing the others maintaining their ground, had turned and stood looking timidly on the wreck. Charlie Mercer was the son of a poor widow, and as he thought of the cost of such a window, tears filled his eyes, which he vainly tried to keep back.

"I tell you what," said Joe Harris, somewhat softened by the evident grief in the face of his playmate, "if you say so, we won't tell, and no one will ever be able to find out who broke it."

"No," cried Charlie Mercer, "never. It is bad enough to have broken the window; it would be ten times worse to conceal or lie about it. I shall go at once to the trustees, and if mother and I can pay for it, it shall be done. Poor mother, how sorry she will be."

"Well," said Arthur Harvey, "I can't see that the whole blame should rest on Charlie. We have been playing, and it just happened that his ball struck the window. You know very well, Joe Harris, that Charlie opposed our playing here so near the church, and we all said there was no danger. I think it is nothing but right that we should all help him with the cost."

"I'll not pay the first red cent!" retorted Joe. "If I had broken the window, I should have paid the cost like a man, and not been a baby about it, either. As it is he may pay it himself, or get out of it the best he can."

Charles Mercer walked away from the disputing boys homeward. He expected no assistance, and he knew very well how sad his mother would feel, but he must tell her all, and perhaps she could help him devise some means of paying for it. Meanwhile Arthur Harvey hastened across the field to one of the trustees to see what could be done in Charlie's favor. He told the whole story of the accident, and how Charlie had refused to conceal his fault. The trustee was a kind-hearted man, and decided at once that the money should be raised by contribution; so heading a paper, he sent Arthur round to raise the necessary amount, which was speedily done.

You can easily imagine Charlie's delight and astonishment when, coming to the trustee a few hours after, to make full confession, and beg a little time for earning the money, he found the necessary funds had all been collected. As for Arthur, he was already too happy to need the grateful thanks of his dear friend and playmate.—Children's Friend.

READ THIS, BOYS.

A gentleman advertised for a boy to assist him in his office, and nearly fifty applicants presented themselves to him. Out of the whole number he in a short time selected one and dismissed the rest.

"I should like to know," said a friend, "on what ground you selected that boy, who has not a single recommendation?"

"You are mistaken," said the gentleman; "he had a great many. He wiped his feet when he came in, and closed the door after him, showing that he was careful. He gave up his seat instantly to that lame old man, showing that he was kind and thoughtful. He took off his cap when he came in, and answered my questions promptly and respectfully, showing that he was polite and gentlemanly. He picked up the book which I had purposely laid on the floor, and replaced it on the table, while all the rest stepped over it or shoved it aside; and he waited quietly for his turn, instead of pushing and crowding, showing that he was honest and orderly. When I spoke to him, I noticed that his clothes were carefully brushed, his hair in nice order, and his teeth as white as milk; and when he wrote his name, I noticed that his finger nails were clean, instead of being tipped with jet, like that handsome little fellow in the blue jacket. Don't you call these things letters of recommendation? I do, and I would give more for what I could tell about a boy by using my eyes ten minutes than all the letters he can bring me."—Selected.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

WHAT WE MODERNS EAT.—When we consider what an incongruous amount of stuff is taken into the stomach at a modern luxurious dinner, we ought not to be surprised that this organ is frequently the seat of severe trouble. Soup, fish, flesh, oil, vinegar, pastry, confectionery, ice-cream, nuts, fruits, vegetables, wines, and numberless other minor ingredients, of conflicting chemical qualities, are among the materials "thrown in." Stir all these things up in a vessel together, and who of us would not sicken at the appearance and odor? Yet at a modern dinner it is a common thing to have all these heterogenous substances crammed into the human stomach, there to ferment and generate those vicious and pernicious gases that cause disease. Truly, 'man is fearfully and wonderfully made;' no other animal could exist on such diet. It would kill a gorilla in a month. It does kill, although more slowly, thousands of that high and mighty variety of the human race commonly called "gentlemen." Violent exercise after eating, large draughts of cold water when the body is heated, and the habit of constant stuffing, will, after a time, cause chronic inflammation of the stomach.—Utica Herald.

SUMMER MORTALITY OF CHILDREN.—Those who carefully read the mortuary statistics of New York and Philadelphia, or of London or Paris, from the middle of July to the middle of September, as published in the newspapers, will notice that the number of deaths of children under five years of age goes up and down with the thermometer. The higher the temperature for the day and night—the average of the twenty-four hours—the greater the number of deaths. Cool evenings diminish the tables of mortality as certainly as Jack Frost arrests the yellow fever in New Orleans and Mobile. But the salutary change is not due simply to a lower temperature, but to more air. The breezes from the ocean or the mountains, both reduce the heat and supply a purer atmosphere.

Stale bread, wheaten grits, oatmeal or corn meal mush, hominy, etc., are the proper farinaceous articles for children. Good ripe fruits may be indulged in, provided they are only taken at regular meals. The same freedom is allowable in the use of fresh vegetables, provided they are perfectly ripe. Green peas, green corn, and string beans, are entirely unobjectionable, provided they are well boiled and eaten without seasonings. There is so much fraud and adulteration in the city milk business, that unless well assured of its quality, the safer way is to disuse it.—Science of Health.

TEA DRUNKARDS.—Dr. Arlidge, one of the Pottery Inspectors in Staffordshire, has put forth a sensible protest against a very pernicious custom which rarely receives sufficient attention either from the medical profession or from the public. He says that the women of the working classes make tea a principal article of diet instead of an occasional beverage; they drink it several times a day, and the result is a lamentable amount of sickness. This is no doubt the case, and, as Dr. Arlidge remarks, a portion of the reforming zeal which keeps up such a lively warfare against intoxicating drinks might advantageously be diverted to the repression of this very serious evil of tea-tippling among the poorer classes. Tea in anything beyond moderate quantities is as distinctly a narcotic poison as is opium or alcohol. It is capable of ruining the digestion, of enfeebling and disordering the heart's action, and of generally shattering the nerves.—Scribner's for August.

TYPHOID FEVER.—When typhoid fever occurs it often spreads to several members, and in tenement houses where there are many families and much filth, the disease may not be eradicated entirely for several months. It is now pretty certain that the poison which occasions the spread of the disease is found only in the discharges from the bowels. It is exceedingly important, therefore, that these discharges be disinfected by carbolic acid or green copperas, so they will not affect the air, or the privies, or cesspools. Great care should also be given to the bed linen of the patient, and cleanliness be practiced. It sometimes happens that the rains carry the solutions of closets and cesspools into the wells and springs, and thus affect the water and spread the fever in many directions. If our readers will bear in mind these facts when they have occasion to practice them, much needless suffering may be prevented and many lives saved.—Good Health.

CHECKING PERSPIRATION.—Multitudes of women lose health and life every year, in one of two ways; by busying themselves in a warm kitchen until weary, and then throwing themselves on a bed or sofa, without covering, and perhaps in a room without fire; or by removing the outer clothing, and perhaps changing the dress for a more common one, as soon as they enter the house after a walk or a shopping. The rule should be invariably to go at once to a warm room, and keep on all the clothing at least for five or ten minutes, until the forehead is perfectly dry. In all weathers, if you have to walk and ride on any occasion, do the riding first.—Dr. Hall.

THE LUNGS.—Every breath we draw, we take into the lungs from one and a half to two pints of air; so that it takes about two and a half gallons of pure air a minute, or sixty hogsheads every twenty-four hours, properly to supply the lungs. How important, then, to health to have houses well ventilated, and not to sleep in small, close rooms.

FELT HATS.—Perspiration, or grease, or both, soaks through. Dissolve some ammonia in warm water, and wash the hat with it, using a piece of cloth, black or light according to the color of the hat.

WALKING WITH JESUS.

Walking with Jesus! oh, how high
May fallen man arise;
The vilest who on him rely,
He never will despise.

Walking with Jesus! Cleansed from sin,
Our garments pure and white,—
His glorious kingdom fixed within,
His praises our delight.

Walking with Jesus! oh, how sweet
His presence on the road;
His fullness makes our joys complete,
Our hearts are his abode.

Walking with Jesus! oh, how safe
From dangers ever near;
One glance into his lovely face,
Dispels our every fear.

PERILOUS TIMES.

W. K. EVERSON.

The times are indeed perilous, abounding in all the characteristics so succinctly yet fully given by the apostle Peter; but among all the peculiarities of the people in this day, no one feature is more prominent or dangerous than that in which they deny the power of God, "ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." "As Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses," so do these resist the truth. Their minds having been corrupted by their "much learning" in geology, ethnology and philology, they become "reprobate concerning the faith." Christ says, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Faith in what? Faith in the history of Jesus on the cross? Certainly not. Millions believe that and their entire church catechism; but that faith that lays hold on the word of God—every "thus saith the Lord," and believes it implicitly, so that in the language of David they can say, "Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my path"; "through thy precepts I get understanding, therefore I hate every false way"; "therefore, I esteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way." Having this faith, we are led in all child-like simplicity to take God at his word, and hope in his promises, and consequently look for his Son from heaven.

But certainly you do not mean to take the word of God literally? Most surely. How else? If he does not mean what he says, who is to tell what he does mean? How can his word be a lamp to the feet of the poor, who "are chosen, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom," if it can only be understood by students in geology, ethnology, and philology? Why did Paul say, "Not many wise," if only the learned, who by their traditions are making the word of God of none effect to-day, can understand? Why is it that so few of the Geologists, Ethnologists, and Philologists, are to-day looking for the Lord; but are, instead, the principal scoffers at the word of God? It is because they have set aside the literal teachings of Moses, of the prophets, and of Christ, and have heaped to themselves teachers who teach "vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called"; who seek to find out God by their wisdom," which the literal Scripture says they cannot do.

The latest phase of this delusion of the arch deceiver is an attempt to bring the so-called sciences above named, as understood at this day, to upset the literal account of the origin of the race of man, as given in Genesis by Moses; and are bold to assert that the earth was peopled by other races many thousands of years prior to the creation of Adam, of which some are still extant (as the African and Mongolian); and claim, moreover, that the Hebrew Scriptures sustain this belief. If there had been other races of men existing prior to Adam, why are we told that God "made of one blood all nations of men, for to dwell on all the face of the earth"? Again, "Christ died for all men,"—the same all men as above, I suppose. Who are redeemed by his blood? Why, men "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" Besides, Christ is the "second Adam," and "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." How about the salvation of those who did not spring from Adam? If so good a Hebrew scholar as Paul did not discover the account of the different races in the Old Scriptures (and he evidently did not), then what a stretch of philological presumption for men to pretend they have discovered it now. This idea of different races is not only palpably at variance with the Scriptures, but is a fruitful source of mischief in political and social life, leading to envy, bitterness, strife, vanity, self-conceit, and even to the worst of crimes, as instanced in the system of American Slavery. More recently, the horrible massacre in Los Angelos, is another exhibition of the result of this teaching, which on the Pacific coast is so prevalent, and the feeling engendered by it so intense, that were it not for the forbidding frown of civilization, similar scenes would be enacted almost daily to gratify the passions of the superior Adam. If this theory were true, the Ethiopian was baptized by Philip in vain; and all efforts made in behalf of the so-called inferior races have been misdirected, as Christ only died for those who were lost in Adam.

That man must be blind indeed, who cannot see that this is one of the most fatal devices of the enemy to sap the foundations of truth. Must all these great truths, on which the gospel is based, be set aside to accommodate the vain philosophy of those who know so much that it hinders the word of God with them? O, cast it all away as filthy rags, to be taken and cast in the fire. As to that other "fable of infidelity," the "hundreds of thousands of years before Adam," it is equally fallacious, and has been refuted time and again. "The Scriptures . . . are able to make you wise unto salvation." So Paul wrote Timothy concerning the Old Testament, and we do well to hear him, and not "be wise above what is written."

THE PROMISED RETURN.

E. W. BUZZELL.

"I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."—JOHN 14: 3.

Another "word of promise" concerning the church's "blessed hope." Orphaned pilgrims, dry your tears; soon the morning hour will strike, and the sighs of a groaning and burdened creation be heard no more. Earth's six thousand years of toil and sorrow are waning; the millennial Sabbath is at hand. Jesus will soon be heard to repeat concerning all his sleeping saints, what he said of old concerning one of them—"I go to awake him out of sleep." Your beloved Lord's first coming was in humiliation and woe; his name was the "man of sorrows"; he had to travel on, amid darkness and desertion, his blood-stained path; a chaplet of thorns was the only crown he wore. But soon he will come "the second time without a sin-offering unto salvation," never again to leave his church, but to receive those who followed him in his cross, to be everlasting partakers with him and his crown.

He may seem to tarry. External nature, in her unvarying and undeviating sequences, gives no indication of his approach. Centuries have elapsed since he uttered the promise, and still he lingers; but "the Lord is not slack concerning his promise." He gives you "this word" in addition to many others as a keepsake—a pledge and guarantee for the certainty of his return—"I will come again." Who can conceive all the surpassing blessedness connected with that advent? The Elder Brother arrived to fetch the younger brethren home. The true Joseph revealing Himself in unutterable tenderness to the brethren, who were once estranged from him, receiving them unto himself, not satisfied with apportioning a kingdom for them, but as if all his own joy and bliss were intermingled with theirs—Where I am, there you must be also." "To him that overcometh," says he again, "will I grant to sit with me on my throne."

Believer, can you now say, with some of the holy transport of the apostle—"Whom having not seen we love"? What must it be when you come to see him "face to face," and that forever and ever? If you can tell of precious hours of communion in a sin-stricken, woe-worn world, with a treacherous heart and an imperfect or divided love; what must it be when you come, in a sinless, sorrowless state, with purified and renewed affections, to see the King in his beauty. The letter of an absent brother, cheering and consolatory as it is, is a poor compensation for the joys of personal and visible communion. The absent Elder Brother on the throne speaks to you now only by his Word and Spirit; soon you shall be admitted to his immediate fellowship, seeing him "as he is,"—he himself unfolding the wondrous chart of his providence and grace—leading you about from fountain to fountain among the living waters, and with his own gentle hand wiping the last lingering tear-drop from your eye. "Heaven is an everlasting home with Jesus." "That where I am, there ye may be also." He has appended a cheering postcript to this word, on which he has "caused us to hope"—"He which testifieth these things saith, Surely, I come quickly."

THE GRACE OF JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all."—Phil. 4: 23.

These are the words with which the apostle nearly always concludes his epistles to the brethren. Indeed, it was grace with which he prefaced his letters, as well as concluded them. In beginning he would say, "Grace, mercy, and peace from God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ be with you"; and in conclusion, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." Surely words used so frequently must have a depth of meaning in them; yet how little they are thought of, or comprehended From Sabbath to Sabbath, thousands of ministers, with uplifted hands, pronounce this benediction upon the people, but who realizes the significant import of the language? Grace, grace, what is it? It is better experienced than described. The poor laborer gave the best definition of it when he said, "Grace, grace,—that means something for nothing." Yes, this is precisely the idea of grace, and the grace of God means every thing for nothing. Grace is the full, free, and unmerited favor of God toward sinners. We are saved by grace. Not by works, for our works have many of them been evil; not by works, for how can the labor of time purchase the unsullied bliss of eternal ages? Not by our good resolutions, for we have broken them a thousand times. No, not by anything we have done, or can do, are we to receive eternal salvation, but by the grace of God. With God there is an eternal, inexhaustible fountain of grace. He is the God of grace. It was grace that first contrived a way to save rebellious man.

"The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Grace is the teacher, man the learner. "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor; that ye through his poverty might be rich." O what grace was this! He, the blessed, holy and beloved Son of God, became poor—how poor? Hear him: "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Why this? That we, poor sinners, might be rich. How rich? Hark! "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." All things? Yes, all things are yours. Peace, pardon, salvation, joy, hope, love, light, strength, righteousness, sanctification, redemption,—all this. Yes, more; the rest, the crown, the harp, the song, the kingdom, the inheritance, honor, glory, immortality, eternal life. Is not this enough? Much of the grace of God has been displayed in this world since the fall of man, but as yet we have only had glimpses and limited manifestations of it. Time is too short for its full developement. Here we can only get the "earnests" and "foretastes"; but in the "ages to come, he will show us the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness toward us, through Jesus Christ." Reader, I beseech you, that you receive not the grace of God in vain; but grow in grace, come boldly to the throne of grace, and may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you evermore.

NO SECOND LIFE TO HEAR THE GOSPEL.

J. B. COOK.

The Scripture "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. I charge thee, therefore, before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom, Preach the Word."—2 TIM. 3: 16, 4: 1–2.

This solemn sanction to the gospel ministry binds us by all the motives of fear and hope, to confine our teaching to "the word." This word forbids a second life to hear the gospel, as some fondly dream. Now let us note the proof.

I. The tares and the wheat grow together till the harvest. In the time of harvest, the tares are bundled for the burning, and the wheat is garnered. Matt. 13: 24–30. The tares, the chaff, the briars and thorns, the children of the curse, are NOT put through another process to give them "a better chance" (as they say); but burned up in "unquenchable fire." Matt. 3: 10, 12; Heb. 6: 8; 2 Pet. 2: 14–17.

Every dispensational promise, prophecy, parable and verbal statement of this point forbids the notion of a second process, or "a better chance." Every fact in nature (that forms the basis of these parables) lies against the idle assumption of a second life for sinners to hear the gospel. The notion is human, and the imagination vain. It is against experience, and the well known constitution of all things.

II. If Dunn (the author of this "unpreached gospel," as he terms it, that arrogates a second life to hear the gospel, and enjoy the imagined "better chance") would but "think soberly," as he ought to think, he might see that "chance" never saves. Salvation is of the Lord, according to the gospel. The present dispensation of grace is to take out a people for his name. Acts 15: 14; Matt. 24: 14; 28: 20. Hence, there is no ground for this new notion, in reason or religion. This gospel age is to give place (not to the resurrection of "the unjust," to hear the gospel a second time, but) to Christ, in "the times of restitution" of all things spoken by all the prophets. Acts 3: 21. This gospel is that preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Acts 2. It leaves no time or occasion for "the unpreached gospel" of this new theory. It is all a monstrous impertinance.

III. The crowning proof is personal. "The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord," etc.; but "the candle of the wicked shall be put out." Prov. 13: 9; 20: 20, 27; 24: 20; Job 18: 5–6 and 17–18. "His lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness;" in "the blackness of darkness forever." Jude 13. The believer says: "Thou wilt light my candle. The Lord my God will enlighten my darkness." Ps. 18: 28. But no such light of gospel promise shines through the tomb of those whose "lamp is PUT OUT" in "the blackness of darkness forever." More of detail is not needful for proof on this point, as the above is both personal and dispensational, and given in various forms. Therefore there can be no second life to hear the gospel with a "better chance."

WE should have a loose hold on the world, for we are liable to be called on at any moment, and we can carry none of it with us. If we allow ourselves to be tried with any thing we see here, we shall be hindered in the way of salvation, for we must say the will of the Lord, not ours, be done, in all things. We have tried him in affliction and bereavement, and have ever found him a present help in time of trouble.

THE fruit of piety is seen, not in extraordinary performances that challenge attention and admiration, but in doing all the ordinary duties of life for God, and in a spirit and manner intended to please him. Every act of our lives is covered by the comprehensive command of the apostle—"Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

THE OTHER SIDE.

"What is man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

In order to get a satisfactory answer to the above question it becomes necessary to examine carefully the sacred record. All the evidences outside of that are vague and conflicting. We may ransack the misty shades of heathen mythology, and scan the philosophy of Plato and Socrates, and still we shall be in the dark with regard to this momentous subject, unless we take heed to what the Lord hath spoken. One heathen philosopher, after demonstrating to the satisfaction of thousands that man was possessed of an immortal principle, when his daughter died, kneeled beside her coffin and exclaimed, "O that the gods would come down and tell us whether there be any life in the future! His own demonstrations failed him in the trying hour. But when we come to the record of inspiration all is plain and satisfactory, unless our minds have been biased by premonitory impressions, or spoiled by the traditions of men.

There seems to be an instinct in man that leads him to worship, and to form some ideas of a future; and heathen nations being ignorant of the purposes of Jehovah, and the true doctrine of a future life by a redemption from the thraldom of death, have fixed up a theory of immortal-soul-ism; and christian nations adopted it, amalgamating it with the true doctrines of christianity. It is evident that the doctrine of the "immortality of the soul," whether it be true or false, is purely of heathen origin. For while it was taught by the Egyptians and Grecians, and other heathen nations, the term "immortal soul" is not found in all the book of God. Hence it follows that if the doctrine be true, and of divine origin, the Almighty has chosen "heathen philosophers," instead of "inspired prophets," as ambassadors to herald the glorious tidings to our benighted world.

We may assume the soul is immortal; but assumptions are not proof. And we may assume almost any position, and we can find passages of Scripture from which inferences may be drawn that seem to sustain our assumption. But all this amounts to nothing; a question of such magnitude cannot be settled by inferences. In investigating the Bible we must establish principles on positive declarations, and then interpret inferences by those principles.

In Gen. 2: 7 we have the record of man's creation, and there it is declared, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." From this we learn that man was created out of the dust of the ground, and breathing into his nostrils the breath of life caused him to live.

Some have supposed that the Hebrew n'shamah, from which the phrase "breath of life" is rendered, being in its plural form evinces that two kinds of life were breathed into man—a natural life and a spiritual life; the spiritual being an entity of itself—an immortal soul. Such premises, however, drive us to the conclusion that the same immortal principle exists in the brute creation; for in Gen. 7: 21, 22, we read,—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beasts, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man, all in whose nostrils was the breath (n-shamah) of life of all that was in the dry land died." Here the same word, in its plural form occurs again, and is not only applicable to man but to beasts and fowls, and creeping things, and hence just as virtually proves an immortal soul in them as in man.

The fact that n-shamah chaiyam is properly rendered "breath of lives," instead of evincing that man possesses two kinds of life, simply shows that he possesses a life in common with all animals. Otherwise it proves that the beasts possess an immortal soul in common with man. Which horn of the dilemma shall we take? Solomon, when speaking of man and beasts, says, "Yea, they have all one breath"—Eccl. 3: 19, showing that the same breath of life that causes conscious existence in man causes the beast to exist also. And this "breath of life," be it remembered, was all that was added to man after he was created out of the dust of the ground. The "breath of life" sets the machinery in motion, and the thoughts, together with all his attributes, are but results. Now, just remove the cause and the result will cease at once. Hence David says, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled, thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust—Psa. 104: 29. Again, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. 146: 3, 4. Also the testimony of Solomon—"The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything; neither have they (the dead) any more a reward, for the memory of them is forgotten. Also, their love and their hatred, and their envy is now perished—Eccl. 9: 5, 6. It is evident, therefore, that when the man dies, or the "breath of life" is taken away, his thoughts, together with every attribute of his nature, cease at once, and the man becomes unconscious. Love, hatred and envy are all attributes of the soul, according to divines; and hence the soul ceases to peform its functions when separated from the physical organism.

It is also evident from the above Scripture that the dead are not rewarded; "neither have they (i. e. the dead) any more a reward." Christ says "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Then they will hear his voice and come forth; then they will get their reward. But while dead they cannot be rewarded; hence at the sounding of the seventh trump it is said, "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name, both small and great." Rev. 11: 18.

So the prophets who have died in past ages are unrewarded while dead, hence the necessity of a resurrection.—J. W. TAYLOR, in the Hornellsville Tribune.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER FOURTEEN.

Proceeding now to consider the vials separately, we read—"And the first went and poured out his vial upon the earth, and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshiped his image." Rev. 16: 2. In view of the free lust which now attends the Spiritualist doctrine of free love, we may well believe that when its licentiousness and blasphemy become generally prevalent and popular, an unbridled libertinism will as generally prevail, abundantly attended by the usual diseases which follow such sins.

But here is a new disease, "noisome and grievous," and upon every individual among them. But as they now excuse sin, as "casting off the gross of our natures" morally, perhaps they may then account for this new disease as casting off the gross of their natures physically, according to the theory that a boil on our person purifies our blood. But the effect of the second vial cannot be so easily accounted for by their philosophy. The account reads—"And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea, and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea." Rev. 16: 3. Here their doctrine of "the infallible laws of nature" fails them. Heretofore, the sea has been of uniform color and substance; but now it is strangely turned to blood, and this under their millennial order of things. Then comes the third vial, "poured upon the rivers and fountains of waters, and they became blood." There need be no question whether the waters are really turned to blood on this occasion. For God can turn the waters to blood really as easily as he can apparently. And the combination of nature's elements, as they are found in blood, will be as really blood in the rivers and springs as if it was found coursing our veins. But how severe this judgment must be on these persecutors of God's people. The angel says, "They have shed the blood of saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink, for they are worthy," or deserving of it. This cannot be other than literal blood which they drink, unless we take it that it was not the literal "blood of saints and prophets" which they "shed." Since the sea and the rivers and fountains of water are all turned to blood, they find nothing but blood to drink. A terrible plague indeed! and I am glad that at this time God's people are away from them in the wilderness, where he can provide better things for them; for they are not to suffer from these plagues. The charge that "they have shed the blood of saints and prophets" for which they deserve to drink blood shows that they have been putting to death those who have refused the mark. Hence there must be martyrs in this coming persecution.

The "fourth angel," we read, "poured out his vial upon the sun, and power was given unto him to scorch men with fire." What can these admirers of "the infallible laws of nature" do with this strange freak of the sun? His rays have always been genial, and limited in their variations; but now, all at once, they unaccountably overstep their bounds, and, as we read, "men are scorched (margin, burned) with great heat." But the lesson of these plagues has now taught them that there is a God, who is punishing them in his wrath by these things which they are suffering. Yet, it seems that they acknowledge his existence only to revile him the more; for we read they "blasphemed the name of God, and repented not to give him glory." This must cause them terrible sufferings, and I am glad that the faithful ones are away from them, where the heat of the sun will doubtless be moderated.

"The fifth angel poured out his vial on the seat [rather, throne] of the beast, and his kingdom was full of darkness, and they gnawed their tongues for pain, and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds." By this vial, the sun takes another freak, and now affords these blasphemers no light, yet very likely continuing its heat. The Spiritualists loudly protest that "belief in a God is degrading," and try to please themselves with the idea that "there is no God"; so God now gives them a short experience of a "chance world," more real than Hafed's dream was, which satisfies them of God's existence, whom they acknowledge only to hate and revile as the author of these plagues. Suffering ever from the "noisome and grievous sore," and from the effect of the scorching rays of the sun, with nothing but blood to drink, I do not wonder that "they gnawed their tongues for pain." I pray God that I may be saved from having to drink of their cup. During the prevalence of this darkness the saints, like Israel of old, will doubtless "have light in their dwellings."

The allusion to their "pains and their sores" here shows that they are still suffering the sores of the first vial, while this fifth is being inflicted on them, showing conclusively that all these vials are poured out on the same individuals—the last-day mockers and scoffers—who revile God and persecute his people. With their "noisome and grievous sore" of the first vial; all the waters turned to blood in the next vials; the sun "scorching" them excessively from the fourth, and then taking the extreme of "darkness" for the fifth, I do not doubt but that they find it necessary to modify their philosophy of "the infallible laws of nature." And with all these grievances upon them at once, I do not wonder that the warning of the third angel declares, in view of these things, "they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name."

ENTIRE SUBMISSION.

L. M. BRITTAN.

Does the Bible teach it? If so, should we not be in perfect submission in every position in life that we are called to occupy? We think so. But, to whom are we to submit? Let the Bible, which is our rule of faith and practice, answer. "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers." We are to be subject to principalities and powers; to obey magistrates; to "submit . . to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king as supreme, or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by him." The church of God is to submit to those that have the rule over them, that watch for souls; to those that have addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints, and to every one that helpeth and laboreth with such. The younger are to submit to the elder; servants to masters, children to parents, wives to husbands, every man to Christ his head, and every woman (married or unmarried) to man, her head in the church. I do not find in the New Testament any ruling office given to woman, either in state, church, or family; neither can we suppose it was the original design of God in her creation. And wherever we see it, anarchy and confusion is the result. Woman's power is in her submission; and did she to-day occupy her place, she would virtually control the world; for she has a mighty influence for good or evil—for good in her place, for evil out of it.

Now, my dear sisters, let us read the New Testament once again, and abide by its teachings, and thus prove ourselves, by doing well, to be the daughters of Sarah. Yea, all of you, says the apostle, be subject one to another. "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God. Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord; for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church; and he is the Savior of the body. Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in everything. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word; that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy, and without blemish." Eph. 5: 21–27. Can we compose a part of this church, without spot or wrinkle, holy, and without blemish, only as we are in submission to Christ in everything? And as we have every evidence to believe the Savior will soon appear for his ready bride, who among us will "abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?" We answer, those who are loyal to the divine government; not only in submission to, but in perfect harmony with, his reign, and who can respond from the heart, He doeth all things well. O, how rich and precious to dwell in this valley of blessing with Jesus, as our constant guest, keeping and controlling us, and we all submission. Let our surroundings be ever so trying, we may be sweetly reposing in his loving embrace.

One year ago this present week, I learned, as never before, to walk by faith; to trust in the dark; to live in the present, moment by moment; having the conscious evidence that Jesus saves. I have not so much emotional feeling as in former years, but constant peace, uninterrupted rest. I am not saved from trials, for none are exempt; but I am kept in peace and quietness while passing through them. And in temptation's hour I have found the way of escape, and been able to bear it. Praise God for this blessed experience. The past year has been the best of my life; and may I in the future understand more of "the depths of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God," and learn more of "his ways," which are "past finding out."

I do not object to calling this blessing (for all who receive it know by experience that it is a great blessing) "Sanctification"; for if we are entirely submissive, I think every power of body and mind must be sanctified. I love the term, for it is Father's will that I should possess and enjoy it. I love holiness; for without it we cannot see the Lord. I want to see him, and thank him for what he has done for me. I long to grasp that once torn hand, and praise him for precious blood shed for me. "Perfect love" sounds sweet. How easy to love God with all the heart; to love his people with pure hearts fervently; to love sinners and enemies; when all is submitted. Then there is no rebellion rising up in our heart toward any body or any thing. Truly a higher life is implied,—"risen with Christ." Sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus; drawing near to him with true hearts, "in full assurance of faith." But all these terms do not express it. It is an unspeakable gift. It cannot be told. It can only be known by experience. It will not admit of argument. Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Many inquire, who give good evidence of having known pardon and peace, who feel the need of something more, and express a desire for this experience—"How can I obtain it?" I know of but one answer: Give all. Make a full surrender, and accept it as a free gift, just as you are. If it be progressive, and received by doing and being faithful, it may be months and years before you receive it. The Lord may come, and you be found wanting; but if by faith, why not now? But remember, if there is any thing not given up, it will prove a barrier to the exercise of appropriating faith. We have just what our faith claims. But says one good mother, surrounded by many cares, and sore and perplexing trials, "I can not live it; it is not for me." O, dear sister, it is fitted for just such as you. Remember that "earthly care is a heavenly discipline." He knows just what is for our good, and just what trials are best for us; what kind of a furnace, and how hot to heat it, and it will be all right if "the form of the fourth" is with us. Let us also remember that it takes just as hot a fire to test the gold, as it does to purge it. "Those that resist much will suffer much." Then let us submit, and find by blessed experience,

"That it is not hard to say,
Thy will, O God, be done,
When Christ is manifest in me,
And both out wills are one."

A FEW THOUGHTS ABOUT A FEW THINGS.

C. C. BRAGG.

It has never been my privilege to hear a woman preach more than two or three times (and they were Quakers), until the past fall and winter. I have often thought how one would look dressed in modern style, standing up to defend the truth of the Bible, if they were to declare the whole counsel of God. What will they do with such as, "be not conformed to this world," etc., Paul's especial directions concerning woman's dress, and many other scriptures that do not, perhaps, seem so definite, yet, as strongly imply the imperative duty of all christians, the followers of Christ, to be separate from the world in respect to dress, as in other things? I fear that preaching would do me very little good (if ever so smart) from a woman with so much rubbish piled on her head as some of our professed Christians wear. I should feel like saying, "Physician, heal thyself." I should be very sorry to see a woman in the sacred desk in unbecoming attire, that should in any wise bring a reproach on the cause of Christ. The sin of dress is a crying one in the church; and all, called as teachers, should show by example, as well as precept, their disapprobation of "costly array," of the wearing of gold, and the insipid display of the trimming that requires so much time and money. At the same time she should avoid a slothful and entire indifference to dress, that would attract too much attention. The sister I have had the pleasure of hearing is a model in all these respects.

Again, I have thought while some of our preaching brethren may appear to many to be too nice and expensive in dress and appearance, others are too far the opposite; being so coarse and uncouth in their manners, that they have a slothful appearance, and seem so forbidding in their ways and manners that the truth they preach is not as well received. Whether they want people to think they are so filled with their mission they have no time for such things of minor importance, or whether their vocation unfits them for studying the ways of the world, as they might call them, or whatever the cause may be, I feel that it is duty for all, especially those who are called as teachers, to study to show themselves approved of God. I think he approves of whatever is of good report.

None should cause the truth to be evil spoken of, neither by too much worldly conformity, or too much the opposite. I can see no sin in agreeable, courteous manners. I am sure any might be sooner won to look at the truth by one of inviting appearance than otherwise. O that the Lord would help brethren and sisters to be patterns of all that is worthy of imitation. The Bible should be our guide, not men and women. We may not sacrifice principle to be approved of men, but we may, and ought to sacrifice our natural inclinations, our ease, love of the world, its fashions, pleasures and customs, as far as they cripple our influence as christians, and conflict with Bible requirements. O for a holy, consistent ministry. When will the church see the folly of so much worldliness? Let us seek to please God, and do good, that when He who is our life shall appear, we may appear with him in glory.

ETERNAL TORMENT.

T. G. GREENE.

BRO. GRANT:—Not long since, I listened to a discourse offered against the views we hold upon the destruction of the wicked. His whole theme was upon eternity, and in explaining it he used the following:—

"Eternity! what does it mean? Judgment is followed by eternity. It is eternity that clothes the heavens with felicity and imperishable glory. It is eternity that gives to punishment a deathless sting. O eternity! eternity! a period without beginning, without pause, without succession, without end; duration without time, beginning without limits. Your noblest birthright, but if sinfully abused, your deepest curse. O think of the worm that dieth not; of the fire that can never be quenched, in which your poor immortal soul shall roll forever and ever with no remedy. O sinner, pause to-day ere it be too late, and think of your soul in the flames of hell. Lost! lost forever, only living to suffer, invigorated only to be increasingly alive to pain unutterable, enlarged in your capacities to contain only a fuller cup of endless woe. Immortalized only to be eternally wretched; nothing to love, nothing to pursue, nothing to divert the attention from unmixed, unabated misery. Wretched in itself, wretched in your own society, wretched in the thoughts of heaven's felicities, and wretched above all in the thoughts of the blessings wilfully cast off, and the wrath wilfully plucked down on yourself; wrath already realized, and still always to come."

Further on in his discourse he endeavored to show the sinner how his immortal soul might escape this eternity of suffering, held up to view. He said, "Sign the confession of faith, and be baptized, then keep the rules of the church sacred." I might add much more of a like nature, but I think this sufficient to convince any candid mind that he had greatly mistaken the nature of eternity, and how to escape the eternity of suffering, and obtain eternal life, which is through Christ, not by keeping the rules of his church sacred. But why could not he say to the poor sinner eternal death as well as eternal suffering? This shows to what extent men will go when they are full of the zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

ARE WE READY?

Ready for what? The coming of Christ. The prophecies and the signs of the times declare in unmistakable language that our Savior will return very soon. The evidence is overwhelming. The conclusion is inevitable. Such an array of proof as is now before us removes all ground for doubts in the case. All the prophecies that reach to the coming of Christ, in connection with the signs to be seen in the last generation, are now converging to a grand focal point but a short distance in the future. We are almost to our heavenly home. Soon the dead saints will be awakened to greet the coming One, who died to give them life and joy eternal. It seems as though we did not need any further proof that the King of glory is coming within a brief period.

The all-important question now to be settled is this: Are we ready to meet him? Are we living in a state of condemnation? If so, we do not feel ready. Let us break off from every thing that we know does not please Jesus, and do all that we know he commands; then we may be free from condemnation, put all into his hands, and patiently wait for his coming, truly longing for the arrival of the happy hour. The Scriptures offer no encouragement that any will be accepted but those who shall be ready. We cannot be ready so long as our hearts are impure. If deceit, pride, hatred, malice, covetousness, or any other wicked thing, is in our heart, we are not ready. Let all those who expect to receive eternal life at the coming of Christ, be very thorough in their heart-examinations, and allow no sin to remain.

OUR DANGER.

It is well for mariners to know all the points of danger on their voyage, in order to be on the special watch at those places. It is an oft-repeated truth, that there are the most shipwrecks near shore. There they find the shoals, rocks and quicksands, which are the terror of sailors.

It is well, too, for the christian to know his points of danger, and guard against them. His life is often properly compared with a sailor's voyage on the ocean. It has its departure, its storms and calms; pleasant and rough scenes, and its port of landing. Thus far, life's voyagers in Zion's ship have died on the way, before reaching the haven of glory, for which they were bound. But now there is a bright prospect that our heavenly Pilot will soon appear to escort us into Eden's beautiful harbor, where the angels are waiting to greet us with a hearty welcome. It is now wise to inquire, Are there any special dangers at this part of our voyage, just before the landing? We turn to our chart and read: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, . . . false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." 2 Tim. 3: 1–5. What shall be done when we arrive at this place? "From such turn away." There is no doubt but that we we have reached this state of things, as foretold by the Lord. Then we are at the "perilous" part of the voyage, where we need to be on the constant watch, lest we run on to some of these dangerous rocks and be shipwrecked in sight of our eternal home. Guard specially against the quicksands of selfishness and pride, where thousands are now being shipwrecked. Beware of the rock of boasting, the shoals of formalism, and the whirlpool of pleasure. Never before has the church been in greater danger than at the present; and yet we hear the cry of "peace and safety" from many careless watchmen, who are themselves piloting others into the very heart of danger, where shipwreck is inevitable. What can be done to arouse and alarm those who are being decoyed along by the cunning wiles of Satan, and leading their flocks to the very brink of ruin? The sight of it is terrible. They are as careless and indifferent to the perils of these days as were the Sodomites the day before their destruction. They mock at the notes of alarm, as did the sons-in-law of the righteous Lot. They look with contempt upon those who urge their reform, and call them "croakers." So they did to Noah. Said Jesus: "Even thus shall it be when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17: 30.

The last-day perils surround us. This is the time for special prayer and watchfulness. Now, if ever, we need to be wholly consecrated to the Lord, so that we may be led in safety through the dangers that are on every side. Perfect submission is essential, if we would have Jesus guide us fully. If we set up our will in the least against what he would have us do or avoid, then we grieve the Holy Spirit, and prevent our loving Savior from doing the best he can to secure our salvation.

There is special danger now that some root of bitterness, some grudge, some feeling of hatred or variance spring up in the heart, thus defiling it, and giving Satan the control; and when he thus gets in, it is hard to get him out. We cannot be too watchful on this point, for wherever these evil feelings exist, they stop the spiritual growth of the person who allows them to lodge in his bosom. They cannot exist in a holy heart; for they are unholy, unchristian and devilish. This is one of Satan's most successful means of making backsliders. As soon as he can start a "root of bitterness" in the heart, he has succeeded in getting a foot-hold. We cannot live in Christ any longer than we possess a kind spirit to every one, no matter how much they may have injured us. We are to love our enemies and pray for them. The Spirit of Christ will help us to fulfill all the Lord requires us to perform; but we must be in earnest to secure the complete victory. Faint resolves, and a few feeble desires are not sufficient to overcome our arch foe, with all his wily schemes. He is watching our weak places. He well knows where there is the best chance for his success. If he has succeeded in getting us out of patience once, he will try again. If he has started a "root of bitterness," he will spare no pains to water it, by stirring us up to think and talk about it more and more, until it runs all over the heart, and its veins become swollen with unkind feelings. All over the world there seems to be a feeling of jealousy taking possession of the minds of men, which produces these roots of bitterness; and grieves away the Spirit of Christ. It is seen in religion and politics, in family and in the church. It is high time to hoist the "red flag" of alarm in sight of all the pilgrims who are on the road to the heavenly Canaan. They cannot travel in the King's highway, if they allow any hatred in their hearts. No one can pass through the celestial gate into the New Jerusalem who has in him a "root of bitterness." This point is forever settled by the high court of heaven. Only "the pure in heart" can be admitted to the elysian fields of paradise. We must be there.

HOW LONG?

We are requested to give the time from the beginning of the reign of Nero to the end of the reign of Vespasian. The best authority on this subject is Dion Cassius. He was a man of high birth and education. His father was governor of Cilicia in the beginning of Adrian's reign. He was himself governor of Smyrna and Pergamus during the reign of Macrinus, and subsequently of Pannonia and Egygt. He was Consul twice, during the reigns of the Emperors Commodus and Alexander. He spent twenty-two years in preparing his history of the Romans. Turning to his history of the period named for examination, we find the following:

"Nero was but seventeen years old when he came to the empire." "He lived thirty years and nine months, having reigned thirteen years and eight months."

He was succeeded by Galba, who "reigned nine months and thirteen days." He was followed by Otho, who "reigned but three months and six days." Next came Vitellius, who "reigned one [year] within ten days." Vespasian came next, "and reigned ten years and six months." Thus there was a year and two and twenty days between the death of Nero, and the reign of Vespasian, of which I thought myself obliged to take notice, that people may not be deceived in beginning to reckon from the day of an emperor's death, the reign of his successor; for these princes have not succeeded one another in such a manner. They pretended to be emperors as soon as they were proclaimed, though their predecessor was yet alive, and so the time of their reign ought not to be reckoned from the day of the death of him that preceded him."

QUESTIONS FOR BRO. GRANT.

BRO. GRANT:—Some are anxious to have you answer the following questions: 1st. Did God destroy or kill the antediluvians? 2d. If so, will they ever live again? 3d. What did Adam lose by disobedience? 4th. Does the second Adam, by his obedience, redeem what the first Adam lost by disobedience?

H. MUNGER, for others.

1. God said to Noah: "Yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the earth." Gen. 7: 4. If we deny that God destroyed the antediluvians, we must deny that he made them; for the one who made them was the one who brought the flood and destroyed them. We know it is sometimes said that God does not kill any one; but that it is the devil's work to produce death. Moses informs us that the Lord destroyed Korah and his company by an earthquake; and that he destroyed the Sodomites by fire and brimstone.

In consequence of David's sin, we read: "The Lord struck the child that Uriah's wife bear unto David, and it was very sick. . . . And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died." 2 Sam. 12: 15, 18. Many more examples might be given, if necessary, to show that the Lord causes death.

2. Will the antediluvians live again?" Said Jesus: "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation." John 5; 28, 29. This, and other passages, teach as clearly that all the wicked will be raised, as truly as all the righteous. They are not judged till after they are raised; hence, if the wicked dead have no resurrection, they will not be judged. We read: "The sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and hell (hades) delivered up the dead which were in them; and and they were judged every man according to their works." Rev. 20; 13. No language could be plainer. Paul says: "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust." Acts 24: 15. Then it follows, as certainly as the antediluvians did "evil," or were "unjust," they must be raised from the dead and be judged.

3. "What did Adam lose by disobedience? He lost his life. His disobedience was his sin. Paul says: "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men." Rom. 5: 12.

4. "Does the second Adam, by his obedience, redeem what the first Adam lost by disobedience?" "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22. He "is the Savior of all men, specially of those that believe." 1 Tim. 4: 10. He saves all men from the power of the first death, caused by the sin of the first Adam; and saves believers from "the second death;" which is "the wages of sin." As the first death is a calamity brought upon us by the sin of the first Adam, Christ saves all from that, by the resurrection of the dead; but if we have not been obedient to his commandments, then, at the judgment, we shall be condemned to die "the second death" which will bring all such to an eternal end.

SECRET PRAYER.

It is to be feared that some neglect secret prayer when at campmeeting, thus depriving themselves of the good they might receive if it were not for this neglect. Instead of less prayer, they should pray more, if they desire special blessings. We might as well expect to thrive physically without our daily food, as to expect to live spiritually without prayer. We have often been astonished at the carelessness of many on this subject. One cause of this neglect at campmeeting is for want of opportunity to be alone. But what would such do if in a boarding-house, where they must necessarily lodge in a room with others? Would they for that reason refuse to bow at the bed-side morning and evening in humble prayer? Many have backslidden because of such neglect. Beside the family prayer in each tent, every professed christian should have courage to bow by himself in secret prayer; no matter if there are hundreds in the tent at the time. The sight of it has a good effect on all beholders. Are we ashamed to have it known that we pray, or shall we be ashamed to be seen praying? Let us never yield to any such temptation, lest we enter a road of darkness, where we cannot enjoy the smiles of Jesus.

SUNDAY WORK.—We have sometimes attended campmeetings where we have been pained to hear the sound of the axe, saw and hammer on the Lord's day. While some may not feel condemned for so doing, it is exceedingly unpleasant to others, and greatly mars their devotional feelings. It frequently happens that persons do not have time to complete their tent arrangements on Saturday evening, and for this reason renew their work Sabbath morning. We think it would be better to submit to great inconvenience rather than to grieve those who have a tender conscience in these things. It would be shocking to all who love Jesus, to see a whole encampment engaged in pitching their tents on the Lord's day, so as to have them ready to occupy Monday. If there was not time to build a table Saturday night, why, spread out the food on the ground, or the boards, or in the lap, as we do in the cars, rather than to disturb the quiet of the encampment by the driving of stakes and nails to make a table. We earnestly desire that these suggestions may receive careful attention. "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." 1 Cor. 6: 13.

FAMILY PRAYER.—Every tent's company should have family prayer morning and evening. Let none neglect this. It will add sweetness to the meeting. We need to cultivate devotional feelings as much as possible. Let nothing remove the family altar at home or at the campmeeting. Better to go without the breakfast or supper, than to neglect the family prayer.

TENT MASTER.—Every tent should have a tent-master to look after the general interests of those who occupy the tent. Such a one should be appointed as soon as possible after arrival on the ground. A better way, if practicable, would be to do it before leaving home. Every family needs a head.

SAD NEWS.—We have just learned that death has taken away the beloved companion of our dear Bro. Batchelor. She sleeps in Jesus. May God bless him richly in his lonely hours, and cheer his heart with the hope of the coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead.

PERSONAL.—Bro. W. C. Thurman called on us a few days since. He is stopping a short time in the North. He thinks he has clear evidence that the 1335 and 2300 days of Daniel, as well as the 6000 years from creation, all end in 1875. He intends to be at the National Campmeeting at Springfield. His health and spirits are good.

☞ WE purpose to attend the campmeeting at Bethel, Vt.—ED.

THE DESTINY OF MAN.
By WM. ERWIN.

This is a valuable book of 312 octavo pp. The writer endeavors to bring forth all that he finds in the Bible relating to the destiny of the wicked. He shows beyond all controversy that man is mortal, and that the wicked will be utterly destroyed at the day of judgment. This work should have a wide circulation. Price $1.50; gilt, $2.00, postpaid.

For the edition bound in cloth, the price is as follows: By express, $5.00 per dozen; single copies 50 cts.; sent by mail, 16 cts. additional for each copy. AG'T.

THE REMEDIAL SCHEME.

The remedial scheme, unfolded in the gospel, contemplates a salvation which consists of a redemption from sin and mortality, and an exemption from the penalty incurred by sin; this redemption and exemption being proffered to the physical man, and not to an etherial spectre imprisoned in man. "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death"; "The wages of sin is death"; a death due the sinner after the judgment comes, for the infliction of the penalty cannot precede the judgment, hence no death this side of the judgment can be the penalty, whether literal or spiritual; and the nature of the death then due the incorrigible sinner cannot be mistaken from the fact "Christ died for the ungodly," as "the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all"; and he died a literal death, thus offering us exemption from the death our sins have incurred on condition we will accept pardon at his hand on his own terms. This pardon is granted by Christ in view of the fact that he has satisfied the demand of the law by dying beforehand for the race of sinners,—this death to prove availing only to those who make an appropriation of it by faith, not being a compulsive scheme. Thus it is evident that the remedial economy deals only with a race of beings who are capable of experiencing death for unforgiven sins after the judgment, and a death, too, just as literal as Christ offers to make availing to exempt them from the death incurred by sin. Now, as a deathless race of sinful spirit-men are not capable of experiencing literal death, the remedial economy cannot be designed for such beings, if they are in existence.

But when we turn our attention to physical men, all is plain. Such men sin, and such men must be punished for sin after the judgment comes, unless they are previously pardoned. They are doomed to perish under the stroke of the penalty incurred by sin; but "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life (John 3: 16), "God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh" (Rom. 8: 2), "to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." Heb. 9: 26. So Christ's mission was not to imperishable beings, but to men who otherwise must "perish"; nor was his mission to save spirit entities, but "sinful flesh," and that too by the "sacrifice of himself" in their behalf. Sinful men can be pardoned, and perishing men can have eternal life, by accepting and obeying the gospel. The "redemption of the body," as well as redemption from sin, is proposed in the divine economy. The culmination of salvation will be the transforming of mortal men into immortal men. The incipient stage is being cleansed from sin.

OUR CAMPMEETINGS.

The recent remarks of Bro. Ross on campmeetings ought to be remembered by all who attend them. These meetings, as in earlier days, ought to be characterized by deep devotion and agonizing prayer for perishing men. We want less of the pic-nic spirit, less of the visiting element, less of this group-singing over the ground between meetings, less of this theological wrangling, less of this ambition to present some new view, and less of this ministerial example of finding some excuse to be absent from a large portion of the devotional meetings, which infuses the same spirit into the membership, and leads to laxity and anarchy.

We want more radical zeal, more of the melting power of prayer that climbs up to the throne of God; more of the spirit of exhortation which forces its way to the hearts of sinners; more of those weeping testimonies which show that the fountains of the heart have been reached; and more of that unpopular wisdom which is "first pure, then peaceable," etc. Such meetings will honor God, reach sinners, stir up the lukewarm, and electrify the body at large. Let us see to it that our campmeetings are not "wells without water." While it is possible to have an excess of excitement, the present danger lies in the direction of apathy. Let us hoist the flag of truth and the flag of holiness on one staff, and show our full colors.

PLEASURE-LOVING RELIGION.

The religious appetite for sacred things is so perverted among many professed followers of Christ, all over our boasted land, that the carnal relish predominates to an alarming extent. Worldly policy and worldly pleasure is monopolizing the attention of the church, and killing its vitality; and the matter is carried further than the apostate Jews carried it at the time Jesus used the "scourge of small cords," and said, "Take these things hence; and make not my Father's house an house of merchandise" (John 2: 15, 16.) A few cutting hints are made by an Iowa Bro., who is somewhat given to putting his thoughts into rhyme, which we here append, though not to praise the poetic merit, but because it contains "more truth than poetry," and is a just rebuke:

THE CHURCH FAIR.

"Hurrah for the fair, boys, we'll have a good time,
The church will be there to make it sublime,—
The preacher and deacon, with their daughters, too,
And the belle of the town will be present for you.
The church is in debt, and the best way to pay
Is to have a church frolic, and in our own way;
We will have the grab-bag, and the post office too,
Where the girls will write letters and send them to you.
We all will rejoice to have a fine spree,
The church will assemble, and all do agree
To appoint a committee of each belle and beau;
It will be the best way to get them to go.
We give invitation to each and to all—
Inviting each one to give us a call.
The church and committee have settled the night,
The doors will be opened at first candlelight;
They plead with the rowdies, don't fail now to come,
You'll get a supply of nicknacks and fun.
A quarter's admittance you'll find at the door,
But you'll get it all back, and many times more;
Ice cream and oysters we'll have here to sell,
Served up in style by some charming belle;
Lemonade and soda, the best in the town,
With toys and doll babies, we sell for cash down;
We have lotteries too, got up every way—
To draw a fine prize there'll be something to pay—
A pyramid cake the deacon will bring,
And in it is sold his daughter's gold ring;
Only ten cents a slice, it is nice for to eat;
If you get the ring, then won't it be neat?
And then for the ring, boys, we'll have a good raffle—
The church will not mind for such a small trifle;
The money, you know, will answer the end;
The rowdies came here their money to spend.
We'll have a gilt Bible put up for a prize,
With such a fine gift no scruples arise;
The Elder and Deacon for clowns will be there—
We shall need no better at such a church fair.
We will have the brass band, which will play for you,
If any should wish, the violin too.
And when the church fair has had a fair trial,
The young folks can stay and chant to the viol;
We'll pocket the money, and give them a chance
To linger a while and have a good dance."

Let none of our friends enter even the incipient stage of this pleasure-loving religion of the day, which locks arms with the world, and gives leniency to carnality in exchange for filthy lucre.

READ THIS, PLEASE!

There are times in one's experience when we feel that we must speak and give vent to our feelings. I think that I am there to-day, so I speak. O such perplexing trials! Do you wish to know what they are? Well, I will tell you (i. e., each subscriber of "our paper"), if you will keep it to yourself, and think of it, and not tell anybody of it.

First, I took up a letter this morning from one of our subscribers, which read like this:

"DEAR BRO. G——: Will you please send me a number of the Crisis published some time last year, with Bro. ——'s article in it."

Now I must go and look over two hundred and four pages of the Crisis, and then perhaps I shall not get the right one, and the Bro. will perhaps think (if he does not say so), "Well, I should think they had better get some one in that office that knows how to do business." But here is another letter; let us read:—

"DEAR BRO. G——: Enclosed please find $2.00 to pay for my paper another year."

There is no TOWN nor STATE given. Now the Bro. that wrote this letter has probably seen Bro. Grant, and had some talk with him at campmeeting, or somewhere, and he thinks Bro. G. will recollect him at once. Among the thousands that Bro. G. meets in the course of a year, he cannot call to mind this Bro., so we shall have to lay this letter by till we hear from the Bro. again, and when we do, it will read about like this:—

"I sent you some two or three weeks ago $2.00 to pay for my paper. It has not been credited. What is the reason? Did you get it?"

And in this we may look and look again, but do not find any name of TOWN or STATE. We look on the envelope, and there, almost defaced (after a great amount of study and a greater amount of guessing), we make out the town and State.

But a certain being, that shall be nameless (said to exist in every printing office), suggests that I could bear all my perplexities, and have no need to say a word, if people who write to the office for a particular number of the paper published last year, would state what month, or week, it was published. And he further suggests that all should write just as though they did not know a soul in Boston. And I believe the creature is right in his suggestions, and I will up and go to work.

CLERK.

WHAT MAKES A GOOD CAMP-MEETING?
H. MUNGER.

First, a good location, well seated. Second, well managed, in harmony. Third, let all the members of the camp work for peace and harmony in the camp, instead of tattling about others. Fourth, make every tent, or your tent, a Bethel for prayer or conference meetings, when there is no public meeting at the stand. When the visiting and talking from tent to tent take place, the power of the meeting is gone. We notice some come and do nothing else. Such had better tarry at home. It is very easy in these times to stir up a dust, that water will not wet down. Fifth, the preaching ought to be not so much to define a position, as to refine the heart. The world know why we are expecting the Lord soon. Definite dates will not stir the people as formerly; yet the evidences of the Lord's soon coming should be made prominent by signs now taking place, instead of pointed dates. The signs of this age, and the lukewarm state of the professed church, will be a powerful argument in our favor that the world will acknowledge true. Let us all work in harmony to make our National meeting tell for God and his truth. It will depend much upon the preachers and their preaching. The meeting will be large. We expect it will be good. If all will try to make it so, it will be so.

QUERY.—Bro. Grant: Will some one please answer the following question: If the three unclean spirits of Rev. 16: 13 are doing their work now, how can the two-horned beast and the image-beast be in the future? When the first vial is poured out, a noisome and grievous sore comes on those who had the mark of the beast, and who worshiped his image. See Rev. 16: 2.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield Camp-ground, August 23d, 1871, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

CAMPMEETINGS.
A. A. PHELPS.

I.—THEIR HISTORY.

Campmeetings possess a high antiquity. Nearly four thousand years ago they were instituted by divine authority. God commanded the children of Israel to celebrate three great annual festivals: Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles. The last was in all essentialities of the case a campmeeting. It continued a full week, including two Sabbaths. The people dwelt in booths or tents. This feast was designed, not only to commemorate an important event in the history of the Hebrew people, but especially to fan the flame of devotion and develope a deeper gratitude for providential blessings. "Ye shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days" was the divine direction, which shows that the feast of Tabernacles was eminently a meeting for thanksgiving and religious worship. (Lev. 23: 33–43.) This ancient feast, however, was long since discontinued. We pass silently over the lapsing centuries, until our attention is arrested by what seems a revival of the old institution.

The modern campmeeting originated only seventy-three years ago. Two brothers were living in Tennessee, whose names were William and John McGee. They were both ministers; the former a Presbyterian, the other a Methodist. Their sectarianism was so weak, and their love for dying sinners so strong, that they labored together as missionaries for Jesus. In 1779, they took a tour through Kentucky. Arriving at a settlement on Red River, they stopped to attend a sacramental service in a Presbyterian church, under the pastoral care of Rev. Mr. McGready. John McGee was invited to preach. He did so with great power and unction. Other sermons and exhortations followed, attended with the Spirit's awakening energy to such an extent that it seemed impossible to close the meeting. Sinners were crying for mercy, and the whole community was thrilled with supernatural interest. The news spread, and a large number of people came in from the surrounding country. As a matter of convenience and necessity they brought their provisions with them, and lodged in covered wagons and such temporary huts and booths as they could construct. The meetings were continued several days, crowned with glorious results. It was really, though somewhat informally, a campmeeting. The McGees were so encouraged by these results, that they soon appointed a second campmeeting, and afterward a third. These meetings were signally owned of God. Thus began one of the most powerful and extensive revivals of religion that ever rejoiced the hearts of God's people.

It will be seen that modern campmeetings did not originate with a single denomination. We are informed that Presbyterians and Baptists still hold campmeetings in some of the States, but for years past they have been sustained almost entirely by Methodists and Adventists.

II.—THEIR VINDICATION.

We are decidedly in favor of campmeetings. The objections frequently urged against them dwindle into utter insignificance, when we begin to calculate the many rich benefits to be derived. Let us enumerate some of these benefits:

1. They break up the monotony of life. Our constitution is such as to require the frequent recurrence of stirring events. Who is satisfied with a dead level—a sleepy sameness—a mere tread-mill existence? There is danger of getting formal and stereotyped in our religious ceremonies. A week rightly spent at campmeeting will help amazingly to break down our dignity, and get us out of our religious ruts. Whatever tends to shatter dead formality and make christians more simple-hearted, should be welcomed as an angel of mercy.

2. They check the spirit of worldliness. They come in the summer season, when business is the most driving, and the spirit of the world is the most likely to rob us of our spirituality. Those who will consent to make direct inroads upon the rush of business and the whirl of anxious care, by spending a week of time, and a moderate pile of money, in a genuine campmeeting campaign, will go home abundantly paid for all the sacrifices they have made. Their hearts will be lightened, their hopes brightened, and the danger of being drowned in the whirl-pool of worldliness will be greatly diminished.

3. They enlarge the sphere of christian acquaintance. All real christians belong to the same family. How laudable the desire to become acquainted with as many of Father's children as possible. This tends to enlarge our views, and give us greater breadth of being. To live always in one place, to listen to the same testimonies, and to associate with the same individuals, has a direct tendency to make us narrow in our conceptions, feelings, and general character. Isolation naturally begets selfishness. We need to know a great many besides ourselves to impress us duly with our littleness. Besides this practical result, how precious to recall the kind words and smiling faces of the many dear pilgrims with whom we have mingled our devotions around the camp-fires of nature's leafy temple.

4. They afford a rich opportunity for religious instruction. Truth is brought out under new and different forms of expression from what we have been accustomed to hear at home. A single sentence or illustration may open to us a new mine of priceless wealth. The very contact of mind with mind often makes the truth flash with unwonted radiance.

When a large number of devoted christians are gathered from various parts of the country, their differing phases of experience, as enunciated in their testimonies of trial and triumph, cannot be otherwise than profitable to each other. We learn by other's defeats—much more by each other's successful encounters with sin and Satan.

5. They are especially profitable to preachers. Ministers who go to campmeetings in the right spirit will find an ample field of labor; and earnest efforts in behalf of others will return in "showers of blessings" on themselves. They will also appreciate the privilege of hearing a little preaching from others—a privilege with which they are seldom favored. How refreshing it is for a goodly number of scattered ministers to meet "face to face," shake the friendly hand, listen to each other's words, compare notes by the way, and thus gather new hints and valuable suggestions for future campaigns. If campmeetings are the means of improving the preachers, it certainly is a powerful argument in their favor.

6. They favor a concentration of faith. By throwing off ordinary care and labor for a series of days, and holding the mind to the contemplation of spiritual things, faith is allowed to gather up its energies and win wonderful victories over self and the world. Under ordinary circumstances christians are so diverted by their ever recurring secular cares, that they do not drink freely and deeply of the water of life. They sip a little now and then, and hurry on their way. But when one sets apart a week for devotional purposes, and brings every power to bear on the one business of waiting on the Lord, he cannot fail to attain a depth of spirituality and a richness of experience which outweigh in value all the gold of Ophir. Many have thus obtained victories for which they struggled long years in vain.

7. They call out a class of people who scarcely ever attend any other meeting. In these days of religious caste, when most of the church edifices are sold or rented to the highest bidder, many poor people feel themselves virtually shut out, and thus fall into the habit of staying at home. Let them come under the shade of God's free trees, where rich sinners are not allowed to lord it over poor saints. But there is another class who are so hard, so profligate, so wicked, that they scarcely ever darken a church door. Such persons will often come to campmeeting, even if they have no better motive than curiosity. Some regard this as a serious objection to campmeetings. We regard it as an argument in their favor. Christ came to call sinners to repentance. If any need to hear the gospel it is hard cases. We ought to rejoice if we can induce the reckless throng to come where we can open upon them the glorious gospel battery. Many such have been wounded, arrested, and taken prisoners for Jesus.

8. They have been crowned with God's rich blessing. What the Lord approves is certainly right. Campmeetings have been revival meetings. Thousands of sinners have been convicted and converted in the tented wilderness. Thousands of weak disciples have there received the holy anointing which enabled them to go out as burning and shining lights. The tempted have been delivered, the sorrowing have been made glad in the Lord, and many who were ready to give up in despair have been thrilled with the joys of salvation, and have gone forth like giants refreshed with new wine to stand up nobly for Jesus.

As churches backslide and formality prevails, there is terrible danger that campmeetings may decline in their power and glory and success. Alas for the cause of God, if these highly favored means of grace are allowed to degenerate into mere pic-nic excursions, pleasant pastimes, rusticating respites, visiting parties, or preaching matches. Let us keep to the great salvation issue, and strike for victory in the conquering name of our immortal Jesus!

A KIND ACT.

BRO. GRANT:—I see in the Crisis of late date an appeal in behalf of the widow and children of my lately deceased son, Edwin. Several such appeals have been sent by kind friends for the Times; but we have declined to publish them, for the following reasons: We do not think it right to burden a great and good cause to support the poor and unfortunate among us. If the neighbors and friends of such persons see fit to help them, this is right, and as it should be. But public appeals for what should be local or individual interests open a wide door for every church and society to thrust the claims of their worthy poor upon the public, and the thing becomes "a drag" upon the cause. As a rule, at least, appeals to the public should relate to matters of public interest. There have been and may be exceptions; but I cannot feel that this is one of them. Edwin's friends, and others who never knew him, have been very kind; and while I would not stand between my daughter, his widow, and any who desire to help her personally, I would kindly decline, so long as my health and strength for work are spared, to have any of my family added to the burdens of the cause, which we would rather help than hinder.

I trust the kind friends who have interested themselves in behalf of my afflicted children will take no offence at this disclaimer. I would not discourage benevolence. The cause of tract distribution and missionary labor calls with a thousand tongues for aid, both in our own and other lands and languages. Let us all seek to provide for our local and home interests, and also give and give liberally to the objects that relate to the general cause.

JOSHUA V. HIMES.

ORDINATION.—At Woodford, Vt., at the close of a quarterly session of the Hoosick Valley Conference, held July 21st, 1872, Bro. Walter O. Higley, of Bennington, Vt., was set apart to the work of the gospel ministry, by the imposition of hands and prayer; and is commended to the faithful in Christ, wherever his lot may be cast. Bro. Higley is a worthy young man, and deserves the encouragement and confidence of all christians everywhere.

A. W. SIBLEY.

VERMONT CAMPMEETING.

Prepare to come from North, South, East, and West. Those who came last year will need no urging to come again. We expect to see many more this year. We are preparing for your comfort and spiritual good. The boarding tent upon the ground, under the charge of Bro. Chapman, who gave such excellent satisfaction last year, will furnish board at seventy-five cents per day. We hope all our friends who hire board will patronize the table upon the ground. We shall make it as convenient as possible for those who board themselves. Straw in bundles, and boards, will be at hand for those who wish; and we request this year that those who buy be prepared to pay on delivery, as it saves much time and labor for committee.

If you come by cars, you will pay full fare to Bethel, and a free pass will be given you to return over all roads under control of Vt. Central R. R. Unless you are notified to the contrary, have all baggage checked to Bethel. If you come by team, we can pasture or stable your horses at reasonable rates. Those wishing to build board tents are requested to come beforehand, if possible, and get them completed, or nearly so, before the meeting.

We are doing the best we can to secure an efficient and faithful ministry; but do not come depending upon great men or great sermons for satisfaction. Come "looking unto Jesus." He blessed us richly last year. He is as able now as then. We hope yet, however, that the Lord will favor us with some gifts long desired in Vermont. When you come, don't forget towels, wash basins, rubbers, umbrellas, blankets, comfortables, bed-ticks, pillow-cases, lanterns, matches, etc.

Come at the first of the meeting. If you cannot stay both Sundays, be there at the commencement. Come according to the counsel of our dear Bro. Ross in Crisis. Now, beloved, let us greet you happy in the Lord, rich in faith, full of the Holy Spirit, strong to work, and, if need be, to suffer for Jesus; greet you in the beautiful tented grove at Bethel, Vt., Aug. 21st, 1872, to continue our worship till Sept. 9th. A few more earthly encampments, and then upon the plains of Eden we'll shout for joy.

H. F. Carpenter, for Com.

AN APPEAL.

An appeal to the brethren and sisters within and outside of the limits of the Rhode Island and East Conn. campmeeting. We want to say to one and all that can possibly leave their homes, come to this meeting. Come not for worldly pleasure and recreation; come to work for God, to be co-workers together for each other's good and the saving of wanderers, and to bring sinners to Christ. Let prayer from the closet and from every family altar go up, that God will pour out his Spirit abundantly upon his people, to prepare them for the work of God and the salvation of sinners. Come not so much to find a full and complete salvation in Christ, but bring it with you, so that you will be like springs of living water to start with. Ministers of Jesus and servants of the church, come to feed the flock of God, and take the place that Jesus did—a servant—a lowly place, down by the side of the most humble child in the family.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us make one more willing and hearty effort for the cause we love so well, for the time is short. Wickedness rages, and sinners must soon be saved or lost. Bring your children that are not converted with you. Ask your unconverted neighbors to come. Tell them we will provide good homes in tents for them, and hold up a loving Savior for their present and eternal joy.

E. Bellows.

Correction.—Bro. Grant:—There is a mistake or misprint in my article about Round Lake Campmeeting. I am made to say that three quarters of the professors have enjoyed the blessing of sanctification. It should read, "three quarters of the professors here either enjoy this blessing or are seeking for it.

Correspondence.

From Bro. O. W. Kimball.

Bro. Grant:—I wish to say a few words to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad over the world. I am still striving for the kingdom, and trying, by the help, of the Lord to warn the people of the coming judgment, and to live myself as I preach and teach others to live. I was at Manchester the first Sabbath in June. They are still holding on, although they have passed through some trials since last winter, but they are determined to trust in the strong arm of God. Here are some of the faithful ones. Bro. Caleb Richardson lives here. His health is very poor, but he is strong in God, and doing all he can in the vineyard of the Lord. Brethren, remember Bro. Richardson.

Next I went to Great Falls, at Old Franklin Hall. Here they have a mind to work. We found them ready to help preach, and the singing was excellent. It was good to be there. This is the home of Bro. C. S. Shattuck, who has given all for Christ. He is a a faithful man of God. He has many friends here.

Next I went to Sutton. I had no appointment, but was at Bro. A. S. Williams', who holds meetings at his house. A large number came out. The house was full, and we had a good meeting. They took hold of the work in earnest. I preached at the Baptist church at five o'clock, and had a good congregation, considering the short notice. They gave the best of attention. Here are some of the good old hands that can be depended upon, and younger ones who have given all for God. So we go from place to place, as the Lord leads, sowing the seed, expecting to go on until the King comes and gives us rest.

Concord, N. H.

From Sr. R. M. Harvey.

Dear Brn. and Srs:—It is some time since I have burdened this paper with a communication, but thinking some might like to hear, I write. We are still seeking for that better country, even a heavenly; and at this time are feeling lonely and sad, as one week ago to-day, our dear little Hattie Louisa, aged fourteen months and fourteen days, fell asleep, after a short illness. She was a lovely child, never showed any temper or ugliness. Why must such lovely, innocent ones suffer so severely and die, leaving us so sad and lonely? O cruel death, when will thy reign be over? What could we do without the blessed hope of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him, with all the redeemed? My prayer is, Let thy kingdom come.

Dear sad, bereaved fellow pilgrims, let us look beyond the darkness and gloom, to the morning soon to dawn, and gird the armor more closely, fight manfully the good fight of faith, for victory must soon turn on Zion's side. Pray for us, that we may be faithful in this distant land. There are doors open to hear the truth at every hand. The harvest is great, but the laborers very few. O that the Lord would send humble, faithful, self-denying laborers this way.

DOMESTIC.

New York, August 6. A Quebec special to the New York Herald, dated last evening, says that the general elections for the centre and west divisions took place to-day. In the centre the Couchons men took possession of the polls and commenced fearful excesses. The Ross men banded together to repel their attacks, but were too weak for their assailants, who were 2500 strong, and armed with revolvers. A fearful encounter took place at the foot of Eustache street, and several lives were lost, while the wounded are numberless. The Dominion Artillery and field battery had to be called out, as well as the armed provincial police. As the polls were taken possession of, no fair return could be made, but the French Canadians' candidate is declared returned. The English-speaking population, it would seem, are to be exterminated by the French. According to the statements of the leaders of the French party, it is feared that there will be more bloodshed, as the Diamond Harbor boys are going up town to revenge the murder of their men.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 6. A terrible tornado and hailstorm, covering a space of country a mile in width, occurred here last night. The roofs of the State capitol, a hotel, Brant's Hall and many private dwellings were carried off, and the gable end of the German Reformed church injured. Hundreds of trees were blown down and thousands of panes of glass broken. The telegraph wires were prostrated, but communication was restored this morning.

Terribly Destructive Hail-Storm.—Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 7. Parties arriving here from points in Dakota, where a terrible hail-storm took place on the 3d inst., state that the storm did an immense amount of damage, fully corroborating the reports heretofore published. Hundreds of acres of corn were completely destroyed, the storm raging with great fury for over half an hour. The hail-stones were of immense size, and fell in great quantities. No loss of life is yet reported. This terrible storm will be a severe blow to the settlers of Northwestern Iowa and Eastern Dakota, who had anticipated a heavy yield of corn.

English Liberals.—Two very wealthy members of the English aristocracy have just joined the Reform Club in London—the Duke of Bedford and Marquis of Westminster. Both are descendants of notoriously conservative families, and this addition to the ranks of the Liberal party in England may be regarded as significant of the growing popularity of Mr. Gladstone's party in the State.

French Strike.—Our latest European files say that troops have been called out to repress disturbances made by a large number of men recently on strike at Anzen, in France, and were received with stones and a refusal to disperse. They then fired upon the crowd, killing one miner. Reinforcements of soldiers had been ordered into the district. It is stated that the International Society in Belgium has organized the French mining strike.

The International.—After passing a resolution giving the lie direct to certain statements that the International was in a state of disintegration, the English section of that body, in resumed Congress at Nottingham, England, considered the programme of the new Labor Party. That "platform" includes adult suffrage, proportional representation, removal of qualifications for office, abolition of hereditary titles and privileges, and the office of Justice of the Peace, disendowment and disestablishment of the Church, a National Bank of Issue, and Federative Government. The meeting, which was at times very excited, appointed an Executive Committee to sit at Manchester and pursue the objects already set forth.

The Expelled Jesuits.—A correspondent writing from Berlin in regard to the late order of the Prussian government respecting Jesuits, says that the expelled religionists from Germany are for the most part directing their steps to Austria, where representative legislation does not exist. Several Jesuit establishments have been lately broken up, and ten days ago the headquarters of the German Jesuit army, the institution at Mayence, went through a "great prayer," occupying sixteen hours at a stretch, from 4 A. M. to 8 P. M., preparatory to its emigration. The Ratisbon colony has likewise taken its passports, declaring that it will not put the Imperial authorities to the shame of expelling its members. In a village of Posen the police has even been required to prohibit a Jesuit mission, and carry the zealous fathers in police vans across the frontier into Galicia. This shows that the Prussian government is determined to pursue its policy in this direction without flinching, whatever be the result.

In Brief.

—— The strike of the coal miners in St. Clair county, Ill., is practically ended, several of the mining companies having acceded to the demand of the men.——It is said that Oxford University will confer an honorary degree upon Louis Napoleon.——The recent Italian elections were carried by the Liberals.——G. F. Train will erect at Omaha a Coliseum for a grand jubilee of oratory.——It took the army worm just two days to eat every green blade in a twenty-acre field in Ashton, Ill., last week.——It is stated that the sum already lost by the stagnation of trade, owing to the builders' strike in London, is enormous.——Dr. A. L. Stone's new Congregational Church in San Francisco has been dedicated and the pews were sold for $50,492, of which $10,000 were for premiums.——The carpenters' and joiners strike in New York is ended, only one shop holding out against the eight-hour rule.——All the Liberal clubs of Rome have agreed that they will propose one single list of candidates in future elections, in order that by thus combining they may the more effectually oppose the clerical candidates.——The two most celebrated club orators under the Commune, the famous Alix and Babick, are now hopelessly insane.——Infanticide is becoming fearfully prevalent in Chicago, and the authorities are discussing means of checking the crime.——The miners still on strike in Germany, in the Essen district, have resolved in a general meeting to persevere to the best of their ability, and only by perseverance they can hope to carry their point.

American Advent Mission Society.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Advent camp-ground, commencing Thursday, Aug. 22d, at 9 o'clock A. M.

A. W. Sibley, Secretary.

P. S. Members of, and delegates to, the Advent Christian Association are members of the A. A. M. Society. A. W. S.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Brn. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:— Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. Hancock.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, the Conn. tent will be pitched at Woodbridge, Conn., Saturday, August 10th, to hold over Sunday the 18th. It is hoped that there will be a general gathering to the meeting of all the lovers of Jesus and his truth. Brethren and sisters in adjoining towns, come and assist us. Those not wishing to bring provisions with them can procure board reasonably at the Hotel near by. Elders H. K. Flagg, Ripley, Steele, Woodruff, and others, are expected to be present. Z. D. Baird.

Grove Meeting.—There will be preaching at the Granite State Grove, Policy Pond, Windham, N. H., on Sunday, Sept. 1st, by Eld. J. G. Smith. If stormy, the meeting will be in the hall at the grove. Refreshments will be furnished by Mr. Smith, the proprietor, to all who wish. S. O. Welch.

We wish to request those that have tent-ground at the National Campmeeting to mark on a board the name of your tent, before coming to the meeting; then put it up as soon as your tent is pitched. This will enable others to find your tent. This will be a great convenience to me in directing. Again, some leave their ground without any frame or marks to know where their tent stood. Such as take their frames away should stick a stake in the centre of their lot, stating the size of their tent, or you will be liable to be encroached upon. All grounds with nothing on them will be forfeited after Tuesday, the 20th, unless described by letter. Also if any have ground, and you are not coming, please drop me a line. Hiram Munger.

Special Notice.—All that take teams for our campmeeting will be careful to get Collins' teams. He is our man, engaged for our meeting. Don't take any unless his name is marked on the wagon, or you may get deceived to your sorrow. Also, if you send baggage by freight or express, before you come, direct it to the Springfield Campmeeting, in care of Levi Collins, to deliver to Hiram Munger on the camp-ground. It will come more carefully, and at less price. Hiram Munger.

☞ As I advertised Bro. Day's tents to rent last year, the brethren are writing to me this year. I would say I have no tents to rent. Bro. J. C. Day says he can furnish some to such as use them well. Some last year injured them by driving nails through them; such need not apply. His tents are 12 by 15. Address J. C. Day, Springfield, Mass., care of Thomas R. Weaver. H. Munger.

Special Notice.—The Alton Bay Campmeeting will commence, if the Lord will, Saturday, Sept. 7th, and hold over two Sabbaths. Particulars hereafter. Eld. J. G. Smith, of Farmington, N. H., has the superintendence of the tent department. All wishing to rent or sell, hire or purchase tents, can correspond with him at that place. Prices should be stated. To save confusion, all who purpose to build permanent tents this year, whether they have spoken for a lot or not, are requested to notify Bro. Smith of the size of tent and location of lot by the first of August. J. Couch, for the Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.—We have leased the beautiful grounds at Bethel, and our annual camp will be pitched about Aug. 31st. The committee feel the need of funds for improving and lighting the ground, and building a preacher's stand large enough to store our lumber after the meeting. Who will help? Let those who have a mind send money or pledges to me, or to J. H. Harding, Ely, Vt.; George C. Arms, Waterbury, Vt.; Stephen French, Rutland, Vt.; or S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt. Pray much for this meeting, for good order, power, and salvation. F. H. Carpenter, for Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.—Railroad Arrangements.—Reduction of fare has been obtained to one half of regular rates on the following Railroads: Vt. Central; Vt. and Canada; Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly; Montreal and Vt. Junction; Sullivan, Ogdensburgh, and Lake Champlain; Missisquoi; Vt. Valley; Rutland and Burlington, Montreal and Plattsburgh; Whitehall and Plattsburgh; Addison and New London, and Northern. Passengers will buy regular tickets, and pay full fare to Bethel campmeeting, and will be furnished on the ground with free return passes. The mail train will stop at the ground every day, going north and south, giving persons north a fine opportunity of spending the day upon the ground, and to return the same night. Be sure to have every piece of your baggage marked plainly—Bethel Vt. Campmeeting. This last arrangement has been secured through Bro. R. N. Stetson's energy and influence, to whom many thanks are due. H. F. C.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Hay and straw will be furnished free, and poles for tent frames. We do not expect to have groceries, etc., on the ground, as it is but five minutes walk to market, where groceries can be had, also board for 25 cts. a meal. The ground is north west of the public square, about five blocks, and south of the McGregor R. R. tract, and half a mile west from the depot. Teams will meet you at the R. R. depots. Come all that can. Do not fail to bring your bedding, as you can use the big tent, or if the weather is wet, some barns close by may be had. Prospects are good, and there is great interest to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Brn., pray for this meeting.

C. C. Ramsey,

F. Denton, J. Riffnider, J. Livingston, J. Cleaveland, R. Stearns, C. P. Burroughs, C. Griffith, H. Brown, Committee.

Basket-Meeting.—Providence permitting, there will be a basket-meeting at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, Aug. 18th, to commence at half-past ten o'clock. Picnic dinner, and another sermon at one o'clock. All are invited to attend. Peter S. W. Deyo.

The Yearly Grove Meeting of the church of God (called Adventists) will commence in the grove of Bro. J. T. Ongley, in Rootville, Crawford Co., Pa., Aug. 22d, 1872. Eld. C. F. Sweet will be present, the Lord willing, to preach the word. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus, having the spirit and the cause of the Master at heart. We expect the meeting to continue about a week. Friends from the East and West can take the express trains to Union, on the A. and G. W. R. R., connecting with the train that leaves Union on the U. and T. R. R. at 1.45 P. M. for Lincolnville, arriving at L. 2.20 P. M. Friends from the South on the O. C. and A. R. R. arrive at 11.30 A. M. and at 7 P. M. There will be a team to take friends to the ground from L. on the arrival of the train at 2.20 P. M., it being 2½ miles west of Lincolnville. In case of rain a barn near the grove will be prepared.

Also, there will be a grove-meeting in Beaver County, Pa., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may appoint, to commence the evening of Aug. 30th, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a grove-meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport, and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa., commencing evening, Sept. 5th, and continue about a week.

Also a grove-meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., Pa., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Bro. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing evening of Sept. 12th, and continuing about a week. All are invited. Elders C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (D. V.) will attend to preach the word at the above meetings. J. T. Ongley.

Tent-Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a tent-meeting held at Elida, Ill., eight miles south west of Rockford, commencing Aug. 16th, and continuing over the 25th. Eld. W. L. Himes is expected to assist. Let all in the region come up to this meeting in the spirit of the Master, to labor for the salvtion of the perishing.

For the church, C. C. Marston.

Southern Wis. Campmeeting.—This campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, six miles south-west of Brodhead, on Bro. Atwood's land, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1st. Tents will be put up the day before (Saturday.) Tent-poles, straw and hay may be obtained on the ground. Several Wisconsin preachers are expected, among whom we hope to see Brn. Hough, Hitchcock, Thomson, and Howard. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, where they will find teams ready to convey them to the ground, provided they will notify me by letter, three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there.

Those coming from Prairie du Chien way, will change cars at Milton Junction, and reach Brodhead at 9 A. M. or 8 P. M. Those coming from the north, over the North Western R. R., will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead as above. This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. Wm. Sheldon.

The first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wis. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek Church, about eight miles north of Taunton, Sauk Co., to commence on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, holding over the following Lord's day. Let all the churches in the district send delegates, and it is expected that all preachers will attend. Friends from other districts are cordially invited to attend. Geo. Thomson.

To "New Bedford".—If the Bro. who wrote to me from New Bedford will give his address, I shall be happy to acknowledge his letter. Wm. L. Himes.

Acknowledgments.—For Sr. Mary I. Herron.—Previously noticed, $297.00. By Anne E. Armstrong, from friends in Detroit, Mich., $5.00. Geo. T. Adams.

C. Wilder, for Bro. and Sr. Ingham, $5.00. Also for Bro. B. P. Manning, $5.00.

Conn. Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting on the ground occupied for that purpose the past two years, near Plainville, Conn., commencing Aug. 31st, and continuing till Sept. 9th. On the New Haven and Northampton R. R., the 6 A. M. and 4.45 P. M. trains from Williamsburg, and the 6.50 A. M. train from New Haven, will stop opposite the camp-ground, only when there are passengers for the meeting, and they must tell the conductors they wish to stop, or they will be carried by. Remember this. The morning train up reaches the camp-ground about 8 o'clock, the morning train down at 8.30, and the evening train down at 7.20. Those from the north by these trains, buy regular tickets to Southington; those from the south to Plainville. Those coming by other trains must stop at Plainville, and Mr. T. F. Clark will take them to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. In all cases, buy regular tickets, and free return passes will be furnished at the meeting. On the H. P. and F. R. R. fare is reduced thirty per cent from Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville. Buy regular tickets to Plainville, and tickets at reduced rate can be had on the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates.

We hope all who can, will bring tents, and come early to the meeting, and those who have no tent, bring a blanket or bedquilt, and not depend on your neighbor for one. It is our heart's desire and prayer to God that our brethren and sisters may be moved by a self-examining, sanctifying, consecrating spirit, that will bring us to this meeting ready, at the beginning, to serve the Lord, and not come like a rickety wagon to the shop for repairs. Let there be a cleasing from worldly conformity, pride, hatred, jealousy, foolish conversation, and such like, before coming to the meeting. Do not burden and kill the meeting with these instruments of the devil. As a people, we profess to carry the judgment message and last crowning light of truth to the world; and with the final, most essential, and brilliant proclamation of the entire gospel, our meetings should prove a means of salvation to sinners. May the Holy Spirit overshadow the encampment, and fall upon the people. May faith triumph, and God be glorified. Amen.

Campmeeting at Belfast, Me.—The campmeeting at Belfast will commence on the 18th of August, and continue over the 25th. It is desired to have the tents erected on the 19th. We shall be on the ground the week previous to fit up, so that if any wish to erect on the 17th they can do so. The fare will be reduced on the Maine Central R. R. from Portland on both routes. Tickets can be obtained at the following named places:—Portland, Lewiston, Monmouth, Winthrop, Kendall's Mills, Richmond, Gardiner, Hallowell, Augusta, Burnham, Pittsfield, Newport, Corinna, Dexter, Carmel, and Harmon. Reduced tickets on the steamboats Cambridge and Katahdin, leaving Bangor for Boston every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at 11 A. M. Will leave Boston for Bangor every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday, at five o'clock P. M.

Inside steamboat, City of Richmond, will leave Portland every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, at ten o'clock. Leaves Bangor every Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, at six o'clock, for Portland. Call for Campmeeting tickets for Belfast Advent Campmeeting.

The fare on the Lewiston boat (coming from the east) is reduced to half fare to Castino, and then take the packet across to Belfast.

Passengers going east on the Maine Central R. R. will change cars at Burnham for Belfast. Tickets will be good from Aug. 16th to Aug. 27th.

All those on the line of the Maine Central Railroad, will purchase regular tickets to Belfast, and receive free return tickets on the camp-ground.

Come, all who can, and worship in the beautiful grove in sight of Belfast bay, and enjoy another feast of brotherly love, laying aside all vain ambition and speculation, and seek the good of all. Bring your tents, and provide for yourselves and others as much as possible, remembering that love is the fulfilling of the law, and that God blesses the cheerful giver. Shall we all seek to get nearer to Him who died for us, and to save others from death? Our work is almost done. Shall we have it said to us, "Well done"?

Bro. M. W. Corliss, of Milltown, will attend the meeting, with his big tent. Bro. N. H. Barber is expected to attend. Let others come filled with the spirit of love.

In behalf of the committee, Israel Damman.

Mechanic Falls, Me., Campmeeting.—If the Lord will, this meeting will be held in the beautiful grove where it was held last year, commencing August 26th, to continue one week. This ground is easy of access, pleasantly located, about one mile from the depot, and is a most desirable spot for campmeeting. This year the ground has been much improved, a commodious boarding-tent erected, the stable enlarged, and both put into competent hands for good management. Good board, horse keeping, and pasturage, will be afforded at the lowest possible rates, so that none can justly complain. "The Mission Tent" will be ready for use on the ground, Aug. 24th. This tent affords excellent shelter for meetings in stormy weather, and makes a comfortable lodging place by night for several hundreds, if necessary. Straw will be provided for bedding, and all things done that can be for the comfort and well-being of all who attend. All who wish to erect wooden or cloth tents will find the most desirable lots for that purpose.

The fare on all parts of the Maine Central and Buckfield railroads will be one half the usual rates; and on the Grand Trunk about the same. Those coming from Bangor, and intermediate places, should stop at Danville Junction; and those coming from Augusta and other places on the Kennebec, should stop at Yarmouth Junction. At both Junctions, take the Grand Trunk R. R. for Mechanic Falls.

At all stations on the Grand Trunk Road, call for Campmeeting tickets. At all stations on the Maine Central roads, full fare will be paid to Danville and Yarmouth Junctions, and free return tickets furnished on the camp-ground by the committee.

Come to the meeting from east, west, north and south. Come to do and get good. Let there be a general gathering of the watching, waiting ones, and of all who wish to be ready for the coming of "our King." Bro. J. Couch is expected to be with us a part of the time.

Campmeeting.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Sabbath, Sept. 1st, and hold over Sabbath, the 8th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow-men in these last moments of time. Particulars hereafter. E. R. Wood, for the Com.

The New World; or, Better Country. By I. C. Wellcome. A scriptural account of "the world to come," the saints' home, and the way to become heirs to it. The prospect of soon entering into possession of it; with extracts from Luther and Matthew Henry. 24 pp. Price 5 cts. 40 cts. per dozen.

The Present Age.—Its Boasted Progress Delusive. From the London Quarterly Journal of Prophecy. To which is added an article by Rev. J. A. Seiss, D. D., giving a summary of the wars of the last twenty years; with a sketch of the sceptical tendencies of the religious literature of Christendom, with other facts. A very important tract for Progressionists. 24 pp. Price 5 cents. 40 cts. per dozen. For sale at this office.

To New York Adventists.—Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have a general rally at our next campmeeting? You now have an excellent opportunity to do good and get good. By your personal presence, prayers, and labors of love, much good may be done. We should be a consecrated people. Let not ease, love of money, or other selfish considerations, prevent us from throwing the whole weight of our moral and personal influence on the side of the cause we profess to love. What we do, rather than what we say, is the true test of our religious earnestness. Come, then, to this meeting armed with faith and winged by prayer. Its location is central, beautiful, and convenient. Let all remember, too, that at this meeting our first quarterly conference for the year is to be held. The New York State tent will be pitched in the grove, and smaller tents can be procured of James Field, Rochester, at the following prices:

Tents	24 x 30	feet per week,	$13.00
"	16 x 24	" " "	8.00
"	12 x 17	" " "	4.50
"	9 x 12	" " "	3.00

Parties desiring tents should send in their orders immediately. J. H. Whitmore.

FIGS OF THISTLES.

As laborers set in a vineyard,
Are we set in life's field,
To plant and to garner the harvest
Our future shall yield.

And never since harvests were ripened,
Or laborers born,
Did men gather figs of the thistle,
Or grapes of the thorn.

Even he who has faithfully scattered
Clean seed in the ground,
Has found, where the green blade was growing,
Tares of evil abound.

For labor ends not with the planting—
Sure watch must we keep,
Since the enemy sows in the night-time,
While husbandmen sleep.

And sins all unsought and unbidden
Take root in the mind;
Vile seeds are they, choking the blossoms,
Chance-sown by the wind.

But no good crop our hands have not planted
Doth Providence send,
Nor doth that which we planted have increase
Till we water and tend.

By our fruits, whether good, whether evil,
At the last are we shown;
And he who has nothing to gather,
By his lack shall be known.

And no useless creature escapeth
His righteous reward;
For the tree or the soul that is barren,
Is cursed of the Lord.

PRIDE, DRESS, ADORNMENT.

A. BOYNTON.

John the Baptist taught in this wise:—"Now the axe is laid at the root of the trees, therefore [or because of this fact] every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Matt. 3: 10. A dispensation of types and shadows was about to pass away, home sin must be attaked directly in all her strong holds. Christ's manner was the same, when in his rebuking words to the Pharisees for their teaching and doctrine, he says—"Either make the tree good, and its fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt and its fruit corrupt; for [or because] a tree is known by its fruit." Matt. 12: 33. On another occasion, when warning the people against these many-sided hypocrites and false teachers, he says—"Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing [a fair, yea, mild and loving exterior], but inwardly they are ravening wolves [have the spirit of evil, and seek the flock of God as subjects of prey or greed]. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree, . . . evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit; neither can a corrupt tree . . . good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire; therefore, by their fruits ye shall know them." Matt. 7: 15–20.

Our attention was called to the subject by two articles in the Examiner and Chronicle, of May 23d, being answers to "six," headed "The Question of Dress," and "The Christian Law as to Jewels," by W. We have no desire to controvert this subject personally, our object being not to skirmish, but taking John and Christ as examples of leadership, follow as closely in their track as our weakness and distance will permit; and should the chips (in our efforts to hew down the trees of error) chance to injure any one by their flying, we hope not to be judged harshly in our holy effort. Without stopping to prove the assertion, for we think few will question it, we say, the morals, the Christianity, falsly so-called, of our times are becoming alarmingly exterior. Education and refinement (?) are as varnish, guilding or gold-plating, while inwardly the heart, the affections, the the main-spring of action in the man—the motive-power is as black and corrupt as the denounced pharisaical sepulchres of Christ's day. Matt. 23: 27. The haste, the mighty rush all around us, leads many an honest soul astray, by fixing their attention, yea, intoxicating their minds with the superficial glitter and glory, causing them to forget the state of the fountain (the heart) out of which are the issues of life. Prov. 4: 23. Here is a most important truth, "worthy of all acceptation." The great results of life grow out of, and have their origin in the little silent droppings of the soul, or mind; as the never failing trickling from yon rocky chasm helps to swell the wide ocean's bosom, so do these least emotions form our future destiny and fix our doom.

Pride. Some, perhaps, ignorantly justify it, attributing it to qualities of excellence. Webster does; but God's children, in defining words, or at least qualities of things, are to go to God's dictionary, the Bible, which is the best expositor or commentary of the divine plan and purpose. Take this word pride, trace it through in your concordance; can you find it in one instance as a thing justifiable? Is it not always coupled with sin and evil? We give only one quotation—"For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world." John 2: 16. Never, then, as a doctrine of the Bible, advocate pride.

Dress. There are general principles or rules, as also special ones, regulating this subject, which we shall notice in order. The principles have already been laid before us by the Master himself: a radical change of heart or affections; a transformation, a renewing of the spirit of our minds, another disposition, a new main-spring of action produced by the "love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us." Rom. 5: 5. This cannot take place without the old man with his deeds is cast out. He is a creature of the flesh, the carnal mind, or self-will. "Thy will be done," is not the sincere prayer of the fleshly, but of the spiritual man. Here the real christian life commences. This is the door into the school of Christ. Multitudes are seeking to climb up some other way; hence so much darkness, wrong-doing and contention. The lookers on are disgusted; the little ones, who have known the Shepherd's voice are confounded and discouraged. "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord [or his Lord] but by the Holy Ghost." 1 Cor. 12: 3. Of the fruits of such christians there is no question. "Can a fig-tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine figs? so can no fountain yield both salt water and fresh" Isa. 3: 12. Having laid down the platform, we come to some of the particular fruits, or results. "Likewise, ye wives, [real believers, remember] be in subjection to your husbands; that if any obey not the word, they also without the word may be won by the conversation of the wives; while they behold your chaste conversation, coupled with fear, whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel; but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. For after this manner in the olden time, the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection unto their own husbands; even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord [or lawful head]; whose daughters ye are as long as ye do well, and are not afraid with any amazement" [such apprehension of danger as to prevent doing your duty. 1 Pet. 3: 1–6. "That women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness [modest appearance] and sobriety [decorum]; not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array; but, which becometh women professing godliness, with good works." 1 Tim. 2: 9, 10. All the comment the above needs is a careful and prayerful re-reading. Here we have clothing and ornaments described. These will follow as the legitimate fruits of a good tree.

A flower garden. These are all the rage just now, so let me introduce my christian sister to one. Here are some flowers which are not at all according to our fancy; suppose we attempt their destruction. We clip their blooming stems; for a time we are quite relieved of their presence, but we go out on a bright morning, and they are fresh as ever; others of like character have taken their place. Suppose you now say, We will cut them close to the ground, and drop in among their roots seeds of a more desirable kind; think you these will supplant the firmly embedded roots? You would not be guilty of such folly. The living roots give character to the crop. So as well might you attempt to stop the cannon's mouth with your apron, as to stop the manifestation of sin while the heart is at enmity with God. No, no, we have quite too large an army of hypocrites now. Let us not don the Quaker style without the Quaker's heart—take heaven's livery to serve the devil in. Birds that sing sweetest are not the most beautiful, neither are the most precious things always the most attractive. God's beauty is in his character; so ours is not in cloth, or any outward array whatever, but in possessing and manifesting the qualities of our divine Lord and Master, whose we are, and whom we serve. "What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" 1 Cor. 6: 19.

The foregoing facts, we trust, will help some of the little ones to go up stream and slake their thirst with the water of life, where it flows pure from the rock of truth (the word of God), before it is "fouled with the feet" of the "evil shepherds." See Ezek. 34: 18, 19. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." John 8: 36. And being a son or daughter of the Lord Almighty (see 2 Cor. 6: 18), he seeks no honor but that which "cometh from God only." John 5: 44. He is not of the world, although in it. God's glory is ever his object, and the divine will his chief joy; and the fulness of his excellence in an eternal life will only satisfy the cravings of the divine spirit within him; as saith the Psalmist, "I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15.

HOLINESS TO BE PREACHED AT CAMPMEETINGS.

S. A. GILMAN.

"We have a strong wish that, among all our campmeetings, we might have one to which everybody should be invited who is interested in the doctrine of holiness and entire consecration to God, as a preparation for the coming of Christ."—EDITOR, June 19th.

I must confess to a feeling of surprise, when I read the wish; not that it was at all improper, but that he asks only for one where those interested in the doctrine of entire consecration to God as a preparation for the coming of Christ shall be invited. What does it mean? Are the rest of our campmeetings expected to preach something short of this, as sufficient to meet the requirements of the gospel? Is it true that in all these years, since the cry was made—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh," they have just begun to learn what is requisite that they be found of him in peace?

Where are we? A christian church who, professedly, are waiting, expecting, for thirty years or more, to see their Lord, now unmindful comparatively of those out of Christ, and talking about getting ready! What a spectacle to the world! Is there need? With grief of heart I acknowledge it. O how I have seen this spirit of consecration to God give place to other things, and felt and seen efforts for the salvation of men paralyzed, by causes that ought not to have been. Shall I tell my experience at the campmeetings at Springfield and Conn. last year? Unable to attend the S. meeting till the last Saturday, upon reaching the ground, I inquired of two pioneers in the church concerning the state of the meeting, and how much interest was shown for the salvation of men? The reply was in substance, that the church was "getting ready" herself, and some had been blest. At the Conn. meeting, some bewailed their coldness, their love of the world, etc., who had long stood in the ranks as true soldiers, who then talked of "getting ready"; and at both little was done to arouse the unconverted. I involuntarily exclaimed, Ah, my Lord, is this thy waiting church, arrayed in her beautiful garments, who keeps thy ways, listening to thy voice, "watching daily at thy gates, waiting at the posts of thy doors," receiving daily blessedness? Ah! is not here the secret of so little effect produced upon the minds of those away from Christ?

O, if the church of Christ oftener looked over her accounts with Him, than after the things of the world, and with Paul reckoned herself to be "dead indeed unto sin," and earnestly, heartily say, "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air," this labor to get the church ready might and ought to be spent in pulling men out of the fire. We never hear Paul talking about half-way work in serving God, but, without holiness no man shall see the Lord. He claimed no immunities from danger, but to the last he kept the faith and maintained his christian integrity by continued wrestlings. He says, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." Paul is not the pattern by which our modern christianity is being formed; but my mind at once reverts to Peter, who, after denying his Lord and suffering "bitterly," was ready to "go a fishing"; and when Jesus appears to them afterwards, he addresses Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" three times. As the question was brought home to his heart, no doubt Peter remembered, as he said "Follow me," the scene at the last supper, when Jesus said, "I have prayed for thee, . . . and when thou art converted strengthen thy brethren"; for we see him after this engaged in serving God in right earnest. We find many now of Peter's experience as well as Paul's. Paul plainly teaches how we are to "grow up" unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ"; not by a peculiar state of mind, but by walking worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called—followers of Jesus. For myself, I much more admire Paul's course, and would pattern after his experience rather than Peter's; and I would to God that the Peters of to-day might not wait for the campmeetings ere they listen to Jesus' voice, when he asks, "Lovest thou me?" but follow him daily, denying self, and bearing their cross; then come in the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of peace, and our campmeetings might be a power still upon the enemy's ranks. I believe as heartily as any, that as a people looking for the immediate coming of Christ, we should be living fully up to the Bible standard, being entirely consecrated to the Lord; and were the church there, I believe there has never been a time in the history of the Advent people when so many could be reached as now.

Bro. Grant, tell the church, tell them in God's name, and as a minister of his, tell them everywhere, that from the hour they give themselves to God, and have their names written in the book of life, as joint heirs with Jesus, from first to last, to be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, and there will be no lack of blessedness; but daily, hourly feel that they rest beneath his smile of approbation, and are ready for every good word or work.

HOW TO RETAIN ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION.

Supposing, dear reader, that you now possess the exalted happiness, the perfect humility, perfect love, and the witness of the Holy Spirit that you are fully saved from all sin. How blessed is your estate, how much cause for gratitude. But alas! that this blessing may be lost. But how may you keep it?

1. You must cherish the spirit of watchfulness. Holiness is like a garden without weeds; but, if you do not watch, Satan will sow tares. It is like a well-regulated house; still it requires constant care to keep it in order. It is like a beautiful white robe, that may soon be spotted and defiled in this filthy world. Thank God, the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth, moment by moment, from all sin. It can cleanse and keep us clean. Holiness is like a sharp-edged instrument that will be blunted without much care. It is like a well-defended city, with the enemies all outside, but every avenue must be constantly guarded.

Watch your thoughts; an evil thought may lead to an unholy desire, and this to a sinful volition, and sin is completed, and a wounded conscience and a blushing face leave sad cause for repentance.

Watch the first ruffle of your feelings, and stay your mind at once on God. Watch the first temptation to speak an angry, fretful, or peevish word, for all these little things have a great influence, "Trifles make perfection, but perfection is no trifle."

2. Cultivate a spirit of faith. This implies that you will guard against every temptation to doubt. Satan may say the blessing is too good for you, too great for you to enjoy; that many older professors than you have never professed such a blessing. Resist the temptation. Cast yourself anew at the feet of Jesus, and look up in simple faith into his loving face and say, "I do believe. Jesus saves me, saves me now."

Lady Maxwell says: "The Lord teaches me that it is by simple faith alone that I can either obtain, retain, or increase with regard to any gospel blessing.

3. Your works must accord with your faith. "Faith without works is dead, being alone." You must hold yourself ready for any post of duty, in any part of the world, for any portion of time. In great things or in small you will do the will of God, even in eating and drinking.

You will find here a full opportunity for the exercise of self-denial. Other professors may yield to indulgence in dress, etc., but you must rigidly deny self. Wesley says, "Be exemplary in all things, particularly in outward things, as in dress, in little things, in laying out your money, avoiding all needless expense." Fill up your whole life with labor for Jesus. Keep yourself fully engaged doing good, and so your works will help your faith. Read 1 John 3: 20–22. Study its blessed and significant meaning.

4. Live as in the presence of God. "Thou God seest me," ever kept in mind, will do much toward keeping you from falling. Walk and talk with God. Often spend an hour in sweetest fellowship with God in your closet. This will give you a richer realization of the divine presence, and a power to reflect the divine image upon the gainsaying world.

5. You cannot maintain this blessed state unless you make a timely and prudent profession of it. Tell the truth, the whole truth. Be not afraid to use Bible language. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." "Perfect love casteth out fear." In deep humiliation of soul, and with a single eye to his glory, publish this fulness to the world. Still the loudest profession of holiness is the daily deportment, the godly walk, the deadness to the world in its spirit and customs.

6. Seek after more and more of the mind of Christ. You must grow in holiness. If you try to stand still you will go back. It is your blessed privilege to be "Changed from glory unto glory," till in heaven you take your place,

"Till you cast your crown before him,
Lost in wonder, love, and praise."

7. You must daily renew your consecration. Lay your all anew upon the altar "that sanctifieth the gift." Still say,

"High heaven that heard the solemn vow,
That vow renewed shall daily hear,
Till in life's latest hour I bow,
And bless in death a bond so dear."

8. You must labor to diffuse this blessing; to persuade others to embrace it. This you will do as long as you retain it. A minister once said, "A christian was like a coal of fire, he must set some one else on fire, or he would go out himself." Scatter the holy fire, then it will burn more and more.

9. Be willing to suffer the consequences of its profession.

10. Satan may tempt you more severely. This he did to Jesus. Thank God you need not fear.

"By all hell's host withstood,
We all hell's host overthrow,
And conquering them through Jesus' blood,
We on to conquer go."

11. You may expect opposition from those who are at ease in Zion. They may say, "You are zealous overmuch," "You make yourself peculiar;" "Attract attention;" "Why not take things a little easier?" "Why make so much ado about religion?" "It will be just as well in the end." Look out for these Laodiceans, pity them, pray for them, set fire to them, but do not follow their example, or be moved by their pleadings. Yours is indeed a peculiar state of mind and heart, and but few enjoy or know how to appreciate it. It will make you peculiar, as it did Jesus. And you must be willing to meet the opposition as he did, who when reviled reviled not again.

12. Let patience have its perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. —Guide to Holiness.

CONFERENCE PROCEEDINGS.

A long and a hearty Amen to article No. 2, in the Crisis of July 3d, from Bro. Sheldon, under the head of "Conference Reports." I have felt it duty that something should be written and published in the Crisis on the subject, but felt insufficient for the task. While brethren are arraigned before the conference, condemned and sent out into the world branded with a mark as lasting as that of Cain's, published to the world, rejected by those who should have reproved, rebuked and exhorted by those who had promised that their homes should be open to receive them; that their substance should be administered to their wants; that when sick or in prison they should be visited and administered unto,—while such an one for whom Christ died should be restored in the spirit of meekness, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake has forgiven us, we see it told of in Gath, published in Askelon, rejoiced over by the uncircumcised, and believed by the enemies of the cross of Christ; thus rejected of men, despised by those who should love and protect them; sent out into the world without one word of reproof or rebuke, without a word of exhortation, or a tear of sympathy; their prayers for pardon and forgiveness not granted, their promises rejected, the pleadings of the brethren passed by unheeded, their name published to the world with some unknown crime attached to it, found guilty of charges preferred, etc.

Dear brethren in Christ, these things ought not so to be. Rememberest thou the king who would take account of his servants (Matt. 18: 23–30), and when he forgave him the debt, he went out and found his fellow servant, and laid hold on him, and cast him into prison until he should pay the debt; "so likewise shall my heavenly Father do unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses." Brethren have pleaded and pleaded in vain, and no place of mercy has been found; yet we see such as have been despised and rejected of men upheld by the word of Him who has said, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and to the dying thief, thou shalt be remembered in paradise; by Him who has said if you suffer now, you shall triumph then; if you are despised and rejected of men, you shall be remembered when I make up my jewels. Christ was despised and rejected by those he loved, and wept over, and would have gathered, but they would not; but he has overcome, and ascended to his Father, and has promised to them that overcome that they shall reign with him.

Brethren, remember your duty to your brethren and your God, and not lord it over God's heritage, knowing that we are but stewards, and have a Master in heaven. "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." If you find a tree that is unfruitful, dig about it with the tools that God has provided, and dress it with words of reproof and advice, and if it bear fruit, good and well; if not, let Him who will recompense the ungodly and the sinner see to it. A. S. TOWLE.

OUR PRAYER-MEETING.

(1) I purpose to be there regularly and punctually,—"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together."

(2) I will endeavor to draw others to the meeting,—"Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

(3) Before entering the place of prayer, I will ask the Savior's presence,—"We would see Jesus."

(4) I will not, unless it is necessary, occupy a back seat,—"How pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

(5) I will not so seat myself as to hinder others from occupying the same settee with me,—"Be courteous."

(6) I will refrain from fault-finding, and will not indulge a criticising spirit,—"Be ye kindly affectioned one to another."

(7) I will not expressly dissent from any one who has spoken, and will avoid giving the expression of variance of feeling,—"That we may be made perfect in one."

(8) So far as is consistent, I will assist actively in the exercises, by testifying to the love of Christ, by exhortation, by a passage of Scripture, a hymn or a stanza, or otherwise,—"Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly, in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs."

(9) I will not decline to lead in prayer, and in offering prayer will begin with the subject in hand, and in aid of what has just been said,—"Ye also helping together by prayer for us."

(10) If I offer the prayer first, it shall be chiefly an invocation, asking the Savior's special aid and presence,—"For without me ye can do nothing."

(11) My prayers and remarks shall not be long,—"For God is in heaven, and thou upon earth; therefore let thy words be few."

(12) I will not seem to harangue nor teach in prayer, as though I were thinking of man more than of God,—"We speak before God in Christ."

(13) I will not speak merely to fill a vacancy, but will rather offer prayer during pauses in the meeting,—"That thy benefit should not be as it were of necessity, but willingly."

(14) I will not needlessly expose any want of faith, and discouragements,—"Who is fearful and faint-hearted, let him return."

(15) I will cultivate enlargement of faith and desires,—"Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace."

(16) On leaving the place, I will endeavor to maintain a devout frame of mind,—"Continue in prayer."

(17) I will endeavor to use all means suited to secure the blessings for which I have prayed,—"Faith without works is dead also."—Selected by N. J. Lewis.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

Pursuant to notice, the Christian Advent Yearly Conference of Nova Scotia met at Hillsburgh, June 13th, 1872. The first and second days were occupied in devotional exercises, with much good feeling and interest, by a general attendance of delegates and others from almost all the churches. On the morning of the 15th, at 8.30, the president, Elder I. Woodworth, called the meeting to order, when the business of the conference was taken up. The minutes of last year were read and adopted. Officers chosen for the year: President—Elder I. Woodworth; Vice President—Solomon Bolby; Secretary—Tho. W. De Wolfe; Treasurer—I. Woodworth.

Reports from thirteen different churches were made; five by brethren, eight by delegates; showing in almost all a growing interest in the gospel truth, and numbers added to the different churches. Brethren Tozier from Woodstock, N. B., and Heath from Lynn, Mass., were present with much acceptance and efficient aid in the cause. The brethren voted and paid in at the meeting $100 for book and tract distribution. The Advent church at Halifax was received into membership with the conference. Bro. Albert Verge of Halifax was accepted, and ordained to the ministry. Charge by Elder I. Woodworth; right-hand of fellowship by Elder Tozier, and prayer by Bro. Holliday.

The services on the Lord's day were interesting throughout, and very fully attended. In the evening, after the baptism of one candidate, Bro. Tozier preached the coming Christ, with much acceptance to a large and interested audience. On Monday morning, the brethren and sisters left for their respective homes, strengthened and much pleased with the harmony and love which pervaded these meetings, as also with the liberal hospitality and kind attention from the residing brethren and sisters of that romantic and beautiful village.

AS THOU WILT.

"Many shall be purified, made white, and tried."

Even so, O Father!
Though my heart is bleeding,
On the anvil keep me,
While its lessons needing;
Till I'm fitted thus to fill
The place assigned me by thy will.

Even so, O Father!
As silver when 'tis tried,
From every earthly stain
May I be purified;
So that, reflected, all may see
Thine image, Lord, enstamped on me.

Even so, O Father!
Though shrinks my heart with fear,
The trial I'll endure
If thou, dear Christ, art near;
For "As thy day thy strength shall be,"
Is promised even unto me.

PUTTING RAZORS TO CHILDREN'S THROATS.

A blessed gospel minister, whose eyes are open to see what Satan is doing, through his active agents—ministers and religious editors—said, a short time since, "that parents might just as well take a razor and cut their children's throats, as to allow them to read the corrupting literature of the day."

Is this declaration, startling as it is, too strong or too bold? Not in the least. If parents have made up their minds fully to kill their sons and daughters any how (as many seem to have), why not dispatch business—make quick work of it! This killing by inches or piecemeal, is the most painful and cruel of all deaths!

The same christian minister goes on to say: "Thousands of the youth of our land are annually ruined forever by poisonous literature. And yet books and papers of that character are to be found upon the tables of professed christians. Some think them harmless, and permit them to ruin their own children. Fathers and mothers, look after your children, and see what they are reading. Banish all pernicious books and papers from your houses, and furnish your children with an abundance of such as are calculated to make them wise and good. They may plead for novels, and try to convince you that they are as harmless as they are charming. Beware of that thought! Hearken to the testimony of those who have watched the influence of novel-reading.

"Goldsmith, himself a novel-writer, says: 'Above all, never let your son touch a novel or a romance. How delusive, how destructive, are these features of consummate bliss! They teach the youthful mind to sigh after beauty and happiness that never existed, to despise the little good that fortune has mixed in our cup, by expecting more than she ever gave.'

"Rev. John Foster, an eminent Baptist minister in England, says: 'Novels are doing incalculable mischief. I wish we could collect them all together, and make one vast fire of them. I should exult to see the smoke of them ascend like that of Sodom and Gommorrah; the judgment would be as just.' The fearful results of novel reading are a standing warning against the practice. Let the pulpit and the press speak out boldly, and arouse the unsuspecting."

Let your mind pierce through the vista of the next few years—the children will be men and women then—the long procession of drunkards, criminals, and prostitutes that now degrade our world, will have passed away to "that bourne from whence no traveler returns;" but with the same influence at work there will be few, if any, gaps made; our workhouses will be crowded as they are now; our jails will be crowded as they are now; drivelling sots and raving maniacs will abound on every hand as they do now; a long train of lecherous harlots will infest our streets even as they do now. And where will they come from?—where, but from our children? Fathers, mothers, your children are in danger; run to their rescue! The most potent agency in effecting their ruin will be through the medium of a corrupt press in the hands of whom?—Author of "Digging Roots," etc.

IT is a mistake to say animals are "only mutes, and never know a pleasure." At this moment from our library window we witness the intense pleasure which a mother cat and her little ones are having upon the lawn. In their gambols they play at a real "puss in the corner;" and when mamma is caught she wags her tail and fondles her little ones with exquisite delight, and then darts down the garden walks, followed by the enraptured little ones, who vainly endeavor to climb the walnut tree, from a bough of which madam looks down upon her children with a chuckle of true sport.—Dumb Animals.

MEN ARE OBSERVING YOU.

In one of the suburban towns a Sabbath-school teacher had a very fine class of boys. Most of them were from wealthy families. One of them was the son of a poor widow who had to sew, it might be said, almost day and night, to keep her young family together. Our teacher had again and again observed a lone light shining brightly at late hours from the window of that mother's room, and then would come trooping through his mind the words of that refrain of Tom Hood's song, "Stitch, stitch, stitch." The teacher had taught his boys to take off their hats to him and to each other, as he did to them, so that he and they were quite a marked feature of the village.

One day a Boston merchant was walking past the school-room with our teacher, when the pupils were coming out. They tumbled out as usual, and rushed heedlessly by our teacher and his friend—all but one. That was the widow's son. He raised his hat so politely, it took the merchant's attention at once.

"Why, what a fine well-bred lad!" said he.

"Yes," said the teacher, "and he is the only son of a poor widow, who is working herself to death to prepare him for a place in your store or that of some other good man."

"And she shall not work in vain," replied the merchant.

Both turned at once, repaired to the widow's room, and the merchant engaged the lad in his store. Now he is partner with him in a thriving business, and all from that one act of good breeding. We leave off as we began. Few of you children who walk our streets have the faintest conception of the number of persons who are observing you, and are really taking an interest in you. By and by, perhaps, you may get some faint idea of it when you aspire to enter life as one of us. Then if you had been one of those who have been winning, day by day, golden opinions, doors will open, perhaps, quicker and wider than you expected.—Boston Transcript.

THE DIFFERENCE.

A teacher asked of a little boy, "Willie, why were you gone so long for water?"

"We spilled it, and had to go back and fill the bucket again," was the prompt reply; but the bright, noble face was a shade less bright, less noble than usual, and the eyes dropped beneath the teacher's gaze.

The teacher crossed the room, and stood by another, who had been Willie's companion.

"Freddy, were you not gone for the water longer than necessary?"

For an instant Freddy's eyes were fixed on the floor, and his face wore a troubled look. But it was only for an instant—he looked frankly up in his teacher's face.

"Yes, ma'am," he bravely answered, "we met little Harry Braden and stopped to play with him, and then we spilled the water and had to go back."

Little friends, what was the difference in the answers of the two boys? Neither of them told anything that was not true. Which one of them do you think the teacher trusted more fully after that, and which was the happier of the two?

TOM'S "GOLD DUST."

"That boy knows how to take care of his gold dust," said Tom's uncle often to himself, and sometimes aloud.

Tom went to college, and every account they heard of him he was going ahead, laying a solid foundation for the future.

"Certainly," said his uncle, "certainly, that boy, I tell you, knows how to take care of his gold dust."

"Gold dust!" Where did Tom get gold dust? He was a poor boy. He had not been to California. He never was a miner. When did he get gold dust? Ah! he has seconds and minutes, and these are the gold dust of time—specks and particles of time, which boys and girls, and grown-up people are apt to waste and throw away. Tom knew their value. His father, our minister, had taught him that every speck and particle of time was worth its weight in gold, and his son took care of them as if they were. Take care of your gold dust!—Little American.

ANGER.—Anger is what little folks call "getting mad." It is a plant in the heart of almost every one, and it bears very bad fruit. It is a weed that ought to be pulled out of every young heart in the world. The same feeling that causes the little boy to raise his hand and strike his brother, or sister, or playmate, is that which causes a man to draw a knife and stab his fellow-man to the heart, or draw a pistol and shoot him down. Everybody would call him a murderer: and so he would be.

With a little time to think, all can see that anger is a very bad thing. It is a weed that, if left to grow, will soon crowd everything that is good out of the heart. Pull it up, boys; pull it up, and throw it away. It is worse than worthless. Plant love in its place, and be diligent to cultivate it all you can. When it is growing well, the fruit will be words of kindness and deeds of love to all. There is nothing but love in heaven. Love the Lord with all your heart, and your neighbor as yourself, and that happy place will be your home.—Youth's Instructor.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

A NEGLECTED DUTY.

Despite frequent homilies addressed by anxious parents to heedless children on the subject of health, and the increased attention given to health laws in these latter days, it is rare to find a person who looks upon the care of the body as a religious duty. As a matter of prudence, affecting only personal comfort, the preservation of physical vigor receives a certain reluctant recognition; but most people, indeed most christians, never regard even wilful neglect and exposure as sins, but, at the worst, as mistakes for which those who make them are accountable neither to God nor man. Their argument is, "May not one do what he will with his own? and if he chooses to risk health and take the possible suffering, who has a right to object?"

"Each man for himself," and "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die"—these mottoes of selfishness and infidelity are unconsciously made the basis of this fallacy. But christians who have learned the true meaning and worth of life, ought to remember that a man is successful according to that which he can get out of it, and that present pleasure is dearly bought at the sacrifice of future usefulness. Even on grounds of self-seeking, we ought to deny ourselves many indulgences, and eat, drink, sleep, and exercise, in such manner and under such conditions as may promote our physical welfare. But christian duty has still higher and broader claims, and bids us train our bodies to such habits and protect them by such care as may enable us to expend strength upon others, and do the Lord's work effectively for the longest possible period. Moreover, the greediness which exposes health in order to seize present gratification, as if the Lord's storehouse and promise were worth less than man's own right hand, shows lack of faith. He who consciously overworks, discounting time and strength and opportunity, so far despairs of that which remains to the people of God.

There is urgent need of a more systematic enforcement by the pulpit and the press, and by christians in every walk and relation of life, of the duty of preserving and attaining health. It is not common, it is almost unprecedented, to hear a sermon on this homely, practical subject. But the right care of tools is as much a necessity as the right use of them. . . . And it is not enough to avoid exposure; we ought to strengthen the native constitution by a continuous, methodical, intelligent application of all established hygienic laws. Christ should dwell in the mortal body, and we should honor the divine tenant by keeping it in good repair.—Christian at Work.

SUNLIGHT.

One of the primary causes of sickness, suffering, and premature death, is the exclusion of sunlight. Sunlight is necessary to the health of mankind; it is necessary to the health of every kind of animal which exists on the face of the earth. It is also necessary to the health of all the plants, flowers, and trees, that live in the fields and forest.

Any lady who keeps house-plants knows enough to keep them where they will get the benefit of sunlight. You may look at the lillies, roses, pinks, and dahlias, of your flower garden, and you will notice they all have beautiful colors. You may rear these same flowers in places where the sunlight is entirely excluded and keep them in the dark, or supply them with artificial light only, such as candles, lamps, and gaslight, and you will find they will not have that pure, brilliant color which nature designed they should have. The same is true of men, women and children, if they are deprived of sunlight. Demonstrations of this fact may be seen in your fashionable parlors, where women and children spend most of their time, and the windows are kept blinded to keep out the sunlight for fear it might injure the carpet.

Some people do not know what a nice thing sunlight is. It is composed of seven different colors, so nicely blended together as to make one grand, sublime, beautiful substance which we call sunlight.

These seven different colors may be seen separated by the solar spectrum, and may also be observed separted in the beatiful rainbow, as it stretches its arch across the eastern skies. I believe the influence of sunlight helps give color to the blood.—Health Reformer.

THE USE OF FRUIT.—We think as a general rule, fruits are best adapted to people who reside where they grow. The belt of country in which the cherry, strawberry and apple flourish best is the one in which they should chiefly be eaten. The country of the grape, peach, apricot and plum is the one where the products should be used. So of the orange, lemon, pine-apple, and banana. Oranges, pineapples and bananas are rarely fit to eat as far north as Richmond, Va., as they must be picked before they are ripe and transported to their place of consumption. And they bebome wilted by heat and sweating, and often become partially decayed or soured before they are eaten. Fruits if properly canned could be carried north or south and reach the eater in a fresh and normal condition. Pears, it is claimed, are nowhere better in America than in the vicinity of Boston. In California they grow to be very large, but, it is said, lack the fine flavor of eastern fruit. New England and Northern New York apples are finer than they are in the south-west, not so large, but of finer texture and richer flavor. The Rhode Island Greening apple in New England will keep nicely six months from the time of picking. In the south and west the same variety grows larger, but does not keep nearly so long.—Science of Health.

THE SIN-BEARER.

"He was wounded for our transgressions; he was bruised for our iniquities."—Isa. 53: 5.

Thy works, not mine, O Christ,
Speak gladness to this heart;
They tell me all is done,
They bid my fear depart.

Thy wounds, not mine, O Christ,
Can heal my bruised soul;
Thy stripes, not mine, contain
The balm that makes me whole.

Thy cross, not mine, O Christ,
Has borne the awful load
Of sins that none in heaven
Or earth could bear, but God.

Thy righteousness, O Christ,
Alone can cover me;
No righteousness avails
Save that which is of thee.

Thy righteousness alone
Can clothe and beautify:
I wrap it round my soul—
In this I'll live and die.

REVIEW OF THE PAST.

L. BOUTELL.

In calling to remembrance the former days our Advent movement, many wonderful scenes, changes and events force themselves upon my mind. My first thought is this: Was the time due for the signs of the Lord's coming? Then they should be recognized as the fulfillment of Christ's words, be believed, and confessed with the mouth. This would be right, and nothing short of it would be. The sound of the Lord's coming was heard, and the signs recognized in the Scriptures of divine truth were given. The watchmen's lips, touched as with a live coal from off the altar, began to swell the soul-inspiring sound, "Behold He cometh," and the feet of him that bringeth good tidings were beautiful upon the mountains. Zion heard and was glad. This cry so sweet, so Biblical, bearing on the face of it its truthfulness, was hailed as the rising sun of a new era. The introduction of "this gospel of the kingdom" by the flying angel was a startling event. The overwhelming evidence of the Savior's soon coming aroused mightily the virgins, and soon was inaugurated a new religious feeling and interest. The power of God was wonderfully displayed in the conversion of men "from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." The tide rose higher and higher; our expectations became almost a reality till a disappointment; when to our sad surprise we were brought into a tarrying time—"And while the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept"; and we still are there. This is too visible to need any argument to prove it. And in this sleepy time much has been done that ought not to have been done, and much omitted that ought to have been done; but amid it all, a mighty work has been done for God and the truth. Man as he was, as he is, and as he will be after the resurrection from death to life, as taught by the holy Bible, has been a matter of solicitude and deep study by many; and the truth has been and still is being confessed by many able advocates. The word has had free course, and a mighty work has been wrought, and is rapidly going on, visibly seen and felt by christian denominations.

Now about the coming of our blessed Lord. Have the signs all disappeared? Nay, verily. Every succeeding year has only spoken more clearly and fully. Our hopes, although deferred, were well founded. The signs in the sun and moon, speaking immediately after a definite tribulation, mark our way. The judgment has set upon him that was to speak great words against the Most High, and wear out the saints of the Most High. The bloody passage of "time, times, and a half," is in the past. These, with a multitude of others, demonstrating the fulfillment of the word of God, all force the certain conclusion that we have come over the right way, and shall realize our most sanguine hopes. The railroad chariots running like the lightning, and looking like flaming torches, have been seen in this day of God's "preparation." In eighteen hundred twenty-five they were the wonder of the age. Paul's last-day apostasy has come in spite of all the efforts of Christendom to evangelize and convert the world. The signs, like the putting forth of the leaves that show summer is near, and which spoke to us in unmistakable tones in our early history, speak louder every successive year. The sands in the prophetic glass have almost run out. Earth's symbolic history is in the past; and whether we reckon from analogy, or stubborn facts truthfully illustrated, every intelligent consideration crowds the certainty upon us that some tremendous, startling event is coming. The increase of wickedness, in all its prolific sources and hideous forms, marks the waning progress of the age. And with it all, blindness seems to be so contagious that the multitude think this the golden age, when in fact it is only ripening the tares for their merited reward—everlasting destruction.

Then in view of these truth-telling events, we cannot be mistaken as to our whereabouts, or to what is coming. We have not followed cunningly devised fables, nor any other fables. The Lord himself is soon to descend from heaven. The shout will be heard. There will be a trembling among the rejectors of this sweet message. Many horror-stricken ones will call upon the Lord, but it will be too late. They will wish they could be placed beside that reproach-bearing company of lovers of Jesus and his soon coming. Full of joy, they are responding, "Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him"; while the others will be calling for rocks and mountains to fall on them to hide them. O dreadful day! No where to flee! He who was full of love and pity called after them, but his love and mercy they rejected. His dear name they hated, his mercy they refused, and now it is too late! Mercy is gone, they are lost forever. Not so with the righteous. They have lived a life of self-denial for Jesus' sake. They were chosen out of the world, separated from it by an impassable gulf; being "bought with a price," they are not their own, but belong to Him who bought them. They had been looking for the return of the Nobleman from a far country. They had been waiting long, and nothing could induce them to give it up. Their long-looked-for time has come. The same Jesus has appeared in the heavens. They hail him with joy. Long-expected day, but it has come, and they all shout, "O hail! happy day."

Now, in coming over this thirty-years pilgrimage, our experience is a safeguard of the utmost importance. The Lord has verified his faithfulness all the way through the wilderness. Some have fallen by the way. Many, because of murmuring, have been bitten by the fiery serpents, and died because they would not look to the brazen serpent. Others have wished they had been left back in Egypt, rather than to be brought into such straits. Many of the Aarons have fallen asleep in Jesus, while faithfully responding to our Moses, whose word has ever been—"Stand still, and see the salvation of God"; or else, "Rise, and go forward." The way is a narrow one, but now we are down to the Red Sea. Some hesitancy prevails. What shall we do? Up, and onward, is the answer. To go back is perdition. Before us is eternal life. We have nought to fear. Israel's God speaks, and I hope we shall unitedly hear and move forward in the name of Him who has led us thus far, and soon we shall pass over Jordan, dry shod, and sing the song of deliverance in the land of promise,—"Home at last! home at last!"

CHRIST COMING IN HIS KINGDOM.

JAS. H. BROWN.

"Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom."—Matt. 16: 28.

What did Jesus mean when he uttered these words? Did he, as is commonly asserted, mean that some who were there should not die till a spiritual kingdom should be set up on the day of Pentecost? I do not see how the words of our Savior can possibly be so construed. Look at the language,—"till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom." Is not this declaration of Christ as positive as any in the Scriptures that it is the "Lord himself" who will come, and who will "judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom"? "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory; . . . then shall the king say . . . inherit the kingdom." Did they see the "Son of man coming," "the Lord himself" descending on the day of Pentecost, to "judge the quick and the dead?" Did he "come in his glory" and with "all the holy angels," and "reward every man"? Yet he declares in the text that it is the "Son of man coming in his kingdom."

But you say, Christ also said, "There be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see;" and if the kingdom is yet future, as the apostles are now dead, how could these words be fufilled? Although men could not see, and therefore have concluded that the kingdom came on the day of Pentecost, yet the Lord in his word has shown us just what he meant, how it was then fulfilled, and that the kingdom is yet future.

Now let us look at this utterance of Jesus in connection with the associated incidents. Jesus began to show his disciples that he must suffer many things and be killed. Peter rebuked him and said—"Be it far from thee, Lord; this shall not be unto thee." But Jesus told him and the other disciples that what he said was not of God, but was Satan's way, and that if any man would come after him, it would be a way of suffering and death. He must take up his cross, deny himself, and even be ready to lose his life for his sake; although Satan would say otherwise; and if he so lost his life, he should find it again when "the Son of man shall come." But if any one saved his life by denying Christ, and even gained "the whole world," yet what is the "profit" or advantage? for he shall lose it. Then Jesus tells them when this should be; for he immediately adds, and connects it by a "for"—"for the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works." v. 27. Then come the words of the text. Now from the connection, it is plain that whatever "coming" verse 27 refers to, the same "coming" and "kingdom" is referred to in verse 28. But as verse 27 manifestly refers to the future second coming of Christ, "with his angels," to "reward every man," it follows that verse twenty-eight refers to the same coming.

But the question still comes up, the apostles are dead, and Christ has not come; yet he said he would come before some of them died. How is this? Let us look a little further. We read on. "And after six days, Jesus taketh Peter, James and John . . . into a high mountain, . . . and was transfigured." Read the rest of the account, and then turn and see what Peter, one of the "eye-witnesess," says about it in 2 Pet. 1: 16–20. "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory: This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount." Read the remainder, and then compare with the account of the transfiguration. Peter is speaking of the future coming of Christ, and he says it is not a cunningly devised fable. Why? I have seen Christ coming in "glory." Jesus told us some of us should. I have seen his "power" and majesty, and heard the "voice," and this was when we were with him in the holy mount. But how is this, Peter, the coming of Christ future, and yet you say you saw it? O yes, it is future, for "take heed" to prophecy, "until the day dawn, and the day star arise;" but nevertheless, we saw this coming in a vision; for Jesus said to us when we came down from the mount—"Tell the vision to no man until the Son of man be risen again from the dead." The vision is sure. Christ is coming again, and we now preach and make known to you, by that vision of his coming, that he will surely come again in glory to reward his people.

Such we gather to be the apostle Peter's understanding of the vision. Thus we see that Peter did not die till he had seen Christ coming in his kingdom; and yet what he saw was only a vision, picture, type, or shadow of the literal, real coming; and this reality is yet in the future. As Moses, the then dead saint, "appeared in glory," so will the now dead but then resurrected saints appear also, when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first"; and as Elijah, the translated saint appeared, so "we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them, in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air"; "for we shall not all sleep." Then Christ comes in "glory," the saints appear in glory, having bodies "fashioned like unto his glorious body," talk with Jesus about "his decease," singing "a new song, saying, thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." God is "well pleased" in his "beloved Son," who hath reconciled "all things unto himself," even "through the blood of the cross."

A few thoughts more. As Moses represented the dead saints, and they are to appear in the kingdom by a resurrection, if Moses was really in the mount, he was there by a resurrection from the dead; but if he was not really there, as there was no necessity of his being (as it was a vision); still, when he does appear in glory, it will be by a resurrection; therefore, so far as being proof that the soul is conscious and active in death, the plain inference is, that the real man is dependent on a resurrection in order to be in "glory."

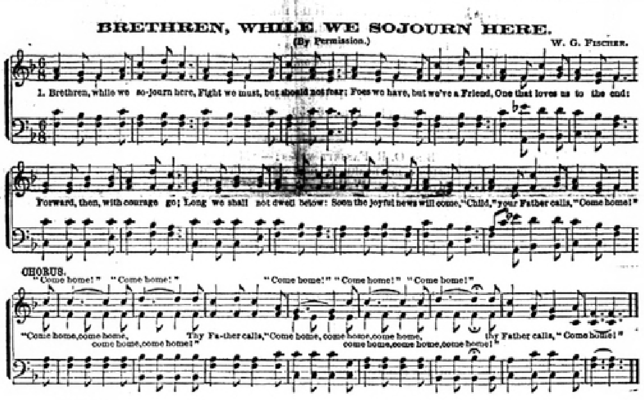
Finally, lose thy life for Christ, if need be; give all for him, and he will reward thee when he comes in his glory. Amen.

Littleton, Mass.

Effort and Success.—Let us look unto Jesus, and not to the apparent success of our efforts. Apparent success is not always the measure of real success; and, besides, God has not enjoined success upon us, but only labor. He will ask an account of our labor, but not of our success. Why, then, should we be too much concerned about it? We must sow the seed, God will gather the fruit; if not to-day, it will be to-morrow; if not for us, it will be for others. Even if success were to be granted us, it would always be dangerous to look complacently upon it. On the one hand, we are tempted to claim for ourselves some of the glory; on the other, we are too prone to slacken our zeal when we cease to see good results arising from it; that is, at the very time when we ought to put forth double energy. To look at our success, is to walk by sight; to look unto Jesus, and to persevere in following and in serving him, despite all discouragements, is to walk by faith.—Rev. A. Monod.

BRETHREN, WHILE WE SOJOURN HERE.

(By Permission.) W. G. Fischer.



2. In the way a thousand snares
Lie to take us unawares;
Satan, with malicious art,
Watches each unguarded heart.
But from Satan's malice free,
Saints shall soon in glory be;
Soon the joyful news will come,
"Child," your Father calls, "Come home!"
Chorus.

3. But of all the foes we meet,
None so oft mislead our feet,
Nor betray us into sin,
Like the foes that dwell within.
Yet let nothing spoil your peace,
Christ shall also conquer these;
Soon the joyful news will come,
"Child," your Father calls, "Come home!"
Chorus.

GRUDGING.

S. MATHEWSON.

"Grudge not one against another, brethren, lest ye be condemned; behold, the Judge standeth before the door."—Jas. 5: 9.

He who inspired this sacred mandate well understood the necessity of such an injunction, and has seen fit to fix its chronology beyond any manner of doubt. The third verse of this chapter shows the subject matter pertains to the last days; and the seventh and eighth verses evince yet more plainly that it is when "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," that the brethren of this inspired apostle are to beware of grudging one against another.

According to the Scriptures, and the best lexicographers, grudging is murmuring, grumbling, complaining, envying, coveting. The tenor of this solemn injunction, with its chronology, causes us to infer there will be an unusual propensity in this direction, when the "Judge standeth before the door," or the Lord would not have given this imperative caution to the brethren of this inspired apostle.

It may be inquired, Why is there more danger of this evil where the chronology of this text exists, than ever before under the Christian dispensation? I answer, according to many scriptures found both in the Old and New Testaments, those who go out to meet the Bridegroom and continue to wait for his coming and kingdom are a disappointed people. Disappointment in temporal blessings for which we have long wished and labored often produces great depression, and sad results upon the whole being. The more our heart's affections are wrapped up in the object for which we hoped, the more poignant the disappointment will be felt. The multitudinous suicides recorded in our public prints for the last few years are mostly the results of disappointed hopes. The objects have been multifarious; sometimes unrequited love; in others, emulation for office, but oftener financial disappointments. These are small matters to produce such entire discomfiture; but they were the objects of the heart's dearest affections, hence, to be foiled and defeated in what was dearest to them, robbed them of that which was dearer than life. Had they been disappointed in a matter of secondary moment, the results would have been less disastrous.

Now half (to say the least) of those who went out to meet the Bridegroom had given him their heart's best affections, while He more than reciprocated the same, so that their whole being lived and moved in and through this divine affection, so deep, so high, so rich, that only those who have experienced it can understand it. According to the best light emanating from the prophetic numbers, they expected the Bridegroom to return and take them to himself 2300 years from the time of "the going forth of the commandment to restore and build Jerusalem." But he tarried; and they looked and found it written, If he tarry, wait for him, for he will surely come. Thus assured, they did not despair. The blessed promise stayed them from rashness; but this delay of their dearest and most affectionate interest is often keenly felt, especially when goaded by their enemies; and unless they rest on the Almighty arm, they are sometimes restive and restless, like the Israelites in their journeyings, and are in danger of getting a grudge against some one whom they fancy is better off than themselves.

The church that came out of Egypt occupied a different position from others; so also that church which is waiting for the speedy coming and kingdom of Christ; hence, our crosses differ, or increase in some directions. Inspiration compares the church which lives near the end of the world to the Israelitish one while journeying in the wilderness, and plainly tells us the history of the latter was given for the benefit of the former; that the church near the end of the world, with these examples before them, may beware, and avoid the causes of falling, after having come out and fully identified themselves with the cause. 1 Cor. 10. The church near the end is surrounded with an atmospheric disquietude such as the world never experienced before, of which those who read the public prints must be fully aware. Such extravagant determinations for wealth, at all hazards; such catering for official emoluments; such manifestations of pride and arrogance in various directions, never environed the church before.

And the breathing of this malaria induces disease deadening in its effects, and corrupting every sensibility of the moral nature; and the only true and successful antidote is keeping a clear and close communication with God in prayer, and the memory constantly refreshed from the word of God. Murmuring or grudging was the chief manifestation of the sins of the Israelitish church. Instead of gratefully recounting the great mercies they possessed, they fretfully recounted what they did not possess. Only a few weeks after their wonderful deliverance from Egypt, their miraculous passage through the Red Sea, "they tempted the Lord" with this doubtful inquiry, "saying, Is the Lord among us, or not?" They murmured on account of hunger, and when the Lord furnished them with such food as angels eat, they murmured because it was not sufficiently palatable. They murmured because of the crosses they must bear, and the disagreeableness of the way; as though the way to Canaan would be laid through a bed of roses. They murmured with a deep murmuring because of the great strength and power their enemies possessed, looking at their high stature, instead of remembering the power God had promised to invest in them, if they would only hearken and obey his voice, trusting where they could not trace. Many of them envied Moses because of his position as a leader, and came to the conclusion they could lead about as well. And this was no small matter of a few odds and ends of the congregation, that made this complaint, but "two hundred and fifty princes of the assembly, famous in the congregation, men of renown," that gathered themselves together and raised the siege against Moses and Aaron. They defiantly told them they arrogated too much to themselves, and gave them signally to understand the rest—that is, the whole congregation—were every way their equals. Moses took the right course in disposing of the matter. He carried it to God in prayer, and he adjusted the difficulty in such a manner as seemed to quiet this grudging on account of position or office.

Excessive longings for official emolument, in church and state, probably beget the most dire grudging of any one object at the present time. This feature now stands out in bold relief in the present political excitement; and with regret it is discerned that this pestilential miasma effects the church. Church members hanker for prominence and power, and while thus affected do not see their danger. But unless this disease is eradicated from the system, it will end in death. It is sometimes well to read the history of Absalom and his tragic end. He was a talented man, and as to personal appearance, none could vie with him in all Israel. He understood court life, and how to rule (as he thought), and he sorely longed for a higher office, and thus he exclaims: "O that I were made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and I would do him justice! And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and took him, and kissed him." After enduring secondary honors a few years, he commenced the tirade of wresting from the throne one whom God had placed there. David, with all his devotion, had some errors, but he repented, and it was a fearful undertaking to seek the overthrow of one whom God approved. Thus it will be with all. Blinded by the burning thirst for power, perhaps Absalom really thought he could do better, and exert a greater influence for Israel, than David. He was conscious of possessing ability, but the wisest men with unwise counselors often fail. Had he only faithfully counseled with the Lord in the matter, all would have been well. So with all.

Will not these examples, with those pertaining to the church in the wilderness, be sufficient to reprove and admonish us against discontent, murmuring, or grudging against any? Notwithstanding their defects, the Lord had a most tender regard for the church that came out of Egypt. He blotted out the nation that fought them, and he blessed those who sometimes met with and showed them kindness. Look at Jethro. Witness his rejoicings and holy triumph at the rehearsal of God's power manifested to Israel. Listen to his tender and judicious counsel in obviating their difficulties. And did not God bless him and tenderly gather his out from those he was about to chasten? Has not this peculiar feature manifested itself relative to those who are truly waiting for the coming and kingdom of Christ? How many who have attacked this class have been entirely overthrown, dried, and plucked up by the roots? I verily believe those who have thrown their whole being into this cause are, to God, like the apple of his eye; but they are yet mortal, and therefore liable to depart from the "new commandment." Heaven save us from such a departure, that we may enjoy a heavenly greeting on the bright shore of immortality, is the prayer of your sister.

Please read the opinion of another on this subject:—

"Old Grudges.—A writer in the Congregational Journal says: 'I take this opportunity to say that, according to my acquaintance and prayerful observation of many of our feeble churches, the greatest cause of decline and of the withholding of God's blessing, are old grudges among the brethren and sisters, and a destitution of family religion. Old grudges are like old ulcers within the body, unseen except in their effects, wasting away the moral and spiritual life of man, and imparting to it an effluvium that poisons the whole atmosphere of Zion. Those who harbor them never act in character as christians, for they are always under a more potent influence than that which proceeds from the love of Christ and his cause, yet they take no open stand on the side of the world.'"

THE PRESENT AGE.

JOHN TAYLOR.

If there ever was a time more distinguished than another for the fulfillment of prophecy, pertaining to the state of the world, at the coming of Christ, it surely must be this age. A few instances out of hundreds will be sufficient to prove it. Among the many signs that will stand out in bold relief, when the judgment is next to come, or at hand, is that of the Revelator (11: 18)—"And the nations were angry, and the time of the dead that they should be judged." Now this is a plain, literal prophecy; and does not the present condition of the world correspond with it? There is hardly a nation but what is armed, or is arming to the teeth for the deadly conflict. We are living in the midst of "War's alarms." Said a notable member of the English government recently—"If the great was does not come in 1873, it will be in 1874." And many eminent men think that the last great battle may take place at any time.

Said the Pope in a late address—"We are walking upon an uncertain element. Our feet are sinking. It is not the north wind, but the wind of hell. We are infested with infernal winds." The reason is given by the Revelator, who says—"Woe to the inhabiters of the earth, and of the sea, for the devil is come down unto you having great wrath; because he knoweth that he hath but a short time." There are many passages which show that Satanic influences will govern mankind. That the present age is in the above prophetic condition, is evident from the following extracts:—The Tribune of July 3d, 1872, on the peace congress, now sitting in England, says—"The military expenses of European powers is five hundred millions of dollars, while it is proposed to spend twenty-one thousand dollars for peace purposes. . . . Six millions of men are confronting each other with guns loaded and matches lighted, all over Europe. . . . To match these, the reformers have twelve men distributing tracts." Elihu Burritt recently stated that last year, 1871, the United States paid $5.00 (five hundred cents) for taxes imposed in consequence of war, for every cent raised to carry on the great religious enterprises of the age. That eighty-five per cent. of the yearly income of Great Britain is expended in the payment of war taxes." See Somerset Reporter of June 4th, 1872. Five hundred per cent. spent in consequence of war, to one for peace, or religious purposes! The English government has just cast, or finished, thirteen cannon of thirty-five tons weight each, throwing six hundred pound balls, seven miles. These things do not show a healthy sign of a thousand years of peace for the world.

The Christian Union of June 21st, 1871, says—"The horizon appears dark with threats of endless wars still to come." Another characteristic sign of the last days is, that it was to be like the days of Noah, when the world was drowned for its wickedness; it was to be like the days of Sodom, which was destroyed by fire for its iniquity. Was there ever an age, in which crime moved with the swiftness of lightning as in this age? Take New York and London as examples, and they are not the worst cities either, as I can prove by statistics. Harper for March 1871 says: "In New York City, for 1871, there were 1,314 violent deaths, and 126 infants found dead in the streets." In the city of London, in 1871, there were one hundred and fifty-one murders. And in one column only of a Maine journal (Lewiston Journal), I counted seventeen murders recorded. Such a state of things is not to be wondered at, when we find men highest in the ranks of society, winking at, and indulging in, immorality. The Grand Duke Alexis, accompanied by his staff, and by the Governor of Cuba, attended a cock fight during the day, and at night a ball was given him at the palace, on Sunday.

Now turn our eyes to missionary England. The Parliament of England adjourned twenty-four hours in order to witness horse-racing, for the Derby stakes. Mr. Hughes objected. He thought that government ought not to encourage horse-racing, as it was the most corrupt system of gambling which ever disgraced any country. The government only adjourned two hours to celebrate the ascension of Christ, and twenty-four to patronize horse-racing and gambling. His motion was met by irony and laughter. See Tribune of May 29th, 1872. Look at the contrast. Two hours only for religious purposes, and twenty-four for the world, the flesh, and the devil. Truly it is a hard chance for the conversion of the world to Christianity, as it is preached by some. The fact is, we do not wish to have this man (Christ) to reign over us; to be subject to him. The last spring, a deputy in the assembly of France proposed to erect a temple to Jesus Christ, as testimony to a belief in God, as necessary for the national regeneration of France. The motion was rejected. See Portland Transcript of March 16th, 1872.

And how is it, about having the word of God in our Constitution (of U. S.) introduced as an amendment? Says the Christian of Feb. 7th, 1872, in an editorial—"There is not the slightest chance that the amendment will ever be adopted." If the professed church of God would live up to their privileges, and not scoff so much at sacred things; or if the Scriptures were more studied than they are, we should not have such a lax state of things. The following blasphemous scene took place in Meridan, Conn., last spring. A reverend gentleman of that place celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his marriage, in the chapel. As they entered, the choir sang, "The Bridegroom cometh," after which, as they stood up to go through the marriage service, another reverend gentleman recited a poem, commencing with—

"Now, Bro. S., the young folks here
Desire a little fun, sir,
So if you please,
Just stand at ease,
And show them how 'tis done, sir."

For names etc., see Gospel Banner of Feb. 24th, 1872.

Another item of scoffing, is from the Portland Transcript of May 4th, 1872, in a book notice of Dr. Cumming's last work, "The 7th Vial." It says—"The book would lead us to think, that the end of all things is at hand, so dire is the commotion. Much is made of the dethronement of the Pope, of course; but we do not find that the Alabama claims were specially alluded to in the book of Revelation, which must have been an oversight, either on the part of St. John, or of Dr. Cumming." Thus it is, if any one attempts to give faithful warning, he is ridiculed. The Jewish Messenger, in an article on the study of the Scriptures, says, "At no time in our history, has there been a period when so strong necessity existed for inculcating that study, as to-day. In olden times, the study of the Bible, by young and old, was general; now, it is the exception, not the rule." Hence the decay of Christianity. The Watchman and Reflector, of last spring, in an editorial on the Decline of Anniversaries, says—"Nobody wants them, nobody invites them. They were a blessing once; now they are a burden. It is hard work to get invited. . . . Shall they be abandoned altogether? Anniversaries have had their day, and now they are dying of slow decay. I doubt if an anniversary held for the past five years has really benefited the cause it represented." Well may the church cry out—"Oh my leanness!" It is this laxity of the church, that is intensifying the atheistic spirit of the age; that is destroying the life of the church. Well may the Reformed Presbyterian church adopt the report, "that the abounding immorality, and wickedness, with the growth and prevalence of infidelity, were a sufficient cause for fasting." They further said—"It no longer appears in the coarse, vulgar, and disgusting mein of the past; but it comes encompassed with the dignity of science; and arrayed in the garniture of a polished and enchanting literature, or in the sacred garb of religion." On this point, H. W. Beecher says—"That the science of our age is intensely skeptical. . . . The question of the day is whether there is any religion at all, or any God whatsoever." Thus fulfilling another Scripture—"When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" implying that there shall be little faith at that time.

Says the Christian Union, of Jan. 10th, 1872, on this subject—"One thing, however, is clear; that the atheistic element has very great power in Christendom, and is preparing for a conflict more fearful than most christians anticipate." This state of things is not to be wondered at, when we think how much of infidelity has entered the churches. Out of eighty-three cardinals of the present age, only three perhaps really believed in the divine origin of Christianity; so says a veteran diplomatist at the Papal court. Such is the state of society to-day, with no better hope for the future, our only hope being in the coming of the Just One. May we discern the signs of this age, and profit thereby.

TIME IS SHORT.

"But this I say, brethren," "the time is short."—1 Cor. 7: 29.

Bro. Grant:—The above quotation has been on my mind for a few days past, and in consequence these few thoughts are called out. Do we realize what the words imply? Do we believe them? Do they carry conviction, and lead us to do all things to the glory of God? But it may be asked, What time is short? First, the time to get ready to meet the heavenly Bridegroom. Dear friends, Jesus is about ready to descend from the skies. Are we prepared? Shall we hail his coming with joy, or shall we need a little more time to get the wedding garment on? In view of these things, let us not "be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." Again, the time is short to consecrate, yes, re-consecrate ourselves, our all to the service of the true and living God. Have we kept back anything? Are we fully the Lord's? time, talents, reputation, money, our lives, if need be? Can we say from the heart, "My all to Christ is given"? Do we feel as though the Lord was well pleased with the way in which we are using this little remnant of time? The night is nearly past, the day is about to dawn. Brethren and sisters, let us double our diligence, that we may be found worthy of the "well done," when Jesus comes. C. N. Morgan.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

In the various churches, an increasing interest is felt in the signs of the times, the prophetic Scriptures, and the general evidences which show that Christ is about to return to this planet. The Spirit of God is impressing them that we are truly in the last days. Many who have not heard a sermon, or read a book on the subject, are convinced, by the teaching of the Spirit, that the end of this dispensation is at hand. But to those who have carefully examined the great prophetic chart, as presented by Daniel and John, and compared it with the history of the last twenty-five hundred years, the evidence is overwhelming to show that in a short time Christ will appear to set up his kingdom. We can see no room for doubt. Our own mind is most fully settled on this subject. We never before felt so perfectly satisfied that we are right in proclaiming the speedy coming of our dear Savior. We do not see any chance for any other conclusion.

In harmony with the prophecy of Daniel, the great empire of Babylon closed up in the days of Cyrus, the Persian, about 491 B. C., as is shown by the most reliable chronology, in harmony with the Bible. The Medo-Persian empire, which was to succeed the Babylonian, ended when Alexander the Great conquered the Medes and Persians, about 392 B. C. The Grecian was to be succeeded by a noted kingdom, of great extent and power. Though this fourth one is not called by name in the Bible, yet it is so minutely described, we think it is certain that it is the Roman. Its first Emperor was Augustus Cæsar, who began to reign 31 B. C. That we have entered this empire in the world's history, will not be disputed. After a series of years, the fourth kingdom was to be divided into ten parts, as declared by Daniel. This took place in the fifth and sixth centuries, when the barbarous tribes in the north of Europe broke up the Roman empire into ten pieces, as symbolized by the ten horns on Daniel's fourth beast. He says: "The ten horns out of this [fourth] kingdom are ten kings that shall arise, and another shall arise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings." The Septuagint reads: "Its ten horns denote that ten kingdoms shall be raised up, which shall exceed in evils all those before, and shall humble three kings, and shall speak great words against the Most High, and wear out the holy ones of the Most High, and think of changing times and laws, and this shall be put in its power for a time and times and half a time. When the court hath sat, they will change this government to abolish and destroy it utterly." These horns are all on the fourth beast, which represents the fourth kingdom; hence they symbolize parts of that kingdom, and no other. This closing prophecy concerning fragments of this fourth kingdom, especially the part represented by the "little horn" that subdued three of the first ten, reaches to the coming of Christ.

Where are we in the history of this Roman power? But one true answer can be given: The "little horn" has arisen, plucked up three of the first ten; received and exercised the controlling power over Europe for more than a thousand years; during which time it wore out the saints of the Most High, and put them to death by the million; but now its dominion is taken away, as Daniel declared. This was done when the Italians entered Rome, Sept. 20th, 1870. We have thus passed down the stream of time for a period of twenty-five hundred years, till we have reached the last jots and tittles on the prophetic chart. We can see no way to avoid this conclusion. The next great event is the coming of the King of kings.

Turning from this infallible chain of prophecy, and taking a look over the earth, comparing its moral, social, religious, and political condition, with the description of the last days, as given by Christ and the apostles, we find the evidence is so clear that Christ is coming within a brief period, that it amounts almost to demonstration. He is coming, he is coming! Tell it to every body. Dear, lonely pilgrim, lift up your head and rejoice. Your redemption is near. Do not look back now, but press forward with new zeal. Put on thy bridal robe, and be ready for translation.

Seeing, as we do, that the coming of Jesus is just at the door, we feel specially anxious that all the waiting ones should be "pure in heart." The subject of holiness should be a prominent theme in all our meetings. The only chance now for a failure, is in not being "ready." "They that were ready went in with Him to the marriage, and the door was shut." Let each inquire, Am I ready?

This is a solemn hour in which we are living. We are almost to the time when it will be decided who will live forever, and who "shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Among the latter class the Bible enumerates adulterers, fornicators, thieves, drunkards, covetous, revilers, extortioners, backbiters, busy-bodies, deceivers; those who have "hatred," "variance," "pride," "lasciviousness," "wrath," "strife," "envyings," "revelings," and such like. When the heart is pure, all these evil things are removed, and in their place is the Holy Spirit, that enables us to love God with all the heart. Let there be a careful heart-examination to see if any of these evil things remain. There is provision made for our complete cleansing, so that every spot of sin may be removed. If this is not done, it will be our own fault. Let there be no delay. Soon it will be too late. Put all on the altar at once—now, to-day. Do not hesitate. Eternal life is at stake; also the kingdom, with all its glory and beauty; the society of the redeemed, and the loved ones sleeping in Jesus; fathers, mothers, husbands, wives, and dear little children. O what a "blessed hope" is ours! Shall all this be given up to gratify the lusts of the flesh, the love of the world, and the pride of life? No! no. Let us give all to Jesus, now and for ever. Let there be no reserve whatever. Make clean work. Then the Lord will fill us with perfect peace and love, and cause us to feel down deep in the heart like saying, "Come, Lord Jesus," "come quickly."

HOW TO ENJOY A CAMPMEETING.

Many get very little or no benefit from campmeetings, because they do no know how to go to work to get the blessings that others receive. Whoever goes as a spectator must not expect to receive anything. Spectators are not the ones who have the wages. Those who go to campmeeting to look on, without taking any part, generally go home more barren than when they came. Such usually see all the bad things, hear all the unpleasant sounds, and go away very much dissatisfied. Those who enjoy campmeetings are the workers. It is a poor place for loungers. Their streams will dry up faster in the camp-ground than at home.

If you would get good from a campmeeting, seek some tent, where you are best suited, and take part in the prayer and conference meetings as soon as possible after you arrive on the ground. Do not forget this advice. After doing so, you will feel more at home. It is well to have some particular tent where you can go every day to attend the prayer and conference meetings. If you go from tent to tent, wandering about, you will not gain so rapidly. "A rolling stone gathers no moss."

LONG EXHORTATIONS AND PRAYERS.—These are often a great injury to the best interests of campmeetings. They have a killing influence on the life of the prayer and conference meetings. Many who attend have been in the habit of talking long in their neighborhood prayer-meetings, so as to fill up the time; and when they get to campmeeting, they talk longer, because they suppose there is plenty of time, and that others like to hear them as well as they like to talk. We have generally found these long prayers and talks special hindrances in the way of wholesome, healthy, interesting and profitable meetings. But as sure as any attempt is made to check these long, dry, prosy prayers and exhortations, the cry will be raised by some one—"Where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty." Yes, but it is not that kind of liberty which allows a few to eat up all on the table—eat till they are satiated—and keep the little hungry ones in a starving condition. The liberty given by the Spirit is quite different from that assumed by the long talkers. As for long prayers, they should be in the closet. No matter how long the time spent alone with Christ; but we have no Bible examples for long public prayers. We do hope for an improvement in these things in our campmeetings this year.

Be short, but talk and pray often. Avoid as far as possible any effort to say smart things, or make eloquent prayers. Throw off all dead formalism, and be free and easy. Be familiar and social, giving every one an opportunity to say a word. Let the first exhortation and prayer be short. Begin right. Endeavor to take some part in every prayer-meeting you attend. Talk half a dozen times, and be short, and it will do much more good than one long talk. There may be some exceptions, when a five minutes talk or prayer will be heard with interest; but they are not common. After about thirty years experience and observation, we are most fully satisfied that the short-range guns do the best execution.

A SAD PICTURE.

The state of things in many churches is becoming truly alarming. There is but little room to hope for any improvement in the mass of professors. The time has arrived when those who are real christians must come out from such things, and be separate, in order to continue in the favor of God. The following needs no comment:—

"A New Orleans correspondent draws a sad picture of the spiritual condition of the churches in New Orleans. He writes that St. Mark's Protestant Episcopal church, of which Rev. Mr. Morrison is pastor, have erected two large frame buildings on loaned ground on Charles and Soniat streets, to be used for dancing, concerts, dramatic entertainments and the like. The whole square is well lit with gas and bears the title of 'Idlewild.' Besides the dancing and the theatrical features of the affair, brandy, champagne, etc., have been among the attractions furnished by 'Idlewild,' in the interest of the church. The enterprise thus far has not been very successful either pecuniarily or in increasing the membership or congregation of the church. The correspondent adds that other churches adopt similar methods to maintain an existence, and that the most numerous and influential (?) denomination of Protestants in that city holds annually a festival by which to replenish its Mission School treasury, at which for several years past the most remunerative feature has been a so-called Jacob's Well, from which the fairest Rebeccas in the society have been selected to draw champagne punch for the exhilaration, and in some cases the actual intoxication of its patrons. Another seeks to replenish its treasury and gain additions to its society by getting up masked and fancy dress balls. And, to crown all, George Francis Train, from the stage of the St. Charles Theatre, on Sundays and week days, denounces and holds up to ridicule the Christian church and its enterprises to the delight of crowded houses. Comment is unnecessary.

"A UNIVERSAL STRIKE."

Signs indicate startling events a little distance in the future. Satan is stirring up the human race terribly, and preparing them for the final conflict against Christ and his truth. The evidence is strong that the "perilous times" of "the last days" are about to open with all their horrid results, spreading distress in all directions. The International Union of the laboring classes has assumed alarming proportions, and threatens the destruction of the present system of manufactures and commerce. They are determined not to rest till the experiment is made of repeating the French Revolution upon a grand, world-wide scale. We believe this is Satan's last rally before the coming of Christ. It is only carrying out the programme of the demoniacal spirits, who are the leaders in Spiritualism. The political and social results of this terrible system are about to be realized. Thank the Lord for a shield against all the fiery darts of the enemy. This is no time for sleeping. The closing scenes of the present dispensation are upon us. Let us keep on the watch-towers, looking for the signs of the coming One. We can almost hear the rumbling of his chariot wheels. Let all be ready, clothed with "the whole armor of God."

The following from a St. Louis correspondent of the Boston Globe will give some idea of what may be expected:—

"The agitation of the labor question here has brought to light a number of interesting facts concerning the intention of the workingmen in these preliminary strikes, and has enabled the capitalists to ascertain the probable future movements of the trades organizations. These movements are not merely local, but extend all over the country. Three distinct societies are doing their utmost to bring about an organization of all the workingmen in the nation, and are quietly but rapidly, so they claim, securing this end. These three propaganda societies are the 'National Eight Hour League,' the 'National Builders' Union,' and the 'International Workingmen's Association.' The Eight Hour League is the organization that attempted to direct the recent strike in New York and other cities at the East. It has four sections in St. Louis, and it is to their influence that the success of the strike of the plasterers and bricklayers is ascribed. The National Builders' Union is well organized and spread throughout the entire territory of the United States, while the International Workingmen's Association has branches in all cities of the country and boasts a membership of three hundred thousand workingmen in America alone. These three propaganda societies, although being separate organizations, co-operate with each other and secure concert of action through delegate meetings. . . . It is intended to extend each of the organizations until they embrace in their membership not only all journeymen in the different trades, but all laborers on railroads and other transportation lines, and on public works, and in fact, wherever men and women work for wages. In order, as far as possible, to prevent discord among the members from the influence of capitalists and politicians, none but wages laborers can become members of the League.

Every step in the movement is to be carefully considered, and premature strikes are to be discountenanced, as even slight failures at the outset will be disastrous to the movement. Funds sufficient to support the whole working class for two weeks are to be raised, as the battle against capital will not be fought in platoons as heretofore, with doubtful chances of success, but in one simultaneous strike in all the cities at the same time, thereby leaving the manufacturers the alternative either of making the concessions demanded, or to close their shops. In order to prevent the working classes from suffering from the latter evil, the National Eight Hour League advocates to all workingmen's and trades unions the founding of co-operative manufactories in all branches of industry in every city of the Union.

This, it is anticipated, will give constant employment to the unemployed, and in this manner decrease the competition for employment among the working classes, or in other words increase the demand for labor. These co-operative establishments are to employ only the best workmen, and when the anticipated general strike is carried out, are to be prepared to seize on the trade of the capitalists, who will then be helpless for want of working power, or when they do employ workmen, will have to pay such rates of wages that they cannot injure the co-operatives. The profits made by these co-operative societies are to be used only in increasing the business, or in bringing other co-operative branches of industry into existence to undermine the present system of capitalistic production, and ultimately govern the manufacturing interests of the country.

The intelligent workmen resent the imputation of politicians and stump speakers that the present state of ill-feeling and dissatisfaction among mechanics is the result of mismanagement of public affairs by the party in power. The labor movement, they claim, is not an affair of yesterday, to-day, or to-morrow. It has been gradually gathering strength for the last thirty years, and every year the immense strikes in Europe and America are warnings to the capitalists of the terrible storm that is coming."

THE CONDITION OF FRANCE.—A correspondent of the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, when speaking of the present state of things in France, and of a late change in the public sentiment, says:—

"Now you cannot wonder that this revolution of popular feeling has made people open their eyes very wide and look somewhat aghast. For what is the prospect it presents, instead of the agreeable future with the belief of which we have, as I began by saying, been lately flattering ourselves? Nothing less, apparently, than this: It shows us that we are once more standing very nearly in the position occupied by the country between '49 and '51, when a moderate republican National Assembly was still indeed in the possession of the government, but laboring under the sombre conviction that its days were hopelessly numbered and the vast majority of its members inevitably doomed, at the near election, to make way for 'red' candidates. It was just that position which enabled Louis Napoleon to frame and perpetuate successfully his coup d'etat, and slip in between the terror of the country and the advent of the 'reds.'"

YOUNG LADIES.—Do not fail of reading the article addressed to you, by Bro. A. A. Hoyt. It is excellent.

THE POPE.—Pius IX. is in a heap of troubles, and is much perplexed to find a way out of them. His sky is very dark, and his situation is causing him to become desperate. He is devising a big and daring scheme to regain his temporal power. The following shows his present condition and feelings:—

"We have letters from all parts of the world telling us that we have no other resource than to pray to God, because we have little to hope from men. To God, therefore, we pray. For my part I would wish to see the cause of justice and religion again triumph, that I might finish my days in peace and tranquility."

The foregoing is an extract from his remarks to the former members of the Pontifical police.

"PERFECT LOVE" is the title of a valuable work, by J. A. Wood, a minister of Christ. It is the best work we have read on the subject of entire consecration. We commend it to all who are anxious to keep unspotted from the world. It is a work every preacher should read. Price $1.50. For sale at this Office.

BRO. O. R. FASSETT writes:—"My eyes are better; my health is improved, with that of Mrs. Fassett. We have moved to Santa Clara. We supply the churches of San Francisco and Vallejo as formerly, and also intend to preach the gospel to other cities and towns also."

[Let all pray for Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Bro. and Sr. Reed, and Bro. and Sr. Mitson.

BRO. THOS. L. SCOTT, General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of New Orleans, La., writes:—"To-day I providentially got hold of a copy of your paper; and am free to say, although a member of the Baptist church in this city, your paper advocates just what the Bible has taught me for some time; in fact, ever since I began the study of it."

EXPERIMENTAL RELIGION.

While it is true that practical religion is a prerequisite to salvation, it is not true that practical religion alone will save men; for often practical religion exists independent of experimental religion, being only a result of the principle of morality, which leads men to refrain from crime, simply because it is prohibited, and to do good deeds simply because they are required; and all this can be done by unregenerated men. While this principle is not to be undervalued, there is another principle, of still greater value, which produces practical religion, or leads to a system of good works; we mean experimental religion, or a heart full of perfect love, divine peace, and heavenly joy, shed abroad by the Holy Spirit. This kind of religion will fill the heart with a relish to perform all that God requires at our hand; not on the principle of action to escape whipping, but on the principle of action to please one whom we ardently love; and no person can knowingly displease one for whom they have deep affection. Good works arising from this principle will commend us to God, just as in the case of Abraham, who was led by it to offer up his darling son. "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar?" James 2: 21. Here works, resulting from the principle of love, are said to justify; while elsewhere, in alluding to works which are merely the fruit of morality, we are told that we cannot be justified by works; that is, by works alone. Abraham was drawn by the cords of divine love to obey God, mingled with a trusting faith; and works springing from this principle commend us to God; but when men are simply driven by the legal whip to obey, they are doing works that can never bring justification. Divine love, which involves faith that trusts God, must be the mainspring of practical religion, or that religion is worthless; in other words, practical religion must be the fruit of experimental religion, instead of being the fruit of morality, in order to be the genuine article.

And there are different stages of experimental religion. While it is possible to retain the warmth of our "first love," it is also possible for us to "grow in grace;" to advance from the stage where we are recognized as "babes," to men and women in Christ; to leave "the first principles," and "go on unto perfection," as the scholar leaves the lower branches for higher attainments; and this advance can be made in the experimental as well as the theological department of religion. Let us not be content with the shallow waters, but plunge into the deep ocean of perfect love. W. S.

ELECTION EXCITEMENT.

Politicians are entering upon one of the warmest campaigns hitherto witnessed by this nation. Each party is intent upon the election of its chosen man, and both fair and foul means will be resorted to for the purpose of gaining the day. One party is sure Greeley's election will greatly improve the government, and the other party is sanguine that Grant will yet bring the nation into political sunshine, if allowed to stand at the head another four years. While it doubtless is true that no one can look long on two fighting dogs without feeling a choice as to which one he would have victorious; and while the same may be true in political matters, let every one refrain from drinking in the spirit of this contest. It is the spirit of this world, and cannot be mixed up with the Spirit of Christ, any more than oil and water can be mixed.

We do not insist that it is impossible for a man to keep himself free from this spirit of worldly strife, and still cast his vote for one of the candidates; but we do insist that the further we keep from the fire the less danger there will be of getting burnt; and it is not always wise to make the hazardous experiment of trying to see how much liquor a man can drink without getting drunk. The safest way is to let it alone. So while we are liable to get intoxicated with the political spirit, the safest way is to let it alone. Whether Greeley or Grant prove victorious in the coming contest, the reign of sin and death will run parallel with their administration. But we are looking for a better government than earth has ever witnessed—world-wide and eternal—under the supervision of the King of glory, who will wake up the saints of past ages, and with his more than magic power render them incapable of dying again, giving the vigor of blooming youth and endless life to living believers, making an end of sickness and sin through the length and breadth of the land, and filling the earth with glory. What are the best forms of human government in contrast with a kingdom of this nature? As we cannot serve God and mammon, neither can our affections be simultaneously placed upon the kingdom of God, and on a human government. In these times of excitement, keep an eye on the better kingdom, and the coming King to reign on David's throne. While human candidates are held high, let us hold Christ higher, and remember he is already elected, and will soon be inaugurated.

TOO GREAT A VARIETY.

It is often the case that in fighting error with truth, we attack too many branches of error at once, and present too many features of truth at once; thus keeping too great a variety before the people at once. By so doing we often labor in vain, for people must have time to digest and understand each theme separately. By filling the minds with too many things at once, none of them are fully comprehended, and consequently rejected. It is not wise to deal out truth faster than men can understand it; that is, we should make one feature of truth plain, before presenting another. In attacking error, instead of grouping all false doctrines together, and undertaking to sweep them all away at once, expose one feature at a time, and do it thoroughly, but always in a kind and winning spirit. Little by little we learn our lessons; and what we have learned wrong we must unlearn in the same way. "Line upon line, line upon line, precept upon precept, precept upon precept, here a little, and there a little," is the Lord's way. This plan is adapted to man as he is—short-sighted, and hard-hearted. The spread of truth and the abrogation of error is a progressive work, requiring correct and constant effort on our part. W. S.

INFRINGEMENT OF CÆSAR'S KINGDOM.

When the Jews made this charge against Christ before Pilate—"We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæsar, saying that he himself is Christ a King (Luke 23: 2); and when they said, "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend; whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Cæsar; . . . we have no king but Cæsar" (John 19: 12, 15), they understood that his kingdom, if established, would interfere with the reign of Cæsar, which idea would never have entered their heads if he had been several years preaching his kingdom over the skies. The friends of Christ also understood that he contemplated reigning on earth, instead of reigning in heaven; and getting impatient for him to begin his reign, they were ready to "take him by force, to make him a king." John 6: 15. Nor did this idea, that Jesus should reign on earth, expire when Jesus went to heaven. Paul preached, "This Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ"; that is, "is the Anointed"; and this led the Jews to charge Paul with preaching treason, or preaching "contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is another King, one Jesus" (Acts 17: 3, 7); and certainly Cæsar had issued no "decrees" against the reign of a King over the skies. Paul preached Jesus the Anointed One to reign on earth. This interfered with Cæsar's kingdom. W. S.

CHRISTIAN AFFINITY TESTED.

On the long recognized principle that "birds of a feather flock together," though on many occasions birds of a different feather may be seen interspersed; so in a time of moral declension, when the attending excitement or novelty has passed away from the prayer-meeting, and other scenes of an exciting and interesting nature to the carnal mind have succeeded in attracting the attention of those who once attended the prayer-meeting, leading them by the worldly element, affinity for pleasure, or popularity, to prefer other scenes to the house of prayer and praise; we know just where to find those who have a deep, heart-felt affinity for Christ and his cause: they will be found at the prayer-meeting. In time of high-water, when flood-wood floats with the current, multitudes may be found there. But when the water is low, is the time to find out who possesses true christian affinity. Those who, under these circumstances, minus of excitement, possess a constant relish for the prayer-meeting as a divine institution, and are always doing their duty, are the right class. A drouth tells which wells have the living water in them. W. S.

"LET US NOT SLEEP."

Why sleep in the most perilous part of our pilgrimage? Why sleep while the worst foes, intent on our ruin, are all awake? Satan is awake, and all his emissaries are awake, and improving every opportunity to ruin us, and "we are not ignorant of his devices;" but still the spirit of slumber steals over many hearts. How shall this be prevented? Is there a remedy? There is; but we fail to make the application. Divine "grace is sufficient;" and we know how to "find grace to help;" yet we do not ward off this sensation of slumber. Let us take a refreshing plunge into the waters of "perfect love," which will drive away all inclinations to slumber, and give us a hearty relish for the work devolving upon us. Then it will be a pleasure to watch and pray, and not an unwelcome task. Then it will be easy to keep awake. Let the heart be kept full of the Spirit, and the fruits of the Spirit, and there will be no room left for drowsiness. Let us not sleep so near the trump of God, which will soon awake all slumberers to meet their merited doom at the judgment seat of Christ. Our watching time is short; can we "not watch one hour?" Soon Jesus will say to the sleepers—"sleep on"—too late to awake. W. S.

SPIRITUALISM.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been thinking that I owed to you, if not to the church generally, some statement with regard to my course for the last two years. The causes which led me to investigate Spiritualism, and finally as a whole accept of it, I need not here stop to explain.

Now, to the subject of which I wish to speak—Spiritualism. What is it? First they talk a great deal about God. Many are caught with that bait; when, in fact, they don't believe in any God or ruler of the universe, and are notoriously blasphemous on that subject. They deny that man had any Creator. Darwin's theory is generally adopted. We find our origin in the soft, pulpy, crawling, slimy animals of the tropical regions, then up through reptiles, fishes, monkeys, and then man in a savage state. Cannot they show us something in animated nature, that is in the transition state, just merging into manhood? What a God-dishonoring doctrine, and how contemptible for even a thought! I repeat my words in the Winsted Herald more than a year since—"Thank God, I am out of it."

SPIRITS RETURNING TO EARTH.

A prominent lecturer stated in Camp's hall, in Winsted, that a spirit returned to Chicago, went into a house and called for food, and actually ate a hearty meal, and drank two cups of tea, and then told the people they could not communicate unless the lights were turned down and everything was still. A spirit could eat in Chicago, rattle the dishes, call for an extra cup of tea, traverse the streets at mid-day, and then cannot communicate except in a still, dark room. These are but few of the traps Satan has set to draw men away from God. I am heartily sick of the whole thing—disgusted.

Bro. Grant, if I have wounded your feelings in the past, I very much regret it. I know you will forgive. The Advent people are my people, and their God is my God.

West Winsted, Ct. LEWIS ANDREWS.

[BRO. ANDREWS, thank the Lord that you have got out of the swamp of Spiritualism. Sound the note of alarm to those who are being seduced by the lying demons who profess to be the spirits of our friends.—ED.

KANSAS JOTTINGS.

H. J. MUNSON.

Thursday, June 6th, I started to visit and labor with brethren scattered through different portions of the State. Stopped first in the southern part of Osage county, at Bro. Smith's, where I found quite a family of young people, nearly all in the "blessed hope." Bro. J. C. Smith I found to be a genial and earnest co-laborer in word and doctrine, but in very poor health; being only able to preach a part of the time. In this neighborhood, a little church was organized the day I arrived. Having remained several days and labored in this region, Bro. Smith kindly gave me the use of a pony to travel northward. I went just across the Kansas river, preaching the "gospel of the kingdom." I found brethren scattered here and there, who were glad to hear, and others who were willing to receive the "present truth." The Lord seems ready to bless the efforts made in this State; and we do feel that as the means are used agreeable to his will, all real christians will give attention to the truth, and study to know whether these things are so, concerning the gospel of the kingdom.

It is scarcely six months ago, that I first began to feel that the Lord's blessing specially attended my feeble efforts in this State. A State Association is organized for the purpose of uniting in one common union for general work, all who are interested in the coming of Christ. This association came into existence just about four months ago; and although we are generally poor here in Kansas, and have labored almost single-handed, and under many disadvantages, yet the Lord has blessed us, raising up friends and helpers in various parts of the State; many of whom, as yet, I have been entirely unable to visit, but hope to at some time.

A State Evangelist has been supported for a term of three months, and a "tent fund" of three hundred dollars is now subscribed and being received into the treasury. And just here I would say to those who have subscribed to this fund, that I have ordered the tent, which will be sent very soon, and it is desired to have the subscriptions sent in at once, that the work may go forward without hindrance. This fund has all been raised within the State, excepting about sixty dollars, which has been contributed by a few brethren east, to whom, in behalf of the association, I would here express our gratitude, and may the Lord's blessing attend such. We also thankfully acknowledge the receipt of several packages of tracts from the various offices; to wit: four packages from the Crisis office; two, one of tracts, one of papers, from the Times; one, of papers and tracts, from the German Repository.

We trust in the Lord to see a steady, growing interest and work in this State. While a goodly number have taken hold with true christian earnestness and self-sacrifice, it is hoped that all others in the State who love the blessed hope will feel a lively interest in this important work, and as fast as they learn of the existence of the association, become members of the same, by sending in their names, address, and at least the nominal, annual membership fee, which is one dollar. Donations of larger sums are earnestly solicited from all who have the cause at heart, and are not really too poor to give more. Remember, brethren, as our means increase, so will the magnitude of our general State work; so that, instead of our being able to support one evangelist, several may be bidden to go forth into the Master's vineyard in this State.

While we look upon the times as signally important, let us arouse ourselves and put on the whole armor, working while the day lasts. When the tent arrives, it will go into the field immediately as a State Mission Tent, under the Kansas Advent Christian Mission Association, to be pitched from time to time in such places as promise to give it the most hearty support, or where we may deem it likely to result in most good. Therefore we solicit friends throughout different parts of the State, who desire the tent pitched in their locality, to go to work at once with a will, and see what can be raised in support of the cause, with the consideration of having the tent pitched in their town or neighborhood, and make application as early as possible, that we may be able to make a well-directed campaign. Wherever there is a brother or sister, let them make an effort among their neighbors, and the people of the surrounding country, and see what can be done. Remember that people in Kansas will go often several miles to attend ordinary meetings, and would doubtless be more interested in one of this kind.

Brethren, if we trust in the Lord, and are not fearful and unbelieving, it is our faith and confidence that he will in future bless our efforts in this State, as he has in the past; and if we keep humble and wait upon him, far more abundantly. Address letters for the association, with money enclosed, to the treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Bero (Cherokee) Kansas. Send postal orders to the president, H. J. Munson, Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas. Send requests for meetings, etc., to the president, H. J. Munson, or to the chairman of the business committee, A. M. Sidwell, Girard, Crawford Co., Kansas. We herewith subjoin acknowledgments not previously made.

TENT FUND.—J. C. Smith, Arvonia, $10. Levi S. Smith, $10. John F. Linville, $50. Charles A. Corey, $4. Oliver Howard, $2. Sr. Gurney (pd.), $1. Sr. J. E. Proctor (pd), $1. A. M. Sidwell, $4. Jesse Forkner, $2. T. J. Wilder, $3. F. S. Hunter, $2. Amos Sanford, $10. A. F. Childs, $10.

Membership and Donations—J. C. Smith, $4. Levi S. Smith, $1. S. D. Smith, 25 cts. J. F. Linville donated $45, including the following persons, members of the association: J. F. Linville, Sr. M. E. Linville, and Sr. Mary K. Williams. Sarah E. Olds, $1. B. O. L. Olds, $1.

In reply to some inquiries made, I would state, our tent is to be about sixty feet in diameter. The campaign for the remaining part of the present season is not marked out, only that it will be sent direct to Columbus, Cherokee Co., Kansas, in which county it will doubtless be pitched once or twice. In directing the campaign further, the friends of the cause in different localities within the State will aid us by at once seeing what can be raised in support of the association work, with view of having the tent pitched in their locality at an early date; and report the same to the president, or chairman of the business committee. Meantime, continue to send in membership and donations to the treasurer, Warder Dunbar, Bero, Cherokee Co., Kan., that there may be no lack of funds to carry the work actively forward. When the tent season is over, the evangelists employed will continue to labor in different parts of the State as the Lord may seem to direct; therefore we wish to know the locality of all brethren, sister,s and interested friends of the cause. If any are really too poor to give material support, we wish to know your whereabouts, that as we go forth we may be able to call on you, and give comfort and bestow labor.

In answer to another inquiry,—it is expected that the present State evangelist (H. J. Munson), for the present, will go with and conduct the tent work, aided by such helpers as we may be able to obtain. We earnestly invite any live preacher of "like precious faith" in other States to come and cast their lots with us, and co-labor to build up our common cause here, by proclaiming the "present truth" and gospel of the kingdom.

EXPOSE OF SPIRITUALISM.

TO THE CRISIS:—Times and popular opinions do change. When Elder Grant was here, Rev. Dr. Cunningham then (and subsequently) delivered several discourses, obviously pointed at the Elder, and specially deprecating the Second Advent idea, and questioning the "sensational" preaching which noticed Spiritualism, etc. You will see by the enclosed that Dr. C. has forgotten his late sermons, in the vein noted, and has pretty faithfully copied Eld. Grant's sermon, which was most fully reported in the ALTA. A mild plagiarism, and a thorough though not confessed recanting must be set down to Rev. Dr. C. Now let him apologize to the Elder!

San Francisco, Aug. 5th, 1872. C.

"THE PLAN OF REDEMPTION."—This book, written upon the greatest of all themes—redemption—supplies in a great measure a lack long felt to exist in Advent literature. In vain I inquired for some work upon the atonement, presenting the truth in a clear and straightforward manner, until this book, written by Wellcome and Goud, was put in my hands. I read it with pleasure and profit, and wondered not that a Methodist minister should say of it, "It is the best book I ever read; and it has given me more light on the Bible than any other." It is well written, printed on good paper, in large type, well bound, and cheap enough to be within the reach of all. Brethren, do not forget this book. If you would advance the cause of truth, extend its circulation. J. M. TOZIER.

TREATISE ON MATT. 24TH AND 25TH CHAPTERS.—By I. C. Wellcome. The constant and increasing demand for the above work on those interesting and important chapters of our Lord's gospel, is a sufficient recommendation of its merits when we announce the SIXTH EDITION, which is just published.

Price, postpaid, paper covers, 25 cents. A small edition is published on heavy, superb paper, bound in cloth, for those who want it for libraries, or for frequent use as a reference book. Price, postpaid, 75 cents. Sold at the Crisis office.

Correspondence.

From Bro. C. C. Marston.

Bro. Grant:—I have just closed a week's meeting in the Court House at this place. There was great interest manifested in hearing the truth. Although this is one of the oldest towns in Illinois, and there has been much preaching here, yet the people have never heard the truth on man's nature, state in death, and destiny, and the coming and kingdom of Jesus. Many came out, and were much interested, who for years have been habitual neglectors of the sanctuary. One dear brother said to me, "It is the only preaching I ever could understood." Immortal-soulism and endless misery are profound mysteries, and have done much to keep thinking people away from Christ.

There was a perfect throng of people out on Sabbath, to whom I preached three times. In the A. M. we had a pleasant service in the public square; in the P. M. the rain drove us into the Court House again, and many went away for want of room. A goodly number embraced the truth, and several started for the kingdom. Praise God, the seed is sown, and a deep interest awakened among the people.

Hennepin, Ill.

Bro. J. B. McKee writes from Mechanicsburg, Ill.:—"Once more I write to thank you for your great generosity in sending to me for four long years 'our' much loved paper, the Crisis. I am still unable to do more than thank you over and over for so great kindness. The papers have ever been read with emotions of gratitude to you and our Father in heaven, that there are such good, kind men in this selfish world, who regard the poor; and I never take up the paper but that I breathe a prayer to God to abundantly bless you, and those connected with its publication. After reading and re-reading them, I lend them to my friends and neighbors, and some have promised me they would subscribe for it. I intend to do my best to get at least five subscribers during the year, and I pray God I may succeed. I will endeavor to lay by of my scanty means enough to pay for the paper in the future myself, if I have to sacrifice some of the comforts we now enjoy. Some of us have stood manfully by the blood-stained banner, trying to keep it from under the feet of opposers. We have met as often as was practicable in the humble capacity of worshipers."

More Strange Things.—The following is from a Georgia paper of July 17th:—

"We were called on yesterday morning by E. Chadwick, of Boston, and John Swail, and John Parks, of Springfield, Mass., late members of the 'New Canaanite' or 'Elijah Message' settlement, in Columbia county. They informed us that the colony is reduced to about twenty-one persons, men, women and children, many of whom are sick, and that all are in destitute circumstances. They handed us the copy of a letter, alleged to have been written by Joseph T. Curry, the 'Elijah' so called, and containing the doctrines in brief as taught by him. It is indeed, wonderful that in this enlightened age there are people so ignorant as to be deluded into believing such doctrines as are set forth. The following is the letter:—

"Everett, Nov. 22, 1871.

"Dear Bro. Orcutt:—I commit to your care, that it may be read only to those who have taken hold of the new covenant, these three propositions or requirements. This may be copied for the right of every one: 1. To take hold of the new covenant as it is written in Isaiah 56: 2, looking steadily to Yahveh for the fulfillment of this part, as written—Jer. 31: 33. This first proposition being understood and settled, those who have attained it are ready for the next. 2. To believe in Joseph T. Curry as the Elijah of Malachi, the Cyrus of Isaiah, the prophet like to Moses; and the rod of Micah 6: 9; therefore the divinely commissioned Governor (Jer. 20: 21) of this nation; consequently not to obey without question, even in thought, his doctrine or practice, or to set up the will against him in any matter, however trivial, is a violation of Yahveh's commandments. When this is settled, then, and not till then, comes the next proposition. 3. To move south to the place that shall be indicated by the Cyrus. As persons shall come up to the third proposition, let them write to me, Augusta, Georgia.

Joseph T. Curry."

DOMESTIC.

The Lynn Strike.—The strike of the Lynn shoemakers, in consequence of the efforts of manufacturers to reduce the price paid for making shoes, which has now been going on for two weeks, seems farther from any adjustment than ever, and new features in connection with the matter are spinging up every day. The strikers now claim that they were not opposed to a reduction, but that the whole trouble lay in the fact of Mr. Bubier's refusing to confer with the Committee of Crispins who were instructed by their brother "Knights" to make such overtures to the bosses as might be agreeable, and which would serve in the future as a protection to both employer and employed. Why this "committee of conference"—granted and sought after in past years by the manufacturers—has been refused it is difficult to say.

The suspension of work in a number of the shoe manufactories still continues, and at a meeting of the manufacturers, held an evening or two ago, the following agreement was signed by fifty representatives of the largest firms in the city: "We, the undersigned, shoe manufacturers of the city of Lynn, hereby agree that on and after Saturday, August 10th, we will employ no person subject to or under the control of any organization claiming the power to interfere with any contract between employer and employe."

The Return of the Jews to Palestine.—One tradition after another passes away, and among the last appears to be the long cherished expectation of the Jews of a final restoration to Palestine. In the Jewish Times we find mention of the return of Prof. Gratz and Messrs. Levy, Potzin and Gottschalk from Palestine. Their report is set down as "an additional argument against the folly of encouraging the emigration of the Jews to a country which has no other claim than that of a venerable monument of the past. There are now, it appears, about 16,000 Jews living in Palestine, and "their average state of culture is much below that of their fellow religionists in Europe. They have no visible means of support, spend their time in idleness, praying, and Talmud reading, and foolish pining and sighing on the ruins of the temple, eking out a miserable existence by the charity of the Jews of Europe, America and Australia." Curiously enough, the memorial of their visit by Prof. Grats and his companions also suggests "the general elimination from all Jewish prayer-books of the portions referring to the hopes of Israel, and the rebuilding of the temple by Divine Providence.

A Christian sect of unknown origin and antiquity has been discovered by French missionaries in Loodiana, in India. By a voyage which extended thirty miles to the south of that place they fell in with a company of Shikes, who profess to believe the New Testament as a divine revelation, and who consider Christ as the immaculate incarnation of the Deity. Their priest (gourou) teaches his people that Christ is about to reveal himself from heaven, according to Matt. 21: 30, and Rev. 19: 11, but in his own person. This sect is wholly separate from other Indian tribes, and is considered by them as a truly Christian band. The number of its members was found to be on the increase. They observe the Sabbath, are accustomed to pray, and do not recognize the obligations of caste. The sect extends over the territories of Maharajah and Putteala, and probably belongs to the Kuka race, despite differences in faith.—Christian Intelligencer.

The annual meeting of the American Advent Mission Society will be held at Springfield, on the National Advent camp-ground, commencing Thursday, Aug. 22d, at 9 o'clock A. M.

Special Notice.—All that take teams for our campmeeting will be careful to get Collins' teams. He is our man, engaged for our meeting. Don't take any unless his name is marked on the wagon, or you may get deceived to your sorrow. Also, if you send baggage by freight or express, before you come, direct it to the Springfield Campmeeting, in care of Levi Collins, to deliver to Hiram Munger on the camp-ground. It will come more carefully, and at less price. Hiram Munger.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Brn. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:—Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. Hancock.

The next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern New York will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., New York, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 12th, and continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or by letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come in the name and spirit of the Redeemer, and labor for the promotion of his cause.

Fare from Worcester and return, $4.90. Tickets to be obtained at the Foster St. station, good from Sept. 7th to the 17th inclusive. E. G. Higgins.

Vermont Campmeeting.—We have leased the beautiful grounds at Bethel, and our annual camp will be pitched about Aug. 31st. The committee feel the need of funds for improving and lighting the ground, and building a preacher's stand large enough to store our lumber after the meeting. Who will help? Let those who have a mind send money or pledges to me, or to J. H. Harding, Ely, Vt.; George C. Arms, Waterbury, Vt.; Stephen French, Rutland, Vt.; or S. G. Mathewson, Castleton, Vt. Pray much for this meeting, for good order, power, and salvation. We are happy to say that Bro. Grant may be expected.

F. H. Carpenter, for Committee.

Vermont Campmeeting.—Railroad Arrangements.—Reduction of fare has been obtained to one half of regular rates on the following Railroads: Vt. Central; Vt. and Canada; Stanstead, Shefford and Chambly; Montreal and Vt. Junction; Sullivan, Ogdensburgh, and Lake Champlain; Missisquoi; Vt. Valley; Rutland and Burlington, Montreal and Plattsburgh; Whitehall and Plattsburgh; Addison and New London, and Northern. Passengers will buy regular tickets, and pay full fare to Bethel campmeeting, and will be furnished on the ground with free return passes. The mail train will stop at the ground every day, going north and south, giving persons north a fine opportunity of spending the day upon the ground, and to return the same night. Be sure to have every piece of your baggage marked plainly—Bethel Vt. Campmeeting. This last arrangement has been secured through Bro. R. N. Stetson's energy and influence, to whom many thanks are due. H. F. C.

The Illinois State Annual Campmeeting will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., on the old Camp-ground, commencing Sept. 7th, and continuing over two Sabbaths. Ministers from other States as well as from this State are expected, and all are cordially invited to attend, and come prepared to stay through the meeting. Let there be a general rally to labor for the salvation of souls.

Those coming by way of the C. B. and G. R. R. will change cars at Mendota. Those coming on the C. and N. W. R. R. will change at Dixon. Due notice will be given of reduction of fare, which is expected. Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, L. H. Davis, Wm. McCulloch, D. S Clark, F. Burr. S. B. Marey, Secretary.

Southern Wis. Campmeeting.—This campmeeting will be held at Spring Grove, six miles south-west of Brodhead, on Bro. Atwood's land, beginning on Sunday, Sept. 1st. Tents will be put up the day before (Saturday.) Tent-poles, straw and hay may be obtained on the ground. Several Wisconsin preachers are expected, among whom we hope to see Brn. Hough, Hitchcock, Thomson, and Howard. Those coming by cars will stop at Brodhead, where they will find teams ready to convey them to the ground, provided they will notify me by letter, three days before the meeting begins, on what day they will be there.

Those coming from Prairie du Chien way, will change cars at Milton Junction, and reach Brodhead at 9 A. M. or 8 P. M. Those coming from the north, over the North Western R. R., will change cars at Hanover Junction, reaching Brodhead as above. This is a new field. Let all come to work for God. Probably the meeting will hold over two Sundays. Wm. Sheldon.

The Christian Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Hay and straw will be furnished free, and poles for tent frames. We do not expect to have groceries, etc., on the ground, as it is but five minutes walk to market, where groceries can be had, also board for 25 cts. a meal. The ground is north west of the public square, about five blocks, and south of the McGregor R. R. tract, and half a mile west from the depot. Teams will meet you at the R. R. depots. Come all that can. Do not fail to bring your bedding, as you can use the big tent, or if the weather is wet, some barns close by may be had. Prospects are good, and there is great interest to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Brn., pray for this meeting.

☞ There will be a grove-meeting in Beaver County, Pa., near Beaver Court House, as the friends in that region may appoint, to commence the evening of Aug. 30th, and continue about a week, as duty may demand.

Also a grove-meeting on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport, and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa., commencing evening, Sept. 5th, and continue about a week.

Also a grove-meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., Pa., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Bro. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing evening of Sept. 12th, and continuing about a week. All are invited. Elders C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (D. V.) will attend to preach the word at the above meetings. J. T. Ongley.

Campmeeting.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Sabbath, Sept. 1st, and hold over Sabbath, the 8th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow men in these last moments of time. Particulars hereafter. E. R. Wood, for the Com.

Hoosick Valley Tent.—Those who can, and are willing to help spread the good news of our soon coming King, and to save the perishing from the wrath to come, are invited to contribute immediately, such sums as will please the Lord, towards paying for the Hoosick Valley tent. If there should be any more given than what it takes to pay for the tent, it will be devoted to defraying expenses in holding tent-meetings during this present season. Now let there be a cheerful and liberal response. Send your money to the Treasurer—John B. White, Hoosick Falls, N. Y.

Conn. Campmeeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting on the ground occupied for that purpose the past two years, near Plainville, Conn., commencing Aug. 31st, and continuing till Sept. 9th. On the New Haven and Northampton R. R., the 6 A. M. and 4.45 P. M. trains from Williamsburg, and the 6.50 A. M. train from New Haven, will stop opposite the camp-ground, only when there are passengers for the meeting, and they must tell the conductors they wish to stop, or they will be carried by. Remember this. The morning train up reaches the camp-ground about 8 o'clock, the morning train down at 8.30, and the evening train down at 7.20. Those from the north by these trains, buy regular tickets to Southington; those from the south to Plainville. Those coming by other trains must stop at Plainville, and Mr. T. F. Clark will take them to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. In all cases, buy regular tickets, and free return passes will be furnished at the meeting. On the H. P. and F. R. R. fare is reduced thirty per cent from Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville. Buy regular tickets to Plainville, and tickets at reduced rate can be had on the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates.

We hope all who can, will bring tents, and come early to the meeting, and those who have no tent, bring a blanket or bedquilt, and not depend on your neighbor for one. It is our heart's desire and prayer to God that our brethren and sisters may be moved by a self-examining, sanctifying, consecrating spirit, that will bring us to this meeting ready, at the beginning, to serve the Lord, and not come like a rickety wagon to the shop for repairs. Let there be a cleasing from worldly conformity, pride, hatred, jealousy, foolish conversation, and such like, before coming to the meeting. Do not burden and kill the meeting with these instruments of the devil. As a people, we profess to carry the judgment message and last crowning light of truth to the world; and with the final, most essential, and brilliant proclamation of the entire gospel, our meetings should prove a means of salvation to sinners. May the Holy Spirit overshadow the encampment, and fall upon the people. May faith triumph, and God be glorified. Amen.

Time Conference at Lawrence, Mass.—There will be a Conference of the above nature at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sept. 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, and others from all parts, are earnestly invited to attend. The evidence that the prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and that the great plan of salvation under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a great interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved all over the land.

Watchman, what of the night? Come, men of God, from the north, south, east and west; come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned, for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things are true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they be without foundation in God's word, let it be exposed. Come, brethren, from every part. Those who have argument against are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it. We hope, by the blessing of God, to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally, like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom. Brn. Cunningham, Barbour, Sheldon, and others are expected to be present.

Tent Meeting.—The Hoosick Valley tent will be pitched, and a meeting held in Hartford, N. Y., (Log Village), commencing Wednesday, Aug. 28th, and continuing as long as deemed proper. May God greatly bless in this meeting. Several ministers are expected to be present to preach the word. Ample accommodations will be made for all who come. A. W. Sibley.

Vermont Advent Christian Conference.—The annual meeting of this Conference will be held on Bethel camp-ground, Thursday, Sept. 5th. As annual officers are to be chosen at this meeting, it is desired every church should be represented by one delegate, and one additional delegate is allowed to every ten members above the number of ten. R. N. Stetson, Secretary.

Mechanic Falls, Me., Campmeeting.—If the Lord will, this meeting will be held in the beautiful grove where it was held last year, commencing August 26th, to continue one week. This ground is easy of access, pleasantly located, about one mile from the depot, and is a most desirable spot for campmeeting. This year the ground has been much improved, a commodious boarding-tent erected, the stable enlarged, and both put into competent hands for good management. Good board, horse keeping, and pasturage, will be afforded at the lowest possible rates, so that none can justly complain. "The Mission Tent" will be ready for use on the ground, Aug. 24th. This tent affords excellent shelter for meetings in stormy weather, and makes a comfortable lodging place by night for several hundreds, if necessary. Straw will be provided for bedding, and all things done that can be for the comfort and well-being of all who attend. All who wish to erect wooden or cloth tents will find the most desirable lots for that purpose.

The fare on all parts of the Maine Central and Buckfield railroads will be one half the usual rates; and on the Grand Trunk about the same. Those coming from Bangor, and intermediate places, should stop at Danville Junction; and those coming from Augusta and other places on the Kennebec, should stop at Yarmouth Junction. At both Junctions, take the Grand Trunk R. R. for Mechanic Falls.

At all stations on the Grand Trunk Road, call for Campmeeting tickets. At all stations on the Maine Central roads, full fare will be paid to Danville and Yarmouth Junctions, and free return tickets furnished on the camp-ground by the committee.

Come to the meeting from east, west, north and south. Come to do and get good. Let there be a general gathering of the watching, waiting ones, and of all who wish to be ready for the coming of "our King." Bro. J. Couch is expected to be with us a part of the time.

If the Lord will, I will preach at 10 A. M. and at one, and probably at four P. M., Sunday, Aug. 25th, in a grove in West Lebanon, Me., about three miles east of the Eastern R. R. Depot at Milton (Three Ponds) near the house of Mr. Perry Watson and H. B. Larey. As this may be my only opportunity in that region this fall, I shall be glad to see a general gathering of those who love Jesus. If the weather is unfavorable, there is convenient shelter, and He who was cradled in a manger will not disdain to meet his people in a barn. H. L. Hastings.

Grove and Basket Meeting.—If the Lord will, a grove and basket meeting will be held in West Levant, Me., in Bro. John Emerson's grove, on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7th and 8th. Children's meetings will be held each day, immediately after dinner. Take special pains to bring the children. Let all bring food for themselves and teams. There is a good chance for horses in the grove. Lodging for Saturday night for those from a distance will be provided by brethren in the region. Should the weather be unfavorable, provision by a large tent, or otherwise, will be made for all who come. Come en masse to work for God. For the Brn., Fred. A. Baker.

The first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wis. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek Church, about eight miles north of Taunton, Sauk Co., to commence on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, holding over the following Lord's day. Let all the churches in the district send delegates, and it is expected that all preachers will attend. Friends from other districts are cordially invited to attend. Geo. Thomson.

THE WORKS OF CREATION.

I. A. YOUNG.

How beautiful are thy works, O Lord;
 How perfect all thy ways;
The heavens above, the forests broad,
 Speak forth thy power and praise.

The gentle lily, the smiling rose,
 Show forth thy grace divine;
Ne'er may we sleep until we lose
 Ourselves in thee and thine.

The charming landscape in its bloom
 Gives faith and hope serene,
That we shall live beyond the tomb,
 Where fields are ever green.

And when in glory thou shalt come
 From heaven with power divine;
Oh, may we gain our welcome home,
 And in thy kingdom shine.

CALIFORNIA THEOLOGY.

O. R. FASSETT.

In our recent visit at Bartlett's Springs, where were held daily meetings, and some one of the preachers of the different denominations preached a discourse, ourselves included, we had a good opportunity to learn the doctrines preached on this coast. I will give a few items of California theology.

"Shall never fall." This was quoted to prove that the righteous should never fall in death, but go to be "present with the Lord" immediately when they died. "Born again," "cannot sin."—Explained that the flesh would sin, but the spirit within the christian could not sin. Concerning the doctrine of the Trinity, it was asserted: "Some cannot see how the Son of God can be God the Father; but this is a mystery the natural man cannot comprehend, but one born of God can." After an eloquent and graphic description of the immensity of the material universe, and the distance incalculable of the furthest world in the illimitable space into which the natural vision and the powers of the telescope penetrated, and then those far beyond, the preacher said: "Heaven is beyond all this material universe; to attempt its locality is presumption." With such a fancied heaven, he was prepared to sing—

"Beyond the bounds of time and space,"
Look forward to that heavenly place."

And he no doubt looked for an "immaterial place," beyond the "material universe," and illimitable space itself, where "Mr. Nobody (an immaterial man) would go nowhere, in no time," and yet be in attendance on his own funeral occasion! These men are horrified at the thought of "Annihilationism"—as they are disposed to call the doctrine of "the destruction of the wicked"—while they themselves can "swallow" this "camel" of the complete and effectual annihilation of the righteous into nonentity, and remove their inheritance outside of God's universe.

The parable of the "ten virgins" was designed to "teach that we should be always ready for death, so that when death comes we should not be overtaken as a thief"; "it also taught something about the end of time."

"The gospel is to be preached in all the world, and to all nations, but it has not been as yet. It will take more than a thousand years still before the gospel can be wound up." Thus these preachers must fulfill the Scripture by saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming."

"Some nations have not been born of man, and it is doubtful if they belong to the human family. The present congregation have a strong resemblance to the human species."

"Old Adam and Eve, when put into the garden, had not much knowledge, though sinless. Mankind have advanced far beyond them in wisdom. Had not the devil deceived them, they would not have known anything. If they had not sinned, not a person or descendant would have been born. Mother Eve was desirous to become as God, and by believing the devil she and her posterity have become as gods, and obtained knowledge and wisdom. Adam's death was spiritual death." Surely could the devil employ better ministers than these to serve him and preach his "lie," and "the doctrine of devils"?

"Infants are sinners; for Jesus is to save them, and he saves only sinners."

One clergyman preached a harangue against all modern visions and revelations, alluding to Mormonism, and Ellen White and her visions. He hoped by this effort to turn the popular prejudice against us (Brn. Wilson, Reed, myself, and our wives, together with us as a people). I went to him directly after his discourse, and inquired of him, Do you suppose that we are the followers of Ellen White and her visions, or that we believe in any modern revelations or prophecies? "Oh, no," he replied, "I knew you did not belong to that class." I remarked, I supposed you were ignorant of our relations to the Advent body, and that you were "beating a man of straw." This acknowledgment on his part only made him appear in the worse light, as his effort was to deceive the people, arouse prejudice against us, and when he knew he was doing a wrong by a misrepresentation of the position of those whose arguments he could not otherwise meet. Afterwards, he attempted to class us with certain parties and defectionists with whom we as a body of christians have no connection, or they any sympathy with us; but I called him to order before the congregation, made a statement of his former attempt, and the injustice of it, stating that he remarked to me he did it with a full knowledge of our position and relations, and now I made my appeal as to this wicked wrong doing. After meeting he pledged me he would no more misrepresent us.

"Adam was created mortal; if he had never sinned, he would have died." "If Adam died a physical death, as the penalty for his transgression, he paid his own penalty for sin, and Christ died in vain." "The image in which man was created in the likeness of his Maker, was in righteousness and true holiness." The question is, If "Adam had not much knowledge," and "if the devil had not deceived him he would not have known anything," how, then, could he have thus been "created in the likeness of his Maker"? Is an idiot, or one approaching thereto, more like his Creator than one more intelligent?

As to prophecy, there is a position taken by many clergymen on this coast that "no prophecies reach beyond the first advent of Christ." I have heard this repeated and advocated in a discourse, and attempted to be maintained in a convention of ministers.

"The book of Revelation" is declared to be "not a book of prophecy, but of revelation, and revelation is [said to be] not prophecy." "The little stone was cut out without hands out of the mountain when Christ came out of the tomb." "His kingdom was then set up, and there is not a nation now on the face of the earth that does not acknowledge him as King." "The New Jerusalem prepared and adorned has descended out from heaven." "The judgment has taken place: Judgment has passed upon all men to condemnation.'" "There is one man in hell—'the rich man.'"

Rev. Dr. Stone, of San Francisco, formerly of Boston, Mass., in a recent discourse maintained the theory that "the inferior order of animals possess immortal souls." Thus our opponents have been driven in the discussion on "the science of human nature," and the scriptural doctrine of future life, to the conclusion that brutes have "souls"; but rather than give up their pet theory, received from the traditionary doctrine of the heathen world, of "the immortality of the soul," have concluded to swallow the whole "camel" of heathen philosophy; namely, both human and brute forms possess alike immortal souls. There is progress made in the discussion. We will shame these "Doctors of Divinity" in this discussion yet; and "their folly shall be manifest unto all men." Or, will they fulfill the picture and portraiture drawn by Paul of the teachers of "the last days"—"ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth"? 2 Tim. 3: 1–9.

SUGGESTIONS TO SEEKERS OF PURITY OF HEART.

Do not deem it strange if you meet with great trials in seeking full salvation. You may expect that Satan, and fallen human nature in yourself, and in others, will interpose many hindrances to your pursuit of holiness of heart. Besides this, you must be deeply convinced of your need of this grace, and the old man must be crucified; and all this is painful. But be like a little child, and let the Lord lead you into the depths of humiliation, and you will soon find full redemption in the blood of the Lamb. Your efforts may seem to be futile, but they are not lost. In this way you are being abased, crucified to self, led beyond all creature trust, to rely wholly in the atonement, power, and indwelling of Christ for full salvation.

You are a beloved child of God, in a justified, regenerate state, and you are not left to yourself, or given into the hand of your spiritual enemies; but God takes care of you, and is now specially showing you the importance and excellency of holiness, and creating an intense desire for it, and guiding you in seeking it. In a spirit of self-renunciation, and of consecration to holiness of heart, keep yourself fully in God's hands, and very soon the Holy Spirit will enable you to

"Sink into the purple flood,
And rise to all the life of God."

You will soon discover and surmount all the difficulties in your way. Perhaps you have failed because you have aimed above it—aimed at angelic, or Adamic, or some kind of mental perfection, instead of seeking a heart cleansed from impurity and filled with divine love. Or you may have come short of it by aiming too low—by accepting a clear sense of adoption, and a great degree of enjoyment, as entire sanctification. Inexpressible enjoyment often holds empire in the heart of the merely regenerated child of God; but this does not prove that all the depths of the soul are purified and "renewed after the image of God." The seeker of purity should pray God to show him clearly the remains of unholiness, of pride, selfishness, inordinate desire, impatience, etc., in his heart; and then, being taught and led by the Holy Spirit, he will intelligently go to the fountain of Jesus' blood and wash away all his unrighteousness.

The believer should have an assurance of adoption in order to rightfully and successfully engage in seeking a clean heart. It is not probable that a backslider, in being reclaimed, will step at once from spiritual Egypt into the Canaan of perfect love. Justification lies between the former and the latter state. The clearly justified should immediately seek to be fully sanctified. Further, you may have erred by looking for marvelous exercises in speaking or praying, or for prostrations of your bodily powers, or for something allied to visions. Let me remind you that these wonderful things are not promised to the believer, are not essentially a part of holiness, and you need not expect them. What you want is purity of heart, the mind of Christ, a heart filled with God and his love. Inexplicable demonstrations, such as prostration of the bodily powers, are merely incidental to christian experience, and I suppose it is our duty to leave these mysterious things wholly with the Lord, to send or withhold them, at his own pleasure.

Moreover, you may have been seeking it by works. The penitent is strongly inclined to trust in his penitence and performance of duty; and generally it is with great difficulty that he is brought to receive saving grace by faith in Christ. Just so the believer in seeking purity is strongly inclined to think he must have this or that, before he trusts fully in Christ. Dear seeker of full salvation, let me remind you that all possible doing and suffering, and all kinds of mental perceptions and exercises, cannot cleanse your heart and fill it with God. Only God can do this. Just as you are, and just now, take Christ into your heart as your sanctification. 1 Cor. 1: 30. As a child of God, convinced of your need of sanctifying grace, it is your privilege, your right, yea, it is your duty, to immediately receive Christ into your heart by faith, as your full Savior, your portion, your all and in all; then you will be "washed in the blood of the Lamb." Then God the Father, Son, and Spirit, will dwell in you. This will meet all the wants of your soul. "This is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." 1 Thess. 5: 16, 24.

Lastly, if nothing mentioned above meets your case, it is possible you do not fully consecrate yourself to holiness of heart, with all the self-denying godliness it implies. Though doing and suffering can never sanctify the soul, yet if we cling to any known wrong in our hearts, or if we are unwilling to do or suffer all things according to God's will, he will not cleanse our hearts and fill us with himself; but if we give, then we may truly take, all. Ann Cutler could continually say, "Lord, all I am is thine, and all Thou art is mine." This blessed salvation is for every lover of Jesus. Let us draw near with all the heart.—Selected by G. E. Merrill from the "Guide to Holiness."

WHAT NEXT?—Felix Neri, the celebrated professor in the college of the Propaganda in Rome, once asked of an ambitious young student what he proposed to do after leaving college. "Study the law," was the answer. "What next?" "Why, enter upon its practice, of course." "What next?" "Gather honor and wealth." What next?" "Get married, and set up an establishment." "What next?" "Enjoy the results of my labors." "What next?" "Why," responded he, with some hesitation, "die, I suppose." "What next?" The young man's face fell, and he was speechless.

SANCTIFICATION.

BRO. GRANT:—I am glad to see that you, as well as other brethren, are taking higher ground, and advocating an entire consecration of all that we have and are to the service of the Lord. This constitutes Bible sanctification, as I understand the Scriptures. Every day's experience and observation convinces me more and more that anything less than this will fail to ward off the fiery darts of the enemy in these last days of peril and danger. The whole and entire armor is what is now needed. But oh, the difficulty of attaining it! The world, the flesh and the devil, are a unit in their opposition, and meet us at every point, with a determination that plainly indicates the desperation of the struggle.

In all of my christian experience, I never have met anything like it. Often have I thought the attainment was made; but every time I have found myself floored, and that too, at a point where I thought all was safe. O how defective are all our theories, founded upon a correct knowledge of the word, without this crowning grace. This is a unity of the Spirit and the word, producing in us a submission of soul, body and spirit to the will of the Master, which will, of course, bring forth corresponding fruits: viz., love, joy, peace, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, etc. If so, then we may be sure of an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of God. Without this evidence, I see not how we can desire the coming of Christ, except it be from a sheer desire of a release from conflicts and troubles, too intolerable for longer endurance.

As it is with me, so also I have reason to believe it is with others. Therefore, ye tempted and tried ones, remember that Christ had a conflict with these same enemies (the world, the flesh and the devil), which caused him to fast forty days; but he overcame, and is able and willing to help us; and as he has promised, let us look away to Him, that we may obtain forgiveness and grace to help in this our time of need. Remember, eternal life, and the kingdom under the whole heavens are the objects to be possessed by the overcomers, or loss to those who fail.

Norwalk, O. P. ALLING.

OUR POSITION AND DOCTRINE.

(Republished by request.)

We call ourselves Christians, not any thing more,
No titles succeeding, or going before;
We think it most natural—it leads to no strife,
For Christ is our husband, and we the Lamb's wife.

We give not the glory to Cephas or Paul,
Apollos or James, for Christ is our all;
No Wesley or Luther, no Calvin or Fox,
We claim as a leader, foundation, or Rock.

No human invention of platform or creed,
We take as a standard and sacredly heed;
Our creed is the BIBLE, the Spirit our guide,
All Christians our brethren—a truth undenied.

The doctrine we teach, and have from our youth,
Is the doctrine of reason, revelation and truth;
Unmixed with traditions and the dogmas of men,
As pure as the morning, and clear as the sun.

We talk of no three all mysteriously one,
Nor think that our Savior's both Father and Son;
But believe in one God, and only in one,
And one Mediator between God and man.

The teaching of Jesus, the example he set,
The miracles wrought, the blood and the sweat;
His sufferings and death, as he bore the great load,
Was the atonement he made to bring us to God.

We teach that the church of Messiah is one,
United in spirit like the Father and Son;
That party distinctions forever should cease,
And saints all unite as dear children of peace.

We advocate liberty of conscience throughout,
 Believe in a free interchanging of speech;
Are liberal in sentiment, feeling and thought,
 Designing to practice the doctrine we preach.

Although we are liberal in thought and in deed,
 And mean to be free from bigotry's chain;
The law of the spirit of life we will heed,
 Be practical Christians without and within.

The life is what constitutes Christians with us,
 Externals are trifling when with it compared;
The crown that we seek lies under the cross,
 The faithful alone for heaven are prepared.

We boast not of members, of titles or fame,
 Nor join with the world in their envy and strife;
With the learned and the great we scarce have a name,
 Yet rejoice it is written in the Lamb's book of life.

We make no pretentions to smoothness of speech,
 Scholastic divinity by us is abhorred;
The preaching we offer is not out of reach,
 But simple and easy, the word of the Lord.

BRO. HARKLISS JONES OF SOU' CALINY.

An aged negro appeared one day at the study of an eminent minister and introduced himself as "Bro. Harkliss Jones, from Sou' Caliny."

The good minister shivered at the thought of another clerical beggar for church money to be spent, as so much of it usually is, in the traveling expenses of the applicant. "Well, Bro. Harkliss," he asked, with patient kindness, "what can I do for you?"

"You can listen to me, brudder," replied Harkliss, with a princely air.

"I'll do that if you'll be short; but my time is very precious, brother," answered the pastor.

"So is mine, brudder," exclaimed the visitor with a dignity which almost startled the minister. "You and I'se both sarvants of de King, and his business always 'quires haste."

"Yes; and your church wants a little help I suppose. Well, I'm glad they sent a sensible man for it."

"No, sir. My church is de church universal, and dat has got de Mighty One of Jacob for her help; and needn't go beggin' of nobody! I come to give and not to ax, sir."

"Then you've got some money for my church, I suppose," said the minister smiling.

"No, sir; what I've got to give will come closer home to you than to your church."

"Well, what have you got to give me, then?"

"A little advice and a heap of comfort. I come up from my old home 'cause my chil'n and gran'chil'n was bound for to come. I was as near de Lord on de banks of the Grand Pedee as I ever 'spects to be up here; and dere was as many souls for to save down dere as dere is up here. But young folks, you know, is songuenry in deir views, and mighty 'strublous in carryin' 'em out. But one night it 'peared like I saw a great shinin' finger in de dark cloud pointin' due north. Den says I, 'Dat's my pillar o' fire, and where I'm sent I'll go, and de Lord will have my work all laid out ready for me.' So here I be, sir."

"And you want me to set you to work."

"Not a bit of it, sir; on the con'try I wants to set you to work! Dat's what I come'd here for dis mornin'."

The cool composure of the sable guest fairly astonished the gentleman used to so much deference and respect; and he asked in a tone of surprise, "What do you mean, brother?"

"Well, I've been to hear you preach two Sundays, and I've made up my mine dat you're off de track. You talk like it was a chance anyhow whether we saints gets to heaven after all. Dere was too many 'ifs' in your sarmons. De Master hadn't no 'ifs' in his preachin'. His gospel is 'him dat believes shall be saved; him dat comes I will in no wise cast out; come unto me you dat is tired and heavy laden and I will give you rest; dere is no condemnation to dem dat are in Christ Jesus; whar I am, dere shall my people be also; I give eternal life unto as many as my Father give me, and none shall pluck dem out of my hands.' Isn't dat good gospel, sir?"

"Yes, and I believe every word of it," replied the minister.

"Is dere any chance, think you, for Satan to slip in by a trick and upset de great work of redemption?"

"No."

"Den why don't you tell people so? One sarmon o' your'n was tellin' all 'bout de doubts Satan pushes into de hearts of de Lord's people. Why, dat sarmon was mor'n half 'devil' all through! and another was tellin' de saints dat dey must do dis and dat and 'tother to get peace and comfort here and heaven beyont. If you believes dat Christ died and rose again, and dat kase he lives we shall live also, why don't you comfort God's people wid dese words? Let the devil alone for a while in your preachin' (you'll get 'nough o' him widout makin' so much on him), and just preach Christ, Christ, CHRIST. 'Pears like I don't want to hear nothin' else but just only dat dear name while I stays here in de flesh. I rises every mornin' in Christ, and I walks and talks wid him all day. When night comes I lies down and sleeps wid him, like it was my last sleep, and I mought wake next mornin' wid him in glory. I'm black, and poor, and old to the eyes of de world; but I'm fair, and rich, and fresh in his sight, kase I'm in him. All dat he is got is mine, and dere ain't a king on 'arth dat old Harkliss would change places wid. No, no, no!"

"But while you never doubt God's power to save, you sometimes have doubts of your acceptance with Him, haven't you?" asked the minister, who was by this time seated, meekly taking his lesson.

"No, never; why should I? Dere was a night once, long time ago, when my soul was 'ceeding sorrowful, like the Master's when he was in the garden. I felt like I was helpless for dis life, and I had no light on the world beyont. I most hated God for not giving me a better lot. I was out in de canebrake all alone, a mile away from any livin' creatur'. I felt like I wanted to kill myself kase my massa done gone and sold my wife and baby. Dat ar night I got a hint in my soul what hell was; and as I sot dere, a thought come into me, and I spoke it out, 'Dere isn't no God,' says I. And dem words scart me so't I sprung right off de ground whar I was lyin'. I was bewildered, I reckons, for all of a suddent I see a great white hand sweep back the dark night, and a light shined all roun' 'bout me. I didn't see nobody, but I felt strong arms about me, and in a minute my poor, aching head was leanin' on somebody's breast; and oh, what a place that was to rest on! Den a voice said—'Come unto me, poor, tired, heavy-laden soul, and I will give you rest.' Den I knowed dere was a God, and dat it was the voice of his Son in my soul. I've been a new man since dat night; but half the time I been only a common sort of a Christian, like you, risin' and fallin', hopin' and doubtin', such a Christian as puzzles de world to know whether dere is any good in 'ligion or not.

"I was a waiter in dem days, and was a good deal wid de white folks, and it was fash'nable 'mong dem for to doubt, and mourn, and whine, when dey talked 'ligion; and I used to forget dat night in the canebrake, and fell into the fashion of the gran' folks. But it didn't work with me, and I got into darkness. Den I'd try to fight my own way out of de swamp; but de more I tried de faster I stuck. Den I would try to hire de Lord to lift me out of de horrible pit and de miry clay, by good works, helpin' de weak field hands, or givin' away my pocket-money. But we never made a bargain—de Lord and me. He always brung me low till I was glad to get peace free, and to take away all chance o' bragging from me. He ginerally brought de peace when I was asleep and doin' no good works. Den I would wake wid glory in my soul, and I would run on mighty peart for a spell. I didn't know what Christ was den. He was in me; but dere was plenty else beside him."

"Come here and sit in this large chair, brother, it is more comfortable than that one," said the minister in a subdued voice, as if addressing a superior. "I want to know how you got clear of the tempter and filled with Christ at last."

"O well! it isn't no great story, but here it is:—Dere was an old col'd sister dey used to call Gimsey, a sort of a preacher like 'mong de field hands. Well, when she come down to her deathbed, she done call all massa's people and the neighborin' black folks round her, kase she said she'd been in heaven a whole hour, and come back to give us a word of comfort. We gathered 'bout her, and she lift up her two hands and pray dis way:—'Lor' Jesus, answer dis one pra'er of mine for dy own name-sake. It is old Gimsey's last pra'er. De next word wid me will be praise and hallelujahs. Bring dese poor chil'n into the light like you bring me into the light fifty years ago. Don't let Brudder Harkliss cast contempt no longer on dy blessed name by doubting of dy Word, which is truth. Humble proud Jenny, and in marsy punish drunk. Dose, and comfort lone Polly, and cure sick Abe, and bring all de rest to dy feet here, and to dy house up dere bam by.' Den she opened her eyes and begun for to preach, and she give each one a separate little sarmon all to hisself. She den call me. 'Come here, Brudder Harkliss, and take my cold hand in yourn.' I went, and she said—'O Harkliss, Harkliss! you's worse den an onprofitable sarvant. You's half de time b'arin' false witness gin de Lord dat brought you, and tellin' the world dat his Word a'n't for to be trusted, dat he don't always speak truth.'"

"'No, no,' says I, 'auntie, I never done dat. I trust him with all my heart.'"

"'Mebby you do, right here on the verge of heaven. But quick as you gets out, you'll say—'Dere's no telling whether I'll ever reach heaven or not. Harkliss,' says she, 'do you believe de Lord has writ yer name on de palms of his hand and his name on your forehead?'

"I bowed down my head in shame, for I see my sin. And de truth of God shone out like a great sun as I never see it afore. My soul was full of glory, such like as de world never sees and I says:—

"'Yes, auntie, he has told me time and time agin dat he is mine and dat I am his.'

"'Do you believe he speaks the truth, Harkliss?' says she.

"'Yes, auntie,' says I, 'I know now he does.'

"'Den you quit a-doubtin' afore the world,' says she. 'Harkliss, if you had been as misersepectful to your owners as you've been to de Great Master, and if you'd gone round saying he's promised me such and such but I doubt he'll keep his word, he'd sold you into the rice swamps a hundred times in dese years. Better cut off yer right hand and pluck out yer right eye den to doubt the truth of his Word. You is his, for he bought you wid his own precious blood, and as sure as he's in heaven you shall go dere too. I'm tired, chil'n, and must go to sleep. Good-night.'

"Dere, sir, dem was old Gimsey's last words on earth. De next one she spoke was glory 'fore de throne.

"Well, dere was a great light all through my soul den, dat has never gave out sense. 'Pears like de Lord is in de midst of it, where I can feel his presence, and when de 'ifs' and 'maybes' comes round trying to break my peace, I shouts out, no matter who hears me, 'De Lord says dat I am his, and dat whar he am dar I shall be also; and his word endureth forever.' Den the 'ifs' all fly off like dey were unclean birds, and leave me in de light. Why, sir, I's got de world so under my feet dat nothin' in it can worry me only de sin I sees, and dat will be cleared off some day, for de Lord is coming down here mighty soon to make all things right. De Lord's chil'n got a good right to glory, and nobody—no, not de devil, dat you make such 'count on—can't take it 'way from 'em. Now, my errant's done here. You quit preachin' 'bout booklarnin', and 'doubtin',' and de 'devil,' and stick to the Gospel—Christ, Christ—and you'll see de glory come down on yer people; and you'll see them a tramplin' on the world like I do. Don't think this yer is speritual pride in me. I'm as humble as a kitten, in myself; but oh! I am proud of my King, and my country whar I'm goin' mighty quick. Good-by, sir."

When the old negro had closed the door behind him, the minister read over the few pages of his next Sunday's sermon. It was cold and lifeless and worthless. There was no Christ in it. He tore the sheets into atoms, which he threw into the waste-basket, and sat down before his fire to meditate on the words of his poor visitor. He never thought so little of himself before. He felt that he could write nothing to instruct or edify his people then; and, taking up his hat, he went out to visit some of the poor hidden ones of his fold whom he knew to be great in the kingdom of heaven.

Never had two men changed places so suddenly as when he who looked like an old black beggar brought the learned gentleman to his feet for a lesson on the truth of God's Word, and of his duty to uphold that truth before his people.

"THE BLESSED HOPE."*

E. OWEN.

Though we're pilgrims and strangers, afar from our rest,
On probation awhile, to bring faith to the test;
We may cheer the lone journey all the way with a song,
 And a hope of salvation, that "keeps us along."

Though often discouraged, and tempted, and sad,
Our hearts sink within us, things seem to go bad;
Our friends prove unfriendly, and every thing wrong,
We've the blessed hope left us, that "keeps us along."

Though sickness o'ertake us, and sorrow's our lot,
And we feel both by heaven and earth we're forgot;
We may say with another, when "weak then I'm strong."
And rejoice in our hope, for it "keeps us along."

Our hope is our anchor; our hope is our all;
We are saved by our hope, for without it we fall;
Let us praise the kind Being to whom praises belong,
For our comforting hope, that which "keeps us along."

Portsmouth, N. H.

* These lines were suggested from a brother who was thanking God in a recent meeting for the Christian's hope, remarking, "It kept him along."

YOUNG LADIES, MAINTAIN YOUR ENTITY.

A. A. HOYT.

God made you for helpmeets, not parlor toys. You have a higher mission than merely to be externally pretty, by adornments of jewelry, plumes, bustles, ribbons, roses, etc. You was made for a grand and living purpose; spiritually, intellectually, and physically, being nobly created and divinely endowed with capabilities which perhaps you have as yet but poorly considered, and much less exercised. You were not made to be moulded by fashion into baby doll forms; petted and dandled as a helpless child, or a lady's lap dog. You were created to exercise thought, principle, action, and dignity of character; to mould society, and elevate fallen humanity; and shall the morally grand become a blank, to give place to the physically nonsensical?

Shall your God-given faculties, so highly capable of development and wonderful expansion, be smothered with romance, fashions, fancies, and borrowed thought? Let me hear your answer from the depth of your soul—No! never. I have seen young ladies with their heads covered, scrawled, and twisted with borrowed hair, resembling a swab of flax upon the distaff of an old-fashioned spinning wheel; upon their backs were bustles and ribbons, profusely and seemingly promiscuously blended together, like the rack of a rag-peddler's cart; while they performed a Grecian bend similar to the infirmities of old age. Slaves to fashion! deplorable condition!

Young ladies, you are called upon to usurp your liberty in the name of your Creator, and prepare yourselves for the stern realities of this earthly warfare. Your jingling beads, dangling chains, waving plumes, or streaming ribbons, can never win for you the prize. The very forest squaw, or swarthy Hindoo woman, bare-headed and bare footed, can outjingle and out-dangle the best of you. Come, then, fair ones, strike for a higher order of attainments. No longer pay your devotions to idol fashion, but cheerfully grasp the nobler duties of life; bear your breast to the storms; let nature's healthful breezes fan your pallid brow, invigorate your life, and bring the rose flush to your cheek. Make glad the grief-stricken heart by your worthy deeds of humanity; thus happyfying gloomy homes, reviving fainting spirits, and making many earthly souls rich jewels for eternity.

Gems.

— A man may well bear his cross patiently while on the road to wear his crown.

— The wise man is happy when he gains his own approbation; the fool when he gains that of others.

— Contentment is more satisfying than exhilaration; and contentment means simply the sum of small and quiet pleasures.

— People who are always fishing for compliments do not need very long lines. They can get their best bites in shallow water.

The husbandman has need to wait
 After the seed is planted,
For early and the latter rain,
 By the kind Father granted.
So, trusting Him whose will it is
 That we rich fruit should gather,
Patient we'll work, and watch, and wait,
 And leave it all with Father.

— The joy of the spirit is a delicate, sacred deposit, and must be kept in a pure casket, as an unholy breath will dim its lustre and fade its freshness.

— Let not religion be your diversion, but your business.

— Blessed are they who see the day of glory, but more blessed are they who contribute to its approach.

— It is the far-off look that brings repose.

— Prejudice keeps out the light from many souls. Like a painted window, it stops many of the rays, and colors those that it does admit.

— Consent to common custom, but not to common folly.

— As the needle is susceptible of the attraction of the loadstone, so our hearts, when touched with the magnet of faith, yield to the influence of divine attraction, and turn instinctively to God.

— People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy after.

The holy One had burdens, sorrows, tears;
 The garden and the cross—what anguish there!
We bear his burdens when our love appears;
 He smiles when we another's burden shares.

— The light that has been given us is not to be put under a bushel, but on a candlestick. Satan, indeed, by blasts of persecution, will do all he can to put it out. If our light be the light of Christ, those blasts will only cause it to shine the brighter.

— Real foresight consists in reserving our own forces. If we labor with anxiety about the future, we destroy that strength which will enable us to meet the future.

— Let no one count the number of his friends till they are bolted in the sieve of his own adversity, for there is much bran in prosperous friendship.

THOSE who love God with all the heart, must expect much opposition from persons who have gone on for twenty years in a lazy, old, beaten track, and fancy they are wiser than all the world; these always oppose the work of sanctification most.—John Wesley.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.—Money can buy many things, good and evil. All the wealth of the world could not buy you a friend, nor pay you for the loss of one. "I have wanted only one thing to make me happy," Hazlitt writes; "but, wanting that, have wanted every thing." And again, "My heart, shut up in the prison-house of this rude clay, has never found, nor will it ever find, a heart to speak to." We are the weakest of spendthrifts if we let one friend drop off through inattention, or let one push away another, or if we hold aloof from one for petty jealousy or heedless slight or roughness. Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? A friend is not to be weighed against the jewels of all the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face, and have it out. Quick, before love grows cold. "Life is too short to quarrel in."

GOD'S WORK MUST BE DONE.—A missionary in the West Indies having called on the colored people for a little help in spreading the gospel, a negro with a wooden leg came forward, and pulling from one pocket a parcel of silver said, "That's for me, massa;" and another parcel from another pocket, "That's for my wife, massa;" and another still (in all thirteen dollars), "That's for my child, massa."

When asked by the missionary if he was not giving too much, he said—"God's work must be done, massa, and I may be dead."

Let us do and let us give what we can, for "God's work must be done, and we may be dead."

AN EXAMPLE.—If christians, when they have a matter of difference, would graciously agree to meet with each other in prayer, and pray together kindly for each other, their contention would soon end; but one cannot stoop, and the other will not. They are not as wise as Luther's two goats, who once met upon a narrow plank over a deep water. They would not go back, and they dare not fight. At length one of them lay down while the other walked over him, and so peace and safety attended both. Why should not christians try this method?

KEEP WORKING.—We must not only strike the iron while it is hot, but strike it till it is made hot. Great occasions must not be waited for; we must make use of ordinary opportunities as they may offer.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

DYSENTERY.—Great care should be taken to avoid this disease, as it is often serious. It is sometimes epidemic, runs readily into a typhoid state, and proves suddenly fatal. It is usually induced by eating crude, indigestible food, as unripe or decayed fruit, or drinking spirits, or taking into the stomach anything that may irritate or inflame the bowels. Breathing impure air, a sudden chill or cold, strong, drastic cathartics, sudden change of garments, and drinking impure water, are among the things that induce this disease. Exhausting labors, either of body or mind, produce it. Among its symptoms are discharge of bloody mucous, with griping pain, usually near the lower portion of the bowels, attended with more or less fever, in proportion to the extent of the irritation and inflammation.

If attacked, a person should keep as quiet as possible, as rest and a recumbent posture are essential to comfort and recovery from any and every disease of the bowels.

Dysentery is a disease which often requires the best medical skill to manage it; and, therefore, the safer way is to send for your family physician at once. Till he comes, or, if a physician cannot be had, the following items may be attended to: As little food should be taken as possible; slippery-elm bark, gum-arabic, rice-water, or a very small quantity of flour gruel is the most that it will be safe to swallow.—Herald of Health.

KEEPING RIPE FRUIT IN OUR ROOMS.—We should be chary of keeping ripe fruit in our sitting-rooms, and especially beware of laying it about a sick chamber for any length of time. The complaint which some people make about a faint sensation in the presence of fruit, is not fanciful—they may be really affected by it; for two continental chemists have shown that from the moment of plucking, apples, cherries, currants, and other fruits are subject to incessant transformation. At first they absorb the oxygen, thus robbing the surrounding air of its vital element. Then they evolve carbonic acid, and this in far greater volume than the purer gas is absorbed, so that we have poison given us in the place of pure air, with compound interest. Temperature affects the rate of changes, warmth accelerating it.—Good Health.

MENTAL VIGOR IN OLD AGE.—It is related of Arnauld, the Jansenist, that he wished his friend Nicole to assist him in a new work. Nicole replied: "We are now old; is it not time to rest?" "Rest!" exclaimed Arnauld, "have we not all eternity to rest in?" Dr. Samuel Miller says, "There is no doubt that the premature dotage of many distinguished men has arisen from their ceasing, in advanced life, to exert their faculties, under the impression that they were too old to engage in any new enterprise." When John Adams was ninety years of age he was asked how he kept the vigor of his faculties up to that great age. He replied, "By constantly employing them; the mind of an old man is like an old horse; is you would get any work out of it, you must work it all the time."

EARTH POULTICES FOR SMALL POX.—The value of earth as a disinfectant and deodorizer is well known, and the treatment of ulcerated sores and gangrenous wounds with it is becoming very general. A new application has lately been described by Dr. E. S. Bunker, who states that he has recently used clay as a dressing for the face in two cases of confluent small-pox, dusting it in fine powder over the faces of the patients as soon as the pustules become fairly developed. This formed a clean, dry, wholesome scab, absorbing the infectious material, and scaling off during convalescence, leaving the underlying skin in its natural and normal state. The painful itching, which is one of the worst characteristics of the disease, had entirely abated. The earth used was fine pipe clay.

WHEN keeping vigils by the bedside of the sick, a very simple means of refreshing one's self, and a valuable disinfectant, if the nature of the invalid's complaint does not forbid it, and I think that is seldom the case, is to put some pure, fresh, ground coffee on a saucer or other dish, and in the centre place a very small piece of camphor gum, and touch a match to it. As the gum burns, allow sufficient coffee to consume to pervade the atmosphere with the aroma; it is wonderful in its invigorating effects upon the nurse. In diseases of the bowels this is particularly good. To do this once or twice in the twenty-four hours helps a person very much in this taxing occupation, until the convalescence of the object of our care permits us the rest of an unbroken sleep again, while we feel like old battered hulks coming into port for repairs.

DIET FOR DIARRHŒA.—Roast some rice as you would coffee; then grind it in a coffee-mill; then dissolve two ounces of gum arabic in one pint of hot water; when dissolved put in a tea-cup of rice, and let it boil twenty minutes, or until it is the consistency of mush. If two thick, as you use it, thin it with hot water. Desperate cases have been cured by this remedy.—Home and Health.

BRUISES.—Apply repeatedly cloths wrung out of hot water. This will prevent discoloration of the skin, or "black eye," if applied immediately.

A BOY WITH A CONSCIENCE.

A boy with a conscience? Don't all boys have consciences? Certainly, they do. But some boys act as if they had none; they do not heed what their consciences say. I will now tell you of a boy who proved he had a conscience by what he did.

His name was James. Playing with his sister one day, he asked her to do some little favor for him, and added,—

"If you will do it, I will give you a thousand dollars."

Of course this was a thoughtless speech; and most boys would have neither thought nor said any more about it. But this boy's conscience whispered, "You have made a promise you cannot keep."

With tears in his eyes James then ran to his mother, and said,—

"O mother! I told Frankie I would give her a thousand dollars, and I haven't a thousand dollars to give!"

This speech showed that James listened to his conscience about little things. This was as it should be; and if James had lived to manhood, he would have made a good man. As it was, God took him when he was fifteen years old.

Children, mind what the good little voice in your hearts says to you. God speaks through that voice. Heed it well. Obey it, and God's other voice, which speaks in the Bible, and you will become noble here and glorious hereafter.

THE RUNAWAY KNOCK.

"Teacher," said a bright, earnest-faced boy, "why is it that so many prayers are unanswered? I do not understand. The Bible says: 'Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you;' but it seems to me a great many knock and are not admitted."

"Did you never sit by your cheerful parlor fire," said the teacher, "on some dark evening, and hear a loud knocking at the door? Going to answer the summons, have you not sometimes looked out into the darkness, seeing nothing, but hearing the pattering of some mischievous boys, who knocked but did not wish to enter, and therefore ran away? Thus it often is with us. We ask for blessings, but do not really expect them; we fear that Jesus will not hear us; will not admit us, and so we go away."

"Ah, I see," said the earnest-faced boy, his eyes shining with the new light dawning in his soul; "Jesus cannot be expected to answer runaway knocks. I mean to keep knocking until he cannot help opening the door."

WHAT TO DO WHEN ANGRY.—"I get mad so quickly, and then I am sure to say something that I am sorry for ever afterwards."

"When angry, count three before speaking," answered the boy's father.

The next time the boy fell into a fit of anger with one of his school-fellows, he remembered the advice of his father, and counted three. By this time he was able to keep back the hard words that were ready to leap from his tongue, and so saved himself the grief of shame and repentance.

Try this remedy, quick-tempered boys and girls. It is best, of course, not to get angry; but if you do happen to lose your self-control, then put a seal on your lips, and remain silent until your hot blood is cooled a little. Every time you do this, you will gain some power over your temper, and after a while be able to keep it from breaking out, and doing yourself and others harm.

THE RIGHT IDEA OF PRAYER.—One day a little boy heard a clergyman preach from the text, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." After reading the text, he stopped a minute, and asked his hearers to consider what it was they should like most, and then to ask for it in Jesus' name, trusting to his promise that it would be given to them. At the end of this service the little boy asked his aunt if she had asked for any thing. Then she asked him what he had asked God to give him; and he said, "I thought first of one thing I should like, and then another; but I did not know which would be the best to ask; so I said, 'Father, thy will be done.'"

KILLED BY TOBACCO.—A youth of sixteen fell dead with a cigar in his mouth in a dram-shop. What caused his death? The coroner's inquest said, "It was a mysterious act of God." The minister at the funeral consoled the friends in the same way. Physicians said it was "heart disease." A sensible woman, knowing the boy's habits, said, "Tobacco killed him." It deranged the action of the heart; it ceased to beat, and the victim fell.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.—Mother found Josy, Mary, and Annie sitting with their arms round each other, hugging and kissing each other, —a brother and two little sisters.

"Mother," said Josy, "why did God say, 'Little children, love one another,' when we can't help it? Of course we should, without being told."

Oh! I wish it was always so.

NOT FAR AWAY.—Two little girls were walking homeward one moonlight evening. I overheard one of them say, "Sister Annie, it don't make any difference how fast we walk, the moon keeps up with us every step of the way; it don't move at all, and yet it is always going along with us." So it is with God in heaven; though he seems far away, he is keeping step with us always, in the march of life.

— A noble life is a continual melody.

BATTLE SONG OF THE CHURCH.

Fear not the foe, thou flock of God;
Fear not the sword, the spear, the rod;
Fear not the foe!
He fights in vain who fights with thee;
Soon shalt thou see his armies flee;
Himself laid low.

Come, cheer thee to the toil and fight;
'Tis God, thy God, defends the right;
He leads thee on.
His sword shall scatter every foe;
His shield shall ward off every blow;
The crown is won.

SOUND DOCTRINE.

CYRUS MENDENHALL.

. . . "It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."—Jude 3.

Thus it was Jude wrote to the christians in his day, exhorting them to be constant in faith, warning them of false teachers, and prophesying the coming of the Lord with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and telling them there should be mockers in the last times. We who now live in this eventful period of earth's history, when she now trembles and totters on the very verge of dissolution, have great need to make a thorough personal application of the apostle's words.

Many errors have crept into the church, which have so adulterated the pure "faith which was once delivered unto the saints," that it in a measure contaminates the whole economy of the blessed religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The first grand error (of which an account is given in Gen.) was that in which our first parents chose to believe Satan's lie, rather than the never-failing word of God. God said to Adam, (in regard to the forbidden fruit), "In the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die;" but that crafty serpent, the devil, said, "Ye shall not surely die." They accepted this false statement, hence the fall, and the consequent misery that fell to Adam, and was entailed to all his posterity. Here we find the source of all evils, and the beginning of all errors in doctrine. We read in the account of the creation, that "God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." Here nothing is said of any part of man being formed indestructible, immortal, never-dying. Had there been any such thing in our composition, would it not have been recorded? Nowhere do we read of an immortal soul or spirit in God's word, though the words soul and spirit are used over a thousand times in our Bible. Then are we not right in positively affirming, that this supposed entity, which wings its way to heaven or hell, when the body dies, is a myth? Adam became a living mortal soul by the "breath of life" being placed inside the hitherto lifeless body, which will again return to its primitive state, when the "breath of life" leaves it; or in other words, when the spirit (or life) returns to God that gave it; then Adam becomes a dead soul, and is as though he had not been. When Adam transgressed, God thus read his sentence:—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground (not go to heaven or hell); for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 11: 19. Now we hold that the "thou" included all of Adam, just as he was created; hence his entire being must now be in the dust. The man just as God formed him must suffer the penalty of sin which is death, not life anywhere, under any circumstances whatever. No part is spared; the living dust must become inanimate.

Josephus says man was formed of dust, and God gave him a soul and a spirit. This doctrine was transmitted by the Jews and early christian fathers, and now Satan's lie is preached as the truth, and is clung to by nearly all worshipers on the globe. It is the basis of Spiritualism, Hindooism, and all other doctrines which are openly opposed to the word of God. Everywhere the Scriptures teach that man is mortal. God only hath immortality; yet notwithstanding this fact, modern theologians teach that man is immortal, and must live forever, either in the joys of heaven above, or dwell writhing in pains unspeakable, and agonies unending, in a hell below, such as is thus described by H. Bonar, D. D.:—

"Descend, O sinner, to the gloom!
Hear the judgment knell
Send forth its terror-shrieking sound,
These walls of adamant around,
And fill to its utmost bound
Thy woful, woful hell.
No river of forgetfulness,
As poets dreamed and sung,
Rolls yonder to efface the past,
To quench the sense of what thou wast,
To soothe or end thy pain at last,
Or cool thy burning tongue."

Could this be what God meant when he told Adam he must return to dust? Is this the meaning of the passage—"the wages of sin is death"? Or how can we do away with the plain words of Paul (2 Thess. 1: 9), when speaking of coming judgment—"Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the glory of his power"? Can everlasting destruction mean everlasting preservation? We answer no, and we are supported by the law and testimony, which surely is a much better foundation than the traditions of men.

John says (6: 53)—"Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." He also says that he will raise those who have partaken of him at the last day; then they shall inherit eternal life. Eternal life belongs to Christ's followers alone, others have "no (eternal) life in them;" therefore, they who die out of Christ cannot be in this place of torment, which is made hideous beyond description by the blasphemous cursings of the lost. We are told by Peter, that they must perish utterly. Matthew says "soul and body" will be destroyed. Other parts of the Scriptures teach that they are to be consumed as chaff, cut off from the earth, be burned up root and branch, be as though they had not been. Ezekiel says—"The soul that sinneth it shall die." Man is everywhere spoken of as mortal, his life being as vapor, perishing. Isa. says (40: 6)—"All flesh is grass, and all goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field."

We are placed upon this earth with a nature depraved, and a heart desperately wicked and deceitful above all things; surrounded on all sides by sin and temptation. The ways of wickedness hold forth many allurements, while the way of truth and righteousness is narrow and seemingly difficult. In fact, we are naturally "the children of wrath," placed here on a short probation to choose everlasting life, or what is directly opposite, everlasting death. It would not be justice to make evil eternal, by keeping man in torments; it would rather make our most merciful God appear in the light of an unjust tyrant. On the contrary, our Creator is just and ever ready to pity and pardon. He wishes us to love him. He does not hate the sinner, only the sin. If man will not give up sin, he must perish with it; though God takes no pleasure in his death. Preaching hell fire and brimstone, in order to add to the church, is giving our gracious Master a false character, by making him of a vindictive spirit. John says (1st 4: 18)—"There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth, is not made perfect in love." Paul says to Timothy (2nd 1: 7)—"For God has not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." We are bidden to seek immortality. Christ says—"I am the way." "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16. We here see that Jesus has brought immortality to light through the Gospel. If we love him and keep his commandments, we shall be raised up in the last day, and shall be clothed upon by immortality, not be inhabited by it, as men teach, in the shape of a deathless spirit.

Death is an enemy to mankind, robbing him of life, and of all that he holds dear on earth. Elijah so considered it, when he prayed unto the Lord, and said—"O Lord my God, hast thou also brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son. . . . . O Lord, my God, I pray thee let this child's soul (or life) come into him again." We read in the case of Hezekiah, that he was sick. The prophet Isaiah came to him, and said—"Thus saith the Lord; Set thine house in order, for thou shalt die, and not live." Did Hezekiah rejoice at this, believing that soon his soul would sweep through the pearly gates? Let us see: "Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord, saying, I beseech thee, O Lord, remember me now, how I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart; and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah wept sore." We find in the sixth verse, his prayer was granted, and fifteen years were added to his days. 2 Kings 20.

Lazarus was restored to life. Was it a kind act to recall his soul from worlds of bliss, after he had passed the "dark valley of the shadow of death"? Richard Baxter says of the righteous—"But I find not that his servants are thus characterized by their desire to die." And again—"There is some thing penal in death even to believers." Death would be a friend, if he acted as a messenger to conduct us to a better world; but he does not do so; for at death we go down into silence, the pit, the grave, and to corruption. If it were not for Christ, we must forever remain there. He is "the resurrection and the life," and whosoever "liveth and believeth in me, shall never die; believest thou this?" This reward of endless life will be at the advent of Christ, as we learn in Luke 14: 14—"And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee, for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Also see Rev. 11: 15–18.

We are told that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; that is, our mortal bodies, that had lain in corruption, shall be made like his body, independent of any inherent deathlessness of our own. Therefore, his personal coming is of vital importance to us, for he is our only hope, because he comes to raise the dead, change the living saints, and destroy the wicked, restore the earth, and reign King ever more. At his coming, he will restore all things that we have lost through Adam. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. 15: 22. In that day all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth to receive reward or punishment, as the case may be. God's saints are still in the dust. David hath not yet ascended to heaven, but fell on sleep, was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption. Acts 13: 36. The prophet of old could not be mistaken in regard to the holy men, when he said, "awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust." Isa. 24: 19. When Jesus comes, then will the prophet's word be fulfilled—"I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death; O death, I will be thy plagues, O grave, I will be thy destruction." Hosea 13: 14. While under the enemy, man is entirely unconscious. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Luther says, speaking of the advent of Christ, "May God visit us at length according to his infinite power, and hasten the day of the glorious coming of his Son, in which he shall destroy that man of sin. And let all the people say, Amen." Luther, and very many other great and good men, looked upon Christ's second coming, as the time when that which now is misery and sin, should be cleared away, and joy and peace reign in their stead. Then the holy city will be the abode of the righteous forever more, all through the efficacy of the atonement of Christ the life-giver. Many pious writers denied the immortal-soul doctrine; among whom was George Wishart, a preacher, who on the 27th of February, 1546, was arraigned by the Pope's adherents for heresy. One of the charges against him was, that he had said "the soul of man should sleep till the last day, and should not obtain immortal life till that time." He was burned at the stake, dying in confirmation of the gospel of Christ. [Fox's Book of Martyrs.] He died another victim to that "man of sin," because he "earnestly contended for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

Millions of dollars have been emptied into the Catholic treasury for prayers for immortal souls in purgatory. God help us to put down this satanic delusion. Help us, thou infinite and holy One, to rend the pall of mysticism and error which shrouds thy word, and may we not become as blind leaders of the blind, wresting the Scriptures to our own destruction. Help us to take heed unto ourselves, and "unto the doctrine; continue in them, for in doing this, thou shalt save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. 4: 16. We must hold fast the form of sound words, giving the truth literally as it is written in the book of books; pure, easy to understand, shining forth the truth in all its beautiful effulgence; scattering by its influence all error and sin. But man opposes this beautiful truth of eternal life only in Christ. To think himself as a beast is too much for human pride; but what saith the word of God? "For that which befalleth the sons of men, befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath, so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Ecc. 19: 20. Men will write and contend for the dogma of a deathless germ in spite of such an array of truth against it. They will listen to any doctrine, however absurd, but this pet theory must not be molested. But why marvel ye? is it not one of the signs of the times? "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." May we never compromise our faith to suit the creeds of men, or teach a doctrine because it is popular; but rather take the word of God as our covenant, searching it, with a teachable, prayerful spirit; with holy guidance; then we cannot go far astray, for his Spirit will guide us unto all truth; and if our gospel be hid, it is hid unto them that are lost. All will appear plain without discrepancies, "for God is not the author of confusion, but of peace." It is man's confusion and clashing of doctrine that exists. God's word is full of harmony. Let us, then, having Christ as our foundation, build thereon the gold and precious stones of truth, that when that day comes that shall try men's works, ours shall stand the test. Then we shall suffer no loss, but receive a reward.

A common salvation is open to all, through Christ the only gate. Will you then accept him as your leader, turn and live forever? He it is who will destroy the last enemy death. He will save to the uttermost all who come to him with repenting hearts. At the last day you shall become immortal souls through him. We are at best undeserving, weak mortals, committing many errors, making many crooked paths; but Christ is ever ready to intercede in our behalf. He is our hope, our Savior, our life, and our righteousness. In that day shall the Lord of hosts be for a crown of glory, and for a diadem of beauty, unto the residue of his people. Isa. 18: 5. God help us to be ready for this, and may we hold fast until he comes, by word and deed, "earnestly contending for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

"COME UNTO ME."

Words by Miss E. KELLAWAY. Abergavenny, Eng. Matt. xi, 28. Music by Geo. E. Lee.

4 Hark! 'tis the voice of Jesus
Calling to thee;
Speak for Me while thou may'st;
Be bold for Me.
The world may mock and sneer,
But thou need'st never fear,
For I am always near,
So speak for Me.

5 Hark! 'tis the voice of Jesus
Calling to thee,
I'm coming soon to earth,
So watch for Me.
The night is long and drear,
But morning shades appear,
Which speak my advent near,
Then watch for Me.

6 Hark! 'tis the voice of Jesus
Calling to thee.
I "come again" that thou
May'st come to Me.
And when I "come again,"
Thou shalt be freed from pain,
And in My kingdom reign,
For aye with Me.

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit."—1 Cor. 15: 50.

The meaning of flesh and blood cannot inherit," as commonly given among us, as a people, is very unsatisfactory, and looks more like a "play upon words" than a good, clear, open and honest explanation of a passage often quoted against us. The answer usually given is, "that is true, flesh and blood cannot, but flesh and bones can." But if it be true that flesh and blood cannot inherit, then it is equally untrue to say that flesh and bones can; for it is undeniably a scriptural fact that neither the one or the other of these can INHERIT the kingdom. But a mighty chorus of voices will at once cry out, "Did not our Savior say after his resurrection, 'Handle me, and see' 'that it is I myself,' 'for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have'? and did not he inhabit after he rose from the dead, among them? Yes, that is all true; but INHERIT is not used in the text in the sense of INHABIT, or POSSESS, at all, and that is the almost universal error that we fall into. There is a possibility that this erroneous teaching may be corrected and reformed, but not much probability that it will be, for when men get a crotchet in the brain, it is seldom removed except by dissolution.

One man has been at work faithfully for nearly fifteen years to reform this abuse of language, but "they" think they know, and so the "stone remains in one end of the sack." But to-day, that one man makes an appeal to his preaching brethren for help in this matter. Come, brethren, to the rescue. Truth is surely better than error, and more sanctifying. We who preach the gospel to others are, to some extent, responsible for the opinions formed and views entertained. Now a dogmatic affirmation that a thing is or is not so and so, thus and thus, will never make or unmake it so. Let us then look this Scripture right square in the face, until it can no longer laugh us out of countenance.

1. We inquire, then, why cannot flesh and blood inherit the kingdom? We answer (1), because "flesh and blood" is simply a Hebrew equivalent for mortality; and mortality can no more result in immortality, than darkness can produce light. But immortality is an element of the kingdom, as well as of Deity, and flesh, nor blood, nor bones, has any claim either by inherent title, or by promise to either. (2) We answer, because none but the children can inherit; for the children only are the heirs, and the heirs only are entitled to the inheritance. Now it is said of Christ, that he is appointed heir of all things; but he was not made heir by virtue of his descent from Adam, through David, as the Son of man, the seed of the woman, flesh and blood, or flesh and bones, as he was "made under the law." But he was made "heir of all things" by his having been made the Son of God, and this divine appointment to sonship and consequent heirship was not through the "begetting of blood, nor the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." Jno. 1: 13.—Diaglott. But nothing is said about "bones" in the proof. Let us see. After the flesh, Jesus was born of Mary, and as such was the "seed of the woman," to whom the promise was made in Gen. 3: 15, concerning whose formation it is said (Gen. 2: 21), "He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof." Of this rib, transformed into a woman, "Adam said (verse 23), This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man," where we find flesh and bones used as equivalents, having one common origin, subject to one common law, and destined to one common end. Enough on that point.

Now there are three things that are involved in making Jesus Son and heir of God. (1) The begetting by the Spirit; (2) the anointing or quickening by the Spirit at his immersion; (3) his birth by the Spirit, when the Spirit brought him forth from the dead, as "THE FIRST BORN"; therefore eldest Son and heir, for to this Son God had given, willed, promised the INHERITANCE, not through the law, but THROUGH THE SPIRIT. Gal. 3: 18–18. In Rom. 2, Paul shows us how we by nature, through transgression, are all under sin by the law of God; and in Eph. 2, that we are every one of us (Gentiles) aliens; and in Gal. 5: 19–21, he tells us what flesh is heir to; but in Rom. 8, and Gal. 4, and Eph. 2, he informs us how we cease from being "in the flesh," and are brought into the Spirit, being no more servants or aliens, but brought nigh by the blood of Christ; "that we might receive the adoption of sons, . . . and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ" (Gal. 4: 4–7); "for as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God; . . . the Spirit itself bearing witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God (or God's heirs), and joint heirs with Christ" (Rom. 8: 14–17); and the children, through the Spirit, can inherit, being entitled by promise through faith, and the inheritance, like the enabling cause, is incorruptible, and undefiled, and is reserved for us in heaven (the title being invested in Christ the eldest Son and brother), from whence we look for the Lord Jesus, who will change our vile body, and fashion like unto his own glorious body. In Judges 2: 6 we read, "the children of Israel went every man to his inheritance, to possess the land," where inheritance and possessing, or inhabiting, occupying, or dwelling in or on, are not used as synonymous. Just so of the term inherit; it is not used by Paul in the sense of inhabit or possess; but purely in a legal sense, as a law phrase, by which he tells the brethren, that these men who have only got a fleshly descent from, or a blood relation to Abraham, can never get any place in the kingdom of God; because God has never had, nor has he now got, any such purpose; and it is not in accordance with his plan or purpose to make Agar's children heirs with those of Sarah. Agar's son was born "after the flesh" (illegitimate to plans and purposes), and therefore cannot inherit the land of promise, which was to come to Abraham by the Spirit, through a resurrection from the dead; therefore the legitimate heirs must come in the same way; and hence the promise to Sarah in her dead state; showing thereby the power and purpose of the Spirit of God to produce its (or his) own children and heirs of the inheritance by promise through faith.

That text is one of the strongest in the Bible as proof of the correctness of the views of those who entertain the faith of the Abrahamic inheritance through Christ, provided we do not spoil it by weakening it through barbaric torture.

THE POWER OF GOD.

A. BOYNTON.

We are in an age of wonders, an age of haste, an age of extremes. Christ alludes to our time, when he speaks of false Christs, "which, if it were possible, would deceive the very elect." We desire briefly but plainly to make this subject known, that the little ones may be "kept from the snare of the fowler."

There are three classes worthy of note: the first are those who make the knowledge of truth the door of salvation; in other words, although admitting God to be a Spirit that must be worshipped in "spirit and in truth;" yet in fact they ignore all supernatural operation of this Spirit, making it only a thing of human creation. Perhaps the term "Ritualism" would express our idea of the thing. Another class, seeing a lack in this system meet their view of the divine law, rush to another extreme; they are all Holy Ghost, or are more properly filled with a light of their own creating; warmed by a fire of their own kindling. Their proper name (we speak it in love and pity) is Fanatics. The middle or true ground we conceive to be (as we read and understand God's word) according to the prayer of Jesus: "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." The revealed word of God, to be efficacious to salvation, in whole or in part, must be accompanied by, and received through, or in connection with the Holy Spirit. This life giving element by which "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" must permeate the whole thing, "medicate" every truthful utterance of God to us, or it falls on the outer man (the man of flesh, sense or mind) only. "Create within me (says the psalmist) a clean heart, and renew a right spirit in me." It is just here where the "power of God" is needed, and it must be had, too, or all is a failure with us. The righteousness of the flesh, or law, and even a correct knowledge of all truth, and as perfect obedience as this knowledge connected with human ability may or can produce, will fail—fail to justify us before God; even so also our feeling, wrought out by this knowledge, being pure as the sources of its origin (the natural heart) will permit, must of necessity be of the character of its fleshly author; deceptive, transient, emotional.

True christian conduct is in every case, and at all times made known, regulated and controlled by the word, accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghost; this being the life element, both in it (the word) and in us, which causes "peace in believing, and joy in the Holy Ghost." These are the things which God hath joined together, and man is forbidden to part them asunder; in the doing of which a deep, dark, and we fear an eternal condemnation has come over all the churches, and gaunt famine meets our gaze throughout the land. Men grope like blind men; they "gather together, but not by me." They worship idols, things of their own fashioning, the person, the place (their nice church), and their adornings. The voice of the beloved disciple of our Lord is heard no more: "My little children, keep yourselves from idols."

O ye scattered flock of the true Shepherd, shake off your lethargy, hear the Master's voice, arise, put on thy beautiful garments, and go forth in haste to meet him, for he calleth thee. I hear the rumbling of his chariot wheels. He is coming for thee, coming with power and great glory, as King of kings, and Lord of lords. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

HEART-KEEPING.

"Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life."

As good housekeeping is essential to domestic comfort, so good heart-keeping is essential to healthful and happy piety. The word of God represents the human heart as a dwelling. The unconverted heart is a habitation of the evil one, with a brood of sinful thoughts and tastes and passions. When Jesus Christ first enters this dwelling-place of the evil one, he finds it fearfully filthy and out of order. The first work of the divine Spirit is to cleanse the house. Every room must be entered and purified. Into the stately and sumptuous drawing-room where pride held court, the lowly Savior enters and expels the occupant. From the walls of sensuality's chambers many wanton pictures have to be taken down. The deserted and cob-webbed closet of conscience is entered by the key of truth, and is thrown open to the daylight.

Memory is another apartment of the mind which the Holy Spirit renews for a higher and holier use. Ranged on its shelves he finds the stores which were brought in through the five door-ways of the senses. Much of this accumulation is but rubbish. Christ does not destroy this faculty; he simply makes it henceforth a granary of truth. A sanctified memory is the soul's store-room. We pity the man with whom this is but an empty garret or a confused lumber-room, heaped up with accumulated things, so hopelessly mingled that its owner can never lay hands on what he needs at the moment. With a devout believer the memory is a cabinet of curiosities of God's love. In no apartment does Jesus abide oftener than he does in this; here the alabaster-box of gratitude is broken, and the room is filled with the sweet odor of the ointment.

There is also a chamber of taste, from whose window the lover of beauty looks out on magnificent landscapes; and at midnight up into the star-studded vaults of heaven. There is a lofty watch-tower where holy vigilance keeps guard to espy the approaches of the enemy. Woe unto the Christian when the sentinel falls asleep on the tower! Over the door-way to this turret the Spirit has written, "Watch unto prayer." "Blessed is he whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." From this tower faith often looks through the spy-glass of the promises, and catches bright glimpses of the celestial city which lies at the end of the way.

"For glimpses such as these,
My willing soul will bear
All that in darkest hours it sees
Of toil and pain and care."

We must not overlook one room in our converted heart, though it be ever so small or ever so secluded. It is the secret "closet" where faith holds sweet fellowship with God. It is fragrant with the presence of Jesus. Here stands the mercy-seat. To this inner sanctum faith keeps a golden key inscribed, "Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; pray without ceasing." Over the door she reads the inviting words: "Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." On the walls are inscriptions written in moments of devout intercourse with God, when the meditations of him were like the droppings of the honeycomb.

This is faith's stronghold; here she weapons herself for the daily conflict. Silence in that closet of prayer bespeaks death throughout all the house. When that door is suffered to rust on its hinges, and that chamber is deserted, then the heart-house is soon re-taken by Satan, and evil spirits come in and dwell there.

To keep this house with all diligence is the primal duty of every one who bears the name of Christ. How to keep Jesus in the inner heart, and how to glorify Jesus in the outer life, is the two-fold secret of spiritual success and of final salvation.—T. L. Cuyler.

Humility.—Catch an old christian without humility if you can. It is nothing but this flesh of ours, and those seeds of the proud apostate which lie lurking within us, that make us think ourselves worthy of the air we breathe. When our eyes are opened by the influence of divine grace, we then shall begin to think of ourselves "as we ought to think," even that Christ is all in all, and we less than nothing.

— Hot-house christians are not of much service. Men are wanted who can live and thrive in the inclement and boisterous weather of the world.

THE SPIRITS IN PRISON.

ORTHODOXY AGAINST ITSELF.

1. They represent this life to be the only time of probation for all men, and its end is at death. Then inasmuch as all men receive their reward at death, how could Christ's preaching avail anything for those confined in the imagined underworld prison? Their state is irrevocably fixed. See their explanation of the rich man and Lazarus. One cannot pass from either locality to the other. Now, the word cannot, will forever prevent any power from releasing those confined there, however penitent they may become. What! was God less wise then than now? Did he then suffer all men to go by chance to their destination? But says the Immaterialist, there was no place of happiness prepared, save one part of hades. But now the saints go to paradise at death. But was this place prepared before or when Christ ascended? He says in John 14: 1–3—"Let not your hearts be troubled, etc.; in my Father's house are many mansions; I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again." No one is simple enough to risk their lives in a bark on the ocean till they know it is finished. We cannot know that this place is prepared till Jesus comes to tell us; for he has not promised to send us word, but declared he would come again.

2. How could Christ be in hell among the damned, and in heaven or paradise, at the same time? You tell us that he conducted the thief immediately from the cross to paradise. Then he was there three days, receiving the praises of the thief. So when he (or his body) was raised from the grave, he descends the second time, which makes a second coming. Thus Universalism is made true by orthodoxy.

3. As that mode of explaining 1 Pet. 3: 19, extends probation beyond death, why make such an effort to convert sinners, since they can all have the privilege of redemption hereafter? For God is not partial; and if he preached there, he left the gospel there for the succeeding generations or inhabitants of that locality.

4. If you claim that he went to preach to the righteous who were confined there, I will ask you to read more carefully; for Peter says they "were disobedient;" and if so they were not very righteous. Christ said that he "came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." How will you extricate yourself from this dilemma, brother Immaterialist? Your theory cannot stand. God's ways are equal, and do not cross each other. "God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain." Listen to his plain declarations, and those of his apostles, and all those difficulties will give way like mist before the sun.

Who were the spirits, and where the prison? 1. You must note that a person is not a prisoner unless they realize their prison. 2. They must be placed in a position to comply with the conditions antecedent to reprieve those conditions you know they were deprived of if in hell, or anywhere beyond the grave. Peter says (v. 20), "who some time [not all time] were disobedient." When? "When once the long suffering of God waited, in the days of Noah." How long? While he was preparing the ark, wherein only eight souls were saved by water. And he let his disciples know that under any dispensation a few only will be saved.

Then the spirits were living beings or persons. These persons were Noah and his family. But, says the objector, Noah was righteous. Turn to Heb. 11: 7—"By faith Noah being warned of God, of things not seen as yet, moved with fear [marg. being wary], prepared an ark to the saving of his house, by the which he condemned the world, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." Now we see that he became heir of the righteousness which is of God (Isa. 54: 17), the same as we become heirs of God and joint heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ.

Again (1 Pet. 4: 6), "For this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit." Now we know that the wicked never can live according to God in the spirit; hence they must have been those seven persons who believed the preaching of Noah, and complied with the conditions of salvation; i. e., went into the ark. They were in prison. From the time that Noah began to herald the judgments of God coming on the world, he was ridiculed and tormented by a wicked and gainsaying people, and became anxious for his deliverance from that prison of sin and folly and unbelief.

And in conclusion let me say that the prison still exists, and will to the end of time. Time would fail me to refer to numerous Scriptures bearing on the subject. Christ has finally completed the plans, and made known to us the conditions of our eternal deliverance. The Gentile race who could only approach to the outer gate of the temple, two hundred steps from the altar, and leave their sacrifices there, are now assured that made nigh by the blood of Christ, our hearts are cheered with the words falling from the lips of the patriarchs and prophets. See Isa. 42: 6—"And give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness of the prison house." (ch. 6: 1)—"The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek, hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to all the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord, and the day of vengeance of our God." (Matt. 4: 14)—"That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of by the prophet Isaiah." (Luke 2: 30)—"Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, a light to lighten the Gentiles."

God grant that we may all comply with the conditions of life, faith in Christ, and so be finally saved, is my prayer. Amen.—N. C. Miller, in Advent Christian Times.

AG'T.

THE NATIONAL CAMPMEETING.

Another great and good meeting at Springfield is numbered with the things that were; but its effect will be felt for many days to come. We have never attended a meeting that seemed to leave a more hallowed influence. It indicated the dawn of better days than have been enjoyed since 1843–4.

We arrived on the ground Thursday P. M., Aug. 15th. That night we had a precious meeting in the boarding tent; also the following evening. Saturday evening we had our first exercises at the stand. During the meeting we had good preaching by Brn. J. Hemenway, O. D. Woodruff, C. Goodrich, P. G. Bowman, H. A. King, Geo. A. Streeter, G. A. Cole, I. C. Wellcome, A. Ross, H. F. Carpenter, J. Couch, L Boutell, A. A. Phelps, H. L. Hastings, M. Batchelor, M. W. Lutz, Wm. L. Himes, D. M. Leavitt, H. Munger, Srs. L M Stoddard, E. M. Crumb, J. Benson, and E Jennings.

Many requested prayers, and were blest. About twenty were baptized in the Ct. river. The baptisms were seasons of refreshing from the Lord. The meeting was noted for good order. We saw no improper conduct, nor heard an oath, or any improper noise during the entire encampment. Every one seemed to be friendly to the best interests of the meeting. We lay down at night with as little fear of disturbance as we feel at home. Mr Pease, the city Marshal of Springfield, was careful to see that all lawless people were properly restrained. He is an efficient man, and commands high esteem for his judicious course in preserving order and protecting the welfare of the city.

The sessions of the A. C. Association were also noted for the exhibition of kind feeling, christian forbearance, and brotherly love. The business of the Association was transacted with much despatch and apparent satisfaction. All seemed desirous of doing what may be for the best good of the whole. It is rare that we see such a spirit of submission to each other, and such brotherly love manifested in the transaction of business as was exhibited at this campmeeting. The officers in the various departments were all re-elected. The prospects of the publishing association were never more encouraging than at the present time. We now issue between nine and ten thousand copies of the Crisis weekly, and find an increasing interest among the people to know more about these things. Doors are opening in all directions for the reception of the glorious truths we love so dearly.

We have not attended a meeting with our Brn. since we embraced christian religion about thirty years ago, where the spirit of devotion and consecration to Christ was so deep as at this meeting. Holiness of heart, as a necessary preparation for the coming of Jesus, was the key-note of the meeting, and served to produce the sweetest harmony among the children of the Lord that we have ever witnessed. A large number made a full surrender to the dear Savior, and received, as a result, perfect love and peace, with a bright assurance of their complete acceptance. We have not seen before such an earnest hungering and thirsting after righteousness. As a result, sectarian walls, and other things that had caused divisions and party interests, were removed out of the way, and a blessed oneness was felt and exhibited that put to silence the skeptics' objections, and compelled them to say, see how these love one another. Sinners and backsliders melted before its power, and with deep humility sought pardon at the hands of the Lord. The spirit of true holiness is opposed to party and sectarian feeling, and seeks to unite all the friends of Jesus in one harmonious brotherhood, lovingly waiting for the coming Bridegroom. Whenever this is not the tendency, something is lacking. It does not require that all should see just alike on every doctrinal point, in order to have union and co-operation; but the strong bond is "charity out of a pure heart," which is "the end of the commandment." 1 Tim. 1:5. Wherever a party feeling is manifested, or a disposition to divide the flock of God, we may be sure there is a lack of "true holiness." The Spirit of Christ tends to unite together in one happy brotherhood all who truly love Jesus, without regard to any sectarian names or human creeds. These delicious fruits were specially prominent at the National campmeeting. Devoted members of other churches, who had never attended any of our meetings before, came and rejoiced and united with us in the worship of our precious Savior. We felt we were one in Christ. They, too, loved to talk and hear of his coming, and not a jarring note was struck. Some of these members of other churches had had a very deep experience in divine things; and could testify to the blessedness of loving the Lord with all the heart.

The evidence is daily increasing to show that the Bride of the Lamb is getting "ready" for his coming. We find this impression is becoming quite general among the followers of Christ. It is a bright omen to show that we are very near the glorious event. Let all who desire to be ready see that they have their lamps trimmed and burning, and living in a waiting position. We are amid the perils of "the last days." We have not seen for over twenty-five years such a spirit of consecration to the Lord as was manifested at this meeting. The morning meetings in the "Tabernacle," at 5½ o'clock, were precious seasons. That consecrated spot seems the most sacred to us of any on the earth. We have never enjoyed such meetings in any other place. One of them was the best we have ever experienced since our conversion. The power of the Holy Spirit rested upon the people. Truly it was a feast from the Lord—a pentecost. It seemed as though we were near the gates of paradise. It was truly good to be there. One such meeting would pay for the whole campmeeting.

The meetings continued to grow better every day. Sabbath morning, on 9 o'clock, we had a blessed love-feast at the preacher's stand, when two hundred and twenty spoke in about one hour. It was a common remark that it was the best love-feast we ever had. At its close a communication was received and read from the Woman's Christian Missionary Association, proposing to dissolve their association and unite their labors with the American Advent Mission Society in one common effort. This was unanimously approved by the encampment, and caused much joy. The special approbation of the Lord was manifested in favor of this movement. By this union the strength of the whole will be much increased, and the power of the enemy greatly weakened.

Sabbath day, at the hour for preaching, a very large audience was present. Meetings were held in four places at the same time, in order to accommodate the crowd of people; and the camp, by request, supplied preachers in three localities in the surrounding country. In the evening five hundred and forty sat down to the communion table, to commemorate the death and sufferings of our dear Savior. Monday morning at 5 o'clock, we had our closing meeting in the "Tabernacle," when we had another heavenly feast.

Thus closed the best campmeeting we have ever enjoyed. We parted with brighter hopes than ever, of soon meeting in the eternal city, where all the pure-hearted will gather around "the tree of life," redeemed, immortalized, and glorified. PRAISE THE LORD.

PAPACY AROUSED.

Say and think as we may, facts show that the Papal power is preparing for a desperate struggle, for the purpose of regaining its temporal power. The Pope and his advisers are laying their plans to get hold of the political reins again, if possible. The effort will be a strong one. The following is from a correspondent of the London Times:—

"It is evident that if Europe can be divided into two great religious camps, into one of which the pope may throw his whole influence, moral, spiritual, and political, and lead the Catholic and Latin nations against the Protestants of Germany, France will achieve the two fold end of serving the pope, and of punishing its German foe at the same time. To what ever country the pope moves it will be the signal for a European religious war; and therefore until the French are quite ready to act, they do not want him to move at all. His departure from Rome will lead to a new series of European complications, of which it is difficult to see the probable results. Meanwhile the European religious propaganda, which is to recover both for France and the pope their lost provinces, is being actively and insidiously pushed forward in every Catholic country in Europe."

The Standard of July 18th also speaks of the evident preparations for a new popish crusade, and the critical eventfulness of the impending election of a new pope:—

"The election of the future pope absorbs increased attention. The great contest between the church of Rome and various continental states has begun in right earnest. The so-called usurpation of the papal states by the Italian government, and the vigorous measure recently passed by the German parliament for the expulsion of the order of the Jesuits from Germany have fully prepared the crisis which is at hand. The grave contest, it is held, will either be continued or terminated by the election of the future pope. The contest in public and private life between church pretentions and state rights, between priest domination and liberty of conscience, is fully developed almost everywhere. If it be true that from 'Ireland to Lithuania' and from 'Portugal to Syria' the Roman clergy like so many drovers, are exciting all the vulgar instincts and animal passions of the benighted classes against the dictates of sound reason, i. e., against the rights of the state and the rights of the individual—as the New Free Press affirms it to be the case—then indeed this process of fermentation cannot be long endured. It must necessarily attain its climax, and lead to the most serious results, ere many years have passed over our heads. Under these circumstances the election of the future pope assumes an exceedingly grave importance.

It the future pope should prove to be another tool in the hands of the Jesuits, and by his obstinacy and arrogance throw down the gauntlet to the civilized world, a fearful struggle would ensue highly detrimental to the best interests of the people. Hence nothing more natural than that the governments in question should sincerely desire that the future pope be anxious to make peace with the people and their governments. But the Jesuits think differently. Their interests are at variance with those of the church and the states, as one of the principal concessions which the church would have to offer to the states would be the dissolution of their dangerous order. Hence they leave nothing undone to secure the election of a Jesuit as pope. The cardinals are being worked upon. Whether the final victory will be on the side of the governments or on that of the Jesuits, it is at present impossible to foretell. The intention of carrying this election through out of Rome, 'under the protection of the Catholic powers,' originated with the Jesuits. Of course France is the country chosen by them for this purpose. The Jesuits, speculating upon the great influence which the Ultramontanes have gained over the rural population in France, imagine that the fiery spirit of the French nation will be easily aroused in favor of a new crusade by the fact of the new pope being elected in their midst. They point to the effect produced by the sermon of Urban II., at Clermont, in olden times, and count upon the support of the French Chauvinists, who are supposed to be hot and eager for the fray that is to re-establish the ancient martial glory of France.

"The expulsion of the Jesuits, which has been legally enacted in Germany, is likely to lead to an invasion of this fanatical order into Austria. Turned out of Italy and Germany, it is to be apprehended that this clerical fraternity will seek refuge en masse in this country, in order to carry on their dark intrigues both here and from hence in the neighboring states, whence they have been expulsed. Alas! Austro Hungary still presents a fertile field for the underhand operations of these dangerous men. They are no strangers at court; and amongst the feudal aristocracy, as well as amongst the highest dignitaries of the Roman church, they have numerous friends and supporters. This new agglomeration of Jesuits in the Austrian empire will be a source of great danger to the healthy progress of Constitutionalism. Civil and religious liberty cannot prosper where the occult influences of the Jesuits flourish."

INTERMEDIATE STATE.

At the Methodist Preachers' meeting, in the Wesleyan Association Hall, Boston, Monday, July 29th, an interesting essay was read on the "intermediate state." It was not our privilege to be present. We take the following report from the Boston Journal:—

The Methodist Preachers' Meeting at Wesleyan Association Hall was opened with prayer by Rev. Pliny Wood of Cambridge, Rev. R. W. Allen in the chair. The order of the day was immediately taken up, which was an Essay on the 'Intermediate State of the Dead,' by Rev. Daniel Dorchester of Lowell. We give as full an abstract as our space will permit:

The essay had some new phases of thought. It was an attempt to restate the doctrine in question, by a modification of both views which have been held—the one that the righteous go at once to heaven at death, and the other, that they are detained in a local habitation called Paradise. Mr. Dorchester contended that it is strictly an intermediate state and not a place, and that, it being a pure spirit existence, all materialistic ideas and conditions must be eliminated from our conceptions of it. Pagan conceptions of it are gross and materialistic, and we shall only be misled by going to their writings for information concerning it beyond the simple demands of philology. Their ideas of the future life only show the need of the clearer light of revelation. The use of the pagan terms, hades and paradise, by Christ and his apostles, was not designed to carry pagan ideas into Hebrew theology. Only the germinal ideas of those terms were intended to be indorsed, and hence they should be regarded as signifying respectively—the state of disembodied spirits and a state of happiness, so that to be in hades, to be in paradise, and to be with God and with Christ, are all one thing.

It is impossible, in so brief an extract as we are confined to, to give an adequate report of this essay, which occupied about one hour and a quarter in reading. The subject was considered under three heads—exegetical, psychological and moral. In his hands the intermediate existence of the righteous was invested with interest and attraction."

If, as the essayist says, "to be in hades, to be in paradise, and to be with God in Christ, are all one thing," then it would make no difference whether one went to hell (hades) or paradise, or to God. Is Christ in hades now? The Scriptures affirm that he was not left there. He was there but three days and nights. Is God in hades? The Bible says he is in heaven. We do not see how one can go to hades, and at the same time be with Christ, when he is not there, but with his Father in heaven. After reading the foregoing reports, we are not surprised that Paul was moved by the Holy Spirit to say that "in the last days" some preachers would "turn away their ears from the truth, and . . . be turned into fables." Well might the apostle say, "Watch," lest these fables take root in the heart. It is astonishing to see the blindness of some ministers in relation to what the Bible teaches concerning the state of man in death. Let us do all we can to scatter the light.

BRO. FASSETT.—We clip the following from the California Daily Post, Aug. 10th, 1872, in which is a report of Bro. Fassett's sermon:

"The preacher is a short, rather stoutish built man, inclining to gray hairs, apparently about fifty years of age. He has a solemn, reverent, and yet very pleasing countenance, and his voice, in its usual tones, is peculiarly soft and persuasive. He looks like a thoroughly sincere and earnest man, and the pulpit language and manner confirmed the first impression."

The report gives him credit for giving a "bold challenge of the prevailing orthodox theory," and says:—

"The prophecies showed that we were in 'the last days,' and the characteristics of the time emphasized the word of prophecy—'the sure word of prophecy,' to which we are to take heed as to a light in a dark place.

The time had come when men 'will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned into fables.' On this characteristic the burden of the discourse was said. The unsound doctrine was specially declared to be the assertion that men are by nature immortal; that an immaterial part of man, which is claimed to be the real man, is conscious when the body is dead; and that man hereafter, as an immaterial entity, eternally exists beyond the bounds of time and space.

The Elder lifted up his voice in these paragraphs, and 'went for the heathen' doctrines of 'immortal-soulism'; quoting the Scripture with great fluency, and pointing it with comments that were undeniably pungent. He said that popular divines interpreted Scripture not by Scripture, but by Plato; they were educated in the dead languages by the constant study of the Grecian and Roman heathen authors. And they were 'heaped'—a heap of them (an eastern expression)—tickling the fancies of audiences composed of backsliders, who had 'itching ears' for 'fables.' The sound doctrine of the mortality of man gave place to the first lie of the devil to our first parents—'Thou shalt not surely die.'"

A WORTHY STEP.—"Rev. T. P. Stephenson, late editor of the Christian Statesman, has declined the degree of D. D offered to him by Muskingum College, on the ground that the title, as generally sought, conferred and worn at present, is inconsistent with the simplicity and the fraternal equality which are proper to the gospel ministry; that it is forbidden by the spirit of our Savior's command in Matt. 18:8, and because the interests of religion would be subserved by its general discontinuance."

Here is a noble example, worthy of a true minister of Christ. Thank the Lord, that some are opening their eyes to see things as they are.

SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.—It is astonishing to see how far professors of religion in the popular churches are departing from the spirit of Christianity; especially many of those in authority, who have the controlling power in their hands. The following from a New York correspondent of the Boston Journal, is a sample:—

"NEW YORK, July 29, 1872.

To the Editors of the Boston Journal:

RACE FOR A PASTOR.—The contest between Longfellow and Bassett was hardly more exciting than the race between Elizabeth and Brooklyn for a pastor. 'Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's minister,' ought to be added to the decalogue. Committees from New York are roaming up and down the country, seeking whom they may devour—looking for sharp ministers in quiet retreats and out of the way places, as horsemen scour the country in search of fast trotters. Committees from Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and the Pacific coast are in and around New York for the purpose of enticing away popular men who are making their mark in this vicinity. Three or four popular men are badgered almost to death by continued calls and magnificent offers. Some go into their pulpits with two or three calls in their pockets, and as this is generally known, it makes things lively.

I informed your readers of the attempt on the part of the Elizabeth church to buy off Mr Gallaher from Brooklyn, offering him $8000 salary and his wife a house worth $12,000. He agreed to go to Elizabeth, and then backed down; yielded to a committee who stormed his bed-chamber, and then retracted. On agreeing to stay, the Brooklyn people sent him to Europe, where he is now traveling at their expense. Now comes another phase of the case. He has been gone four months; has not written a line to the Brooklyn church, but keeps up a correspondence with the Elizabeth people. The latter society have on their side the strong influence of the pastor's wife. The gentleman who pays $5000 of the pastor's salary said on Saturday that he was perfectly satisfied that Elizabeth would win. In the meantime, the Brooklyn church can do nothing, but only wait for coming events, the shadows of which indicate the loss of their minister."

PERSONAL.—We learn Bro. Geo. Thomson, of Arena, Wis., is sick. He is worthy of Christian sympathy. His cup of affliction seems to be about full. Pray for him.

CORRECTION.—In the last Crisis we requested prayers for Bro. and Sr. Fassett, Bro. and Sr. Reed, and Bro. and Sr. Wilson, of California. By mistake the last name was printed "Milson."

☞ WE purpose to be at the Amboy (Ill.) campmeeting.

A PERSONAL GOD.—There are many of the people who hold what are called liberal views of religion, who can no longer pray. They have nobody to pray to, since they have drifted away from all belief in the personality of God. Nobody can pray to a law of nature, or a force of nature, or to all the laws and forces of the universe together, if these laws and forces are to him impersonal. They do not hear they cannot pity; they move on inexerably, and have neither knowlede nor love. If a man who has lost the sense of the personality of God tries to pray, the utterance is all on one side. There can be no response, no communion. Such prayer is a speech made at nothing; and so far an unreality and a pretence, that such praying is scarcely ever done in secret. The men who do not believe in the personality of God, and who yet conform to the custom of prayer, necessarily do their praying in public, where they can be heard by their fellow-men.—Liberal Christian.

It is true, "there can be no response, no communion" with an impersonal God. If we have not a personal God, we have not an intelligent one. On this point we see no room for controversy. Those who teach that "Nature is God" have no God of intelligence. They cannot communicate with him. Such is the God of the Spiritualists.

STRIKES.—England is much troubled with the "strikes" of the various classes of laborers. The results are bad, and growing worse for the poor working men. The future looks dark. A correspondent of the Boston Journal writes from Birmingham, Eng., July 25th, and says:—

"The great topic of interest in England at the present time is the prevalence of strikes in various trades, and the unprecedented advance in the cost of the necessaries of life. The miners, the iron makers and forgers, the builders, the farm laborers, the washwomen, the omnibus drivers, the grave diggers, and a variety of others have taken advantage of the general excitement and have ceased work in various places. A new strike is now organizing against the purchase of meats till the prices fall, and butchers are retaliating by refusing to kill; and contractors have, in several instances, closed their works, and refused employment for the men. This, with other causes, has given a feverish effect to the markets, and there is but little chance to boast that living is cheaper in England than in America. In the one item of clothing the difference is in favor of this country; but in flour, cheese, and other articles, largely imported from the United States, the advantage is on the other side of the Atlantic. Coals have advanced fifty per cent. in the last six months, and the tendency is still upward."

"THE END OF THE WORLD."

As Christ never speaks of the end of the kosmos, which word often includes the material globe, but frequently speaks of "the end of the aion," which word signifies age or dispensation, some have assumed that Christ referred to the Jewish age, which is said to have ended about A. D. 70, instead of referring to the end of the age of the mortal race, or earth's age of sin. Among those who take this position are the Universalists. But an examination of the texts which speak of the "aion," and its "end," forbid its application to the Jewish national age, which was only a component part of "the age," for (1) the events to occur at its "end" did not occur at the end of the national age of the Jews. (2) The age to succeed the one referred to by Christ, was to be entirely different from that which succeeded the end of the national age of the Jews; and (3) the characteristics of the age referred to are not peculiar to the national age of the Jews, but apply to the present time just as aptly, which could not be the case if the Jewish age were meant, as the succeeding age was to be entirely different. We will demonstrate these facts by an appeal to the Word.

I. The events to occur at the "end of the aion." Jesus said—"The field is the world [kosmos]; the good seed are the children of the kingdom, but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world [aionos—age]; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world [aionos—age]. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. . . . . So shall it be at the end of the world [aionos—age]; the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just." Matt. 13:38–42, 49. Let it be observed that the crop is to be harvested from the same field that it is sown in, and that field is not the aion, but the kosmos—the habitable globe; and this earth-wide crop was to be harvested at the "end of THIS aion"—this age; then the tares throughout the kosmos were to be exterminated. Was this event witnessed at the end of the Jewish age? Were the "children of the wicked one" then all removed from the kosmos, or destroyed from the habitable globe? No, not even from that little corner of the field occupied by the Jews. Then "the end of the age" referred to by Jesus did not come at that time, and consequently he did not mean the Jewish age, but the age of the world from the fall of man—the long age of sin, which must end in due time.

II. The age due after the one to "end," differs from that which succeeded the national age of the Jews; or, in other words, the time this side of Jerusalem's destruction does not accord with the age due after "the end of this age;" so "this age," which Jesus said should "end," cannot mean the Jewish age. Said Jesus—"The children of this world [aionos—age] marry, and are given in marriage; but they that shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world [aionos—age] . . . . neither marry, nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more." Luke 20:34–36. Is it true that there is no marrying nor dying this side of the close of the Jewish age, or this side of Jerusalem's destruction? Then when Jesus spoke of "this age," he did not mean the Jewish age, and consequently when he mentions "the end of this age," he could not mean the end of the Jewish age.

III. Characteristics of the age to end. Said Christ—"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (aionos—age). Matt. 28:20. He was not personally with them till Jerusalem's destruction; and he has since been with them in the same sense as in years before its destruction. "And the cares of this world [aionos—age], and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word." Matt. 13:22. Is not the same true since the end of the Jewish age? "The God of this world [aionos—age] hath blinded the minds of them that believe not." 2 Cor. 4:4. Are none thus blinded since the Jewish age ended? "We should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world;" (aioni—age). Titus 2:12. Should we not live thus this side of Jerusalem's destruction? Then we are still in "this age," and its end is still future. Our age bears the characteristics of the one to end; and its end is near.

WHAT CHRIST MEANT.

It is still a query with many what Christ meant by his own proclamation—The kingdom of heaven is at hand," or "The kingdom of God is at hand;" or what he meant by sending out first twelve and then seventy disciples with the same message. He certainly did not mean to make a false proclamation; nor did he ever confess that the plan contemplated in that announcement had been abandoned, or supplanted by a different one; nor yet did he mean a kingdom to precede the judgment day, but a kingdom to come when the judgment should arrive. This is evident from two records of the Savior's commission to his disciples, given by Luke and Matthew. Luke thus reports the Savior's commission:—"And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways into the streets of the same, and say, even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you; notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city." Luke 10:10–12. Mark—"More tolerable in that day" WHEN THE KINGDOM COMES. But Matthew reports the Savior's commission as follows:—"Preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand. . . . And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment, than for that city." Matt. 10:7, 14, 15.

One record makes it more tolerable when the kingdom comes, and the other when the judgment comes; from which we learn that the kingdom comes when the judgment comes, and the very kingdom too, which was referred to in the great proclamation of Christ and his disciples—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." It was "at hand" then in the same sense in which Paul affirmed—"The Lord is at hand"—in a comparative sense.

Christ sent forth his disciples to preach about the coming of the same kingdom, for which he told them to pray—"Thy kingdom come; thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven." He certainly would not command them to preach about the coming of one kingdom, and while thus preaching, to pray for the coming of another and different kingdom. And while Christ himself was preaching—"The kingdom of heaven is at hand," he thus pointed forward to the time when it should come, telling us who should dwell in it—"Many shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 8:11. So Abraham and other worthies, now dead, are to have a home in this coming kingdom, which involves a resurrection, and prove the literality of the kingdom. It is still future, but not far off.

PUBLIC PRAISE.

Newspaper puffs and public praise may do where it is needed to make a bad case appear good; but God's true ministers do not stand in need of this article; their works will speak for themselves. They do not need to get somebody to sound a trumpet for them, nor do they feel a disposition to sound a trumpet themselves to invite attention if they chance to see something that might tend to augment their standing in the estimation of the people. They care more for glorifying Christ than for a glorification of self. This proclivity for cackling, like a foolish hen every time it lays an egg, and often between times, or in other words, this relish for notoriety, and love of human praise, is not commendable. It is strongly tinctured with "the mind of the flesh." Let us love the praise of God, which will come at the judgment, more than the praise of men which may flatter human vanity in this life.

I repeat, God's ministers do not need a constant stream of praise. It only feeds a human relish; and forthermore it places them in the eyes of candid men just where the much-praised ox stood in the eyes of the Quaker, when he inquired—"Friend, why don't thee praise the other ox too?" The answer was—"He don't need praising." Too much praise indicates a disposition to cover some deformity, and makes candid men look with suspicion. The spirit of the gospel is not a spirit of "you tickle me and I'll tickle you," or gratification of human weakness.

OCCUPANTS OF SHEOL.

It is worthy of observation, that prior to going into captivity among the Assyrians and Babylonians, the Hebrew writers leave no traces of a faith in a disembodied existence of men after death, either in sheol or elsewhere. They represented the occupants of sheol as being lifeless men, instead of spirit-entities. Not only is this true concerning the inspired writings, but also true of the Apocryphal book written on the other side of the captivity, before the Hebrews had imbibed errors from the heathen. In the book of Baruch, 2:17, we find these words—"Look down upon us, O Lord, from thy holy house, and incline thy ear, and us. Open thy eyes, and behold; for the dead that are in hell (sheol), whose spirit is taken away from their bowels, shall not give glory and justice to the Lord." Here the occupants of sheol are not only represented as incapable of giving glory to God, but are expressly said to be "dead," their spirit having been "taken away from their bowels."

Such were the views of the Hebrews before their faith was corrupted by heathen theology while in captivity, after which a part of them adopted the theory of soul-immortality, together with the theory of an under-ground home for souls, or a home over the ocean on the sea-shore. The speculations of the Greeks concerning hades were remodeled by them, and woven into their apostate theology as false traditions.

MILAN, N. H.

There is a small company of believers in Milan, who are looking for the Lord. Bro. C. Goud visited that town, and preached to them several times last year, and organized an Advent Christian Church of seven members, who are holding fast, and making some advancement, we think. By invitation, I visited them in July, and preached two Sundays and several evenings, and found them eager for the word of life. There seemed to be a strong desire in that community to hear about Jesus' coming and kingdom. We occupied the Union Chapel, and had good gatherings of all classes, while we preached to them the good news of Jesus' soon coming to raise the dead, give immortality to his saints, destroy his enemies, cleanse the earth, and establish his eternal kingdom on it, and the evidences of its being near at hand.

The Methodist, and Congregationalist ministers attended, and eagerly listened to the word, and freely took part in the worship, and sought interviews with me to ask questions, as they were wholly unacquainted with our views. I spent several half days with them. They were candid, and did not oppose, but each bought our books to learn our views. The Methodist minister, especially, appeared anxious to know all the truth of the gospel, and was much pleased when I had shown him Wesley's sermon on the New Creation, which was in his own library, and he had never seen it. He is a young and useful man. May the Lord give him more light. There is a very good religious interest in that place. I baptized one, and took four into the church. Several others will join soon. The Methodists sprinkled several, and baptized five the same day we baptized, and at the same time. It was a union service. The people are anxious to see Bro. Goud again. He will visit them soon, and find an open door.

HALLOWELL, ME.

Aug. 11th we preached in Hallowell, our old battle-ground, where we first saw the great and precious truths which distinguish us as a people, and where, during our sojourn and labor, nearly a hundred others saw and embraced these truths, many of them converted to Christ by them. Several of the faithful fathers sleep in Jesus, and nearly all of the others are gone into all parts of the country, but are at work for Christ. Only two or three remain. God has raised up a number of faithful young believers of late, and they made a good beginning to establish a regular meeting last winter; but they allowed "Moses" to be "read" and taught (see 2 Cor. 3:15), which brought the same results as in most such cases. Their meetings died. But they yet pray, and I trust will go to work for Jesus more earnestly. We had a precious season with them, and all seemed to be refreshed and encouraged.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPMEETING.

N. D. BABCOCK.

As some who could not attend have expressed a desire that we should give a little sketch of our Springfield campmeeting, we will say that it was the best and most instructive one we have ever attended. We arrived on the ground as early as the first Wednesday; therefore heard the first, as well as the last, sermon. From the time we arrived until we left, we saw and heard nothing but love, peace and harmony through the entire encampment. The Lord was truly with us, and that to bless. The tide of Christianity rose higher and higher, until the majority decided that the only true standard of Christianity, and the only safe place in these last days, when Satan is doing his utmost to lead us from Christ, is—all for Christ, and holiness of heart. The half-past-five morning meetings, led by Bro. Grant, were so heavenly, so quiet, so good, and so instructive, they added much to our present enjoyment in this life, and will not be forgotten in the world to come. A large number decided to give all for Christ, as far as they then and hereafter should know, and that it was all-important, if we should ever see God, we must live without committing any known sin.

The preaching was heavenly, holy, and instructive. Our last love-feast in front of the stand, in which two hundred and twenty took part, was a glorious meeting. Many during the meetings found pardon from all sin, and some nineteen were baptized.

We formed the pleasant acquaintance of Bro. Lutz, the converted infidel, converted by "his Christ," through the labors of Bro. John G. Hook. Never did we hear Christ more exalted in so short a time than while listening to his singing and preaching. We almost forgot that our dwelling-place was still below. We also became acquainted with Bro. Bowman, of South Carolina. He is very critical; listens with a quick twinkle in his eye; acts and decides quickly, and is always very pleasant. He is doing a noble work. None need be afraid to lend a helping hand. He is one of God's decided men. While listening to his sermon, we had hardly got a smell of the beautiful tiny rose of earth, when like a flash we were carried far above the clouds among the forked lightnings, then back to the sin-cursed earth again, then lost in Eden restored. May the Lord ever bless him.

Altogether, our campmeeting, as far as we could learn, was a success. One might well wish to stay there in their little white house until Jesus comes, did not the cold blasts of winter drive them to a more substantial one, every body seemed so kind and pleasant. One could lose themselves in the enjoyment of others here, as quietly as the rays of the summer's sun are lost in the shades of evening. To those who know nothing personally of the enjoyments of a good campmeeting, any description of ours would fail to convey a just idea. We can only say it was most heavenly. We anticipate a heavenly meeting at Alton Bay, and we know we shall not be disappointed. May we all be ready when Jesus comes.

I regret to learn from Bro. Munger that the lame colored Bro. who was left on Springfield camp-ground Monday morning sick in my tent has since died. He came from Hinesburg, Vt.; was baptized on Thursday by myself, was taken sick soon after, and died on Thursday following. He was attended by Dr. Higgins, and all was done for him that could be done. He informed me he was not afraid to die. His name was Joseph Des Lauriers.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

DEAR ONES IN JESUS:—While I lie here upon my bed of pain and distress, and see my dear ones preparing for campmeeting, and I realize that I cannot go, it often causes the tears to fill my eyes. When I think of the joyous time and pleasant greetings that will be exchanged with the dear ones there, I feel such an earnest longing to be with them, to see the sweet smiling faces of the dear saints as they come from the North, South, East and West, and sit down under the shade of those trees, and listen to the words of hope and cheer, instruction, and edification, as they come from the lips of God's dear servants when they stand up to declare his word, and speak of his soon coming to change these vile bodies, and fashion them like Christ's glorious body, causing the hearts of the weary, tried and tempted ones to rejoice, for the news so cheering to their hearts of soon seeing Him who is the joy and rejoicing of their hearts; I say, as I lie here and think of these things, I long and sigh to meet with the dear ones in the tented grove, and unite my heart and voice in the song of praise, and prayer to our dear, blessed Savior. O how I would love to be with them. I shall truly be with you in spirit, and earnest, heartfelt petitions will go up to Him who hears and answers the cries of his dear ones, that rich and glorious blessings may be upon all who meet there. May it be the means of "a closer walk with God," and a deeper work of grace, a holier life, sweeter peace of mind, joy serene, and love overwhelming. May the Lord grant it for his name's sake.

Dear ones, as you meet there to worship, remember the poor, weary, tired, tried and tempted, sick and afflicted ones, that are kept away, who would so gladly mingle with you, and enjoy your sweet presence and society for a few days.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. THO. L. SCOTT, General Secretary of the New Orleans (La.) Y. M. Christian Association, writes:—"The book, paper and tracts have arrived safe and sound. Yes, sound in more than one sense of the word. I shall consider the paper—the Crisis—worth more than all the other two hundred on file in our rooms. The tracts are just what are needed here. Several of my Baptist brethren are already reading them. From what I have read in Mr. Erwin's 'Destiny of Man,' I am confident that it is the nearest approach to inspiration I have ever read. A flood of light has come into my soul. May God in mercy show others the truth, that they may be free. The few pages I have read have fed my hungry soul, and watered it with the dews of heaven."

BRO. P. S. W. DEYO writes from Charles City, Aug. 24th:—"I have just returned from a visit to my old home at Strawberry Point, where I lived over fifteen years. A heavy rain spoiled the basket part of the meeting, but it did not spoil the preaching. The dampness of the grove and the farewell sermon of the M. E. preacher made a thin congregation in the forenoon; but in the afternoon I had more of the village people to hear than I expected would be out. I also had the privilege to fill the desk of Eld. John Martindale, of the Disciple Church, at Greeley, which he kindly offered me with the privilege of making an appointment, which I did, and had a good hearing. I hope to be able to visit every church in the conference this year. Please give me due note of your wants."

SR. E. A. SISSON writes from Lynn, Mass., Aug. 21st, 1872:—"I send enclosed one dollar. Please send the Crisis to an aged pilgrim in Ill. He is a holy man, and is looking for the coming of Jesus. He is one hundred and eleven years old. He says he shall see the winding up of all things. He was born Feb. 1st, 1761. He reads and writes without glasses, and walks very spry. He writes me that he is in youthful health. He is poor and cannot pay for a paper. I wish to send him the Crisis."

BRO. GEO. W. FOSTER writes from Mount Pleasant, Iowa, August 11th, 1872:—"Since I came out here the last time, four weeks ago, I have baptized five more, making fifty-three in all; and still the work goes slowly on. Two came out in our last meeting. I want Bro. C. C. Ramsay, who lives somewhere in this State, to come and help me in the work, as soon as possible; but I know not where to address him. Please let me know."

TENT-MEETING IN WOODBRIDGE.

The tent-meeting in Woodbridge, Ct., according to appointment, commenced on Saturday, August 10th. On Sunday the 11th, about five hundred people, including the brethren and sisters from New Haven and West Haven, were present to hear the truth, and to take part in the meetings. The Lord was with us in power, and we enjoyed a heavenly sitting together in Christ Jesus. During the week, we had much rain and heavy wind. Wednesday afternoon we had preaching rather late, not commencing until three o'clock. The meeting was dismissed at four o'clock. When all were out save Bro. Dudley from Wallingford, Bro. R. Phelps from Ansonia, and myself, a gale of wind took the tent up over the centre-pole, stakes and all. No one was hurt, praise God. Bro. Flagg, Ripley, Steele, Woodruff and myself were present to preach the blessed gospel of Christ concerning his second coming to reign over Israel redeemed. Much prejudice was removed, and I trust much good done in the name of the Lord.

At the close of the meeting on Sunday, a vote of thanks was rendered to Mr. Leonard Clark and wife, Mr. M. D. Sperry, and others, for their kindness and hospitality to us while with them in the place. May the God of heaven and earth bless them with all needed grace and spiritual blessings, as bountifully as they supplied our temporal wants.

Obituaries.

YORK. Died, May 30th, 1872, our dear son, Charles R. York, aged twenty-seven years.

The circumstances connected with his sickness and death were sad indeed. His disease was "malignant small pox," causing great suffering, and depriving his dearest friends the privilege of administering personally to his wants. It is hard to lose our dear ones, even when we can be at their bedsides to the last, and have the sad privilege of saying "farewell"; but oh! to have them sicken, suffer, and die, and be carried to their last resting-place, with no chance to imprint one kiss of love on their feverish brow, nor take one look at them before consigned to the grave, is terrible. Truly our cup of sorrow is full; but we are cheered by the "blessed hope" that our son will soon awake to immortality.

Now in death dear ones are sleeping,
We go mourning by the way;
Yet ere long we hope to meet them,
In the land of endless day.

R. R. YORK.

KIMBALL. Fell asleep in Jesus, at No. Woodstock, N. H., Aug. 16th, Sr. Alice A., wife of Bro. J. F. Kimball, and daughter of Russell and Lydia Dearborn, aged thirty-five years and ten months.

Her disease was typhoid fever. She was a christian. The husband, two daughters, and aged parents deeply feel the loss. We tried to comfort them with the precious promises.

N. WHEELER.

STUART. Marvin Stuart died in Christ, at Burke, N. J., about May 5th, 1872, aged fifty-seven years.

He was in early life a member of the church with William Miller, at Poultney, Vt., and died as he has long lived, expecting immortality at the coming of Jesus. Our brother will be greatly missed.—Com.

FLETCHER. Sister Mary E., wife of D. S. Fletcher, and daughter of Hugh Taggart, M. D. (of Shelburn Falls), died in the Lord at Brandon, Vt., Aug. 19th 1872, aged twenty-two years.

She was an ardent, sincere Advent Christian, and was filled with great joy and peace on her dying bed. A sweet boy of a fortnight's age is motherless, and many friends weep. But the dear saint will assuredly live at the resurrection.—Com.

DAY. Died in Thomaston, Me., April 3d, 1872, Bro. Masius Day, aged fifty-nine years and five months.

Bro. Day found favor with God some five years ago, and united with the M. E. church some eighteen months ago. He attended one of our conferences, and embraced our faith on the sleep of the dead, and the coming of the Lord.

"He now sleeps, but not forever."

H. S. MITCHELL.

HIMES. Died in Anthony, R. I., Aug. 8th, 1812, Mabel, daughter of Andrew and Lena Himes, aged one year, three months, and one day.

We have laid her away to await the bright morn of the resurrection.

HALL. Eugene Clarence, only child of Elmer L. and Emma Hall, of Worcester, Mass., died Aug. 1st, 1872, aged five months and a half.

Soft on the gentle Shepherd's breast,
The wearied lamb in peace shall sleep,
Till the last trumpet breaks its rest
To sing and shine, but not to weep.

THE INTERNATIONALISTS.

LONDON, Aug. 30. The dissensions which have so long existed among the leaders of the International Society have lately increased in bitterness, and the branches of the society in the different European countries are now rapidly dissolving. Members are deserting the ranks of the organization in large numbers, in consequence of the lack of harmony prevailing in its councils, and the powerful influence once held by the society is almost lost. The American section now propose to establish the head-quarters of the organization in New York, with a view of attempting to build up the society, by removing it from the influence of its European leaders.

The cholera has appeared at Grodno, in the western part of Russia.

DOMESTIC.

Terrible Disaster.

Watch Hill, via. Stonington, Ct., Aug. 30. The propeller Metis, Capt. Burton, was wrecked about six miles off this shore this morning. A dreadful storm prevailed the latter part of the night, and about 4 o'clock the propeller was struck by a schooner, knocking a hole in her bottom. She immediately began to fill. The passengers were aroused and warned to secure life-preservers.

In a short time the lower part of the boat, engines, ect., went down about five miles from shore. A large number of the passengers and crew climbed on the upper deck, which parted from the hull and floated. The waves rolled high and the rain continued, but the upper works floated and struck the shore just below the Ocean House about quarter to eight o'clock this morning.

The Metis was 1359 tons, and belonged to the Providence and New York Steamship Company, and was commanded by Capt. Charles L. Burton. She was lately altered from a freight to a passenger boat, and was valued at $175,000. Her cargo was principally fruit, and valued at $50,000. Most of the passengers obtained their tickets on board, and no list of names is available.

A gloom has been cast over the entire section by the disaster. All the hotels at Watch Hill have from eight to twenty of the rescued now in their parlors and sleeping rooms.

The latest estimate makes the number of the lost between twenty-five and thirty.

INDIAN MASSACRE.—Topeka, Aug. 31. The Commonwealth has the following startling Indian news from Colorado: E. H. Stanly of Fort Larned arrived in this city last evening from Denver, Col. He reports that on Monday last a government team, consisting of six mule wagons, loaded with army supplies from Fort Lyon, was proceeding along Dry Creek, between Carson City and Fort Lyon, under command of Steve Bryan, wagon master, and, while in the valley of Dry Creek, the train was mired in the sand. While thus detained a band of two hundred Arapahoe warriors, under command of their chief Little Raven, made an attack which equals in outrage and ferocity anything in the annals of Indian massacre. The wagons were burned, and all their contents that could be carried off were taken. The mules were run off and fifteen men belonging to the train were left wounded and dead on the bloody field. Bryan was skinned alive from head to foot by the savages. Besides these victims fifteen more men are missing. They are supposed to have been carried into captivity. The train was under the escort of Lieut. McFarland, of the 60th United States cavalry, with one hundred men. But being nine miles in the rear at the time of the massacre, no protection could be afforded. Stanley was with the escort, and when it reached the scene of slaughter the savages were just retiring over the hill beyond, whirling their tomahawks and shouting in mad glee over their fiendish attack.

THE NEW PARCEL POST REGULATION.

Post Office, Boston, Aug. 27th, 1872.

Under the provisions of the new postal code all merchandise, whether samples or otherwise, weighing less than twelve ounces, can be forwarded by mail under the following limitations:

First—Such merchandise must be of a form and nature not liable to destroy, deface or injure the contents of the mail-bag or the person of those engaged in the postal service.

Second—Such merchandise must be put up in such manner that the contents can be examined without destroying the wrappers.

Third—Postage must be prepaid by stamps at the rate of two cents per each two ounces, or any fraction thereof.

In Brief.

—— Religious fanaticism runs high in Germany. A woman in Lienz murdered her five children to make angels of them. A servant girl tried to poison the whole family of her master, eight persons, because they were Jews. An Italian lawyer, Claudius Lochon, of Thonon, sets up for a second Peter the Hermit, and is preaching a crusade against the enemies of the church.—— Reports from North Carolina are still filled with accounts of Ku-Klux outrages. A professor of one of the colleges in that State, and himself a Southern man, writes that the course of the government towards the infamous organization falls short of the required measure of severity.——By the French press the meeting of the three Emperors at Berlin is regarded with considerable distrust, and the Temps states that the object of Prince Bismarck is to form a league between Germany, Austria and Russia, which shall isolate France, and render revenge on her part impossible.

TENT MEETING AT NEW PRESTON, CONN.—The Conn. Mission Tent will be pitched, and a meeting held, on the old camp-ground, New Preston, Conn., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday, the 29th. Arrangements have been made with the Shepaug Valley R. R. to carry passengers during the meeting at reduced rates, also the stage will carry passengers from the station at half price. We propose to make such arrangements for this meeting as shall be for the glory of God, for the comfort of those who come, and with as little expense as we can. Should any wish to get board or lodging at private houses, they can do so at a reasonable price. We hope to see a general gathering at this meeting from the first day to the last. H. J. BALDWIN, Committee.

A SPECIAL TIME CONFERENCE will be held on the Life and Union camp-ground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. The object of this meeting will be to earnestly and prayerfully investigate the prophetic word, especially the definite time for the coming of Christ and deliverance of God's people, the justification of the sanctuary, and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence that Christ is immediately coming, and take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ. Let such as can, bring their provision; but those who cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally at this important meeting.

THE LORD willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Bro. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:—Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. HANCOCK.

CAMPMEETING.—The R. I. and East Conn. Conference have voted to hold their annual campmeeting at Coventry Centre, to commence Sabbath, Sept. 1st, and hold over Sabbath, the 8th. The camp-ground is on the Providence, Hartford, and Fishkill R. R., and about eighteen miles from Providence. Arrangements will be made for board and lodging for all who will come. Those who can bring tents are requested to do so. All the lovers of the Lord are requested to attend this feast of tabernacles. Come with one united heart. Come in all the fullness of the gospel, and let us make one more effort for the salvation of our fellow men in these last moments of time. Tickets may be obtained from all stations between Providence and Plainfield to Coventry Centre and return, at thirty per cent discount from regular rates, good from Aug. 31st to Sept. 9th. The R. R. company will also give ten passes to ministers only. E. R. WOOD, for the Com.

THE CHRISTIAN Mission Association will hold another campmeeting at or near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, to commence Sept. 10th, and hold over Lord's day. This meeting is purely a missionary work, there being no church organized in the place. Therefore we wish all to come who can work for God and the salvation of men. We ask all to come, without regard to name, sect, or party. We would be glad to provide for all, but we cannot. Let each one see to this themselves. Hay and straw will be furnished free, and poles for tent frames. We do not expect to have groceries, etc., on the ground, as it is but five minutes walk to market, where groceries can be had, also board for 25 cts. a meal. The ground is north west of the public square, about five blocks, and south of the McGregor R. R. tract, and half a mile west from the depot. Teams will meet you at the R. R. depots. Come all that can. Do not fail to bring your bedding, as you can use the big tent, or if the weather is wet, some barns close by may be had. Prospects are good, and there is great interest to hear the gospel of the kingdom. Bro., pray for this meeting. Eld. H. L. Hastings is expected to be present before the close, to help preach the word.

THE Illinois State Annual Campmeeting will be held at Amboy, Lee Co., on the old Camp-ground, commencing Sept. 7th, and continuing over two Sabbaths. Ministers from other States as well as from this State are expected, and all are cordially invited to attend, and come prepared to stay through the meeting. Let there be a general rally to labor for the salvation of souls.

Those coming by way of the C. B. and G. R. R. will change cars at Mendota. Those coming on the C. and N. W. R. R. will change at Dixon. Due notice will be given of reduction of fare, which is expected. Committee—N. W. Spencer, C. W. Smith, L. H. Davis, Wm. McCulloch, D. S Clark, F. Burr. S. B. MABRY, Secretary.

A CAMPMEETING will be held in Savoy, Mass., within a few rods of the old ground, commencing Saturday, Sept. 21st, and continuing over the two following Sabbaths. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, together with a good number of able preaching brethren, will be with us during the meeting. The large Tent belonging to the Hoosick Valley Conference will be pitched on the ground, and used as a tabernacle for preaching and conference meetings during the day and evening; and for lodgings during the night to all who are not provided with small or family tents of their own. Board for man and beast at a reasonable rate on the ground, and lodging to all who do not wish to sleep in tents, can be had with private families near by. All who have enjoyed so many happy happy seasons during former campmeetings at this place, together with all others, are cordially invited to come, and do all that can be done for the salvation of ourselves and others before the day of destruction comes from the Almighty. Board and lodging free to all who preach the word and co-operating with the American Advent Christian Conference. Those who come expecting to sleep on the ground, bring blankets and bedding. H. K. FLAGG, for the Committee.

A SERIES of meetings will be held in the Hoosick Valley Tent at South Pownal, Vt., on land owned by Bro. Wright, near the depot, to commence Wednesday, Sept. 11th, and continue one week, day and evening. All are cordially invited to come. Those who love God and his truth, come to labor for those who are not prepared for the coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ just upon us. H. K. FLAGG, for the Committee.

TENT MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting under the Mass. Mission Tent, on land owned by Dr. Horne, near his residence in Watertown, Mass., commencing Friday, Sept. 20th, and will continue afternoons and evenings for eight days. This is a place where an extra effort is needed, and help from abroad is needed. Let brethren and sisters from abroad come, and bring provisions and blankets with them, and lodging will be furnished on the ground. Fare from Boston 15 cts. Horse and steam cars run close by the ground. Come and help us.

L. BOUTELL.
ENOCH MORRILL.

CONN. CAMPMEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting on the ground occupied for that purpose the past two years, near Plainville, Conn., commencing Aug. 31st, and continuing till Sept. 9th. On the New Haven and Northampton R. R., the 6 A. M. and 4.45 P. M. trains from Williamsburg, and the 6.50 A. M. train from New Haven, will stop opposite the camp-ground, ONLY when there are passengers for the meeting, and they must tell the conductors they wish to stop, or they will be carried by. Remember this. The morning train up reaches the camp-ground about 8 o'clock, the morning train down at 8.30, and the evening train down at 7.20. Those from the north by these trains, buy regular tickets to Southington; those from the south to Plainville. Those coming by other trains must stop at Plainville, and Mr. T. F. Clark will take them to the camp-ground for twenty cents each. In all cases, buy regular tickets, and free return passes will be furnished at the meeting. On the H. P. and F. R. R. fare is reduced thirty per cent from Hartford, New Britain, Bristol, Terryville, and Waterbury, to Plainville. Buy regular tickets to Plainville, and tickets at reduced rate can be had on the camp-ground. Board at reasonable rates.

We hope all who can, will bring tents, and come early to the meeting, and those who have no tent, bring a blanket or bedquilt, and not depend on your neighbor for one. It is our heart's desire and prayer to God that our brethren and sisters may be moved by a self-examining, sanctifying, consecrating spirit, that will bring us to this meeting ready, at the beginning, to serve the Lord, and not come like a rickety wagon to the shop for repairs. Let there be a cleasing from worldly conformity, pride, hatred, jealousy, foolish conversation, and such like, before coming to the meeting. Do not burden and kill the meeting with these instruments of the devil. As a people, we profess to carry the judgment message and last crowning light of truth to the world; and with the final, most essential, and brilliant proclamation of the entire gospel, our meetings should prove a means of salvation to sinners. May the Holy Spirit overshadow the encampment, and fall upon the people. May faith triumph, and God be glorified. Amen.

TIME CONFERENCE AT LAWRENCE, MASS.—There will be a Conference of the above nature at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sept. 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, and others from all parts, are earnestly invited to attend. The evidence that the prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and that the great plan of salvation under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a great interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved all over the land.

Watchman, what of the night? Come, men of God, from the north, south, east and west; come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned, for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things are true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they be without foundation in God's word, let it be exposed. Come, brethren, from every part. Those who have argument against are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it. We hope, by the blessing of God, to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally, like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom. Brn. Cunningham, Barbour, Sheldon, and others are expected to be present.

GEO. H. CHURCHILL,
MOSES PROCTOR, } For the Church.
J. T. MERRILL,

GROVE AND BASKET MEETING.—If the Lord will, a grove and basket meeting will be held in West Levant, Me., in Bro. John Emerson's grove, on Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7th and 8th. Children's meetings will be held each day, immediately after dinner. Take special pains to bring the children. Let all bring food for themselves and teams. There is a good chance for horses in the grove. Lodging for Saturday night for those from a distance will be provided by brethren in the region. Should the weather be unfavorable, provision by a large tent, or otherwise, will be made for all who come. Come en masse to work for God. For the Brn., FRED. A. BAKER.

THE first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wis. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek Church, about eight miles north of Taunton, Sauk Co., to commence on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, holding over the following Lord's day. Let all the churches in the district send delegates, and it is expected that all preachers will attend. Friends from other districts are cordially invited to attend. GEO. THOMSON.

THE next annual meeting of the Advent Christian Conference of Northern Penn. and Southern New York will be held at Stephens' Mills, Steuben Co., New York, commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 12th, and continue over the following Sunday. Let each church remember this is an annual meeting, and report either by delegate or by letter. A general invitation is extended to all to come in the name and spirit of the Redeemer, and labor for the promotion of his cause.

J. W. TAYLOR, President.
A. H. BRIGGS, Secretary.

A GROVE MEETING will be held on Quaker Hill, near Williamsport and Warrensville, Lycoming Co., Pa., commencing evening, Sept. 5th, and continue about a week.

Also a grove-meeting in Ward Tp., Tioga Co., Pa., in the vicinity of Chase's Mills, as Bro. Wm. Fletcher and others may arrange, commencing evening of Sept. 12th, and continuing about a week. All are invited. Elders C. F. Sweet and J. T. Ongley (D. V.) will attend to preach the word at the above meetings. J. T. ONGLEY.

THE next session of the Maine Central Quarterly Conference will be held at the Town House in Rome, commencing Thursday, Sept. 12th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We hope the brothers and sisters will come filled with the Spirit of their Master, prepared to work for the cause of God, and the perishing around us. Preaching brethren from abroad are invited. WM. A. KNIGHT, Sec.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—I wish to say through the Crisis that the kind present sent me from the dear saints at Tremont Campmeeting, was more than gratefully received, and very timely. God bless the dear ones who sent it to me, for it was much needed; and may God reward every one, is the earnest prayer of your afflicted sister in Jesus, THERES B. WEAVER.

ORDINATION.—Bro. Enoch Phelps, Westfield, Mass., was this day (Aug. 24th) ordained to the work of an Evangelist. Prayer by Eld. B. Hitchcock; charge by Eld. E. McCulloch; right hand of fellowship by E. Owen. E. OWEN.

THE DESTINY OF MAN.

BY WM. ERWIN.

This is a valuable book of 312 octavo pp. The writer endeavors to bring forth all that he finds in the Bible relating to the destiny of the wicked. He shows beyond all controversy that man is mortal, and that the wicked will be utterly destroyed at the day of judgment. This work should have a wide circulation. Price $1.50; gilt, $2.00, postpaid.

PROSPECTUS.—The undersigned is preparing an exposition of the great prophecy of Christ, uttered upon the Mount of Olives, and recorded in the 24th chapter of Matthew, the 13th of Mark, and 21st of Luke. The general plan of the work is that followed by D. D. Buck, D. D., in "Our Lord's Great Prophecy." It is in two parts. PART FIRST embraces several introductory chapters on the HARMONY, proving that Matthew, Mark and Luke record the same discourse, and presenting the plan of exposition. PART SECOND contains the EXPOSITION, based upon the harmonized account of the three evangelists. It is the author's purpose to make the work as complete as its limits (about 225 pp.) will allow; and those who do not endorse the exposition will find in it much valuable and interesting matter. Among other things, the remarkable phenomena of the past few years are described; especially those occurring in "the black and terrible year 1871," and which fulfill, in part, the prediction concerning "distress of nations, with perplexity."

The work will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers is obtained. Let all who desire one or more copies subscribe immediately, and send me their P. O. address. The price will not be more than seventy-five cents, perhaps much less. All orders should be addressed to C. H. LEVERTON, V. D. M., St. Johnsbury, Vermont.

"THY WORD IS TRUTH."

M. S. HORNE.

Precious word to man benighted,
Toiling through life's rugged way,
With more than golden treasures freighted,
Pointing to a better day.
To a day when sin and sorrow
Will be remembered never more,
When the bright unending morrow
Will shed its light the new earth o'er.
Word of truth, will of the Father,
Revealed to helpless, sinful man;
Telling of a great Redeemer,
And redemption's glorious plan.
"Thy word is truth," steadfast, unfailing,
And all thy promises are sure;
Eternal life and bliss unending,
If we but to the end endure.
Then let us gird anew our armor,
Press on towards the glorious prize;
For soon the dawn of the bright morrow
We'll see in the far eastern skies.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER FIFTEEN.

I cannot forbear calling attention here to the similarity between these plagues and those poured out on the Egyptians in the days of Moses. Paul alludes to this resemblance in 2 Tim. 3: 8, 9. After saying that the last day miracle-workers shall be "men of corrupt minds, reprobate concerning the faith," and that they shall "resist the truth," as "Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses," he adds, "but they shall proceed no further, for their folly shall be manifest unto all men as theirs also was." This allusion intimates a resemblance, in their character, their manner of resisting the truth, and in their final ruin. But as we enter more particularly into the various features of resemblance, we shall discover a striking agreement in several important particulars.

Those ancient magicians opposed God and his truth by working miracles in opposition for a time. The Spiritualists, the last-day miracle-workers, are now doing the same abundantly, and have been for a number of years. But the ancient magicians soon encountered the judgments of God inflicted on them and their adherents in a variety of severe plagues. So will the Spiritualists in the seven last plagues. But those ancients were finally forced to acknowledge that God was in the power they were opposing, admitting to Pharaoh, "this is the finger of God." Ex. 8: 19. So, also, the Spiritualists will learn by the seven last plagues that God, their author, is not a nonentity, but a reality; yet in their hardness of heart "they repent not to give him glory."—Rev. 16: 9. The ancient magicians and their friends suffered from "a sore toil," as a plague. Ex. 7: 11. So will the Spiritualists from a "noisome and grievous sore." The ancients suffered from having "the water that was in the river turned to blood, and the fish that was in the river died." Ex. 7: 20, 21. So will these latter-day miracle-workers suffer the same things, insomuch that they have to drink blood.—Rev. 16: 3-4. Those magicians and their friends suffered from a "thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days; a "darkness which may be felt."—Ex. 10: 21-23. So also as the result of the fifth vial on the beast and his worshipers we read, "his kingdom was filled with darkness, and they gnawed their tongues for pain. Rev. 16: 10. And "the thunder, and hail, and fire," which was sent upon the Egyptians as one of their plagues, has its parallel in the seventh vial, the last of the seven plagues to be poured out on the spiritualists, "when there shall be voices and thunders and lightnings and a great hail." Rev. 16: 7-21. The magicians and their friends suffered these things as a mark of God's displeasure, while his own children were exempt from them where they dwelt. So shall it be during the prevalence of the plagues that are coming, as various scriptures show. Enraged to desperation by the plagues which they suffered, the ancients attempted by force of arms to overthrow the people and cause of God, and met their own destruction in the attempt. So shall it be with the Spiritualists in the battle of the great day of God Almighty.

Most of those who treat of these seven vials, or plagues, have interpreted them so mystically that one can find them fulfilled almost anywhere, because a mystical interpretation will suit almost anything. But mysticism is the mother of all schisms. And I wonder that those who have seen its pernicious fruits can allow themselves to walk by the "light" of its obscurities, or rest in the "harmony" of its confusions. But why depart from the literal sense in the account of those seven last plagues? The vials are symbols no doubt, and so also are the angels who emptied them; but the effect described should be taken literally. If we say that they are improbable in the nature of the case, we are thus denying the reality of those plagues in Egypt, since five of these seven last plagues find a parallel there. If then, I regard those literal, I must so understand these in the effects described. As God has called them "plagues," and "vials of wrath," I expect they will be found literal enough when fulfilled to deserve terrible names. I doubt not but they will be as literal as were those on the Egyptians, and more terribly severe, since those for whom they are intended are to be far more polluted and blasphemous toward God.

It may seem strange that they should be so presumptuous as to make the attempt to defeat Christ in open battle, and that they dare increase their blasphemy and bitterness toward God, when they have become convinced of the reality of his existence; but they are convinced of the certainty of his existence only to behold him as the author of these plagues, from which they suffer, hence their enemy. Besides, we may expect in "the great signs and wonders" of the false christ, such displays of miraculous power as will lead them to believe him more than a match for the true Christ. And when they become persuaded of this, they will soon learn to view the God of the Bible about as we do Satan. And when we consider withal that they are completely under the power of the spirits; that they were delivered over to Satan, and sealed for wrath when they accepted the mark of the beast, we can sufficiently account for their blindness and presumption.

It seems, too, that since they reject God by accepting the mark of the beast, choosing thus to follow their own pernicious ways rather than God's ways, he therefore sees fit to give them their own ways to the full, when they will realize that "they that sow to the wind shall reap the whirlwind." As by accepting the Spiritualist philosophy, they deny all distinction between vice and virtue, and persist in the idea that "whatever is is right," it seems that God proposes to give them a practical illustration of the horrible "beauties" of their system, by withdrawing all divine restraint over man, and turning him loose on himself under the control of the spirits of devils. Hence in the frenzied state of society, growing out of the revolutions and developments attendant upon the rise of the Confederacy, I have no doubt but we are to have another "Reign of Terror," as Bro. Pile claims, like that of the French Revolution of 1793-8, only that this last shall be on a world-wide scale, and with increased fury, presumption and blasphemy.

Again, and no doubt ere long, shall we behold another seeming Bonaparte, in the successful two horned-beast, passing in triumph through Europe, while the National Assemblies of Christendom, laboring under the throes of revolutionary fires, indulge their intemperate harangues, amidst hasty proscriptions and torrents of blood. Again, no doubt, will the barbarous guillotine be called to act its horrid part as the shortest method of despatching dangerous rivals. Again may we expect frequently to behold men of high standing in the church step forward in the public assemblies of blasphemers and deny the Lord that bought them, and renounce the only religion that saves men from sin, while the scoffing assembly exultingly repeat, "There is no God but Nature." Again, and often, doubtless, will some vile courtesan be set forth with public demonstrations of joy, as the only proper object for man to worship. Again will the Bible—sacred treasure—be generally sought and publicly burned, while the scoffing multitude exult and blaspheme in fiendish delight over their supposed escape from its requirements. In that terrible hour, "the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand." Dan. 12: 10. We have sometimes beheld a single individual run mad, which is bad enough to witness; but the present generation, I doubt not, will witness the awful spectacle of the mass of humanity run mad. Rejecting God and his word, they must drink of the wine cup of his fury, be moved, be mad, and fall to rise no more.

A PLAY BILL.

BRO. GRANT:—The following is a copy of the original and somewhat famous play-bill written by the Rev. Rowland Hill, and posted up at Richmond, England, June 4th, 1774, close to the play-bill of the day, and which helped to close the theatre. I found it in the "Editor's Drawer" of Harper's Monthly, and thinking others may be interested in reading it, I send it to you. C. E. BARNES.

"By command of the King of kings, and at the desire of all who love his appearing. At the Theatre of the Universe, on the eve of time, will be performed the Great Assize, or the Day of Judgment. The scenery, which is now actually preparing, will not only surpass every thing that has yet been seen, but will infinitely exceed the utmost stretch of human conception. There will be a just representation of all the inhabitants of the world, in their various and proper colors; and their customs and manners will be so actually and minutely delineated, that the most secret thought will be discovered. 'For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.'—Eccl. 12: 14.

This theatre will be laid out after a new plan, and will consist of pit and gallery only; and contrary to all others, the gallery is fitted . . . for the reception of the people of high (or heavenly) birth, and the pit for those of low (or earthly) rank. N. B.—The gallery is very spacious, and the pit without bottom. To prevent inconvenience, there are separate doors for admitting the company, and they are so different that none can mistake that are not wilfully blind. The door which opens into the gallery is very narrow, and the steps up to it are somewhat difficult; for which reason there are seldom many people about it. But the door that gives entrance into the pit is very wide, and very commodious, which causes such numbers to flock to it, that it is generally crowded. N. B.—The strait door leads to the right hand, and the broad one to the left.

It will be in vain for any one in a tinselled coat and borrowed language to personate one of high birth in order to get admittance into the upper places, for there is One of wonderful and deep penetration who will search and examine every individual, and all who cannot pronounce Shibboleth in the language of Canaan, or have not received a white stone or new name, or cannot prove a clear title to a certain portion of the Land of Promise, must be turned in at the left-hand door.

The principal performers are described in 1 Thess. 4: 16; 2 Thess. 1: 7-9; Matt. 24: 30, 31; 25: 31, 32; Dan. 7: 9, 10; Jude 14, 15; Rev. 20: 12-15, etc. But as there are some people better acquainted with the contents of a play-bill than the word of God, it may not be amiss to transcribe a verse or two for their perusal: 'The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven, with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that obey not the gospel, but to be glorified in his saints. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him. A thousand thousand ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him. The judgment was set, and the books were opened; and whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the lake of fire.'

of this grand and solemn performance will be opened by an archangel, with the trump of God. 'The trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised.' 1 Cor. 15: 52.

ACT 2

will be a procession of saints in white, with golden harps, accompanied with shouts of joy and songs of praise.

ACT 3

will be an assemblage of all the unregenerate. The music will consist chiefly of cries, accompanied with weeping, wailing, mourning, lamentation and woe.

To conclude with an Oration by the Son of God, as it is written in the 25th of Matthew, from the 34th verse to the end of the chapter. But for the sake of those who seldom read the Scriptures, I shall here transcribe two verses: 'Then shall the King say to them on the right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Then shall he also say to them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.' After which the curtain will drop.

Then! O to tell!
Some raised on high—others doomed to hell (Jno. 5: 28, 29);
These praise the Lamb, and sing redeeming love (Rev. 5: 8, 9; 14: 3, 4),
Lodged in his bosom, all his goodness prove (Luke 16: 22, 23),
While those who trampled under foot his grace (Luke 19: 14, 27),
Are banished now forever from his face. (Matt. 25: 30; 2 Thess. 1: 9)
Divided thus, a gulf is fixed between (Luke 16: 29),
And (everlasting) closes up the scene. (Matt. 25: 46)

'Thus will I do unto thee, O Israel; and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.' Amos 4: 12.

Tickets for the pit, at the easy purchase of following the vain pomps and vanities of the fashionable world, and the desires and amusements of the flesh, to be had at every flesh-pleasing assembly. 'If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die.' Rom. 8: 13. Tickets for the gallery at no less a rate than being converted; forsaking all, denying self, taking up the cross, and following Christ in the regeneration, to be had nowhere but in the word of God, and where that word appoints. 'He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.' Matt. 11: 15. 'And be not deceived; God is not mocked. For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.' Gal. 6: 7. N. B.—No money will be taken at the door, nor will any tickets give admittance into the gallery but those sealed by the Holy Ghost, with Immanuel's signet. 'Watch, therefore; be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh.' Matt. 24: 42, 44."

NATURE OF MIND.—No. 1.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE, WHO SHALL DECIDE?

ALVIRUS N. HITCHCOCK.

We are opposed to riding hobbies. The constant discussion of questions of no practical importance is, to say the least, distasteful, if not positively disgusting. The term "hobby-riding," however, is sometimes misapplied. Truth always meets opposition; but it is not hobby-riding to stand boldly in its defence, and wage a vigorous war against the ramparts of error. The question which we introduce at this time, is one which is agitating the public mind very extensively; and though it calls forth lively opposition from some, nevertheless many are being forced to reject the shadowy fabrications of heathendom, and accept the plainer truths of science and Revelation.

We would not be so unreasonable as to make war on all the commonly received truths of mental science. Far from it. Many of its conclusions we heartily accept; but when doctors disagree who shall decide? When mental philosophers are at variance in their reasonings, whom shall we believe? It weighs nothing to say that a given theory must be true because so many wise men adhere to it. The scale is nearly balanced. Very many wise men hold as many different theories totally averse to one another. Then what shall we do? Evidently we are thrown upon our own resources of thought. We must think for ourselves. Comparing the doctrines of others, we may, perchance, get some clue to the correct theory. And if our opinions harmoniously coincide with the Sacred Scriptures, we may rest upon them as being true. Theory is founded on fact. So we take the facts of mind, and draw our conclusions. We accept the existing mental phenomena, and thence proceed to account for them. That thought, will, memory, perception and judgment are connected with animal intelligences, we cannot deny; but as to the precise origin and nature of them, we are not agreed. To account for these manifestations, many have supposed man to be essentially a dual being, made up of a material organism, and a superadded immaterial entity. The latter, immortal in nature, is the thinking, willing, controlling part of man. The former is a mere instrument of the latter, only acting as it is acted upon. The advocates of this theory generally make a slight distinction between soul and spirit and mind, though alike in essential nature; but this distinction is not well defined; and many who depend upon their religious teachers for light, recognize no distinction at all. This, we think, is a fair statement of the popular doctrine.

But does this theory account for the phenomena of intelligence? Manifestly not. We do not see how in the least it removes the veil that seems to enshroud the mysteries of thought. But what is the nature of the mind? They say it is immaterial. Or, in the words of a popular divine, "It is a simple, spiritual essence; immortal, immaterial, intangible, indissoluble, having no exterior or interior surface, cannot come in contact with matter, and does not occupy space; and, might we add, does not weigh anything." And, may we add, a better definition of nothing could hardly be given. To account for the manifest relation between the brain and mental operations, it is said the brain is the instrument of the mind. In other words, while the mind is tabernacled in the body, the brain is its only medium of connection with the outer world. This is certainly seeking refuge in a glaring absurdity. One body cannot operate upon or through another unless there be either a contact of matter or a connection of influence. The mind cannot act through the brain by contact of particles, for, according to the popular hypothesis it is altogether immaterial and cannot come in contact with matter. Then it must be by influence. But this cannot be, for the mind being immaterial cannot exert even that. There is no magnetism without some kind of magnet, and, other things being equal, large magnets exhibit more of this subtle force than small ones. Neither is there an exhibition of any influence outside of materiality. We challenge the world for an example.

"But that is not my theory," says one. "I believe the soul to be a refined, material substance, that may act upon the brain." This is certainly deserving of consideration. It is self-evident, however, that matter must occupy space. But the location of the soul or mind has never been discovered. No dissecter has ever found it or the vacuum it has left by its departure. No one has ever seen it either in the body or out. Then what knowledge have we of the existence of such a personality? None whatever. Why, then, let me ask in all candor, should we cling to such a baseless fabrication? I know there are some who claim to have seen human spirits, but their observations are so discordant that little credence can be given them. Some have come to the conclusion—I suppose by a mathematical process—that fifty can stand upon the point of a cambric needle; but the microscope has not yet detected a single one. Others suppose that they have seen human ghosts resembling in form and feature the bodies that previously enclosed them; but they always vanish on being approached, unless they are actual geese, or pigs, or floating newspapers, as they generally prove to be. I have no doubt, however, that there are many honest professing Christians, who hold to this theory, believing that spirits are exceedingly refined material organizations, which can come and go without warning, as could Christ when he was upon earth. They even refer to Christ as an example of separate spiritual existence; but in so doing, they overlook a fact which is fatal to their theory. Christ, after his resurrection, possessed a material body of flesh and bones, as he declared to Thomas; and it was this same body that supernaturally appeared and disappeared. By what law we may not know. But Jesus declares this to be the power of spiritualized beings. So Christ was not an example of ghosts, but a type of the redeemed sons of God when they shall awake to everlasting felicity.

SLEEPING IN JESUS.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Them also which sleep in Jesus."—1 THESS. 4: 14.

Sleeping in Jesus. Comforting thought. Gone, but not forever. We shall see them again. Who has not a friend sleeping in Jesus? This is a world of sorrow and separation. Death reigns in triumph everywhere. He takes those we love and chains them in his cold prison. We weep, but he heeds not our tears. My mind wanders to-day to yonder grove. How sacred that spot seems. What fragrant recollections gather around it. I have a loved one sleeping there. It was a tearful day, when we folded those tender hands and dressed that dear one for the tomb. Farewells were sobbed forth, and hearts were rent with anguish, but Death had done its fearful work, and cries would not bring her back. How fresh in memory everything appears. We see the smiling countenance, the pleasant eye, the graceful form, all is real as though it were but yesterday. Can we ever forget that long, dark night, when we stood beside the dying one, and caught the last broken accents that fell from her lips? Can we forget the long, mournful journey, when we bore her away and laid her in yonder silent graveyard? O no, we can never forget it. How different the world has seemed since. All is silent, calm, and solemn. In the busy crowd, on the noisy street, or in the quiet home circle, there is within a deep solemnity, untouched by the joys and excitements of earth. What a treat at times to retire in solitude, and think of absent ones and breathe a prayer to Jesus that we may meet in the better land. It is in the school of affliction that God softens our hearts, and prepares us to sympathize with the mourner, and speak tenderly to those who weep.

Sleeping in Jesus. Then they are at rest. Yes, all is peaceful there. No tormenting dreams or burning fever disturb their slumbers. There the bustle and confusion, the strifes and bickerings of earth are heard no more. There no corroding cares or anxious fears are experienced. The pains and griefs, the joys and sorrows of life are past, and their heads are pillowed in the bosom of mother earth. The wind may whistle, the tempest rage, and the thunder roar, but they heed it not. All is quiet. There the wicked cease from troubling, and there the weary are at rest. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Sleeping in Jesus. Then they are safe. No danger of falling and coming short of the kingdom. There no temptations are hung out to attract the eye; no worldly enticements to decoy the mind; no hidden snares to entrap the feet. The devil comes not there. All is safe. The saints are God's jewels, and he will suffer nothing to harm or disturb them. Angels watch their resting place, and by and by they shall gather them to the heavenly garner. There, on the eternal hills of paradise, the saved ones will shine in immortal beauty, and fade no more forever. They shall be equal to the angels, to die no more.

Sleeping in Jesus. Then we should not sorrow as those who have no hope. We may weep; it is right, it is natural. "Jesus wept." But we should not weep without hope. Our loved ones will come again from the land of the enemy. Jesus has conquered death and become the first fruits of them that sleep. In a little while he will come and awake all his children. We shall know each other then. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

MAN LOST.

Nothing could be more important in a plan of redemption than to find out what was lost. After man had been formed of the dust of the earth, and the breath of life breathed into his nostrils and he became a living soul, he was placed in the garden eastward in Eden. Here was everything delightful to the eye and taste of man. The tree of life was in the midst of the garden, also the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Man was told he might eat of all the trees save one. The tree of life was put there to perpetuate life by eating from it.

In this floral spot of enchantment the first happy family were placed, with liberty to eat, feast, dress and keep it. "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Here is a prohibition with a death penalty. Man enjoys this felicity, till, in an unfortunate hour, the serpent finds his way to this Eden of virtue and love. In his first communications with these peaceable dwellers in the garden, he instils the spirit of disbelief of what God had said, and immediately inculcates disobedience and rebellion. He begins with the woman: "Hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? And the woman said unto the serpent, we may eat of the trees of the garden, but of the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, in the midst of the garden, God hath said, ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it lest ye die. And the serpent said to the woman, ye shall not surely die." Here are the first symptoms of rebellion. The serpent denies the positive declaration of God. Who told the truth, the serpent or God?

The serpent fascinates the woman; she yields to his influence, takes the fruit and did eat. She then entreated, and gave to her husband and he did eat. What was the result? Death was brought in upon the whole human family at this epoch. God called man from his hiding place; anathematized them for their great wickedness, and drove them from their Eden, lest they should eat (of the tree of life) and live forever. The tree of life he now guarded with a flaming sword, so that none can reach it and get life, and doomed man in these words of the inspired penman—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken; dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Here is the penalty for eating the forbidden tree—death. Turning to dust, this is death, and from that day till the present, death has been making fearful havoc among our dearest, filling the grave with his victims.

The wise man said the living know that they must die. Here is life forfeited and lost in jargon, rebellion, and all under the Adamic penalty—death. In this sad condition, God devises a plan to bring back lost life, and restore order and loyalty to his government. For this purpose "God gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life." The condition of finding favor, and regaining lost life, is believing, with a faith that loves to obey. Suppose we do not believe, then we shall perish; but if we believe on him, then we secure eternal life. So that in the promised restitution eternal life will be had by all who comply with this condition. This faith or belief in Bible testimony will bring into loyalty to Christ and his government all the lovers of Jesus, and at his coming they will regain this long life in Eden restored. Thus Jesus came to seek and save that which was lost.—L. BOUTELL, in Merrimack Journal.

THE BIBLE.

J. R. CLARK.

The Bible gives a calm peace in believing, and a firm hope in the future. It sustains the mind in adversity, and teaches us to be humble in prosperity. It teaches us to love and do good to others, and to realize the value of eternal life. It instructs how death will be conquered, and how the bonds of the tomb must be broken. The Bible is a treasure the world cannot purchase. It tells us of future events, of judgment and eternity; and God will fulfill his word to the letter, and all its promises we can claim if we believe in Jesus. "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life."

Do not study human creeds in place of the Bible, for the divinity taught at the present day is mostly of some sectarian creed. It may do to take a blank mind and impress it with this kind, but it will always end in bigotry. A free mind will never be satisfied with the views of others. A teacher of divinity should first find the capacity, and mind. If these were good, I would have them study the Bible for themselves, and send them out free to the world to do good. But if they had no mind, I would stamp them with another's mind, and write bigot on their forehead, and send them out as slaves.

THE BAD CAST AWAY.

J. B. COOK.

"A net . . . was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind." "They gathered the good into vessels; but cast the bad away."—MATT. 13: 47, 50.

AN IMPORTANT POINT DETERMINED.

The gospel was given to the world to gather a people to the name of Jesus, like the net cast into the sea to gather fish. As the net gathers good and bad, so the gospel gathers of every kind; Jew and Gentile; but while the good are gathered home, the bad are cast away.

NOTE. The bad are not put through another process. They have no purgatory. They who are thus represented are not reserved unto the day of judgment to be resurrected and hear the gospel, or "have a better chance." This parable, like many others, covers the ground; embraces those obedient to the faith, but casts the bad away, which is final. St. Paul, in all his epistles (Heb. 10: 23-31); St. Peter with awful emphasis (2 Pet. 2: 1-22); and St. Jude in his epistle, assert and sanction this by the example of the fallen angels; by Sodom, and the fall of Israel in the wilderness,—this solemn judgment of the great Judge of quick and dead, they "cast the bad away."

Error now, like idolatry to Israel, is as subtle and varied as sin; but it is in principle the same. A departure from the faith is, in apostolic language, apostasy. Apostates, like idolaters, are fore-doomed. "Their damnation slumbereth not." Yet some "dreamers," in their darkness and slumber, depart from all like language from Gen. 2 to Rev. 22, and insist that "the bad" are NOT "cast away" in any proper sense; because they, in their deep sleep, "dream" of the rising again of such to hear the gospel, in full assurance of their certain salvation. To me this denial of truth is but another edition of Adam's sin, of Israel's sin, of the sin of all in the great apostasy. It denies the most solemn denunciations of divine judgment against those who depart from the faith. It repeats the primal apostasy, and with a like motive,—"Ye shall NOT SURELY die"; "the end of those things is [not] death."

But faith says, on the authority of the Judge, they will "cast the bad away." "They shall be as though they had not been." Of course, these classes cannot be put through another process anyhow, with a view to their restoration. No, no. Other texts teach other points of truth; but nothing can deny this, and leave the least foundation for faith in the Bible as the word of God. For they "cast the bad away." If the good are to be gathered home and be the children of the kingdom, so surely the angel harvesters will "cast THE BAD AWAY."

— Men will never know us by our faith, for that is within us; they know us by our works, which are visible to them.

— He who knows not his want of knowledge, lacks wisdom.

— There is no peace so pure and sweet as the peace of prayer.

Dark clouds may threaten our sky to o'erspread,
Let not the heart falter; light glimmers ahead.

— To tell a falsehood is like the cut of a sabre; for though the wound may heal, the scar of it will remain.

— Holy thoughts breed holy words and holy actions, and are hopeful evidence of a renewed heart.

— A wise man will desire no more than he may get justly, use soberly, distribute cheerfully, and leave contentedly.

He always wins who sides with God;
To him no chance is lost;
God's will is sweetest to him when
It triumphs at his cost.

— It is not so much learning that is wanted, but wisdom to make a right use of the learning we have.

— The joy of the christian floats not on the surface, but dwells deep in the hidden recesses of the heart.

— The same spirit of faith which teaches a man to cry earnestly, teaches him to wait patiently; for as it assures him that mercy is in the Lord's hand, so it assures him it will be given forth in the Lord's time.

— If christians do not rejoice, it is because they do not live up to their privileges.

Give not back the hasty blow,
Though 'tis given wrongly;
Let the foolish scoffer go,
Though he tempt thee strongly;
Keep thy gentle Lord in mind,
Who was always meek and kind.

— Wisdom which is according to God, is a learning which requires no letters, and whose teacher is love.

— Good words are like dewdrops; they fall silently, but who can tell their effect?

— Of all our infirmities, vanity is the dearest to us; a man will starve his other vices to keep that alive.

WOULD you talk of religion securely, with true freedom and assurance, without any secret checks or faint-hearted misgivings? The rule is both short and infallible—do what you say. Practice as much religion as you talk, and then you have a full license to talk as much of it as you please.

SPEAKING WELL OF OTHERS.—If the disposition to speak well of others were universally prevalent, the world would become a comparative paradise. The opposite disposition is the Pandora-box, which, when opened, fills every house and every neighborhood with pain and sorrow. How many enmities and heart-burnings flow from this source! How much happiness is interrupted and destroyed! Envy, jealousy and the malignant spirit of evil, when they find vent by the lips, go forth on their mission like foul fiends, to blast the reputation and peace of others. Every one has his imperfections; and in the conduct of the best there will be occasional faults which might seem to justify animadversion. It is a good rule, however, when there is occasion for fault-finding, to do it privately to the erring one. This may prove salutary. It is a proof of interest in the individual, which will generally be taken kindly, if the manner of doing it is not offensive. The common and unchristian rule, on the contrary, is to proclaim the failings of others to all but themselves. This is unchristian, and shows a despicable heart.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."

STIMULANTS.

Nature kindly guards us from harm by diminishing the enjoyment as we approach excess. Thus food, which at first is palatable, becomes tasteless; exercise, which at first gives pleasure, becomes wearisome; wakefulness is succeeded by desire for sleep; and everywhere this law protects us from harm, until flattering stimulants step in and give appetite for the otherwise unpalatable food, goad on the energy of the weary, and banish the desire for sleep, giving unrestricted license for excess in every department of our nature. If no other evil resulted from their use, this alone is sufficient reason why they should be condemned.

Can we afford to cast aside the guarding and guiding hand of our Creator so wisely given to us to lead us into physical as well as moral rectitude? All of God's laws are not written out by inspiration. Why is it not sin to efface the inspiration of nature as well as to add to, or detract from the sacred pages?

Doubtless many would be willing to condemn stimulants in general, but would make an exception in favor of their particular stimulant. The well-known Dr. Hall says, "There is no such thing as a good stimulant, so there can be no best stimulant? Stimulants are all bad. What is a stimulant? It is a poison. To stimulate means to goad; to excite. Alcohol is a stimulant, and when it is taken into the system, the vital powers recognize it as a poison, and resist it with sufficient force to expel it from the vital domain, and this action is stimulation. It is really poisoning, and nothing else; therefore, if there is no best poison, there can be no best stimulant."

Still the use of stimulants like tea, spices, etc., is common among many of those who advocate the strictest temperance with regard to alcohol. The excuse may be made that tea may be nutritious; but people do not pay one dollar a pound or more for tea when flour can be had for five cents, on account of any nutritive quality existing in the dried leaves. They buy it because it contains that which makes it good, viz: its stimulating quality.

The belief is almost universal that a stimulant of some kind is necessary to health and vigor, and hygienists who live without them are regarded by such as fanatics. When people come to believe that the human system is sustained by simple food and drink alone, then we can teach temperance in the worst stimulants and narcotics like alcohol, tobacco, and opium, without the seed falling on barren and stony ground, or by the wayside.

It would fill a volume to trace out the different ways in which stimulants encourage every vice, and lay the foundation for every crime known among men, and in whatever light we view their effects, we must consider them an unmitigated curse to mankind.—Health Reformer.

NEATNESS.

In its essence, and purely for its own sake, neatness is found in few. Many a man is neat for appearance sake; there is an instinctive feeling that there is power in it. When a man consults a physician or a lawyer for the first time, or comes to rent a house or borrow money, he will come in his best dress; a lady will call in her carriage. A man who means business and honesty comes as he is, just as you will find him in his store, his shop, his counting-house. The most accomplished gamblers dress well, the most enterprising swindlers are faultlessly clothed, but countless multitudes are but white-washed sepulchres. Too many "don't care, as long as it will not be seen." Washington Allston, the great artist, the accomplished gentleman, suddenly left his friend standing at the door of a splendid Boston mansion as they were about entering for a party, because he had just remembered that he had a hole in his stocking. It could not be seen or known, but the very knowledge of its existence made him feel that he was less a man than he ought to be, and gave him a feeling of inferiority.

As persons are less careful of personal cleanliness and tidy apparel, they are infallibly and necessarily less of the angel, more of the animal; more under the dominion of passion, less under the influence of principle. Said a poor servant girl, "I can't explain what change religion has made in me, but I look more closely under the door-mat when I sweep than I used to." Intelligence, culture, elevation, give purity of body as well as purity of sense and sentiment.

When you see a neat, tidy, cleanly, cheerful dwelling, there you will find a joyous, loving, and happy family. But if filth and squalor and a disregard for the refining delicacies of life prevail in any household, there will be found in the moral character of the inmates much that is low, degrading, unprincipled, vicious, and disgusting. Therefore, as we grow in years, we ought to watch eagerly against neglect of cleanliness of person and tidiness in dress.—Hall's Journal of Health.

PHYSIOLOGY.—If one would acquaint himself with the laws of life and health, and live in accordance with hygienic principles, he may escape most of the diseases and infirmities with which the race is afflicted. Even epidemics, such as cholera, yellow fever, and small-pox, often do not touch a perfectly healthy organization; only those already predisposed to diseases become easy subjects. Foolish and ambitious parents push and crowd the minds of their fragile children, that they may become "smart," and show off to advantage. Under such treatment, immature brains become abnormally large, the young minds unhealthfully active, and a touch of brain fever cuts off the young lives like buds before they blossom. Precocious children may be everywhere seen in our cities. The artificial mode of life pursued by many parents tends to augment this growing evil. A better knowledge of physiology would correct all this.—Wells' Annual of Phrenology.

VENTILATION.—The parlor should be aired every day in summer, and thrown open broadly to the sunshine, whether needed or not. In living rooms where people often gather, ventilation is not complete unless such a current of air passes through them as to continually change the air.

A MEDICAL publication warns ladies against green gloves. It mentions a case in which skin-poisoning resulted from their use, an arsenical salt being employed to produce the color.

SLEEPING ON ROSES.

In Persia people often lie down on cushions, or matresses, filled with rose leaves. What a soft, sweet-scented bed! Wouldn't you like to sleep on such a bed?

Yes? Very good. But where shall we find rose leaves for such a bed? Ay, that's the question, isn't it?

I will tell you where. You must grow the roses every day in your life-gardens. How? Why, thus: for every unkind word spoken to you, speak a kind one back. That one kind word will be a very soft, sweet-scented rose leaf to put into your rose bed at night.

When your playmates are angry you must be mild. When your brothers or sisters are selfish, you must be obliging and self-denying. When your mother asks you to do an unpleasant duty, obey her promptly. When your lesson is difficult, study hard. Then when you go to bed at night you will find your mild temper, your self-denial, your obedience, and your diligence to be both softer and sweeter than any leaves that ever grew on Persian roses.

Now you see how children can sleep on roses. I hope you will go to work daily making rose leaves for your beds; and mark me: if you don't grow roses in your daily lives you can't hinder thorns from growing. In that case your beds will be hard things to sleep on. So I advise you to cultivate the beautiful sweet-scented roses which adorn dutiful lives.

MARK THIS, BOYS.

"Did you ever know a man who grew rich by fraud continue successful through life, and leave a fortune at death?"

This question was put to a gentleman who had been in business forty years. After reflecting awhile he replied:

"Not one. I have seen many men become rich as by magic, and win golden opinions, when some little thing led to an exposure of their fraud, and they have fallen into disgrace and ruin. Arson, perjury, murder, and suicide are common crimes with those who make haste to be rich regardless of the means."

Boys, stick a pin here. You will soon be men, and begin to act with those who make money. Write this good man's testimony in your minds, and with it put this word of God: "He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him."

Let these words lead you to resolve to make haste slowly, when you go into business, in the matter of making money.

THE "SILVER RULE."—You all know the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as you would wish them to do to you." Here is a rule which is almost a part of the Golden Rule, but which we will put by itself, and, because of its value, call it the Silver Rule. Think and say all you can of the good qualities of others; forget and keep silent concerning their bad qualities. You cannot conceive how much such a course will heighten your own happiness and raise you in the esteem of your mates. Did you ever think any more of a boy or girl because he or she found fault with others? Never call your school-mates and playmates ugly and cross, neither to their faces nor behind their backs. If they are ugly, or cross, or stingy, it does not make them better to talk or think about it, while it makes you love to dwell upon the faults of others, and causes your own soul to grow smaller, and you to become like the foul bird that prefers carrion for food. Rather tell all the good you can, and try to think of some good quality in those you associate with. You will be the happier for it.—S. S. Gem.

BE INDUSTRIOUS.—You must learn to be industrious; you must always try to be helpful to your parents. We say learn to be industrious; for there are many lazy boys and girls who are unwilling to do anything for their parents, or any one else. Many of the wicked men and women who are in our prisons and houses of correction are there because they were lazy when they were young. They were then unwilling to work. They would not learn to be industrious; they would not learn some useful trade as they grew older, so that they could earn their living in a respectable manner; and soon we hear that they are living lives of wickedness, have learned to drink, have stolen, lost their character, and are in prison.

THE PEACEMAKER.—Boys, you all know what this means. Remember what the Savior says: "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." And "These things I command you, that ye love one another." Also "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another." Don't forget these beautiful words, for the Redeemer loved little children, and said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

THE BETTER WAY.—An irreligious father being offended that his son had embraced religion, remarked to him, "You should have first taken care to establish yourself in business before you made up your mind about religion."

His son pointedly replied, "Father, my Savior has advised me differently, for he has said, 'Seek ye first the kingdom of God.'"

SPEAKING THE TRUTH.—Always speak the truth. Remember that God knows it if no one upon earth has discovered the dreadful sin of which you have been guilty. If you are ever tempted to utter a falsehood, turn to the fifth chapter of Acts, and you will there find in what way God punished a man and woman who told falsehoods.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Mr. President, and Members of the Advent Christian Association:—

A kind and very merciful God having protected us through another year in the dangerous pathway of probationary life, should receive our heartfelt gratitude for the abundant blessings enjoyed.

As our official relations demand from me an address, at this annual gathering of your christian body, upon the subjects and duties which have caused us to affiliate in these fraternal associations, I cheerfully perform it as a sacred duty.

The emphatic and central duty to which our divine Master has called us, and the accomplishment of which has caused us to associate as we are to-day, is that of christian watchmen. Watching implies danger. Therefore where danger exists, watching is demanded. Christ's church is always exposed to danger, and watchfulness is always required. This duty is so imperative and essential, that Christ appoints a class of servants, whose duty it is to watch for dangers, and notify the exposed flock of their approach. There are some dangers to which the church is constantly exposed; while others are specific, and only exist in connection with special circumstances.

God always makes known to his faithful servants the dangers threatening his people, so that when they warn them, and the warning is heeded, the calamities may be averted. But when evidences of coming judgments are presented to his servants, and they fail to communicate the same to those who are exposed to them, then they are executed upon those servants, for their wicked neglect. Seasons of special judgments from God are always preceded by seasons of special warning from him.

The coming of the flood, the taking and destruction of Babylon, Nineveh, Tyre, and Jerusalem; the overthrow of empires, and scattering of nations, show the application of these immutable principles in the divine government.

We are assembled here, Mr. President, as the servants of God, standing between him and this generation, charged with the solemn duty of receiving from him every evidence, sign, and token, of coming danger, and warning all men of the same. God's infinite love will never fail to manifest sufficient evidence of coming calamities and judgments, local, national, or general; so that all exposed may be warned and escape them.

Our responsible duties are to watch for those evidences, and present them to the people in a way to convince them, if possible, of their perilous position in time to find safety.

Special circumstances connected with this generation indicate special dangers to which it is exposed, and which require special duties of its watchmen; all of which are clearly presented and defined in the Scriptures. The specific duties of Christ's servants at this time are, therefore, clearly expressed. This generation is unmistakably marked on the prophetic calendar. Its chronological era is shown as a transition period in human association. Its characteristics are clearly stated. The result of the positions taken, and the work done by its distinguished classes, is definitely presented. Its prophetic history is found connected with an unbroken series of events, spanning thousands of years, in which its political, ecclesiastical and social status is fully defined. It would be as easy to mistake George Washington for Benedict Arnold, in the history of this country, as this generation for any other in the prophetic history of the world.

Have we associated ourselves in this christian body to increase our efficiency in doing a work represented as being done by a class of this generation? If so, does God in his word approve, or disapprove of it? If his disapproval is recorded, let us dissolve this meeting this hour, and not adjourn it. But if the divine sanction is written, then let us tenaciously adhere to the sacred work, if the heavens fall.

We have taken the position that the probationary ages of our race are terminating; that the appointed day of final and eternal judgment of humanity is at hand. If this be true, then there is a specific work for the church to do.

There are certain universal and eternal principles embraced in the divine government, which are as changeless as their Author. Therefore all beings, of all ages, without exception, must be subject to their control. Some of these are justice, mercy, and impartiality. God cannot deal unjustly with any being, neither can he extend more mercy to one than to another of the same class, under the same circumstances. If he mercifully warns one of coming danger, or the end of probationary trial, he will warn all. Neglecting or refusing to do this, would be treating his creatures partially, which he does not do; for God "is without partiality."

The general rule by which the Governor of our race notifies us of the end of our trial, is by wasting disease; but in many cases of sudden death, testimony is left of forewarning, which is doubtless true in all such cases. In this the mercy of a kind Father is manifested; giving his creatures time to make preparation, or finish it, to meet their Judge in peace.

If this rule applies to individuals, it must also to classes, nations, and generations. God has never brought sudden judgments upon any people, to end their probationary period, without first giving them timely warning of his purpose so to do. This was true of the Antediluvians, Sodomites, Jews, and all others. Will he make an exception of the last generation? Shall the hum of business sound uninterruptedly, and the charm of beguiling music roll its bewitching note undisturbed by heaven's last warning message, until the trump of final doom? Shall earth's last proud monarchs be led by necromantic teachers, and secure ill-gotten gains in the hands of cruel task-masters, who rob the laborers of their justly earned hire, and not be warned of impending retribution? Shall scoffers mock God, denying the work of his hands in creating the earth, and go unrebuked until the dissolving elements shall sweep them into the vortex of perdition? Every principle in the divine government says, no! Every sentence in God's word says, no!

Then, to execute the divine purpose, some means and agents must be employed, to testify to the last generation of impending judgments and "sudden destruction." The heaven-appointed means is the gospel of the kingdom, which must testify or "witness to all nations" of coming judgments; and "then shall the end come." The faithful servants are the agency employed, "giving meat in due season," or truth appropriated for an appointed time.

The all-important question now before us is, Has the time come for the judgment message to be due; and are we presenting it to the people as divinely instructed? When that message is preached, it must be testified that "the kingdom of God is at hand"; for that is a part of the message. Such a testimony cannot be given scripturally, until the signs of Christ's coming begin to appear; for Jesus said—"When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." A witness is not allowed to testify to what he does not know; and no one has the authority to say that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand, until the signs given by Jesus begin to appear; for they were given to show when it is nigh.

The kingdom of God cannot be established until the four great prophetic Gentile governments have spent their day; for God's was to succeed theirs. Therefore, the proclamation that the kingdom of God is nigh, cannot be truthfully made, until Babylon, Medo-Persia and Grecia have passed, and Rome is closing her history. When that period comes, the message will be due; and Christ's servants will be held responsible for its proclamation.

The first three kingdoms have passed, and the last prophetic items of Roman history are being accomplished before our eyes. In harmony with this, the signs did begin to appear early in the history of this generation. Every department of our world has responded to the prophetic demand, and is closing the list of last-day signs. The sun, moon, and stars, answered exactly in time and manner as foretold. The nations have universally cried peace, and made unprecedented preparations for war. The western apostasy has tracked Inspiration's penciling through the measured periods of its wonderful history, to its death point. The eastern abomination has unrolled the pages of its bloody record through the counted days and hours of its licensed triumphs, until it fearfully casts its eye for a place of safe retreat, into the vale of slaughter shaded by holy mountains, which God has chosen for its death scenes.

The moral world groans under an insupportable burden of public and private, national and personal sins, which increase ten per cent each decade.

The earth has passed into the period of its death spasms, answering to the call of Inspiration, with multiplied and fearful quakings, sea-waves roaring, floods inundating, fires consuming, tempests howling, and solar electrical currents threatening the dissolution of this mundane system.

The sun threw down its predicted shadow, where men were found who had the wisdom to correctly interpret its signification, as did the eastern shepherds when the predicted star appeared.

The moon also answered the divine appointment, and withdrew her queenly light, wrapping the earth in Egyptian darkness.

The stars, although accustomed to November exhibitions, yet, to meet the prophetic decree, once in all time collected themselves in "Leo's chamber," and shot out from every window, scattering like unripe fruit shaken from its native branches.

War has raised its bloody arm, and seized with a death-grasp foretold implements of butchery, preparing unprecedented numbers for the field of fatal strife.

Worship has become worldly, pompous, heartless, and spiritless.

The church has become Jewish, asking for one sign from heaven, mystifying the word of God, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

Scoffers have arisen, who by their science (falsely so called) deny that by the word of God the heavens and earth were created, and by the same word must at an appointed time be dissolved.

Suddenly the world has become filled with necromancers and soothsayers, as in Egypt and Canaan, who just before the deliverance of God's people and the destruction of his enemies, blasphemously professed to be taught sacred things by the spirits of the dead.

The spirit of jealousy is poured out upon the people of this age as predicted; breaking the harmony and destroying the unity of all human associations, from the family to the empire.

The "howl" of "Maktesh" has gratingly fallen upon our ears; for the "rich" and "laborers" are arrayed as antagonists; therefore "the day of the Lord is at hand," and "the Judge standeth before the door."

Surely every part of our world has been taxed to produce signs and omens of coming change and final judgment. The heavens and the earth have answered to the divine roll-call, while all nations have wheeled into line for the last great battle.

The faithful sentinels of Christ have spent the years of this generation upon the towers of Zion's summit, watching with ceaseless vigilance the filling of the prophetic mold of last-day signs.

From those towers the gospel of the kingdom has been heard rolling its deep-toned note of solemn warning upon the ear of this last generation. God has called us to that position and work as a specialty. Such special duties always become the pivot upon which the salvation and destiny of those who are called to perform them turns. The special duty of Noah was to proclaim and prepare for a coming flood; and he must have perished without that faith and preparation. Lot escaped a fiery baptism in Sodom, by a sudden exit from the doomed city.

These, with the apostolic church at Jerusalem, are given as prophetic examples, to admonish the church of the last generation of the importance of its specific work. This is the bugle note to call the enlisted soldiers of Christ to arms. This is the rock upon which our feet should stand, 'mid the theological confusion and spiritual delusion of our day. We should faithfully perform all christian duties; but make specific and central the preaching and publication of the prophetical Scriptures, relating to the last days, presenting clearly and specifically the signs of the times indicating the nearness of the kingdom of God.

The reception and practical results of these truths will produce a deeper-toned piety, a more perfect consecration and sanctification, and more gospel holiness, than any which can be brought to bear upon the church of Christ in these last days; for God has designed and appropriated them to prepare the Bride to meet the Bridegroom.

Mr. President, and dear brethren in Christ, I devoutly believe that God has called us to occupy this position, and that Christ has instructed us to do this work. If this position and work is especially important to Christ and his church, Satan will bring all his best artillery to bear upon it. His longest guns and most deadly shot must sweep our camp.

His first attack is always from his own fortification, the infidel world and an apostate church; but when this fails, he invariably seeks to enter the camp of his enemy, and raise sedition, and thus turn their guns upon their own ranks, and so destroy and take their position. This is always the last strategical movement, and necessarily brings the final issue.

It is comforting to know that we are in the last part of the deadly strife, for the missiles thrown from guns manned by professed "fellow servants" are more deadly than those from the outside world.

The bitterness of this warfare is the last in the prophetic history of Christ's church. Moses, Christ, and the typical church, closed their warfare at this tragical point, to which the christian church has now come. This is the hour of temptation, which is to try all hearts, and prove the loyalty of all professed servants of Jesus.

Our danger consists in rising upon human dignity, and engaging in a warfare for mastery and position in this world; while our safety consists in falling low in the meekness of Christ, so that the enemy's missiles may pass harmlessly over our heads. Use none of his ammunition and retaliation; but spike his guns with clear, logical, Bible truth, vitalized by the Holy Spirit and divine love. Do not let the blinding veil of humanity hide from the vision of your anointed eyes the grandeur, sublimity, and vast importance of your own work, and the events now transpiring around you.

It is the transition period in human associations. A world must be warned of impending judgment, and the church safely led amid the last-day perils.

Satan understands the magnitude of this work, and will labor to hinder its accomplishment in every possible way. He will pour out flattery to seduce you, if possible, from the unpopular position of sacred truth, promising great success if you will ignore your peculiar faith, and your association with those who defend it. This has always been his most successful strategem, especially at the close of each divine administration.

He will labor artfully to destroy confidence in the truths particularly designed to benefit a people or generation, by changing it into a lie, by allegorical interpretations, or by causing its advocates to disgrace it by fanatical or foolish acts; thus destroying its power to save the perishing. But the servants of Christ should remain firm at their posts, calmly and steadily doing their appointed work, amid flattery and frowns, confusion and strife, until it be accomplished.

Christ has called his people of this age to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom to all nations, as a specific work. It must be preached as a witness, to show when this age or gospel shall "end." Therefore the specialty in our divine call is, to preach and publish the arguments, embracing the facts and chronology, showing that the gospel will end within the bounds of this generation.

The great importance of this christian duty does not make others less important, but, when faithfully performed, serves to increase an interest in all Bible truth.

I said this message was designed of God to produce in the church the last finishing work to meet the Bridegroom. It should therefore be so preached and published as to present on the foreground practical godliness, and the necessity of present and full consecration and Bible holiness. Without this it will be like the warp of a web without the woof, useless; while holiness, in opposition to this, would be like the righteousness of Pharisees in opposition to Christ, human and worthless. But when both are received and enjoyed, a people will be prepared for the coming of Christ and the kingdom of God.

The Father has taught us that the "vision" showing when his Son will come, should "be written" "upon tables," so "that he may run that readeth" it. We are instructed, therefore, not only to preach the last warning message, but to write and publish it, so that it can be read by those who "run to and fro," at the time of the end.

Having come to that time, the duty becomes imperative, and cannot with safety be neglected. It must be written plainly, so that the truth may be easily and distinctly seen by all; for the future welfare of this generation MAINLY depends upon its reception.

To meet this demand and perform this sacred duty, the Society which I now represent was formed. To accomplish that work, it is publishing one weekly, and one monthly paper, together with tracts and books, in which we design to present divine truth, prophetical, doctrinal, and practical, that is especially needed at this age of the world; and we should most devoutly and prayerfully devote ourselves to it, until the day ends.

The work is more grand and responsible than any men ever engaged in. It is notifying kings and rulers, that their term of office is expiring by divine limitation. It is serving the summons of Heaven's Court upon all nations and classes, to prepare for immediate trial and judgment. It says to the curse, the period of thy dark reign is ending; for the last roll of thunder and gleam of lightning is passing. The last dying quiver of earthquake is being felt. Pestilential vapors are producing their last sad, parting scenes. Tyrants are forging their last chains of oppression. Purity and innocence are being seduced and corrupted by the last foul libertines. Rich extortioners are causing the last convulsive throes among the oppressed laborers. The last wedded hearts are being rent with indescribable anguish by broken vows and Satanic alienation. Hoarded revenge is about to use the steel and poison for the last time. Bribery is extending the hand with the last corrupting gift. The burglar and assassin are preparing to do their last dark deeds. The church of Christ is receiving her last reproach and reviling from ungodly sinners.

Satan comprehends the situation. He sees the combatants of truth and error, of sin and holiness, pressing the battle to the final issue. He can read the dial of God's prophetic clock, and knows assuredly that the limited period of his warfare is terminating. He is therefore pressing to the front his last reserves. His invincible veterans, in heathen uniform, are wheeling into line with apostate christianity, charging upon the ranks of Christ's friends to drive them from the strong fort of present truth and christian purity. Satan understands that the most destructive gun is the gospel of the kingdom; he therefore rallies all his forces to silence it, either by dismounting it, or spiking it, or changing it for one of less calibre, or exciting mutiny among the gunners, or exploding its magazine. But Christ has placed it, and will defend it, and will safely protect those who fearlessly work it.

Then, ye servants of God, unitedly, and boldly, stand up in defense of the great truths he has called us to proclaim. God will hold us responsible for the influence our publications exert upon the present generation, quivering and convulsed with excitement.

This universal excitement in every class and grade of society converges to one grand focal point, and demands with one voice a radical change in human association.

Every class, from the king to the peasant, feels a kind of prophetic assurance that a new era is dawning. This experience evidently originates in the whisperings of that Spirit which taught the Antediluvians while Noah was preparing the ark. But Satan, to thwart the Almighty in thus inclining men to prepare to enjoy the new administration of earthly government, insinuates the idea that human instrumentalities will produce the expected change.

All who fail to receive God's utterances of truth, which must agree with the teachings of his Spirit, fall into the enemy's delusion, and therefore suppose they are laying the sure foundation for the coming reign.

As the various classes differ widely in their expectations of the coming new order, this difference necessarily produces antagonism, which is rapidly culminating in a sanguinary strife for the rulership of our world. Each class contends that it is licensed by the ruling power of this world to become its administrator, and that the time has come for it to take the reins of universal government, and rule according to the decree of its god.

The voice uttering these sentiments comes from the sanctum of all the great churches, from the thrones of kingly lords, from the blinded chambers of Spiritists, and the council-rooms of Communists, saying, Humanity is able to revolutionize and reconstruct itself.

This is the false sentiment of the age. It is the blinding error of the generation. Here is our battle-ground. Labor to comprehend the position, and meet the enemy at his fort. God has furnished the church with the truth perfectly adapted to the case. While all feel assured that a change is at hand, give the proof that this conviction comes from God, by making plain upon your tables, or publications, the prophetic stages of human progress. Show plainly that all changes have come exactly as presignified, and that this is the marked period for the next and last change to take place. Make the truth emphatic and clear, that all humanity can do in relation to the change is, to individually prepare for the coming government.

Write and publish the mighty truth, that God is about to revolutionize this world in every department, through Jesus Christ, by a stupendous miracle. Show the ending of sin, and destruction of the curse; the re-creation of the earth, and renewal of the heavens; the subjugation of all rebels, and the crowning of the saints; the deposition of earth's arch enemy, and the coronation of David's royal Son; the opening of the graves, and re-living of the countless dead; the last grand assize of congregated humanity, and the execution of the final sentence upon each member of the fallen race; the restitution, reconstruction, and perfection, of God's glorious kingdom upon the earth, and the introduction of the golden age of eternal blessedness.

These truths are sacred and heavenly; worthy of their glorious Author. They should be handled with clean hands, and come forth from holy and sanctified hearts.

Mr. President, these are the days of the Son of man, which holy men have desired to see, but death intervened. Sanctified eyes have anxiously waited to see these heaven-appointed signs, which we have beheld and recorded. Holy hearts have throbbingly beat to engage in the sacred work which we are called to perform. Shall we sit listlessly down, enjoying the sublimity of these wonders, while sacred truth is blasphemously trodden under foot by infidels and heartless scoffers, and not use our pens and tongues to expose their folly, and rebuke their madness? Shall we cover our sheets and fill our books with discussions of abstract subjects, while angels are watching to see us unfold the last glorious mysteries of the gospel?

Let us arise in the strength of Judah's Lion, and bow ourselves like Samson, and take hold of the pillars of Antichrist's temple, and make a united and last effort to defeat sin and Satan, and vindicate Christ and the gospel. Work, WORK for God, for the day of labor is ending. The darkness of sin's sad night is spreading its sable mantle over our fallen world. Scatter your silent heralds everywhere, to speak of Christ and salvation, of coming judgment, and speedy retribution. Gird you with heavenly strength, for the conflict is fearful between truth and error, God and Sa an.

Worlds are charging in the last final battle. Stand up manfully, and lay off the childish weakness of party prejudice, and personal ambition, and put on the nobility of pure christianity, and strike for God and fallen humanity. And when the dust and smoke of sin's terrible battle are passed, and the great Messiah shall rend the blue curtain and descend over the angelic pathway to visit his purchased inheritance, shall the morning of eternal peace roll its wave of heavenly light through the dark regions of the curse, and the pure melodies of redemption's anthem shall echo through the vast dominions of the great King. Then shall your feet tread the sacred soil of Mount Zion, and enjoy undisturbed rest through the everlasting ages.

All of which, for the defense of truth, and the strengthening of your hands in the work of God, is respectfully submitted.

J. Couch.

This address was heartily accepted, and voted to be published in pamphlet form for gratuitous distribution. The Secretary of the A. C. P. S., the Treasurer, and Business Agent, then reported severally, all which reports were accepted and adopted.

BUSINESS AGENT'S REPORT.

Mr. President, and Brethren of the Advent Christian Publication Society:—

With continued thankfulness to our heavenly Father for his great mercy in preserving our health and lives through the various changes which have surrounded us since our last annual meeting, it now becomes my duty as your executive agent, to report to you the business operations of the Society for the past year. We entered upon the business of the year with a capital as given in our last annual report of $17,341.85. Our present capital we put as follows:—

Property on hand, valued at	$10,994 04
Cash in the Treasury	1,680 77
Amount due the Crisis, valued at	5,000 00
" " " Young Pilgrim valued at	300 00
" " on book acct	500 00
Total capital	$18,474 81

Our receipts the past year were $23,311.53; the largest amount received in any one year since the organization of this Society.

Book and Tract Department.

During the past year we have published over 2,800,000 pages of tracts, several of which are new ones; viz., "A Trumpet for the Watchman," "Is it Heresy?" "Watchman's Notes of Warning," "Yaveh Christ," "Prepare to meet thy God," "Is Christ's Second Advent in the Past?" We have published two editions of the "Jubilee Harp," and one edition each of the "Hymns of the Harp," and of the Question Book." The Harp, Hymn, and "Question Book, are standard works among our people, and are in good demand. The value of books and tracts on hand at the beginning of the year was $3,916.-94. The cost of books and tracts made and purchased during the year is $4,800.54. Due on book account about the same as last year. Total books and tracts, $8,717.48. The receipts for books and tracts were $4,954.23. Amount received from the Tract Fund for tracts granted, $775.45. Total sales and grants, $5,729.68. Value of books, tracts, and papers on hand, $5,429.69. Total, $11,159.37.

The World's Crisis.

At our last annual meeting we reported a large amount due on the subscription list of this paper. We have made more effort the past year to collect the same than usual; and while we have succeeded in collecting quite an amount, yet we have been obliged to cut off from our lists a very large number who have not responded, in any way, to our repeated calls in the paper, by letters, and by being waited upon personally by collectors;—so that without orders from the subscribers we have cut off more for non-payment of dues than ever in any one year before.

The number of names upon our subscription list, as reported last year, was 9344. The number now is 9438. The number of new subscribers, 1519. The number of stoppages and delinquents cut off is 1425, making an increase of 94 during the year. There are yet a large number who have not responded to our calls, and we see no other way than to drop their names from our list if they do not soon report themselves. The number of names on our free list is 890, being an increase of twenty-one since last year. They are scattered throughout the various States, about the same as in former years.

The receipts for the Crisis during the year have been, on the subscription list, $16,864.-85. On the Poor Fund, $169.98. Total $17,034.83. Since our last report, the subscription price of the Crisis has been reduced from $2.50 per year to $2.00. The result has been that many more names have been added to our list since the reduction, in proportion, than during that part of the year it was at the former price.

With the large number of names on our free list, and our present low price, our subscribers will see the importance of prompt payment; and also our friends, we hope, will put forth earnest efforts to obtain new subscribers. Our list ought to be brought up, at least, to 15,000, and we think if all would take hold in earnest, looking to the Lord for his blessing, this might be accomplished by the close of another year.

The Young Pilgrim.

The number of names on the subscription list of this paper is 3956; last year, 3862; increase, 94. Names on free list last year, 52; this year, 50. The receipts on the subscription list are $1,120.74. On the Pilgrim Fund, $5.05. Total receipts, $1,125.79. Although this paper is published at a pecuniary loss to the Society, we believe it is doing a good work, and we think should be continued.

The Tract Fund.

The amount received on the Tract Fund during the year is $566.38. The call for tracts for free distribution continues unabated. Special calls from the South have just been received. We have sent out for free distribution to the amount of $775.45, which is in excess of funds received for the same during the year of $209.07. This deficit has been made up from an unexpended balance of this fund from former years.

We have a good supply of tracts of various kinds; some new ones, which should be scattered widely, especially "The Trumpet for the Watchman," a copy of which ought to be placed in the hands of the ministers through the country. And we hope the brethren and sisters will see that the good and glorious work of tract distribution is carried forward with renewed energy during the short time remaining us for work.

The Poor Fund.

The amount received on this fund is $169.-98, which is very small, considering the calls upon us, though more than double that of last year. There are scattered through the country very many poor persons—brethren and sisters, who are looking for the speedy coming of our blessed Lord. They in many cases have no meeting which they can attend, and the Crisis is a great comfort to them; and we know that the supporters of this Society would take pleasure in contributing to help supply this class, did they fully realize their wants. We can assure all that contributions to this fund are in the right direction to do good, and to gladden the hearts of those of like precious faith, but who are less favored with worldly riches than those who are able to give.

Brethren, we have reason to "praise our God" for his manifold blessings,—that he has counted us worthy to be instruments in proclaiming the last great message to a judgment-bound world—"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him"; that there is an open door for our publications; that they are received into as many willing hands as they are, and that the blessing of the Lord attends them. We have no doubt that this work is of God, and that very soon the Lord himself will descend from heaven in great glory, to reward all who are his, who have faithfully performed the work committed to them. May we all be found among the chosen ones.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A SUGGESTION TO PREACHERS.

There are hundreds who take the Crisis who are not on the "free" list, do not pay for their paper, and never explain to the Office why they do not pay after being requested to through the Crisis so often, and most if not all have had bills sent, or been called on personally, yet pay nothing, and say nothing; but they do something; i. e., they do not act like honest people, say nothing of Christianity. Now a question. Is it not duty to the main body that support the paper, to stop such papers, and send them to outsiders who will read them and thank the Office, if nothing more? Preachers can ascertain the number of dead heads, or headless ones, in their vicinity, and also the same number of outsiders that would take the paper and read it six months if sent to them. Such a course would spread the light, and probably secure some paying subscribers. People who will not respond in any way, by paying, or part paying, or explaining, will not be benefited by its continuance, I care not who it is.

The paper is put down to $2.00 a year, for the purpose of helping the poor and enlarging the subscription list.

I think the above transfer can be made by preachers easier than in any other way, and produce a happy revolution. Something ought to be done in this direction. H. MUNGER.

CONSECRATION TO JESUS.

O. W. H. DEXTER.

BRO. GRANT:—After reading the experience of others who have consecrated all to Jesus, I thought I would add my testimony. Thank God that many are trying to walk in the fulness of Jesus' love. O how sweet such a walk. It has been but a few weeks since I gave my all to Jesus. O what sweet love! It filled my whole soul. Praise the Lord. Glory be to his name. My whole soul is filled with his glorious love and sweet peace. Who can express it? None but the blood-washed. O how sweet to lean on Jesus' breast every moment, drinking at the fountain of his love, and rejoicing in the glorious hope set before us in his holy word.

"O blessed rest, on Jesus' breast
So sweetly to recline;
Thy voice to hear, so loved, so dear,
And know that thou art mine.

Thy radiant face, thy matchless grace,
Jesus, thou fairest one,
To earth have given the joys of heaven,
With thee, 'tis heaven begun."

O how true are the words of Jesus—"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." O how blessed to abide in Jesus. What precious promises the Savior has given us. Only abide in him. Brethren and sisters, let us abide under the wings of the Almighty. Let us lead a holy and purer life in Jesus, "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Let us be ready, dear friends, when the Bridegroom cometh; whether it be at midnight, or in the morning. Let not sin reign in our mortal bodies; but let us follow the dear Master, who walked in all humbleness and holiness of heart, and imitate his character.

Do you ask how to receive this perfect love? Simply by giving all to Jesus, laying all down at Jesus' feet, laying all upon the altar, and keeping it there. Sanctification is giving all to Jesus, and then believing that we are his.

WERE WE MISTAKEN?—We felt confident that there was interest enough in the Second Advent Church to give the gospel of the coming kingdom of Christ to other nations in their own languages, especially to those who are amongst us. Therefore we prepared a tract by request, and a brother has translated it into the Norwegian tongue ready to print. We subscribed $25, he $10. We stated that the thing would succeed—that brethren would make it up to $100, that the tract might be circulated free. Up to this time only $28 have been added. Shall we have the $37 to make up the $100, and publish this twenty-four page tract? Who responds?

UNREST.

There is a remarkable state of unrest in society at the present time; and a general dissatisfaction with the existing state of things. This is true of church and state. The old order is fast breaking up in confusion, with nothing better, or even as good, to put in its place. Christ is rejected, the christian religion, in its purity, is laid aside for cold formalism, and the true follower of Jesus is scouted as an "old fogy." Communism and Internationalism, in connection with Spiritualism, propose to take the place of Christianity and reform the world. But there is no rest out of Christ; hence the prevailing spirit of unrest. There is a remarkable degree of dissatisfaction among all classes, and each one has some new scheme to bring about a better state of things, without the help of Jesus. But effort of the kind only plunges them deeper into confusion, giving clearer evidence of their own weakness, and inability to make society any better independent of the power of Christ. When he is set aside, all goes wrong. These would-be-reformers claim that the sad state of things in the world has been caused by too much obedience to the teaching of those who support the Bible, and that the time has come to try something else. Had all those who profess the religion of Christ, lived in harmony with its precepts and spirit, there would have been but little foothold for those who are now finding so much fault with the nominal churches. As it is, they have much ground for complaint. But the further they get from Christ and his pure religion, the more unrest. Men are becoming desperate. They demand a revolution, and care but little how it is accomplished, if they can only secure some favored position in the new order of things. The extreme selfishness, pride and covetousness, which now control the hearts of men lead them to adopt almost any measure to gratify their desires. They act on the principle that the end justifies the means. Principle, virtue, and even life, are sacrificed when they are obstacles in the way of securing their object.

It is a dark hour in the history of this planet, but a glorious day is about to dawn, surpassing all others in its history. Until the King of kings comes, "worse and worse" will be the term to express the progress in society. No mere human schemes will be successful in reforming the world. Every system without Christ in its centre, will prove a failure. Satan is rallying all his forces to demolish everything that is purely christian, and calculated to elevate mankind. He offers all kinds of substitutes, adapted to every taste, and every grade in society. His success is truly alarming, and should arouse every true disciple of Jesus, to cry an alarm in all directions. Soon it will be too late to rescue from the power of the adversary. Do we realize the perils of the present hour? Do we properly estimate the value of eternal life, or the terribleness of eternal destruction? What a contrast between the two! Are we sufficiently awake to these things? Eternal interests are at stake, and must soon be settled. Let us do all in our power to lead the people to Christ, who alone can give the rest so much needed. He invites all the weary to come to him and receive rest. All other sources fail to give it. He who seeks elsewhere seeks in vain. There is no other way to secure the boon. No one can buy it. It is a gift to those who will confess and forsake their sins. How reasonable the conditions! The most valuable of all things to be had as a gift, when we are willing to part with the worst thing a man ever had—sin. Praise the Lord, there is rest in Jesus. Let him have full control of the heart, and dwell in the centre of our best affections. Then there is rest.

PATIENCE.

Whoever would enjoy the peace of God in the heart must be patient. When a person is out of patience, he is at the same time out of peace. Peace and fretting cannot abound in the heart at the same time. They are as antagonistic to each other as love and hatred. Christ produces the one, and Satan the other. The first makes us happy, the second produces misery. One makes home pleasant; the other very disagreeable. One pleases Jesus; the other the devil. The Lord requires us to "be patient toward all men." This commandment allows no exceptions. No matter what is done to us, it must be borne with patience, if we would imitate Jesus, "who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." "This is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called." 1 Peter 2: 19–21, 23. Let this Scripture be treasured up in the heart, and carefully observed. There is no room left for impatience. Its effects are always evil. There is but one experience in these things. "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord." Jas. 5: 7. Let all observe the following two rules: (1) "Never fret about what you can't help." (2) Never fret about what you can help." It does not pay to fret about what we can't help; and it is foolish to fret about what we can help. If we fret, we must still endure the thing that caused the fretting. This makes a double load. The fretting robs us of our peace, which is of more value than the treasures of earth. There is no advantage gained by impatience. It weakens our influence over those who are witnesses of our folly, and takes away much of our confidence toward God. No one can fret without feeling condemnation, unless he has already grieved away the Holy Spirit. Yet there are many who fret daily in their families and elsewhere, who profess to be the followers of Christ. It is time that those who are looking for his coming were "patient toward all men." The grace of God is sufficient to enable us to conquer this evil habit, when we are in earnest to secure a victory. Many make but little or no effort to overcome this besetting sin; hence Satan is continually getting the advantage over them. His success takes away their confidence, and brings darkness, doubts and fears; and causes them to turn back to the world discouraged and disheartened. Beware of impatience.

POLITICAL STRIFE.

The political strife at the present time is well calculated to lead men away from Christ. Every week the feeling is becoming more intense and bitter. If all that appears in the party papers were true, one might well conclude that each party was about as bad as Satan could make it; and that all were only fit for his society. Candor seems to have but little place in political matters at the present time. The ruling principle seems to be, do and say any thing that will secure the proposed end. No country can long prosper when its politics are thus corrupt. No one can enter into such muddy waters and keep clean as a christian. We do not say no one can vote and be a christian; but we do say most emphatically, that no one can enter into the political strife, as it is now raging and keep his heart in perfect peace with God; because the Holy Spirit and the political spirit are antagonistic to each other. For this reason the less a christian has to do with political matters the better.

The world is now so wicked, that the majority will not sustain a righteous man if he was nominated for office. No christian man would consent to pass through the political ring in order to become a candidate for office, because it is so corrupting in its influence; but he must consent to do this, or he cannot be entertained as a candidate. Such is the present political standard.

We would say to all who wish to hold sweet communion with Christ, beware of entering into the political strife. This is the time to come out from the world and be separate. Pure christianity and present politics do not harmonize. They lead in opposite directions. One produces peace and harmony of mind, the other discord and confusion. Probably the coming political contest will be more sharp and earnest, producing more bitter strife than any former one. The prospect is a gloomy one. Tried friends will be separated; churches divided, business paralyzed, and many caused to backslide from Christ. Let all who are looking for the coming of our blessed Savior be extra watchful in these perilous times, lest they enter into temptation. This is the time to draw near to him, and consecrate our all to his service. This is the only safe position. Partial service will not satisfy. A compound of the world and christianity produces unholy results. Let our motto be, all for Jesus now and for ever.

The signs of the times declare that our waiting time is nearly ended. Soon the trumpet of deliverance will sound, and death's captives will go free, singing, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Let the glad hour come.

BETHEL CAMPMEETING.

Saturday, Aug. 31st, we left home en route for the Bethel campmeeting in Vt., passing over the Boston and Nashua, Concord, and Vt. Central railroads. At White River Junction, we were detained some hours by an accident near West Hartford, where a freight train was terribly smashed up, but no one was seriously hurt. We arrived at Bethel about 8 o'clock P. M., some five hours late. Bro. Wilson, who keeps the principal hotel in the place, met us at the depot, and kindly cared for us during the night. The next morning he took us to the camp-ground, a distance of about two miles. The location is pleasant, in an elevated grove, overlooking the surrounding country. The ground has been refitted this year, and several board tents erected; besides a convenient preachers' stand and boarding house. The Brn. seem in earnest in their preparations for the meeting; thus indicating that they prize the "blessed hope." We have always been pleased with the honest, upright, good common-sense people in Vt. They are men of principle, who are opposed to shams in everything, especially in religious matters.

At 9.30 we had a profitable love-feast; and at 10.30 Bro. Carpenter preached an excellent sermon on sanctification. Since the Springfield campmeeting, he has entered the "Valley of Blessing so sweet." Praise the Lord for what he is doing for the dear Brn. and Srs. Many have such a hungering and thirsting after righteousness as they never felt before. It is the Lord's doings, being produced by the striving of his Spirit. It looks more and more like the final work of preparing to meet the coming Savior. It is a sad fact, that a large number, who have been looking for the coming of Jesus, are living in a state of condemnation. Hatred, variance, roots of bitterness, covetousness, pride, jealousy, selfishness, deceit, emulation, strife, or some other evil thing has taken root in their hearts, and thus they have become unfit for translation. Past blessings will not answer for the present. "Once in grace always in grace," is not a Bible doctrine. A present freedom from sin is essential if we would be prepared for the coming of the Holy One. Enoch walked with God (not contrary to him) before he was translated. So must we. Thank the Lord for the blessed privilege of so doing.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 3. Our meetings thus far have rapidly increased in interest. Yesterday morning we had excellent meetings at 5½ o'clock. There is a general feeling among the Brn. and Srs. that they must consecrate all to Jesus if they would be ready for his coming. There is a remarkable waking up to the subject of holiness in all directions, among all denominations. It is the work of the Holy Spirit. The feeling is becoming general among the friends of Jesus, that the time has come to sanctify themselves wholly to his service, and stand read for translation. A large number at this meeting have already become earnest seekers for holiness, and some have obtained the clear evidence that Jesus has taken full possession of their hearts; and as a result have received perfect peace and love. We expect to see many more enter into this blessed rest in Jesus before the close of the meeting. The Spirit of the Lord is working deeply on many hearts. The tide of devotion is rising rapidly. The prospect is very encouraging for a blessed meeting.

A SERVANT OF GOD.

The gospel minister should be emphatically a servant of God—not a mere servant of this party, or that party—feeling that he has "one master, even Christ." But, alas! how many professed servants of God really elevate some party, or some leader, above the cause, and give Christ only a secondary place. They labor with zeal to make party conspicuous, or to give prominence to some leader whose principle object may be self-aggrandizement, while the cause of God is languishing. Hark! "His servants ye are to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey"—if to sin, you are the servants of sin; if to party, you are the servants of a party; if to aspiring leaders, you are the servants of leaders.

How much better to be a servant of God, independent of party strife, or erring leaders; standing on the platform of equal brotherhood with all "of like precious faith." A servant of God has more to do with the work of God, than with the work of party; and is more anxious to please God than some conceited leader, who, unfit for the coveted place, thinks the cause would go to ruin unless he could hold the reins in his own hands, and consequently is ambitious to monopolize the power, and bring all under his shadow.

A love for "pre-eminence," or a willingness to be led by its blighting spirit, is not commendable in a servant of God. W. S.

TWO MODES OF WARFARE.

While it is the duty of ministers of Christ to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints," let it be remembered that there are two modes of warfare. We can be actuated by the Mahometan principle of carnal warfare, using our tongues instead of swords, or we can contend under the influence of melting love, and thus fight the good fight of faith, instead of giving way to carnal wrangling. "Our weapons are not carnal;" and the tongue, when "set on fire of hell," is a carnal weapon, pouring out carnal words, often in a religious garb.

We should not give vent to a feeling of carnal strife under the plea that we are contending for the faith. Argument for victory is one thing, while argument for conviction is quite another thing. This strife for the mastery in theological matters, is not like the wining power of truth when presented in the spirit of divine love. The gratification of a human relish for victory is the mainspring for action in the one case, while an anxiety to please God and save men is the prompting power in the other.

Are we fighting for the truth on the carnal principle? Or is our fight for the truth prompted by holy love—love for truth, growing out of love for its Author? W. S.

SICK OF IT.—Sick of what? Why, I am heartily sick of this falsification of our belief concerning the soul of man, by many of our brethren, both in ordinary conversation with unbelievers, and in public discourses. They unqualifiedly insist that the soul is the physical man "formed out of the dust of the ground;" and there they leave the matter to the detriment of the truth. As the truth half told is often equivalent to a lie, so this matter, left in this form, is a falsification of our faith on this point, and subjects us to the disgust of every reasonable man whose memory is filled with texts of Scripture speaking of "both soul and body," etc., which would make tautology by reading both body and body.

Why not take the position that every one knows to be true, even our bitterest enemies themselves conceding the fact, that the generic term soul sometimes signifies the person entire, sometimes the life of the person, and then present the fact that neither life nor mind are entities? It is both useless and wrong to leave the impression on the mind of others that the term soul always means the physical person—unless from the fact that men of intellect know better than to believe any such thing—a thing so often contradicted in the Bible; wrong from the fact that it is not true, and also hedges up the way to get the truth before the people. Man as a soul is a physical being, but the soul OF man is not a physical being, nor a being of any kind, any more than the soul of God is a God, or a being within God. "If any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him"—that is, my mind, one of the meanings of soul. But the mind of the man can no more exist independent of the man, than the ticking of the watch can continue independent of the watch. God is an invisible being with mind; man is a visible being with mind. W. S.

ANOTHER CONVERT TO THE TRUTH.—At our recent campmeeting in Western Wisconsin, I formed the acquaintance of a Bro. Foster, who has been for thirty years an efficient Methodist clergyman, and who has recently embraced the truth held by our people, and has avowed his intentions to leave that church, and unite with us without delay. Nor has he stepped out so boldly without candid deliberation. In a public discourse he gave the following outline of his experience, which is calculated to encourage others to sow the seed of truth by scattering reading matter, though they may not always witness present results.

Some twelve or fifteen years ago he was invited to read some tracts which I scattered in the western part of this State. He hated the doctrine they set forth, and was determined not to believe it. The tracts presented such strong arguments however, that he was fully convinced that he could not meet them; so he resolved to lay them aside only partly read. He did so; but the impressions there made were never shaken off. Within the past year or two he has been reading other productions, and has accepted the truth, and commenced preaching it, and a part of his congregation have also embraced it. We are glad to welcome to our midst a man of so much experience, and so good a talent, to help us.

Let others take courage in the work of tract distribution. These tracts may, as in this case, if they do not produce present results, pave the way for future good. Scatter the seed everywhere. If some "kick against the pricks," and get hurt, and grumble about it, and splash around like a whale with a harpoon in him for a time, they may yield after a while. Keep sowing the seed of truth in the form of tracts. W. S.

NOTE FROM GEORGIA.—I did not know but my labor was lost in one Southern town till I received this note:—

"MR. WM. SHELDON:—Dear Sir, and Bro. in Christ:—It has been, as near as I can remember, about eighteen months since your visit to this place, and ever since then I have read and studied those tracts you gave me, with great pleasure, and find that they have given me more light upon Scripture than any other work I ever read; for they have filled me with fresh hopes, life, and vigor; and they are to me as a crutch is to a lame man; and with that crutch and God's word and the spirit of love, softened and purified by the Holy Ghost, I think there is no man on earth who can disprove their teachings. Dear brother, I feel that the veil is withdrawn, and the true light now shineth. Glory to God, for 'Ghostology,' 'Kingdom to Come,' 'Death and the Dead,' 'Immaterialism,' and the 'Coming Judgment;' they are all so brimful of light and truth that they have opened my mouth, and caused gratitude to flow from my heart day and night; not at the family altar alone, but also in my work shop, to my customers, friends, and neighbors, and there are some who hear the words of eternal life through Jesus who alone is the life-giving power, and some who reject and are hewing out for themselves cisterns that hold no water. I am rejoicing in the hopes of shouting glory over death, and him that hath the power of death, that is, the devil. Then our mortal bodies will be changed to one that cannot know grief, suffering or death; then shall we be fitting subjects for our immortalized King when he comes to take his kingdom; then with all the redeemed shall we shout hosannah to the Son of David. Men talk about the beautiful music now, what will it be to the just made perfect?

I hope you will excuse me for writing to you, but I want you to know your labors are not lost, and also to pay for my paper; and I want you to select me some more of the most heart-searching tracts you can get, not forgetting your own, for my others are all distributed."

May God bless this brother in his efforts to sow the seed in the South, to enlighten others. W. S.

TOMAH CAMPMEETING.—This campmeeting, held for the benefit of western Wis., beginning Aug. 20th, though small—much smaller than it would have been if held a month later—was nevertheless a good meeting. Many in this new field heard the truth for the first time, and seemed deeply interested. Several rose for prayers, and the brethren were strengthened. The meeting was attended by Bro. Hough, Adams, Putnam, Hamlin, Brown, and Foster—the latter brother having long been a Methodist minister, and having recently come into the truth.

There are brethren enough scattered through this region to make a large campmeeting, if they will all pull together, both minister and people. I trust the effort next season will prove unanimous and harmonious. Bro. Hough, for a man of his age, is doing a great amount of work—much more than many young men. W. S.

THE FAIRPORT (N. Y.) CAMP-MEETING.

The second annual campmeeting of the Adventists in New York State, just closed (Aug. 19th), was, as all said, a great success. It was a most blessed place, where the scattered, waiting ones, in a happy reunion enjoyed another of those heavenly sittings together, which it is their fortune occasionally, as the wearied, thirsty, desert traveler enjoys the green oases of Sahara, anon, in his long pilgrimage over its burning sands. The grove itself was a lovely spot, and the forest shade delightful; but the encampment of so many dear pilgrim saints, patiently waiting for the return of Jesus, and having the one apparent purpose of fitting themselves therefor, and of lending also an influence to "prepare a people made ready for the Lord," made doubly dear the place, and doubly refreshing the retirement of the woods, where now the purest breezes of earth, loaded as it were with an heavenly ruach, cooled not only the brow of the "outer," but fanned to a spiritual glow the zeal of the "inner man."

It was indeed good—superlatively so; thrice told for emphasis—to be there. They who were most doubtful of the propriety of holding such meetings, and of the benefit of them, were well convinced to the contrary, as many testified, and voted heartily for another meeting next season (time continuing).

The general order and quiet of the grounds were unequaled by any collection of the kind we ever attended before; the spiritual tone and harmony of the meeting excellent; and the attendance quite encouraging for so young a meeting. Perhaps the greatest visible lack of the meeting, as to its interests, was the comparatively small attendance the first Sunday; especially was this felt as regards the preachers, only four being present that day. It was thought too bad, by many, that in a State meeting four-fifths of the ministers interested should have retained or made appointments, and thus have detained themselves and their congregations from the meeting at the time when most needed. But we were not alone nor lonely the first Sunday; we had good congregations, good attention, good sermons, good singing, good testimonies, and blessed good cheer.

There were eighteen family and society tents, all well filled, especially at the latter part of the meeting; besides the boarding tent and the large State Mission Tent, which afforded quarter for a goodly number. Each Sunday there were, as estimated, about twenty-five hundred people out; and we think there was as good order as such a crowd ever preserves, especially the last Sunday. The Lord and his truth have the praise and the glory; it was not of us.

The preachers present (eighteen from the State, or belonging to conference, and two from abroad) were—S. C. Gove, B. P. Stevens, P. A. Smith, J. Wendell, J. E. Wells, J. H. Whitmore, D. Cogswell, M. R. Miles, J. T. Oogley, A. P. Moore, H. H. Brown, E. S. Jennings, E. F. Sergisson, W. A. Fenn, A. C. Newell, W. J. Hobbs, Ira Allen, Warren Vreeland, Wm. L. Himes, and Frank Burr. The coming of the latter two brethren from Chicago was to us like the coming of Titus to Paul, and we thought too of what he said about Stephanus and others (1 Cor. 15: 18); we could say as much, and that as heartily as he. They came to us neither as whisperers, "busybodies in other men's matters," nor talking about their neighbors; they were the other kind of visitors whom we love so well to entertain. We hope to meet again, if not in a like capacity, in a better,—that for which we sigh,—where the faintest of our earthly fears will all have passed away with the "old things."

[But I have something to say of this meeting (it is quite as applicable to many others recently), in which I design to represent no other persons directly or indirectly; it is a digression here. Good as this meeting was in its general aspects, it might have been eclipsed, as I conceive, in its power for positive good. There were twenty-five sermons in all, one by Eld. Cameron, a Baptist brother, and twenty-four by our own brethren, named above, embracing nearly all the various subjects that interest us particularly as a people. The coming of Christ was made prominent in the preaching, singing, prayers, and exhortations; but the time of the Advent received a very meagre amount of attention. This to me is a sad declension from the original spirit and animus of Adventism. There are tears that fain would wash out these lines, but an aching heart too well attests their truthfulness. Only two sermons were devoted to a definiteness beyond the general signs and indications of the approaching advent! Why should only one-twelfth part of Adventist preaching now be to show "the time is fulfilled," or "at hand," from the periods? Can Rome rise higher than she has risen; or fall lower (temporally) than she has now fallen? Why, it seems to me the very stones might cry out if we thus hold our (new-found) peace. Adventist meetings! Adventist preachers! thousands of ears to hear, and disappointed in not hearing! The books unsealed; the time of the end almost expired! the vision written "upon tables, that he may run that readeth"! everything that Adventists ever asked the world to concede, now self-arranged into arguments unequaled for strength—a team mighty for execution! and more of us at the bits than at the reins and the wheels! Two sermons only out of twenty-four honoring the periods, with a balance of two practically dishonoring them. Oh! when the Wesleys and the Millers of every reformation that ever blessed the world blush for the growing spirit of compromise, which that strength that overcomes persecution (and thus popularizes) brings so gradually to their several causes, they may well sigh in the strain of the weeping prophet to Israel—"Thy backslidings shall reprove thee." When we meet Habakkuk, will we scold him for the charts—useless things but to show the time? When we meet Daniel, and John the Revelator, shall we reprove them for the periods—useless things but to show the time? When we meet Jesus, shall he say to us—"Because thou knewest not the time"? God forbid.

Brethren, in the name of the Lord, let us never (under the circumstances) before any men or things that have yet opposed us, blush or apologize for "our mistakes." There are a thousand to one good things that came on the same train; and when they call us down to "our mistakes," let us own the coin and call them up to our achievements. This is not to boast; nevertheless, if Adventists may not boast, in this respect, what religious reformers may? It is a weak train that is much burdened with cinders from its own smoke-stack. Examine the freight; boxes and crates (whole or broken) are necessary, and go as freight, though no part of it. There are some spoiled gardens in every city; but the same track that has despoiled them of their petty pride has borne to them many and many a train of treasure and wealth which their evils could never have produced.

To dogmatize upon a day, or even a year, is not necessary to a powerful and telling argument from the periods; and few press those points. But for this people of all others to forget, neglect or ignore those God-given and God-blessed periods (and now, when every feature of evidence relative to that unholy power they measure—its rise and sway, and its decay and destruction—is so clearly before the world, marking circles so small around those corresponding dates, 538, 1798, and 1873), is (I can say no less) far too rash a concession of vital points; it is yielding the keys of our fortress, and opening the very gates to the enemy. Be this truth, yea or nay, God will never show us, only as he may assist a humble, earnest spirit for the truth, lead us whence it may.]

Our excellent meeting like all others came to its close, and found us all sad to part. Fifteen had been baptized during the meeting, several of whom had made their first public confession upon the grounds, and one had come from the Romish church. Over two hundred sat down to the table of the Lord the last evening, in commemoration of his sufferings and death. One Baptist sister told me she would like to sit with us; and I doubt not others felt the fetters that bound them. The social meetings throughout the week were very interesting and profitable seasons; cheering the hearts and strengthening the spirits of believers, and carrying conviction to the minds of the unconverted. At one time there were one hundred and ten testimonies, five prayers, and fourteen bursts of song crowded into the space of an hour. With two or three (possible) exceptions, there were no freaks or paroxysms of "wild-fire," examples of fanaticism, nor anything that looked seriously like it; nor were there, perhaps, more than that number of those crazy-like amens that quite too often force themselves upon a campmeeting as if they were a natural accompaniment, but their very awkwardness showing them to be unnatural and unfrequent utterances. If "crazy-like" is an unpardonable expression, it is not also a misnomer by any means. "Let your moderation be known to all men," and "be ye temperate in all things,"—those are campmeeting, as well as home, mottoes. [To sanction an expressed truth by a candid response in any sensible key, with or without a (reasonable) hallelujah, or a welling-up (but well-tempered) Glory to God, is not an idle thing, nor a small matter. But the practice of acoustics as a specialty, or as an outward show of an inward zeal in times of social religious intercourse, is so out of keeping with the spirit of the gospel that it everywhere needs rebuke. If it is an object to expand or strengthen the respiratory, or improve the vocal, organs, let the dumb-bells and the Gymnasium be resorted to as (to that end) a better means of grace.]

Financially, our meeting was also a success; the committee's account stands as follows:—Bill of lumber, $20. Rent of lumber, $10. Rent of grounds, $16. Straw and hay, $23. Police duty, $22. Tracts (mostly used), $21.50. Paid preachers (including $36.52 delegate money), $75. Freight, oil, wood, nails, advertisements, etc., $23.42. Total, $210.92. Collections, $150.31. Individual and an error, $22. Delegates, $36.52. Total, $208.83. Charged to Conf. for balance, tracts, $2.09. Respectfully submitted,

ALTON BAY CAMP.

BRO. GRANT:—The campmeeting has favorably begun. There have been evening meetings here for a week or more. Yesterday was the first afternoon meeting, followed by another in the evening; and if they indicate our future meetings on this ground, we are sure to have one of the best meetings ever held in this delightful grove. There is a great mania for building wooden houses this season; the sound of the hammer is heard from early dawn till late at night; and if the zeal and earnestness are proportionate in our worship, and in converting men into the truth, there will be a mighty work done here this season.

The Advent believers are coming from every direction. The meeting will be the largest ever held on this ground. We have hardly got into order yet, but meetings are going on so that singing, praying and exhortation are heard all about. The greetings and shaking of hands show plainly that brotherly love and good fellowship still exist in the old Advent body, and that they intend to be found at His coming at their specific work, making prominent the signs of his speedy appearing.

Sept. 7th. L. BOUTELL.

SPRINGWATER, N. Y.

BRO. GRANT:—I thought it due the cause at large to say through the Crisis that God is with us and blessing our efforts. The church here is united and trying to live out the truth they profess. I baptized ten Sunday, Aug. 4th, most of them middle aged men and women. One of them was a prominent man in this town who had been a noted infidel for many years. We feel that God is blessing his truth. The truth we love so well is to some extent having a hearing in this State.

Our campmeeting was a glorious success. It was the largest meeting we have had in the State since I have been a member of this Conference. I take this opportunity to answer the many friends who there inquired after my wife's health. Since campmeeting I have been to the Cure, Castile, N. Y., and seen her. I found her some better, but after consulting with the doctor I find nothing very encouraging in her case. I trust we shall have the prayers of the church that God will bless and restore to health and grant that we may be a useful and happy family, and finally gathered unbroken into the kingdom of Jesus.

WARREN J. HOBBS.

CHRISTIANITY is the worst trade but the best calling in the world.

ELIDA, ILL.

Bro. Grant:—Our tent-meeting at this place closed last night. The Lord was with us from the beginning, and we had a most gracious revival of his grace in our midst. Over a dozen were converted to Christ, eleven of whom were baptized, and thirteen souls were added to the church. The interest to hear was excellent through the entire meeting. Bro. Holmes was with me part of the time and rendered valuable assistance. Yours in the blessed hope, C. C. Marston.

Obituaries

Blanchard. Died, from burns caused by an explosion in a fuse factory, in North Adams, Mass., June 20th, 1872, Isaac Blanchard, Jun., aged thirty-three years.

He leaves a wife and one child to mourn his loss. Although death came upon him when least expected, being in the full enjoyment of health, and in the prime of life, it found him ready. He was at his post, his work done, his feet on the Rock, and his eye on the throne. The few hours he lingered after he was burned to the time of his death, he talked of the value of religion, and the preciousness of Christ's love. His heart was full of peace. His last words were "Glory to God!" He was a Deacon in the Advent church in that place, and in his death they sustain a great loss. A large and deeply sympathizing audience were in attendance at the funeral, and the writer tried to comfort the sorrowing by a discourse from Rev. 14: 13. E. A. Warren.

Clark. Died in Lorraine, Jefferson Co., N. Y., Aug. 8th, of typhoid fever, Nathaniel P. Clark, aged seventy-five years.

Bro. Clark embraced the Advent doctrine in 1843, being then a prominent member of the Baptist church. He stood firm in the truth. Amid all the sneers and jeers of persecution, he was unmoved, like the sturdy old oak in the open field. While others faltered and went back, he stood steadfast, holding up the truth, and cheering on the weak. When asked by his wife in his last moments what the state of his mind was, he said his hope was like a sunbeam. The funeral was attended by the writer. M. R. Miles.

Cheney. Died at Black River Falls, Wis., Aug. 2nd, 1872, of consumption of the stomach and disease of the kidneys, Frank James, only child of Abel and Alice Jane Cheney, aged six months and four days.

Let the little ones "come unto Me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." "If in this life only we have hope, we are of all men the most miserable." Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. P. W. Hough. A. J. Cheney.

Steel. Fell asleep in Jesus, at New Britain, Ct., Aug. 13th, Sr. Chloe Steel, wife of John Steel, aged sixty-nine years.

Sr. Steel embraced the doctrine of the coming of the Lord in 1843, but, with many others, was disappointed. The blessed hope of a future life through Christ has sustained her amid the varied scenes and conflicts of life. Her last words were expressive of a glorious immortality. Words of comfort connected with our hope, were spoken to a large circle of mourning friends by the writer. G. L. White.

Hill. Died in Conway, N. H., Aug. 22nd, 1872, Elsa, wife of Edward Hill, deceased, in the ninety-third year of her age.

Sister Hill experienced a hope in Jesus in her youthful days, under the preaching of John Colby, but recently renewed her covenant with the Lord, and was baptized. She leaves five sons and two daughters to mourn the loss of an affectionate mother. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 21. J. B. Dearing.

Sherman. Fell sweetly asleep in Jesus, in Savoy, Aug. 30th, Sr. Ann Eliza, wife of Bro. Wm. Sherman, aged thirty-eight years.

She had been a great sufferer for nearly three years, but she bore up under it with Christian fortitude and resignation. Funeral services by the writer, from John 11: 25. E. McCulloch.

Taylor. Died in North Easton, N. Y., Aug. 25th, 1872, Nelly A. Taylor, youngest daughter of Sr. Maria Delavergne, aged eleven years, six months, and seventeen days.

We trust she sleeps in Jesus. The writer endeavored to comfort the mourning ones at the funeral by a discourse on the restitution, resurrection, etc., from Rev. 21: 4. J. Wilbur.

Blackmar. Died in Oakville, Mich., Aug. 5th, James Albertus, son of James A. and Ursula Blackmar, aged thirteen months and ten days.

Rest, dear one. Jesus will not forget thee. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. D. Shier, of the M. E. Church. Jas. A. Blackmar.

Read. Died in Dorchester, N. H., Aug. 2nd, 1872, George Lewis, only child of Joel E. and Martha H. Read, aged four months.

The child is safe. He sleeps, but not forever. In due season he will arise in immortal beauty to die no more. L. E. Follansbee.

Sykes. Died in Wolcottville, Ct., of cholera infantum, Jennie A., daughter of Joseph and Julia E. Sykes, aged seven months and twenty-two days.

We trust to meet her again by and by.

Fitzroy. Died in Savoy, Mass., June 11th, 1872, Lizzie, daughter of James and Louisa Fitzroy, aged fifteen years and nine months.

A funeral discourse was preached by the writer from Hosea 13: 14. E. A. Warren.

Pratt. Died, July 30th, 1872, Maggie Bell Pratt, aged two years and fourteen days.

Words of comfort were spoken to mourning friends and sympathizing neighbors, by P. W. Hough.

THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS.

London, Sept. 5. A large assemblage is gathered at the Hague in the interests of the International Congress, including delegates representing the French Communists. Representatives of New York free love doctrines were expelled from the Congress to-day. The several European powers have spies here watching events, and it is said have an especial reference in their visit to the tracing of some noted criminals and escaped convicts. Want of harmony and much confusion characterize the general International Congress thus far.

PRUSSIA.

MEETING OF THE EMPERORS.

Berlin, Sept. 5. The Emperor of Russia, Czarwitch Alexander and the Grand Duke Vladimir arrived this afternoon. They were met as they stepped from the train by the Emperor William, Crown Prince Frederick William, Prince Frederick, son of the Crown Prince, Grand Dukes of Mecklenburg, Baden and Weimar, Duke of Coburg, and a large number of other German Princes. The Ministers, with Bismarck at their head, the most famous generals of the army and the chief dignitaries of the Imperial Court were also present.

The Czar, on alighting, was saluted and embraced by the Emperor William in the most cordial manner. The two Emperors entered the same carriage, and passed slowly through the streets, amidst the cheers of an immense multitude. All the princes, dukes, generals and courtiers followed, making a long and brilliant procession. The imperial carriage stopped at the Russian embassy, into which the Emperor Alexander was conducted.

MOVEMENTS OF THE IMPERIAL PARTY.

On the arrival of the Czar at the Russian Legation he was visited there by Empress Augusta and Princess Victoria, wife of the Crown Prince. Later in the day the Czar proceeded to the Imperial Palace, where he was received and entertained by Emperor William and his court. After making quite a long visit the Czar returned to the Embassy.

OVATIONS TO THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA.

The Emperor of Austria meets with a most enthusiastic reception from the people in his progress through Germany. He arrived at Dresden to-day and is the guest of the King of Saxony. The entire party leaves Dresden at 2 P. M. to-morrow for Berlin, and will enter the city in the evening. It is again denied that the meeting will be in any way of a political character.

SPAIN.

SLAVERY.

A Madrid despatch says an organized agitation against slavery will soon be inaugurated. A series of public meetings will be held at Madrid, Seville, Barcelona and other large cities. Petitions for the abolition of slavery in the Spanish colonies will be concluded, and as soon as the Cortes meet will be presented to that body for prompt action.

GERMANY.

THE GRAND ROYAL GATHERING.

London, Sept. 8. Yesterday was observed by the citizens as a day of festivity, and it is estimated that upward of fifty thousand people witnessed the splendid pageant. A grand military parade took place yesterday, at which the three emperors headed their respective regiments. The eldest son of the Crown Prince, Frederick William, wore the order of St. Andrew, which was conferred on him by the Czar. The parade was witnessed by an immense concourse of people. In the evening a court dinner was given in the imperial palace. Emperor William gave a toast, "Our Guests." The Emperor of Austria proposed the health of the German Emperor and his family. The Czar's toast was: "The valiant German army." The festivities of the day terminated with a monster torch-light procession and the playing of the Prussian tattoo by 1124 musicians, selected from the bands of all the German regiments. There were four hundred torch-bearers in the procession. The entire city was brilliantly illuminated, and multitudes of people thronged the streets. The Czar has made Princes Frederick Charles and Frederick Henry Albert field marshals of the Russian army. At the banquet the Crown Prince and other German princes of the blood royal were in attendance, where the greatest good feeling and cordiality were observed throughout. Emperor William, in toasting the royal guests, expressed in few words, his deep and heartfelt satisfaction at the pleasure which the visit had given him, and assured their majesties that it was with feelings of the most hearty, earnest thanks that he raised his glass to the welfare of his imperial guests. Admiral Alden and other officers of the American squadron have arrived here, and will participate in the fetes to be given in honor of the royal visitors. They will be present by special invitation.

ROYAL CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

London, Sept. 9. The grand conference which was to have taken place between the Russian, Austrian and German Emperors at Ischl to-day has been postponed. The conference probably will be held towards the end of the present week.

Why the Cholera Scourges Europe.—A correspondent of the New York Tribune writes from St. Petersburg as follows concerning the advent of the cholera to Russia:

"We have been suffering here both from small pox and cholera, but both are fortunately now diminishing. The small pox began to be epidemic about the first of April, and the medical authorities report since that time 1774 cases and 534 deaths. The cholera is now almost a constant inhabitant of Russia, and seems to be epidemic in Kief—at least that is the place where, after the lapse of four years, it has again broken out. This arises partly from the change in the direction of the Persian trade, which, instead of coming up the Caspian and the Solaga, as formerly, is diverted in part to the Black Sea, and by the new railways to Kief and Moscow. But there are other local causes. One of these is the immense pilgrimage to Kief from all parts of Russia, and the bad conditions under which the pilgrims are maintained in the monasteries. This year the mortality among the pilgrims and in the monasteries has been frightful. Beside that the drains, vaults and outhouses of Kief are in the most primitive and disgusting condition, and on a hot day there is a shocking stench in that otherwise lovely town. A distinguished local architect in Kief recently boasted that he had built a thousand houses and never one water closet. Sanitary precautions must be taken in Kief as well as in Mecca. It is in Kief and the neighboring governments of Podolia, Bessarabia and Tchernigoff that the cholera has been most severe and most fatal. In Moscow it is so slight as to be hardly worth noticing. In St. Petersburg it is much more severe. Since its first appearance here on the 23d of June, there have been 1939 cases and 925 deaths. During the last week there were 245 cases and 118 deaths."

Canterbury Cathedral.—All Americans who have made the round of the cathedral cities of England, or who have passed through Canterbury on their way from London to the continent, will learn with regret that a fire has partially destroyed Canterbury Cathedral. The magnificent structure was begun in the early part of the twelfth century, but was not finished until two centuries later. It is adorned with a tower of rare beauty, and its irised windows throw their many-colored light upon a nave and aisles of the most imposing architectural effect. The length of the edifice is five hundred and fourteen feet, and its extreme breadth seventy-one feet. Many years ago, but not long before the accession of Victoria, it was restored and beautified, and further decorations were contemplated as a part of the general system of restoration now going on, which has permitted Mr. Gambier Parry to enrich the roof of Ely Cathedral with wondrous ornament and made the Chapter House of Salisbury one of the finest gems of English decorative art. Of the historical associations of Canterbury the most stirring is the murder of the celebrated Archbishop Thomas Becket before the high altar in 1170. There are many monuments in the interior of more or less interest as sculptures, among which those erected to the memory of Henry IV. and the Black Prince are of greatest interest. It is gratifying to know that the ruin will not necessarily be complete or irremediable.

The Session of the Internationals, at the Hague, according to very good authority, was ordered for the discussion of some very important measures—and although these measures will be in large degree aggressive, they will differ very materially from those heretofore taken by the notorious society of agitators. It is evident that a schism is imminent, even if it has not been already made, and that the ultra-Continental party, with its wild aspirations toward Communism, and its intense and exaggerated thought, must go to the wall before the more serious and sober thought of the English and German elements which now predominate. The Internationale will continue one of the motive forces of Europe, but it will be far from possessing the same vacillating tendencies which injured and dwarfed in so great degree the French society. It will continue its extensive ramifications on both Continents, but will not mix in all the turbulent broils concocted by mad schemers. It has learned a very bitter lesson from the severe compromising which it received during the troubles of 1871 in France, and will strive to work hereafter on a higher level. Although it disclaims the title of a secret society, it is nevertheless compelled to cloak its operations with more or less mystery, because of the excessive espionage exercised over it by the agents of the too suspicious Imperial Governments of Europe.—Journal.

The Asiatic Cholera.—Foreign despatches inform us that the cholera is spreading with remarkable rapidity in India, and has also made its appearance in several parts of Russia, particularly in Constantinople. The outbreak is more extensive than for many years, and in some of the infected districts a perfect panic exists. It will hardly possess the terrors that it did years ago, when remedies and preventives were alike unknown. It has now become a controllable, though still a dangerous disease. There is little, if any probability of its crossing the Atlantic, and no fears need be entertained by timid people of a visitation the present or coming season.

In Brief.

—— Among the many patent contrivances designed for runaway horses is a pair of blinders, by which the driver, on pulling a cord, instantly and effectually blindfolds the animal.——So extensively is the adulteration of tea now carried on in China, that Mr. Medhurst, the British Consul at Shanghae, recently wrote that 53,000 pounds of willow leaves were in course of manipulation at one port alone, to be mixed with tea for shipment, at the ratio of from ten to twenty per cent.——There are seventy-three weekly papers published in Michigan that have one side printed in Chicago. ——A Russian lady recently gave fifty thousand roubles for the founding of a special medical school for women at St. Petersburg.——The Germans are re-organizing and enlarging their artillery, and are making great experiments at Koenigstein, in Saxony, with steel cannon.——A great public demonstration is contemplated in Dublin against the occupation of Rome by the Italian government and the suppression of religious orders in Italy. ——The cold weather has come on already in Utah. In some of the mining districts in the mountains ice of considerable thickness is reported. An early and severe winter is anticipated.——Father Burke, sent from Rome as the Visitor General of the Dominican Order in America, lies at the point of death.——There has been a heavy and destructive frost in Wisconsin.——Highwaymen still make traveling dangerous in California.——A French correspondent writes that "the old chateau of William the Conqueror, situated on the Normandy coast at Benneville, was put up at auction the other day, and knocked down for a moderate price. It was there that the redoubtable soldier planned his schemes of conquest.——The Provincial Correspondenz (semi-official organ) says that the meeting of the Emperors at Berlin has not for its object a mere exchange of assurances of personal friendship. Its purpose is to give to the world a pledge of the continuance of entente cordiale between Germany, Russia and Austria, and unmistakable evidence that the three great neighboring Empires of Eastern Europe have accepted the new order of things growing out of Sedan and other German battlefields. Europe may rely that the aim of the conference is peace, although the festivities attending it may be largely of a military character. This triple concord means a maintainance of the peaceful and settled condition of Europe.——Two craters of Vesuvius are still smoking. Slight shocks were felt at the foot of the mountain.

Campmeeting tickets can be purchased at Newburyport (Georgetown Station) and at South Berwick Junction. Passengers between South Berwick and Portland purchase regular tickets to Berwick Junction, at which place campmeeting tickets can be procured for Alton Bay. As the cars stop at S. B. Junction but a few moments, passengers had better send one of their company on an earlier train to procure tickets, or let one go to the office on the arrival of the train to purchase tickets for all. Tickets can also be obtained at Dover.

Boston, Concord, and Montreal R. R. Trains leave Concord at 10.30 A. M. and 3.25 P. M. for the Wiers. Trains leave Northumberland 7.15 and 9.15 each A. M. A boat will make two regular trips daily between Wiers and Alton Bay, making good connection both ways. If any fail to get campmeeting tickets at offices, they can get them of conductors.

Passengers from Northern N. H. and Canada purchase regular tickets on the Grand Trunk Road to Northumberland, where campmeeting tickets can be obtained for Alton Bay.

J. Langley,
T. L. Churchill,

Those desiring to attend the Campmeeting from or via. Worcester, are hereby notified that they can do so for half fare by the way of Nashua, Concord, and the Lake. The Express train through to Wiers starts from Worcester at 7.45 A. M. Fare from Worcester and return, $4.90. Tickets to be obtained at the Foster St. station, good from Sept. 7th to the 17th inclusive. E. G. Higgins.

The Lord willing, there will be a campmeeting at Salisbury, Conn., commencing Monday, Sept. 16th, to continue one week. The grove is commodiously located about one-fourth of a mile from the depot, at Salisbury Centre. Brn. H. Pratt, H. K. Flagg, and O. D. Woodruff, with other preaching brethren, who can make it convenient to attend this feast of tabernacles, are earnestly invited to come in the fulness of the divine blessing, and help to proclaim the truth in the name of the Lord. Committee: S. C. Hancock, Joshua Burton, Silas Hart.

The following named gentlemen of Salisbury, though not in the faith with us, have kindly volunteered to serve with the committee in arranging for and promoting the interests of the meeting:—Wm. Conklin, H. Whitbeck, E. J. Hicks, A. C. Silvernail, Wm. Parsons. The Lord grant so to manifest his grace and power that these, with many others, may be truly converted ere the meeting shall close. Mr. Hicks keeps a public house within about fifty rods of the ground, and promises to entertain such as wish for the hospitalities of his house, at as reasonable a rate as possible; and this promise we feel the fullest assurance he will redeem. The interest he manifested in our late meeting, and the kindness with which we were welcomed by himself and family to the hospitalities of his house, will be to us a lasting source of gratitude and pleasure.

As the meeting will be easy of access to brethren and sisters from Western Conn. and Eastern New York, we hope to see as general a gathering as possible. Come, brethren, filled with the Holy Ghost, bringing your tents with bedding, and provisions for yourselves, and as far as possible for those who have none, and let us have a real free, old-fashioned, primitive campmeeting, in the name of the Lord. S. C. Hancock.

A Special Time Conference will be held on the Life and Union camp-ground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. The object of this meeting will be to earnestly and prayerfully investigate the prophetic word, especially the definite time for the coming of Christ and deliverance of God's people, the justification of the sanctuary, and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence that Christ is immediately coming, and take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ. Let such as can, bring their provision; but those who cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally at this important meeting.

Tent for England.—I asked the Lord for a tent for England; but it has pleased him to answer in a way different to my expectations. Only two contributions came to hand; from "Anonymous," Livermore Falls, 50 cts.; A. Waterson, Philadelphia, $2. But a brother who owns a tent has communicated to me that he has been impressed to go in the Spring himself, and carry his tent. Thus my prayer is answered, and my object gained. Will the brethren above please direct me what to do with their contributions?
19 Lindall St., Boston. W. Kellaway.

A Campmeeting will be held in Savoy, Mass., within a few rods of the old ground, commencing Saturday, Sept. 21st, and continuing over the two following Sabbaths. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, together with a good number of able preaching brethren, will be with us during the meeting. The large Tent belonging to the Hoosick Valley Conference will be pitched on the ground, and used as a tabernacle for preaching and conference meetings during the day and evening; and for lodgings during the night to all who are not provided with small or family tents of their own. Board for man and beast at a reasonable rate on the ground, and lodging to all who do not wish to sleep in tents, can be had with private families near by. All who have enjoyed so many happy happy seasons during former campmeetings at this place, together with all others, are cordially invited to come, and do all that can be done for the salvation of ourselves and others before the day of destruction comes from the Almighty. Board and lodging free to all who preach the word and co-operating with the American Advent Christian Conference. Those who come expecting to sleep on the ground, bring blankets and bedding. H. K. Flagg, for the Committee.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting under the Mass. Mission Tent, on land owned by Dr. Horne, near his residence in Watertown, Mass., commencing Friday, Sept. 20th, and will continue afternoons and evenings for eight days. This is a place where an extra effort is needed, and help from abroad is needed. Let brethren and sisters from abroad come, and bring provisions and blankets with them, and lodging will be furnished on the ground. Fare from Boston 15 cts. Horse and steam cars run close by the ground. Come and help us.
L. Boutell.
Enoch Morrill.

Time Conference at Lawrence, Mass.—There will be a Conference of the above nature at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sept. 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, and others from all parts, are earnestly invited to attend. The evidence that the prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and that the great plan of salvation under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a great interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved all over the land.

Watchman, what of the night? Come, men of God, from the north, south, east and west; come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned, for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things are true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they be without foundation in God's word, let it be exposed. Come, brethren, from every part. Those who have argument against are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it. We hope, by the blessing of God, to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally, like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom. Brn. Cunningham, Barbour, Sheldon, and others are expected to be present.

Geo. H. Churchill,
Moses Proctor, } For the Church.
J. T. Merrill,

The first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wis. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek Church, about eight miles north of Taunton, Sauk Co., to commence on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, holding over the following Lord's day. Let all the churches in the district send delegates, and it is expected that all preachers will attend. Friends from other districts are cordially invited to attend. Geo. Thomson.

Tent Meeting at New Preston, Conn.—The Conn. Mission Tent will be pitched, and a meeting held, on the old camp-ground, New Preston, Conn., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday, the 29th. Arrangements have been made with the Shepaug Valley R. R. to carry passengers during the meeting at reduced rates, also the stage will carry passengers from the station at half price. We propose to make such arrangements for this meeting as shall be for the glory of God, for the comfort of those who come, and with as little expense as we can. There will be a stove on the ground, and a tent to eat in. You can buy and cook your own food, thus living as cheaply as at your homes. Should any wish to get board or lodging at private houses, they can do so at a reasonable price. We hope to see a general gathering at this meeting from the first day to the last. H. J. Baldwin, Committee.

Quarterly Conference.—The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the school-house, near Elder H. S. Mitchell's, in Bowdoinham, Me., two miles from Richmond, commencing Thursday, Sept. 26th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come with the Spirit of God, and work for the salvation of perishing sinners.

The usual annual meeting with the church of God in Darien, Genesee Co., N. Y., will commence Friday evening, Sept. 20th, and hold over Sunday. A general attendance of the friends is desired. Bro. J. B. Cook and Sr. Stoddard are expected. Trains stop on the New York Central at Croft's station from the east at three P. M., and from the west at four P. M. Conveyance will be ready.

Nova Scotia Conference.—The second annual A. C. Nova Scotia Fall Conference will be held in Shelburne, N. S., commencing Thursday, Oct. 10th, and continue over the Sabbath. A general invitation is extended. Bro. Tozier is expected from the Province of N. B. Will Bro. Hook come? Come, dear brethren and sisters, and bring the spirit of the blessed Jesus with you. Hay and stabling will be provided without cost for as many as may come with teams. A. B. Swanesburg.

The Maine State Conference.—Where shall it be convened? The time for it is the second Tuesday in Oct. What church desires it held with them? If any, please notify me by letter at once, that the notice may appear in due time. I. C. Wellcome, Sec.

Special Meeting.—Providence permitting, I expect to hold a series of meetings in the Court House at Hennepin, Putnam Co., Ill., commencing Oct. 8th, and continuing as the interest demands. Let the friends in the region about come in and help us. Come to work for Jesus. C. C. Marston.

Tent Meeting.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting under the Maine Mission Tent, on land owned by Mr. S. C. Wardwell, in Oxford Village, Me., commencing Thursday, Sept. 19th, and holding over the Sabbath. Meetings week days, afternoons and evenings. All are invited to come. S. L. Snell, for the brethren.

Eld. A. A. Hoyt is pastor of the church of God in Rutland, Vt. All communications in reference to supplying the desk should be addressed to him.

Prospectus.—The undersigned is preparing an exposition of the great prophecy of Christ, uttered upon the Mount of Olives, and recorded in the 24th chapter of Matthew, the 13th of Mark, and 21st of Luke. The general plan of the work is that followed by D. D. Buck, D. D., in "Our Lord's Great Prophecy." It is in two parts. Part First embraces several introductory chapters on the Harmony, proving that Matthew, Mark and Luke record the same discourse, and presenting the plan of exposition. Part Second contains the Exposition, based upon the harmonized account of the three evangelists. It is the author's purpose to make the work as complete as its limits (about 225 pp.) will allow; and those who do not endorse the exposition will find in it much valuable and interesting matter. Among other things, the remarkable phenomena of the past few years are described; especially those occurring in "the black and terrible year 1871," and which fulfill, in part, the prediction concerning "distress of nations, with perplexity."

The work will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers is obtained. Let all who desire one or more copies subscribe immediately, and send me their P. O. address. The price will not be more than seventy-five cents, perhaps much less. All orders should be addressed to C. H. Leverton, V. D. M., St. Johnsbury, Vermont.

WATCHMEN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

Watchmen, on the walls of Zion,
What, oh tell us, of the night?
Is the day-star now arising,
Will the morn soon greet our sight?
O'er your vision
Shine there now some rays of light?

Tell, oh tell us—are the landmarks
On our voyage all passed by?
Are we nearing now the haven,
Can we e'en the land descry?
May we truly
On your guidance now rely?

They are silent—what's the meaning?
Are the watchmen all asleep?
Have they lost their chart and compass,
Do they now no vigil keep?
Have they left us
In our sad despair to weep?

Blessed be the God of heaven!
He can from our fears release;
If we listen to his mandate
From all "trust in man to cease,"
He will guide us
To the port of endless peace.

Light is beaming—day is coming!
Let us sound aloud the cry;
We behold the day-star rising,
Pure and bright in yonder sky:
Saints, rejoice now—
Your redemption draweth nigh.

We have found the chart and compass,
And are sure the end is near;
Onward, onward we are hast'ning,
Soon the haven will appear;
Oh, be wakeful!
Let the word your spirits cheer.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER SIXTEEN.

THE BATTLE OF THE GREAT DAY OF GOD ALMIGHTY.

It seems that before Christ comes, the spirits have artfully instructed the masses who are led by them, that he is to come soon to set up his kingdom at Jerusalem; and being bitterly enraged against him as the author of the plagues which they are suffering, and viewing him about as we do Satan, they are easily persuaded by the spirits to prepare to meet him there with the expectation of defeating him. The sixth vial brings to our view the preparation for the battle. The kings of the earth and the whole world are now honored by a visit from supernatural beings, acting in the capacity of diplomatic agents, from the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet. They are not such "ministering spirits" as visited Abraham and Lot, but they are "unclean spirits," "the spirits of devils working miracles." They do not come to the kings to sing "Glory to God in the highest," as did the angels to the shepherds in olden time; but to bid them assemble to make war with Him, and prevent His setting up his kingdom. There are to be three of them on this mission, acting visibly among men, and working miracles as they go. They are said to be "like frogs," and hence they possess some peculiarity which the spirits do not, as yet, exhibit.

While these three spirits are on their mission to the kings of the earth to persuade them to assemble to the battle, Christ appears in the clouds of heaven to gather his saints, as shown in the next verse, which reads—"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." Rev. 16:15. We must not confound this appearing of Christ in the clouds of heaven to gather his saints, with his subsequent coming to the earth "with all his saints." In this case he descends no further than to the clouds of heaven, and sends forth his angels to gather his saints from their retreats, where they have fled to escape their persecutors, and the sleeping ones from their graves, and they are "caught up to meet the Lord in the air." I think they are then to return with Christ and the angels to the presence of the Father in heaven. For we do not suppose that the ceremonies attending this union of Christ and his church, called "the marriage of the Lamb," will take place anywhere else than in the presence of the Father. Nor can we suppose any time more fitting than when the saints have just been gathered home. Hence, when all have been gathered to Christ in the air, the next move will be to go to the Father's presence, when they, as the Bride, will be welcomed to the glory of the Father, to the joys of the Bridegroom, to the attentions of the angels, to the marriage supper of the Lamb, and to the untold riches of glory "which eye hath not seen nor ear heard."

This marriage of the Lamb is mentioned in the seventh, eighth and ninth verses of the nineteenth chapter; and the eleventh verse shows him descending to the earth to engage in the battle. It reads, "I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war." He is afterward called "the Word of God" (v. 13), and also "King of kings, and Lord of lords" (v. 16); hence the person here referred to must be Christ. It appears from the passage, "in righteousness he doth judge and make war," that he now comes from heaven as a warrior, and the Judge of the world. This appears further evident from the fifteenth verse, which declares that he shall "smite the nations," shall "rule them with a rod of iron," and that "he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." The fourteenth verse shows that the saints come with him from heaven. It reads—"The armies which were in heaven followed him upon white horses, clothed in pure linen white and clean." They, with the angels, perhaps, will constitute "his army" in the battle, and they will occupy their position at his right hand in the judgment.

Some will wonder, perhaps, how the righteous are to be separated from the wicked, made immortal, enter into glory, and enjoy the marriage supper of the Lamb before the judgment takes place. But there ever has been, and still is, more or less querying as to what we are to understand by the judgment. Still, all the faithful will feel bound to believe, from the many solemn allusions to it in the Bible, that such a day is appointed, and will surely come in its time. It seems equally evident that the solemn scene will take place in the presence of Christ and the Father, and that both the righteous and the wicked will be there; not a few of them, but the mass. The object of the judgment cannot be for God to inform himself as to who are his and who are not; for this he knows every moment before the judgment. There is nothing about this matter that he does not know all the time. But there is much about God's righteousness in his dealings toward us, and man's unrighteousness in his dealings toward God, that man does not realize in his stupidity and hardness of heart. Hence God appoints the day of judgment, as an occasion to display before an assembled world, the righteousness of his dealings with all, and the riches of his love and mercy toward all. And on the other hand, he will show the shameful treatment he has received from man, in return for his kindness. And in doing this, he will "bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and make manifest the counsels of the heart." Thus will he "judge the secrets of men." And then the righteous, having sought the more excellent way, will be commended and welcomed to inherit the kingdom; while the wicked, condemned in their pollution, will be sentenced to death as unworthy of life.

This view of the judgment seems to me harmonious in itself, and agreeable to Scripture. As God knows all hearts at once in this life, so he can judge all hearts at once in the day of judgment, with no need of treating one case at a time. But all will stand convinced of sin, and self-condemned in the presence of God in that day. And since, according to Matt. 25:31–46, the righteous and wicked are separated first, and have their merits or demerits considered afterward, I see no good reason why the saints may not be raised, immortalized, and glorified, and afterward be present at the judgment, where they are to be shown worthy of acquittal, and the wicked deserving of condemnation.

While Christ and the saints are celebrating "the marriage of the Lamb," the nations, led by the spirits of devils, are preparing to meet him at Jerusalem, to give him battle when he shall return with his saints to set up his kingdom. The sixteenth verse clearly shows that the spirits gather the nations to the battle. It reads, according to Wesley, Whiting, the Syriac, the Revised—"They gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue, Armageddon." Wakefield has it literally, "the spirits gathered them," etc. The nations are the aggressive party in this case. They make the war against Christ. This is definitely expressed in Rev. 19:19, which reads—"I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth and their armies, gathered together to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army." This is shown also in Rev. 17:14, where we read of the ten kings, "These shall make war with the Lamb." As these ten kings "give their power and strength unto the beast," and make war with the Lamb at this time, they must be the same as "the kings of the earth" in the passage above, acting with the beast in making "war against him that sat on the horse."

GIVE.

J. W. THOMAS.

This is a command. It cannot be slighted or neglected without incurring guilt. He who gave his life for us, and who fills our pathway with his mercies, requires us to impart a portion of our substance to others. No man or woman can be a true christian while selfishness predominates. Christ is the author of eternal salvation to all who obey him. I have often thought of an expression a good brother once made in a meeting where I preached. He said—"We might as well whistle as to pray, unless we were willing to obey." I believe it; yet how few there are who are willing to obey in all things. Praying, preaching, singing, and doing a great many other good things, will not amount to much, while we hold on to the dollar with such a grip. No. The command to "GIVE" rings like thunder in the ears of this covetous, selfish generation. "Give to him that asketh of thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit?" O, says one, "I give every time I am solicited." Yes, and that is about the only time you do give, and then you give one dollar, where you are able to give ten, or ten where you are able to give a hundred.

Listen again. "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?" Dare you look up to God and pray when you know that you have slighted or neglected one of the Savior's suffering disciples? There are many who make a high profession, while at the same time they are hoarding up their thousands, and oppressing and despising the poor. I know the Lord has an eye to his poor, afflicted children; but when he lays the command upon us to help them according to our ability, woe to us if we dare disobey. He will curse us to the very bone if we do it. All the way through the Bible the duty to help the poor is inculcated, and a blessing is promised to those who obey. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive; and he shall be blessed upon the earth; and thou wilt not deliver him unto the will of his enemies. The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing; thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness." "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine. There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." "He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker; but he that honoreth him hath mercy on the poor. Open thy mouth, judge righteously, and plead the cause of the poor and needy."

Such is the language of David and Solomon; and when the Jews observed these instructions, great was their prosperity; but when they became stingy and selfish, the curse of God with all its withering power came upon them. Hear the prophet Malachi—"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." Now hear the command, and observe the magnitude of the promise connected with obedience to it—"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground. And all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord."

The precepts and example of Jesus, unite in proclaiming the great truth—"It is more blessed to give than to receive." When he was on earth, he showed special kindness to the poor; he associated with them, and preached to them the words of everlasting life. He knew the sorrows and trials of the poor, for he was poor himself. He chose his apostles from the poorer classes that they might be able to sympathize with the poor of his flock. The rich young man who came to the Savior was commanded to sell out and give to the poor. When salvation came to the house of Zaccheus, he said—"The half of my goods I give to the poor." Paul said—"He that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; but he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully, for God loveth a cheerful giver. Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate. Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life.

Where are we? Where is our treasure? Do we love God with all the heart? or are we trying to serve God and mammon? Are we all ready for the judgment? Examine yourself. Wake up. Time is short. The Lord is at hand. What are you going to do with all that money? Wake up, wake up. Be liberal. Give, and it shall be given to you.

SANCTIFICATION.

M. D. SEVEY.

"For this is the will of God, even your sanctification."—THESS. 4:3.

Bro. Grant, and Brn. and Srs.:—Much has been said of late through the Crisis on sanctification and holiness; much that has been very good; and as there are various opinions about the doctrine, whether it is a separate work from justification, permit me to state a little of my experience, it may be a benefit to some one that is hungering and thirsting after the fulness of perfect love. I am satisfied but few know the depths of perfect trust in God, or have given all to him; so they can say, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me;" connected with him, as the branch is with the vine.

I met with a change in my youth, and knew I had passed from death unto life, because I loved the brethren. Old things had passed away; all things became new. What I once loved, I then hated. What a change! I was a new man. I had a peace the world could not give; yet my joy was not full. Months and years passed. All the time I felt an inward longing for more. While on my knees in silent prayer, as the little meeting was closing, by faith I saw a full salvation in Jesus; I saw him then ready to receive me, and seal me with the Holy Spirit of promise, and fill me with joy unspeakable and full of glory. Such a joy and glory cannot be expressed. I think I knew how Paul felt when he said, he knew a man, whether in the body or out of the body, he could not tell. I lost my power to walk; but oh, the joy, the power of God! Glory to God in the highest! I found what I had so long sought. For days I could not get a good lesson. In school I would shout "Glory" before I was conscious of breaking the orders. I saw the mass of professed christians on the back ground. I saw them as in Ezekiel's vision, only in the water to the ancles, when it was their duty and privilege to bathe in the fulness of the water of life freely. Oh! the heights and depths of Jesus' love, peace, rest, and joy. None can describe it. How dreadful sin looked. How quick the jest, the idle word would quench the Spirit. This is what I understand by being sanctified, set apart, made holy, pure in heart, walking with God, being dead to sin, crucified to the world, receiving the gift of the Holy Ghost, baptized from on high, ready for living or dying. This is what I understand Jesus to mean, when he says—"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect."

May we, dear brethren and sisters, strive for this condition, and contend for the faith once given to the saints, and amid the perils of the last days, be kept from being lukewarm, and overcharged with the cares of this world; and all be ready for translation, walking with God like Enoch, being sanctified by obeying the truth through the Spirit. May it be ours to share the joy here, and the glory of the world so soon to be given to the saints.

— All that is good fortifies the soul in the ways of peace and righteousness.

— The faults of christians are watched with more rigid scrutiny than their virtues; hence the importance of sustaining an unblemished character.

— Courage consists not in blindly overlooking danger, but in seeing it and conquering it.

— A real christian loves close, pointed, searching preaching, and seeks not the ministry of those who speak enticing words of man's wisdom.

— The common gifts of God respect not the parentage or blood, but are indifferently scattered where he pleases to let them fall.

WHILE the rain falls daily, the wheat looks green on the stony ground that has not been broken up; but when the drouth comes, the burning sun scorches it, and it dries up. So it is with many converts. They run well while the crowd looks on and applauds; but when fidelity to Jesus and his truth exposes them to persecutions, they give up and turn back into the popular road.

NATURE OF MIND.—No. 2.

WHEN DOCTORS DISAGREE, WHO SHALL DECIDE?

ALVIRUS M. HITCHCOCK.

No. 2. So far we have considered the theories of the majority of popular teachers. We have found them to be unfounded in reason. We kindly solicit your unprejudiced attention while we endeavor to give the true theory of the mind. Man as a physical organization is complete within himself. Not that his powers and qualities are absolutely perfect; but that in his sphere there is a perfect adaptation of human power to human necessities. Such is the perfection of his nature, so harmonius in all its parts, that the Creator himself pronounced him "very good;" and the Scriptures declare him to be "fearfully and wonderfully made." Connected with man's nature are the powers of mind. To suppose that back of his bodily organism there exists a superadded intelligent power, either material or immaterial, is to suppose that for which there is no evidence in fact—that which, as we have already seen, is absolutely impossible. Then where shall we look for the origin of thought? Evidently in man's own sublime structure. But it is said that matter cannot think. Who knows that it cannot? No one claims that all matter possesses life. Because the senseless clod of earth possesses no intelligence, it does not follow that certain refined material structures cannot. But some philosopher (?) will present us with the following syllogism:

Matter is inert; i. e., it has no power to put itself in motion. But thought requires voluntary motion; therefore matter cannot think.

This pretended argument may seem conclusive, but a little thought will discover its utter fallacy. The statement contained in the major premise has nothing to do with the point in question. Suppose inorganic matter does not possess motion within itself, what follows? Simply that matter in such a form cannot think. Behold the wonders of vegetation! Is there no motion here? But our philosopher tells us matter is inert. So it is ultimately. The particles forming that beautiful tree yonder never said to one another, "We will unite and form a tree." But in the miniature tree, the organized germ of the future beautiful structure was vested by the Creator with the power of collecting particles according to a natural law. But you say that is not voluntary motion. We admit it. Yet the tree performs of itself after all, unless there is a constant miracle.

Turning, however, to the realm of comparative physiology, we find our philosopher's argument completely overthrown. In the beast we have not only organic motion, as in the vegetable world, but voluntary motion. Now if it be true that no form of organized matter possesses the power of volition, then the beast possesses a separate spiritual entity. Let us be honest, and admit that either the beast has a spiritual nature, or that an organized material substance can think. It amounts to nothing to affirm that the beast is a mere machine, operated upon by another power, for we all know to the contrary. A balky horse is no miracle. He wills not to go, and virtually says no in the strongest terms. Neither avails it anything to say that this power of the beast is mere instinct. It matters not. The brute acts voluntarily, and possesses the power of choice. This is sufficient for the argument. The fact that matter ultimately is inert, proves not the fact. And further, those who claim that matter cannot think, frequently deny their assertion in a subsequent concession. When hard pressed they reject the absurd idea that immateriality can act upon materiality, and ascribe mental action to a material organization exceedingly refined in nature. Who does not see the admission? Now the question is not as to the degree of refinement matter must possess in order to think, but can matter think at all? that is the point, and this fact is already conceded. As to the degree of refinement, it is of little use to theorize. Facts must settle that point.

Coming to the conclusion, then, that not only matter, in certain forms, can think, but that mental action is the power of the human organism, the question naturally arises as to the location of the mind. We have already hinted at the manifest relation between mental phenomena and the brain; and the fact of the mind's dependence upon it is too well established to be refuted, modern theology—but not true science—to the contrary notwithstanding. In all departments of the animal kingdom we find the power of mind to be in proportion to the development of brain. In the higher orders of animals we find a greater brain development, and a proportionally greater mind development, than in the lower orders. Arriving to the human species we find connected with a superior mental development a resulting moral faculty. This constitutes man an accountable being, and marks him as the crowning work of God's creation.

But it is said that all these mental manifestations in the brute are not real intelligence, but mere instinct. We beg leave to differ from this important consideration. If it were mere instinct, then were it equal in every one of the same class. Thus, the wants of the horse are more extensive than those of the insect or reptile, and you say his instinct is proportionally greater. Very good. But the common wants of the equine species are precisely alike; and as instinct goes no further than necessity—unless reason be called instinct—then in that species what is termed instinct should be universally alike. This we know is not true. Some horses are much more intelligent than others. And why? Simply as the result of a greater development of the brain. So also in the human species do we find gradations of mind from the idiot to the philosopher.

Another striking evidence of the dependence of the mind upon the brain, is the fact that when the brain becomes affected by disease or accident, a corresponding effect is produced upon the mind. A sudden blow upon the head will produce such a concussion of the brain that loss of consciousness follows. If the mind is interrupted in the midst of a sentence, on recovering, it resumes its train of thought precisely where it left off. Numerous instances attest this fact. And again, particular organs may become affected. By destroying a certain portion of the brain, a person loses his memory of facts, of faces, or of dates; his musical faculty, or his power of physical equilibrium, according to the location of the injury. Or the phenomena may be reversed, and these powers unduly stimulated to action. Similar effects are observed in the beast. Nor are these occurrences rare. Scores are upon record. It is a plain matter of fact, that outside of and beyond the action of the brain, we have no positive knowledge of thought or even consciousness.

But here we are met with a pretended objection. It is said that in an aggregate of cases every portion of the brain has been removed, and consciousness still retained in every case. But where, we would ask, is the weight of the objection? Does it prove that consciousness lies back of the brain? Not in the least. No one denies that portions of the brain may be removed without loss of consciousness. In order, however, for the objection to be of weight, it must be proved that the entire brain may be removed in a single case, and then consciousness retained. This cannot be done. But we challenge anybody for authentic example in which any one organ has been totally removed from both hemispheres of the brain without any perceptible change.

It is further objected that the mind, a distinct personality, has been conscious of its own identity separate from the body; but in absence of evidence, and in contradiction to facts, we cannot give credence to what is manifestly a deception. In the first place, aside from the fact that instances of such pretence are exceedingly rare, we always observe in cases of trance, whether brief or protracted, that the body never decays. This shows beyond doubt the presence of the life principle. This being true, we have not the least evidence that the brain may not have received impressions through some channel, or at least acted upon impressions previously received. It is of little force to say that people on recovering from such a state declare that it seemed one of realities. A dream frequently seems more like a reality than otherwise. In fact, people often have dreams in which they are so apparently certain of its reality, that they console themselves with the thought that, though they have often been deceived before, it surely is not a dream this time. Though a trance differs from a dream in the circumstance that the common functions of the body are suspended, yet the action of the brain is similar in both cases.

Thus innumerable obstacles arise so soon as we maintain that the mind is a superadded personality. But the matter becomes plain when we recognize it as simply the power of an organized animal being. Briefly stated, we believe the true theory to be this: The brain, as a refined material structure, thinks. It is as much its peculiar function as chymification is that of the stomach, or respiration that of the lungs and respiratory muscles. The mind is not strictly the action of the brain, but the power of action. Hence in sleep the mind really exists, though the action of the brain is suspended for a time. In death the brain loses all power of action. Thus is verified the statement of Scripture in reference to the final sleep of man: "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish."

In conclusion, permit a word in reference to the importance of our question. Do we care to know anything about our destiny? If so, let us remember that we must inquire into our present nature. If the mind is an immortal personality, it will live on through the ceaseless ages of the hereafter, either in happiness or misery,—in a state of virtue or vice. Will sin forever stain God's universe? Is evil a wound which the Omnipotent can never heal? These are startling questions. Let us not pass them idly by.

RELEASED FROM BONDAGE.

BRO. GRANT:—I am seventeen years old. Four years ago, I resolved to take up my cross and follow Jesus, as near as I could; and although I but little knew what it was to be a christian, in the true sense of the word, I ever strove to find out what God's will was concerning me, and obey his commands. Although I feel that I have wandered many times from the right path, and been very disobedient, God still smiles upon me and owns me for his child. O what reasons I have for praising God. How I ought to love him for his indulging kindness toward me, and all who put their trust in him. May we ever strive to glorify God, in both body and spirit which are his. Father takes the World's Crisis, and we all think we could not do without it. I like to read its columns, and especially those devoted to health. I took the "Laws of Life" one year, and I bless God that it ever fell into my hands. I then began to see how christians ought to live. I was out of health, and all of the time gratifying my morbid appetite, and eating food that I knew would hurt me. How often have I eaten the third hearty meal, and then have to take a portion of medicine at night, before I could go to sleep. How thankful I feel that I am released from such bondage.

It has now been about a year since I commenced to reform. I at once discarded pork, tea, and coffee, and rich food. As soon as I could, I got some Graham flour and established the two-meal-a-day system. The result is, I am so much better that some folks call me tough. I am now at work from five o'clock in the morning until nine at night, without any rest-hour, doing the work for eight in the family, and filling my time with sewing. I would not be hired to live as I used to. It seems now as though I must have been awful wicked; but there, I lived just as I was brought up to, and it was with difficulty and opposition that I have succeeded thus far, as my parents did not see as I did; but they have to admit sometimes that I have got help by so living, for I have not taken a drop of medicine. When I see christians paying no attention to the care of the body, or health, I almost lose fellowship for them. A year ago, I could not do my own washing without having the backache, and now I can do a large washing with ease. Although I am not tough, I believe I am on the road to health; for I do believe that if we disregard the laws of our being, and thereby weaken our spiritual faculty for serving God, we shall be held responsible for so doing; for I know by experience it is a great deal harder to live a christian with a foul stomach and poor health, than when the stomach is healthy and the whole being is full of life and strength.

If all would give heed to Paul's injunction to the Corinthians—"What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost, which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's"—I believe there would be less cause for doubts and fears and backslidings among christians. May God lead his children into all truth. I believe health is the foundation of happiness. Everything looks beautiful to me now; and I feel that I can say with the Psalmist—"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

IZADORA A. YOUNG.

CAN BOTH BE RIGHT?

BRO. GRANT:—While attending the Conference at Sugar Hill, N. H., last June, and listening to the preaching of Brn. Couch and Piper as they presented the evidence of the near coming of Christ and kindred doctrines in such a clear manner, it seemed to me no one could doubt its truthfulness. And having for a few weeks previous listened to preaching exactly the opposite, that the church is to triumph through the preaching of the gospel until the great mass of mankind are converted to God, and a good time to come before the coming of Christ, when the religion of Christ will be popular and therefore be much easier serving God than now; listening to the above gave rise to the following thoughts:—

Does our heavenly Father require Brn. Couch and Piper and yourself, and hundreds of others, to preach Christ soon to come to set up his everlasting kingdom and raise the dead, change the living, and reign with them King over all the earth; for which you must leave your homes and travel day and night; which makes you unpopular in the eyes of the world and the mass of those who profess to love Jesus; which you must do that you may be blessed; while hundreds of the professed servants of Christ live in ease, get great salaries are popular, preach one hour in a week; either preach in direct opposition to the coming of our blessed Savior or are indifferent and keep silent in regard to it altogether, and claim that they too are blessed also?

How can these things be? Did our heavenly Father require the people of the old world to believe the preaching of Noah and the Sodomites, the preaching of Lot? Was it necessary to the salvation of the Jews, that they accept Christ as the Messiah? Did or did not God require this of those nations? If he did, and the second coming of Christ is the doctrine of the kingdom, and a special message to this generation, can we be blessed and saved if we reject the message and make light of it?

If it makes no difference, why not join the masses and be popular, and have a good time? and in the good time to come it will be so easy to be a christian. Why be called crazy, infidel, fanatical, fools, and of no account in the world, and live almost alone, as it were, in a place where there are hundreds who profess to love Jesus, yet have no love for his coming?

Bro. Grant, will you give us some thoughts on the above, and thus impart light to your brother hoping for life when Jesus comes.

O. B. QUIMBY.

We are so confident we are right, and pleasing the Lord, in making the proclamation that Jesus is soon coming, we are willing to bear the reproach we receive for so doing, and feel like entering into the work more earnestly than ever. May the Lord open the eyes of those in darkness, and bring them also into the glorious light and liberty of the gospel of the kingdom.—ED.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

WHAT WILLIE'S PUPPY DID.

Two or three little boys, almost babies, were standing near a man who was whipping his horse to make him draw a very heavy load of coal. One of them called out, in his helpless indignation: "Stop that, Mister! You shan't whip that nice old horsey any more!"

But still the smutty fellow laid on the whip. Another of the children exclaimed: "You better stop that, or, or, I'll whip you real hard with my horsewhip when I'm a man! Stop! else I'll tell my father of you!"

The man laughed till he looked up and saw the third baby-boy sitting down by a stone wall, crying bitterly, and rubbing his eyes with his white blouse. He stopped his cruel work and called out: "What are you crying for? This isn't your father's horse, little fellow."

"I'm crying 'cause I don't want that nice old horsey hurted. Please don't hurt him any more, and I'll help push the cart, and Sam and Joe will push, too!"

The man laughed out very loud, and said: "Why, you could draw the coal yourself! But why don't you like to see the horse whipped?"

"'Cause, 'cause," sobbed out little Willie, "'cause I've got a puppy at home!"

Now, there seemed no sense, at first thought, in this reply of the dear, tender-hearted child; but there was a great deal of good sense in it. What Willie meant was this: "I own a puppy that I love, and I could not have him whipped nor hurt in any way. And because I love my puppy and am tender of him, I love every other living thing."

Willie's puppy had taught him to be merciful to every dumb creature, and so had done a good work on his little heart.

The child who is tender of a dog, cat, or bird, will never grow up to beat horses. Let children have pets to love and care for.—Methodist.

LONESOMENESS.—A mother, busy with her household cares, was obliged to go into an upper room, and leave two little ones alone for some time. So she gave them books and toys to amuse them, which answered very well for a time. But, by and by, the house seemed to grow so still and lonesome, they began to feel afraid. So the eldest went to the foot of the staircase, and calling with a timid voice, said:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling," said the mother, cheerily.

"All right," said the little one, more to herself than to her mother.

So she went back to her play for a time. After a while the question was repeated, with the same answer and the same result. Oh, how often, in our loneliness and sadness here in the world, we forget that God is still overhead! But if we only send up our prayers to him, we shall not fail to get a comforting and quieting answer. "What time I am afraid I will trust in thee." You need not fear in the darkest night, or the wildest storm, for God is still overhead. "As one whom his mother comforteth," so the Lord will comfort those sorrowing ones who flee to his bosom for rest.—Presbyterian.

NO PLACE.—A great many boys complain that there are no places. Perhaps it is hard to get just such a place as you like. But when you get a place—and then there are places; this big country, we are sure, has need of every good boy and girl, and man and woman in it—when you get a place, we say, make yourself so necessary, by your fidelity and good behavior, that they cannot do without you. Be willing to take a low price at first; no matter what the work is, if it is honest work. Do it as well as you can. Begin at the very lowest round of the ladder, and climb up. The great want everywhere, is of faithful, capable workers. They are never a drug in the market. Make yourself one of these, and there will always be a place for you, and a good one, too.

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.—Little Minnie, only three years old, to amuse a homesick cousin who was visiting at her house, brought out her choicest playthings. Among these was a tiny trunk, with bands of gilt paper for straps, a very pretty toy; but Freddie bent the lid too far back, and it broke off. He did not mean to do this; and when he saw what he had done, he was frightened, and began to cry. Then dear little Minnie, with her own eyes full of tears said:—

"Never mind, Freddie; just see what a cunning little cradle the top will make!"

That was certainly a great deal better than fretting. She made the best of it.—Children's Hour.

THE STORY OF JESUS.—"The story of Jesus," said an African, "is my hymn, my prayer, my Bible. I weep over it when I can't sing about it, and I sing over it when I can't weep about it. This is true, that I thank God for it from the sole of my foot to the top of my head." Is the christian child, who enjoys the benefits of a christian land, as thankful for the blessing of a precious Savior as that poor African?

CHILDREN, when any one tries to persuade you to do wrong, say "no" as if you meant "no." When Satan whispers for you to serve him and do wrong, and makes good promises, as he did to the Lord Jesus in the wilderness, answer him as Jesus did—"Get thee behind me, Satan." There is a "no" he can understand.

A POOR BOY, who was employed all the week in taking care of cattle, was so anxious to learn the word of God, that he used to take the Bible into the fields with him, and in the course of a year he committed to memory nearly two thousand verses.

"This is for your Health."

DOES BRAIN WORK SHORTEN LIFE.—Our answer to this question is as follows: No, when performed in a proper way; yes, when performed in an improper way. Any pupil in school, or any man or woman out of school, who labors more than four or five hours a day at hard study without relaxation, will find it injurious to health, and to shorten life. But the hardest student may live to extreme old age, if he will observe the following rules: Never study, or apply the mind closely, immediately after eating. There is but so much blood in the body, and when the stomach is digesting food, a larger proportion of it is there than at other times. So, when we think hard, or study, more blood flows to the brain than at other time. But who does not see that there cannot be more blood than usual at all parts of the body at the same time?

To be healthy, never study under the influence of stimulants. Many have written and produced wonderful compositions under the stimulus of alcohol, and opium, and other poisonous narcotics. But such a course invariably shortens life. Men may study if they will only live right.—Good Health.

TEMPERANCE AND VIGOR.—There comes from California an account of a gentleman living in that State, who is now sixty-four years of age, who has not tasted liquor, wine, tea, coffee, or tobacco, for thirty-five years of that time, and recently stepped off on a short walk of fifty-five miles, which he finished in twenty hours and fifty minutes, part of the distance being traveled in pitchy darkness, and in a strange country, and, therefore, with shorter steps. When this gentleman had accomplished this feat, he was just as fresh as ever, and ready to return by the way he came. All his sustenance on the journey was a little parched Graham flour. Now here is a case of a man who has really lived while he lived. He is as youthful and springy at sixty-four as most men are at thirty and thirty-five. And it all comes of a proper regimen and regular and healthy habits. All of us can compass as much if we desire, and possess brisk spirits, a cheerful and contented temper, and every other desirable thing, if we will but practice that simple temperance which is the parent of a perpetual vigor, freshness, and peace.—Exchange.

JUVENILE SMOKERS.—An English physician, with a desire to be of benefit to the rising generation, has published some interesting facts regarding the effects of tobacco smoking upon boys. Of thirty-eight boys under fifteen years of age, whom he knew to be smokers, he discovered in twenty-seven injurious traces of the habit. Twenty-two had disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and a more or less marked taste for strong drink. Twelve were troubled with hemorrage at the nose, and an equal number had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth. These symptoms were all mitigated, and in some cases eradicated by a discontinuance of the habit of smoking. Although all were treated for the above named disorders, only those were cured who abandoned the habit. Persons who have the care of boys will do well to keep these statements, made on the authority of the British Medical Journal, well in mind.

FOOD FOR NERVOUS DYSPEPTICS.—Dyspeptics generally should adopt the two-meal-a-day system, and eat nothing whatever at any other time. Let the breakfast be composed of oatmeal mush quite dry, or oat-meal cakes and fruit, or unleavened Graham bread and fruit. But one kind of fruit should be eaten at a meal, and that should be fresh and well ripened. No butter, or greasy food of any kind, sugar, salt, spices, or condiments, should be used. The patient must eat slowly, and masticate his food thoroughly. He should not eat more than two kinds of food at a meal, and should never eat when in the least tired or excited.—Health Reformer.

THE rule that should govern human beings in the selection of their food is as simple as that in relation to drink. The purer the water we drink the better. The purer the food that we eat the better.

SEPARATION.

A. N. SEYMOUR.

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

The above counsel is the counsel of Jesus to all his followers, although uttered by Paul, for he received it by revelation from Jesus Christ. Gal. 1 : 12. Here, then, is a direct and positive precept of Jesus Christ made obligatory upon all his law-abiding servants and children throughout all time, to come out, be separate, and touch not the unclean, and I will receive you. Here are the conditions specified. This command of Jesus is no less binding than any other precept he ever uttered; yet, nevertheless, there are many, both ministers and people, in these days of apostasy, who ignore or utterly disregard this highly important instruction; and how they dare trample on the authority of God, as here set forth, is truly surprising, and not only surprising, but truly alarming; professing as they do to be his loyal children, "they say, but do not." It is frankly conceded that here is a straightforward command to "come out and be separate," but from what? Jesus by Paul will answer—from being "unequally yoked with unbelievers."

Now there are a great number of organized institutions in this world that are only of human origin, worldly in their nature and policy, got up purposely and purely through speculative and selfish motives, to control circumstances, things, and men; and in all these institutions we find the old, the young, and the middle-aged. We also find the atheist, the infidel, the sorcerer, the idolater, the profane swearer, the blasphemer, the gambler, the drunkard, and the basely licentious, and, shall we add? many professed church members and ministers of the gospel also, in these unholy precincts or fraternities, directly in opposition to the expressed will of Him who has said—"Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world"; "I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." The race of man by nature is a morally depraved race, unsanctified; their thoughts are not God's thoughts, neither are their ways God's ways. This being the case, God has instituted a government, a system of things, called "the gospel of the grace of God," and this system has chosen instrumentalities to publish its heaven-ordained principles to all the world; and the direct tendency of this God-given wisdom is to attract attention, call out, separate, from the above combinations and immoral influences a people who shall be a holy people, a sanctified people, a people zealous of good works, and who shall be the "salt" of the earth, the "light" of the world, the pillar and ground of truth and righteousness; and who by divine appointment are organized under one head (Jesus, our King), and called "the church of the living God," "the temple of God," "the body of Christ," "the church of Christ." Into this assembly of holy ones, and under this divine arrangement, God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit, invite, and into no other. By a living, active faith in Jesus as the only true Messiah, and by a thorough renovation from all sin and moral contamination, by the cleansing power in Christ's blood, and by a baptism into the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, we are initiated into this body, and thereby become a united, peaceful, loving band of christians—disciples—saints, full of confidence in God's goodness to provide spiritual and temporal blessings, and full of christian confidence in each brother and sister in this one body of which Christ is "Head" over all things.

If the above grounds are tenable and God-given (which no Bible student can doubt), why is it, and how is it, that the religious world has become so exceedingly deranged and demoralized, and scattered into hundreds of fragments over the earth into every political, ecclesiastical, Masonic, Know-Nothing, Odd-Fellow, sect under heaven, and placed into every conceivable, and, I might add, inconceivable posture, disadvantageous to the glory of God, their own best good, and that of the race?

Is it any wonder that under existing circumstances, almost superhuman energies, moral, mental, and physical, have to be brought into requisition in order to effect the subjugation of the enemies of the cross of Christ? Why, the devil, the chief instigator of all this derangement, has it about all his own way; and if at any time God's true people get together according to divine order and appointment, for the accomplishment of good, he is sure to press some agents into his service to distract the unity of the household by the introduction of some insensible creed, or ism, so that the good that was being done was in the end rendered obsolete.

Should we travel through the eastern and western continents; through cities, villages and towns, and inquire for the various ecclesiastical bodies, giving each their distinctive names, we should find no difficulty. People could readily tell us all we desired to know; but should we make the inquiry—Do you know of a body or church called the "body" or "church of Christ" in your city, village, or town? the answer would be almost invariably, No; there is no such body or church here. They would have but little or no knowledge of this class, or of their faith, hope, or practice.

Now, dear children of God, whoever you are, or whatever you are, and whatever may be your surroundings, your early or later proclivities, I beseech you, as a minister of Christ, as an earnest lover of truth and righteousness, to unburthen your weary shoulders from all human machinery at once; cut loose entirely from all worldly or unholy man-made institutions, of whatever name or nature, outside of the "church of Christ." God demands this at your hands. You sin against God while you refuse to obey the above mandate. You quench the Spirit of God so long as you refuse to obey this counsel. Your present position and influence is at war with what Paul says—"Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

To take this step of separation may be crossing, and doubtless will be; but under the cross lies the crown. Jesus is coming, and that speedily. You need be without spot and blameless, and faultless before the throne when he appears. The demand of the Scriptures to "come out from the world" and "be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," is just as imperative as the command to God's people to come out of Babylon, lest ye be a a partaker of her sins and receive of her plagues. The honest soul inquires, Where shall we go should we come out? I answer, go to Jesus and his most precious word for wisdom and counsel. Retrace your steps; find your way back to the apostolic church, foundation, faith, hope, practice, zeal, and love; for by this "shall all men know that ye are my disciples." Place yourselves and all you have on this glorious altar; consecrate all the powers of your soul, body and spirit, to the great Author of your being; invoke to your aid all the sacred ties of christian union, love, and affection; arm yourselves with truth and righteousness, and then go forth to the world, bearing and sowing as you go the good seed of the soon coming kingdom, "and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

FAITH, HOPE, LOVE.

J. W. THOMAS.

The foundation of a true christian life seems to be laid in a true faith, or a right apprehension of God and belief in his word. He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Now it is evident that any and every kind of faith is not pleasing to God. He has revealed himself to the human family as the one living and true God, the creator of heaven and earth, the father of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the God in whom we live, move, and have our being; the upholder, preserver, and controller of all things.

The revelation which he has made is simple, clear, explicit and easy to be comprehended. The faith he requires of us is to believe without a doubt whatever he has said, whe her it be concerning himself, his Son, ourselves, the angels, or the earth. No man hath seen God at any time, yet he exists and his word will not fail. Heaven and earth will sooner pass away than one promise fail to be fulfilled. His existence is not a myth, nor a dream but a reality; and infidels and atheists will soon find to their sorrow, that his word is not a cunningly devised fable. Prophecies uttered long ago are rapidly fulfilling and He who has suffered so long with a rebellious race will soon arise and shake terribly the earth. Unbelief is the sin which has cursed the world. It was this that separated man from God in the beginning, and it is this that still keeps him away. Faith brings us nigh, and presents God to us as a loving Father, forgiving our sins, and granting us peace through Jesus his beloved Son. Unbelief is the mother of all sins, but faith is the root of every christian virtue.

Wonderful are the victories ascribed to faith. It has condemned the world and rode safely on a shoreless ocean, it has shut the heavens, and opened them again, it has opened the rock in the wilderness and obtained bread from heaven, it has subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness many were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens, given sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, speech to the dumb, and life to the dead. But more than all this it has saved the chief of sinners. "Thy faith hath saved thee," were the words that fell from the lips of the Son of God. "Go in peace, and sin no more." Murderers, drunkards, thieves, gamblers, adulterers, revilers, extortioners, liars, and sinners of every grade have found salvation through faith in the blood of the Lamb. "Go ye into the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Hope. We are not only required to believe in God, but are permitted also to hope in him. Hope rests upon faith. Faith is the basis or groundwork of hope. Hope is a desire for something good with a belief that it is possible to obtain it. Hope pictures to the mind bright and glorious things in the world to come. Faith stands by our side when we are ready to faint and whispers—"Press on, it is not a fancy, but a reality, for thus it is written." Hope rising upward soars away again and roams amid the fadeless beauties of the paradise of God.

Through faith and hope the christian looks in two directions, backward to the cross and onward to the crown. Faith beholds in yonder bleeding Savior the forgiveness of all his sins and his reconciliation with God. Hope looks onward to yonder coming glory and beholds the regal splendor of the King of Kings holding in his hand the crown of everlasting life. It is by faith we have access into this grace wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God. Hope sings her songs in the darkest night, and spreads her wings in the thickest tempest. Blessed hope of rest, and peace, and joy, and song. Let me ever hear thy voice above the wind and the waves saying—"Be of good cheer." May I always be ready to give a reason of my hope, and never be ashamed of it.

Love. Surely the God of love who has given us such goods things to believe, and held up before us such glowing promises, upon which he has caused us to hope, should have in return our grateful love. Can we gaze upon His goodness as displayed in Creation, in Redemption, in Providence, in our own experience, in the great and precious promises, and our hearts not melt in tenderness? God is love. There is a mighty, melting, moving, drawing power in love. What would not a mother sacrifice, or suffer, or endure for the child of her love? "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him might not perish but have everlasting life."

This text calls out faith, hope, love. We love him because he first loved us. When the mantle of Elijah fell on Elisha he left the oxen and ran after him crying "my father." So when the mantle of divine love has touched our hearts we leave the world and run after God crying—"My Father! my Father!" Love is the great controlling element in the religion of Christ. His religion originated in love, it is carried forward by love, it is sustained by love. Flames and floods cannot extinguish his church, because love is the principle by which his followers are actuated. Faith will soon give place to sight, and hope to glad fruition, but sweet, blessed, precious love will go with us into the kingdom and there abide forever and ever.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER SEVENTEEN.

Thus it seems that the nations in their frenzy of madness against Christ assemble to attack him in their presumption with the thought of overthrowing him. But he arrays all the elements of nature against them; as, "the great earthquake," "the mighty thunderings," "and every mountain and island were moved out of their places," and "there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings," "the heavens being on fire," etc. At this awful display of Almighty power, these bold blasphemers get their eyes open to see that they have been misled by the spirits of devils, and terrified at the presence of God as their Judge, and realizing that "the great day of his wrath is come," "the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, . . . said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb." Rev. 6 : 14–17. But the mountains and rocks cannot hear them, nor can they escape "from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne," till they have stood before him in judgment, when they will "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." I may be mistaken in reference to the exact time for the judgment, amidst these closing scenes. It may be earlier or later, perhaps. But I have located it according to the best light I have.

As this battle, the judgment, and the death punishment on the wicked, are so blended together in the various accounts of the closing scenes of this world's history, I shall not attempt further to separate them; but will give them as I find them, with some allusions to the more striking features in each quotation. I will first quote the account of the seventh vial, poured out when the nations are gathered to the battle. "And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue, Armageddon [most translations read, "they gathered"]. And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air; and there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings; and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were on the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great. And the great city was divided into three parts; and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath. And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found; and there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent [113 lbs]; and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great." Rev. 16 : 16–21.

It is very generally supposed that Babylon is destroyed before the Lord comes; but we learn from this chapter that Christ comes under the pouring out of the sixth vial, and before the seventh is poured out the nations are gathered into the place of battle. Then the seventh is poured out upon them in this battle; and under this seventh, and at the time of God's wrath upon all these nations, it is said that "Great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of his wrath." It may perhaps be said that the hating of the whore and making her desolate and naked, the eating of her flesh and burning her with fire, is done by the ten horns on the beast (Rev. 17th chap.), and therefore it must be before this battle. I cannot see why this may not more likely be done in the battle while the "great tumult from the Lord shall be among them, and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor," when every man's sword shall be against his neighbor.

This battle is prophesied of in various places in the Bible, which I will now quote, or some of them, and show the leading features of the struggle that is coming, and its importance is shown in the prominence given to it during thousands of years past, and as introducing the rest that remains for the people of God. I will quote from Zech. 14th chap. He tells us that God shall "gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle"; that "the Lord shall go forth and fight against those nations"; that "his feet shall stand in that day on the Mount of Olives"; that "the Lord shall be King over all the earth in that day; that "there shall be one Lord, and his name one"; and that "those nations which fought against Jerusalem" shall suffer the terrible "plague" of having "their flesh consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes consume away in their holes, and their tongues consume away in their mouths." We are assured also that "a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor." Zech. 14.

Joel alluded to this battle, telling us that God "will gather all nations and bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat [joining Jerusalem on the east], and will plead with them there for my people Israel." He notices in the following language the extensive preparations for the battle—"Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong. Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about; thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord. Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat, for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision; for the day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake; but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel." Joel 3 : 9–16.

Daniel mentions in the eleventh chapter a king (some copies read, "a certain king") "who should do according to his will, and shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every God, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper, until the indignation be accomplished. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any God, for he shall magnify himself above all." Among other things, "he shall cause them to rule over many, and divide the land for gain"; and "he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him. And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble such as there never was since there was a nation even to that same time. At that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book; and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life," etc. Dan. 12.

This same king and his expedition to the mountains of Israel, and also this battle of the great day is given by Ezekiel 38th and 39th chapters, where he represents him as coming against the mountains and people of Israel "like a storm"—"like a cloud to cover the land; a great company and a mighty army," "in the latter days." He says further—"And it shall come to pass at the same time when God shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face; for in my jealousy, and in the fire of my wrath, have I spoken. Surely, in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel, so that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heavens, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at thy presence; and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places [towers] shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground. And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountain, saith the Lord God; every man's sword shall be against his brother. And I will plead with him, with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him and upon his bands and upon the many people that are with him an overflowing rain and great hailstones, fire and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself and sanctify myself, and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the Lord."

He says further—"Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou and all thy bands and the people that are with thee. I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field, to be devoured. Thou shalt fall upon the open field, for I have spoken it, saith the Lord God. And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell carelessly among the isles; and they shall know that I am the Lord."

The Lord says by Jeremiah—"For lo, I begin to bring evil on the city called by my name; and should ye be utterly unpunished? Ye shall not be unpunished; for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the Lord of hosts. Therefore prophesy against them all these words, and say unto them, The Lord shall roar from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation. He shall mightily roar upon his habitation. He shall give a shout as they that tread the grapes against all the inhabitants of the earth. A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth. For the Lord hath a controversy with the nations. He will plead with all flesh. He will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord. Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even to the other end of the earth. They shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; they shall be dung on the ground." Jer. 25 : 29–33.

Isaiah, in speaking of this battle in the last chapter of his prophecy says—"The hand of the Lord shall be known toward his servants, and his indignation toward his enemies. For behold, the Lord will come with fire and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire; for by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh."—Isa. 66 : 14–16.

OUR HOPE.

L. A. WHEELER.

"The secret of the Lord is with those that fear him." Ps. 25: 14.

This is what keeps our hope alive, makes it to us, as Peter calls it, a "lively hope," or a living hope; not one that stands on an old stale, dry promise made to the human family thousands of years ago, with no symptoms, from anything we can now gather, that he that made it has ever thought of it since. However great the personage that should make a promise in this way, how long, think you, would it be remembered or regarded? But how unlike this is our hope. It is well termed a living hope, from the fact that live things are subject to growth — grow larger and stronger by being fed, or replenished. The Bible is so full of such food, instances when God manifested himself to his people as he does not to the world, that to quote we should not know where to begin or where to end. Every reader of the Bible is acquainted with their history.

But God's children are not altogether dependent on what God has done for others; they have the blest privilege of knowing for themselves; and this is in harmony with what God has said by his prophet—"They shall all know me from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord." When we ask and receive, we form personal acquaintance with our heavenly Father, and Elijah-like we know why the heavens gather blackness, and there is a sound of rain, or, perhaps like Hezekiah, why fifteen years is added to the life of some dear saint. The world knows it not; the secret of the Lord is not with them. How these braces strengthen our hope. How blessed to have such help here, and how cheering for the great future.

I have sometimes thought our hope in some respects resembled the banyan tree. We start for the higher life on the promises of God alone; this forms the mother stem of the tree; but as soon as we begin to know God for ourselves, then, like the branches of that beautiful tree, we take new root. Thus the church has stood from its commencement to the present hour; each branch rooting for itself, and yet all united to the mother stem. No wonder it stands strong. No wonder the gales of persecution cannot destroy it. It had God for its root in the beginning, when he talked face to face with man. It has God for its root now, when they ask and he answers. It is one living tree, or vine, as Christ called it, reaching from the fall to the restitution.

CORRUPTING THE WORD.

J. BICKFORD.

"We are not as many, who corrupt the word of God."—2 COR. 2: 17.

Is it not now as it was in the apostle's day, that many are corrupting the word of God by false interpretation? Those whom the apostle accuses of the contrary practice, of corrupting the word, seem to be Jews, who owned Jesus to be the Christ, and his gospel to be divine, yet adulterated it by intermingling with it the law of Moses and their own traditions. And in doing this, their principal view was, to make a gain of Christ; which laid them under the necessity of concealing the end they proposed, as well as the means they used in order to obtain it. On the contrary, those who intend the good of mankind, are by no means concerned to hide their intentions. If the benefit we propose in speaking be to ourselves, it is often our interest to keep it private. If the benefit we propose be to others, it is always our interest to make it public; and it is the interest both of ourselves and others, to make public those marks of distinction whence may clearly be known who corrupts the word of God, and who speaks it in sincerity.

The first and great mark of one who corrupts the word of God, is introducing into it human mixtures; either the errors of others, or the fancies of his own brain. To do this is to corrupt it in the highest degree. To blend with the oracles of God impure dreams, fit only for evil minds! And yet it has been so frequently done, that scarce ever was any erroneous opinions either invented or received, but Scripture was quoted to defend it. And when the imposture was too barefaced, and the texts cited for it appeared too plainly either to make against it, or to be nothing to the purpose, then recourse has usually been had to a second method of corrupting it, by mixing it with false interpretations, as the following passage is often applied in case of death—"Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." And this is done sometimes by repeating the words wrong, and sometimes by repeating them right, but putting a wrong sense upon them, one that is either strained and unnatural, or foreign to the writer's intention in the place from whence they are taken, perhaps contrary either to his intention in that very place, or to what he says in some other part of his writings. And this is easily effected. Any passage is easily perverted by being recited singly, without any of the preceding or following verses. By this means it may often seem to have one sense, when it will be plain, by observing what goes before and what follows after, that it really has a sense directly contrary.

These are the methods of those corrupters of the word who act in the sight of men, not of God. But the apostle's ground is not only assumed, but strictly adhered to, by the class denominated we. "We are not as many, who corrupt the word of God." Of this class we speak, whereas they use sincerity in preaching the gospel, in the good of others seek their own. And that they are sincere, and speak as commissioned officers, in the sight of Him whose commission they bear, plainly appears from the direct contrariety between their practice and that of the dissemblers above described.

Consider, it is not their own word they preach, but the word of Him that sent them. They preach it genuine and unmixed. As they do not only profess, but really believe, that "if any man add unto the word of God, he will add unto him all the plagues that are written in it;" they are fearful of doing it in the least instance. You have the gospel from them, if in a less elegant manner, yet fair, and as it is, without any mixture of errors to pollute it, or misinterpretations to perplex it; explained in the most natural, obvious manner, by what precedes and what follows the place in question, and commented upon by the most sure way, the least liable to mistake or corruption, the producing of those parallel places that express the same thing the more plainly.

Lastly, they who speak in sincerity, and as in the sight of Him who deputes them, show that they do so by the manner in which they speak. They speak with plainness and boldness, and are not concerned to palliate their doctrine to reconcile it to the taste of men. They endeavor to set it always in a true light, whether it be a pleasing one or not. They will not, they dare not, soften a threatening so as to prejudice its strength, neither to represent sin in such mild colors as to impair its native blackness. Though they know the terrors of the Lord, they desire rather to persuade men. This method they use, and love to use it, with such as are capable of persuasion; with such as are not, they are obliged, if they will be faithful, to take the severer course.

If, then, we have spoken the word of God, and that only, if we have put no unnatural interpretation upon it, but taken the known phrases in their common, obvious sense, and finding unequivocally stated, "the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6: 23); "and this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day" (John 6: 40); to deny that eternal life comes as a gift of God through Christ at the appearing of our Lord and the resurrection, is virtually corrupting the word of God. We are not of that class, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ.

THERE is no solid wealth but in Christ.

STRANGE THEOLOGY.

B. F. FRENCH.

BRO. GRANT:—I have recently had the privilege (?) of hearing a rare specimen of modern preaching. I wish I could report the sermon just as it was preached, but I can only give a few items. The text was John 4: 23—"God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth."

The preacher began by saying that God was a spirit; there was no matter, form, or materiality about him. He was not substance, but spirit. One particle of matter could not occupy the same space occupied by another particle of matter; but spirit could occupy the same space with the most solid substance. God could be in a stone, a tree, etc. He had no form and could not be seen; yet he did acknowledge before he got through that Moses saw his back parts. "Why," said he, "does a stone or any other substance fall to the earth? because God is in it. Take God out of it and it would be annihilated, or fall to pieces at once." He said man had two natures, or parts; the soul and body, or mortal and immortal. The soul was a spirit, like God, and could not be confined. It would go through the hardest substances. If a man was put in a block of granite a mile deep, he could think about things on the surface of the earth; that was his soul. Rather unsafe to let the prisoner wander so far away from its cell; it might be tempted never to go back to such a terrible double-shelled cage as that. If the preacher were to be encased in a block of granite for one hour, and then taken out, I wonder how much he could tell about his thoughts while there! I am thinking he would "not know anything." Eccl. 9: 5. "In that very day his thoughts" would "perish." Psa. 146: 4.

Let us follow the preacher a little further. The body of man needed material food, but a man could not feed his soul on potatoes, or pork and beans! The soul of man was not satisfied with material things, consequently after it had left the body, it would not be satisfied with a material world, among material beings; therefore God had provided a spirit world where his children would find a happy home. Some people thought that they should eat in the future world. Well, he supposed they would eat angels' food. He could not describe it having never been there, but it would be a vegetable diet; speaking after the manner of men.

That last expression set me wondering what the man could really mean. He could not think they would eat real cabbages and turnips, for he had discarded potatoes and beans. He had spiritualized God all away, and had diluted and etherealized man until he could go through a mile of solid granite in the smallest fraction of a moment without winking. This wonderful ghost-man, after all that sifting, is to live eternally in a spirit world where there is nothing in all the wide domain but phantoms:—the people, the rocks, the trees, the flowers, all phantoms; and he is to live on vegetables! Well, how? His diet must be very ethereal, of course; will they make both from the shadow of a phantom rose? It is really no laughing matter, but one can hardly help feeling amused sometimes. Such doctrine does seem to me to be exceedingly thin, and vapory, and unsatisfactory; not like David's who said—"I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness;" nor like Job's, who believed "though worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." I remember hearing that same preacher say nearly twenty years ago—"A man must be a fool to wallow in the gutter when he could just as well have a good road to walk on." I wonder how far he is from the gutter. If the blind lead the blind, will they not both fall into the ditch? Let us analyze his hope.

He is to be nothing, go nowhere, have nothing, and live on nothing after he gets there. Not a friendly hand that he can clasp; not a flower that he can pluck; the fruit of the tree of life he cannot taste; there is no water in the crystal river which he can drink; all are delusive phantoms, and, worst of all, he cannot see Christ, the elder brother, for he believes God and Christ are one person and nothing but spirit. Lord, save us from such theology, and from such a fate! When I hear such preaching I think of Swedenborg's spirit-man, who tries to run away from himself, shrieking in terror—"I'm a spirit! I'm a spirit!" No wonder the followers of such traditions so often pray—"Lord, help my unbelief." How can they believe? How can they grasp such a hope? There is nothing to grasp. They are continually reaching after the unattainable, while the water of life flows at their right hand. The hope of the gospel—Peter's lively hope, is within their reach; the home of the christian is in sight. "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." How can there be faith when there is no substance? "And the Lord said unto Abram, Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward, and eastward and westward; for all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed forever." And Abraham was content to abide in tents and be a pilgrim and stranger, driven here and there; for he knew the promise of God was sure, and in the far off future, he saw by faith the land redeemed from the usurper and from the curse; he saw the city without foundations, whose builder is God, coming down from God out of heaven, and he knew that when it touched the earth, and the tabernacle of God was with men, he should possess the goodly land. Thank God! for a faith which has some substance, and for a Savior who is not a myth.

— The only way, sometimes, to get light is to run—run in the way of God's commandments. "Then shall we know if we follow on to know the Lord."

The World's Crisis

AND

SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER,

Boston, Wednesday, Sept. 18, 1872.

☞ Take Notice!

All subscriptions for the "Crisis" issued from this time forward are at the rate of $2.00 a year, payable IN ADVANCE.

☞ Please Remember!

☞ All remittances to this office, in the form of Drafts, Bank Checks, and Postal Money-Orders, should be made payable to the Business Agent, GEO. T. ADAMS.

☞ THOSE who send articles for the "Crisis," should direct them to MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass., and not to the Business Agent.

☞ TO OUR READERS.

In reply to many inquiries of our readers as to the reason why they received no Crisis for Aug. 28th, we would say that it was not published that week (to give our compositors a vacation), and it was stated in the Crisis of Aug. 14th that there would be none Aug. 28th.

By a misunderstanding of our printer, the paper for Sept. 4th was numbered 22 and 23. It should have been simply 22, as we purpose to give the full number for the year to our subscribers. In future we do not intend to omit the issue of the Crisis during the campmeeting. AGENT.

OUR PROSPECT.

We would say to the friends of the Crisis, that our prospect never looked so bright as now. We have never felt more conscious of the smiles of our Heavenly Father than at the present. Our subscription list is larger than ever before; and everything connected with the Office is moving along very pleasantly. We have excellent compositors, trusty and faithful clerks, and we all take pleasure in helping one another bear our respective burdens. Besides this, we wish to say to our subscribers, that we purpose to spare no pains to give them a paper whose weekly visits will be a blessing to all its readers. We shall take special means to give the most important news from all parts of the world; particularly such as relates to the signs of the times and the fulfillment of prophecy. We purpose to keep on the watch-tower, looking out with special care for every omen that indicates the coming of our blessed Savior.

We intend to make arrangements so as to have a careful and competent foreign correspondent, who will keep a close watch of the signs of the times in the Old World. We expect to be able to give some heart-cheering things before twelve months pass, giving bright evidence that our Deliverer is soon coming.

We invite all who can write, to send us articles carefully prepared, and baptized with much prayer. Study to express the truth clearly, in as few and as simple words as possible. We also desire to receive the experiences of those who have received special blessings from the Lord. Such testimonies have a hallowed effect, and may prove a great blessing to many of our readers. It is for the glory of the Lord to publish accounts of his wonderful works. Let not Satan keep us silent. Let the light shine, or it may go out. Many have lost the blessing of perfect love because they would not acknowledge the gift. They feared they might not live right after they confessed they had received it, and thus grieved the Spirit, and went back into a state of condemnation. The more fully we confess the Lord's blessings, the more likely we are to retain and enjoy them. It leads him to live more carefully, and to watch more closely, that this life shall correspond with his profession. Brn. and Srs., let us read accounts of your richest experiences in Christ.

Permit us to say in conclusion, pray for us, that we may receive heavenly wisdom to so conduct "our paper" that it may prove a greater blessing than ever to its readers. Of course, we cannot expect to please everybody; but our aim will be to produce a paper that will affect its patrons like a good prayer-meeting or love-feast; or a visit from a dear christian friend. We prefer to reach the heart first, and kindle up an increase of love for Jesus, rather than to aim at mere intellectual entertainment. In other words, we would aim at goodness rather than at greatness. Let all our learning be immersed in the love of God, and associated with pure devotional feelings. May our motto be, All for CHRIST.

BETHEL CAMPMEETSNG.

Our last report of the Bethel campmeeting closed about the middle of the meeting. At that time the prospect was very encouraging for superior results. Up to the time we left (Friday morning, Sept. 5th) the interest continued to increase, and the spirit of entire consecration to the Lord had taken possession of a large number, and several had received the gift of the Holy Spirit. The doctrine of holiness of heart was faithfully and plainly presented by Brn. Mathewson, Carpenter and Hoyt; and this sanctifying truth was joyfully received by the friends of Jesus, producing glorious results. There seemed to be a strong determination on their part not to rest till they were complete in Christ. This is a movement in the right direction. If any people in the world should be advocates of Bible holiness, those looking for the speedy coming of Jesus should be first and foremost. We are rejoiced to find the interest increasing. In consequence of misinformation, and false reports, some good people withhold their influence and sympathy; but as fast as they receive correct information, and understand the nature of the work, they are ready to give it their most hearty approval and co-operation. Satan is doing all in his power to render the doctrine of holiness of heart unpopular, because of its importance. His strong hold consists in false rumors concerning what is said on the subject; thus stirring up prejudice in the minds of Christ's true disciples. He may be successful for a season, but he will fail at last. The truth was finally triumph. Let none murmur because they are reviled or reproached for advocating "the way of holiness," but with meekness instruct those who oppose themselves. The Spirit of Christ will not allow any other course. A pure christianity requires us to return good for evil, blessing for cursing, accompanied with fervent prayers for those who may say hard things against us, because they are looking from a wrong stand-point. The spirit of holiness does not allow one harsh word towards those who may meet us with frowns and bitter feelings. It loves its enemies. How blessed is the sweet, loving spirit of Jesus. It truly makes a man a new creature.

The morning meetings, at the campmeeting, at half-past five o'clock, continued to increase in interest every day; also the hungering and thirsting after righteousness. There was a general clearing out and cutting off of all things that were opposed to christian purity. Pipes and tobacco boxes were abandoned, and other evil habits were laid aside, and in their room came an extra sweet peace and comfort from the Lord, that caused heavenly rejoicing. Sinners requested prayers, and were blest. At the time we left, it was thought by those best prepared to judge, that the meeting would be the best ever held in the State. It was truly good to be there; and it was with reluctance that we said farewell to attend to other duties. We expect to hear glad tidings from the last days of the meeting. Its moral effect will be very healthful upon the surrounding country. The people in the vicinity manifested a kind feeling towards the meeting and seemed willing to do what they could for its prosperity. We returned home thankful for the privilege enjoyed at the Bethel campmeeting.

SOUTHERN MISSION.

We hope to see more done the coming winter to spread the truth in the South than all that has been yet accomplished. Bro. Bowman informed us a few days since that word had been sent him from home that fourteen new places had requested him to come and hold meetings. This fact shows that the doors are opening rapidly, and that the opposition is diminishing. Bro. Bowman is well adapted to the southern field, and should be sustained in the missionary field for the present. Any who wish to aid him can forward their donations to Bro. Geo. T. Adams, our Treasurer, and the Missionary Board will do the best they can with the means supplied.

The friends of the missionary work did nobly at the National Campmeeting in Springfield. They seemed more in earnest than ever. One Bro. gave a thousand dollars, and several others gave their hundreds. If there was ever a time to be in earnest, it is now. The calls for light on the prophetic Scriptures are multiplying in all directions. It is no time for rest. Let those who can, double their diligence and efforts to save men from perdition. If we can only be instrumental in saving one, it will pay for years of labor—yes, a whole life. Let us all do what we can.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Having received an earnest request to attend the Amboy campmeeting, in Illinois, we made the matter a subject of special prayer, and became fully satisfied it was the Lord's will we should comply with the request. Accordingly we left Boston Saturday, at 3 P. M., Sept. 7th, and arrived in Rochester the next morning. We went directly to Bro. P. A. Smith's, and found him well as usual. He is strong in the faith, and intends to spend the coming winter in Florida, proclaiming the glad news that Jesus is soon coming. He confirms the testimony of Brn. Sheldon, Bowman, and others who are well acquainted in the South, that it is unwise to send missionaries specially to the colored people; but that they can be reached more successfully by meetings held among the white population. They still look up to the whites, and are unwilling to receive what they reject in religious matters. But if missionaries go to the colored people exclusively, the whites will not come to hear; and the whole becomes a comparative failure. There is an increased demand for faithful labors in the South. Many are becoming interested in the gospel of the kingdom; and the time has come when judicious men may see much good accomplished in the southern states. Several ministers in the south have commenced advocating the truths so dear to us; and many more are becoming interested. The prospect is encouraging.

We found the Rochester church prospering under the labors of Bro. Whitmore. Efforts are being made to erect a church building, which bids fair to be successful. We enjoyed the meetings during the day, and received cordial greetings from christian friends. They have a pleasant and prosperous Sabbath school, with Bible classes. We received a warm response to the doctrine of entire consecration to Christ. Wherever we go, we find an increasing interest on this subject, showing most clearly that the Spirit of the Lord is moving upon the hearts of his people, causing them to feel the importance of being all ready for the coming of our precious Savior. We have reached a most interesting period in the history of our world, when the signs clearly betoken that "the end of all things is at hand." Let us be ready for the glorious hour when our King shall appear.

THE GENEVA ARBITRATION.—The following is a Washington despatch of last Friday:—"The results of the Geneva Arbitration are quite satisfactory to the President, and he regards them as sure to meet the national approval. The intimations in administrative circles, though it is not given out formally, show that the total award of the Geneva Tribunal will amount in all to sixteen million dollars. The awards are to be signed in duplicate and handed to the agents of both governments on Saturday, the 14th. The amount awarded is to be paid in coin one year from the date of the formal announcement of the award. There is no doubt of the truth of this statement, as it comes direct from the President, who, in conversation, stated what in brief is here given."

TRACTS.

We would again call attention to the importance of tract distribution. We hear most cheering news from various parts of the country in relation to the good accomplished by means of tracts. As we have often said, we believe there is no other way by which so much good can be secured by so small means. Churches should keep a supply for strangers who may attend their meetings. This can be easily done, if all will give a little for this object. Those who have any money to spare for the cause of Christ, will do well to give a portion of it for tracts. Who will help sow these seeds of truth? There is a wide field all ready, and waiting for their coming. Lend a helping hand in this good work. Make a sacrifice for Him who has done so much for us. We shall never repent for any effort made to send the truth to those who have never seen the light we prize so highly. Who will take stock in this blessed enterprise? Please send money and pledges at once.

NECROMANCY DISCARDED.

While the children of Israel were in Egyptian bondage, they were familiar with a class of charmers, consulters with familiar spirits, wizards, and necromancers; and when the Lord led Israel out of bondage, he forbade them to participate in anything of the kind. Deut. 18:11. Necromancy began in a pretended consultation with the dead, as heathen priests consult with their lifeless images, and finally grew into the claim of consulting with their spirits. God bade Israel stand aloof from necromancy. They did so during their national prosperity with few exceptions. Meanwhile necromancy was ripening among the heathen, and assuming new forms and phases. But when Israel went down into captivity among the Assyrians, they renewed their acquaintance with this system of theology which claims a continuation of life for the soul after the body dies. Seventy years captivity among believers in this system infused some of their views into many minds; others refused them. After their return, time developed the following parties, with the following views:—

1. The Pharisees; who, according to Josephus, "believe that souls have an immortal vigor in them, and that under the earth there will be rewards or punishments, according as they have lived virtuously in this life."—Antiq., b. 18, c. 1, s. 3. This view carries upon its forehead the stamp of its origin; the theory of "rewards under the earth" is a theory borrowed from the heathen, who also originated the claim of the soul's immortality. Those who try to prop up the theory of soul-immortality by an appeal to the views of the Pharisees upon this point, ought also to accept the Pharisees' view of an under-ground home for the soul; for if they are good authority, let their theory be accepted without any garbling. If the Pharisees got this under-ground theory from the heathen, as all claim, they also obtained the other part of their theory from the same source, as they came in possession of it at the same time.

2. The Essenes; who, according to Josephus, believe "that the souls are immortal, . . but that when they are set free from the bonds of the flesh, they then, as released from a long bondage, rejoice and mount upward. And this is like the opinion of the Greeks, that good souls have their habitations beyond the ocean, in a region that is neither oppressed with storms of rain or snow, or with intense heat; but that this place is such as is refreshed by the gentle breathing of a west wind, that is perpetually blowing from the ocean."—Wars, b. 2, c. 8, s. 11. Here is another item of borrowed heathenism, a fruit of necromancy; for if souls outlive the body, they must live somewhere, even if on the eastern shore of a great ocean, where they can have the salt-water breeze wafted to them by a "west wind."

3. The Sadducees; who, according to Josephus, believe "that souls die with the bodies."—Antiq., b. 18, c. 1, s. 4. So while two of the Jewish sects, after their captivity, accepted the view that grew out of necromancy, which God forbade, neither of them believed in emigrating to heaven at death, but rather to a home in the ground, or over on the distant shores of an ocean. But the Sadducees stood firmly against necromancy from first to last, and consequently had no faith in this theory of a soul-world, either under ground, or on a sea-shore. They could not believe in this nonsense without first believing in soul immortality, which doctrine they repudiated. But the Sadducees went to an extreme in their views, and made death a finality, denying a resurrection, and also denying the existence of angelic and Satanic spirits, which called down upon them the Savior's censure. They, like the horse on the bridge, seeing the Pharisees and Essenes plunge into the water on one side of the bridge, hastened to a position equally as dangerous on the other side, running off of the bridge themselves.

To-day the world is filled with the fruit of God-forbidden necromancy, in some of its numerous forms. First, it set up the claim that personal ghosts survived the death of corporeal men; then it must hunt them a home; and that home has been located under the ground, and over the ocean, and finally in the skies; though this latter location is comparatively a modern arrangement. The first two locations were accepted by a part of the apostate Jews, but not the latter. Also when the Christian church began to apostatize, they first accepted this under-ground home for souls, which in time they exchanged for a sky kingdom, claiming that Christ liberated the souls there assembled at his crucifixion.

Of late Protestants deny that they ever lived in an under-ground home, and some deny that these souls can be consulted: thus the fruit of necromancy outlives its seed. W. S.

BEGINNING TO PREACH.

While the minister of the gospel of Christ should "not shun to declare the whole counsel of God," it should ever be remembered that experimental religion has a conspicuous place in the gospel message, and that when this is subtracted from it, all the rest is worthless; and every minister of Christ should not only deem it a duty to make this feature of the gospel message prominent, but should possess a relish for this work, and that relish should be augmented.

In beginning to preach, it is important to begin right, and even then there is chance for improvement; while if a wrong commencement is made, the termination may be the winding up of poor success. In entering the gospel ministry, do not assume the position of combatants too soon, as though there were no important features in the gospel but those involving controversy, and as though you were the only one capable of settling the question, thus impressing people that egotism is more prominent in the head than grace is in the heart; but enter the work with such a relish for devotion that it will be your choice to give prominence to experimental religion.

With a heart on fire with heavenly zeal, this will be a delightful theme to begin with, and will be within gospel limits too; and as the whole gospel cannot be preached at once, it is well for new beginners to commence with its easy lessons. It does not look well to see the new scholar ignore the lower branches, and begin with the harder problems, and have to come back at last and learn what he has left behind.

So it will be well for new preachers to have their hearts so fully baptized with divine love that it will always be easy to tell the sweet story of experimental religion; and that will always do good. If the sermon is a small one, and lacks talent, it has one redeeming quality in it; it has Christ in it; and that is much better than a big sermon, with a show of human wisdom, and destitute of Christ and his love. Lose sight of self, and hold up Christ before the people.

I do not mean by these remarks that new preachers should put the light of truth under the bushel, and keep it out of sight (that would displease God); but I do mean that they should not make themselves exclusively theological combatants, to the neglect of experimental themes. As some old preachers are doing this very thing, and seem determined never to mend their ways, it being "hard to learn an old dog new tricks," or to break them of old ones, and fearing that it may be the result of beginning wrong, we thus give timely caution to new preachers. Be ministers of Christ, as well as teachers of the truth, possessing his spirit. W. S.

CHRIST'S EMBASSADORS.—Who are they? Ministers who fitly represent Christ among men, and do his work faithfully. But, alas! how many pass as Christ's embassadors who are not meek and lowly, but filled with pride, and swollen up with carnal conceit, and therefore do not correctly represent Christ. God abhors this class of fashionable substitutes, with graceless hearts, official exteriors, blended with sanctimonious foppishness. Even intelligent worldlings are disgusted with this falsification of Christ's character. Many feel somewhat similar to a man in Wisconsin, who thus expressed himself to his comrades concerning a foppish clergyman—

"One of these days God Almighty will hold that fellow over hell till he will squeal like a pig."

"What for?" asked a comrade.

"For pretending to represent Jesus Christ," was the reply.

This "pretending to represent Jesus Christ" by men who are not Christ-like in heart and life, but the very opposite of humility and meekness, has become very extensive, and calls down the frowns of heaven. Christ's embassadors should bear the message of Christ to perishing men in the spirit of Christ, having their own hearts imbued with the spirit of this great message. They are responsible servants of Christ, and should not only present the right message, but do it with the character that will not reproach Christ, or fail to reflect his character. W. S.

SPRING GROVE (WIS.) CAMPMEETING.—This meeting commenced on the first day of September, and continued eight days, cheering many hearts. Eight or ten ministers were in attendance, and harmony prevailed in the encampment. Good was done to saints and sinners. Our social meetings were excellent, many pronouncing them the best they ever attended. We held our meetings under the big tent, which was partly surrounded by a circle of fourteen smaller tents. Many heard the truth for the first time, and seemed deeply impressed by it. Three were baptized. A session of conference being held, Bro. Alvirus N. Hitchcock was received as a minister among us. This makes the fourth campmeeting that I have attended this year, and I now start for the fifth. W. S.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 22d, 1872, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

ALTON BAY CAMP.

BRO. GRANT:—The meeting is progressing gloriously. Accessions are daily made to our numbers. Two hundred and seventy-one wooden houses are occupied by the worshipers, some large enough for four or five families, beside numberless cloth tents dotting the grove and side hills. Surely we are thickly settled here this year.

Union and harmony prevail as never before, so it seems to me. Very little strife for the mastery. Our committee have their hands more than full, but they are doing the best they can for the good of the cause and the comfort of the crowd present.

The preaching has been of the original stamp. The second coming of Jesus has been made prominent thus far. Daniel's four universal kingdoms have been explored, following historically to the "Stone" speedily to smite the image on the feet, dashing and driving it away, to make room for the kingdom of God to be set up, under the whole heavens. The abomination that maketh desolate, with its bloody track of persecuting power, the darkening of the sun immediately after, has been put in its prophetic place, with the signs following; the tide is quite high, and is rising daily. It is blessed to be here to join in the hallelujahs of praise. This is really an Advent meeting, such as we have had at Springfield, Mechanic Falls, Bethel, and other places; but they grow better and better, thank the Lord. And the more emphatic we make the signs of Jesus' speedy coming, the more they effect and stir the people.

Bro. Bowman, our missionary from South Carolina, is with us to cheer and help the car along. It is also cheering that the "Woman's Missionary Association" has blended with ours, so we have one Association in good faith. Our missionary efforts have been a success thus far. The Spirit of the Lord is with us. The spirit of benevolence is increasing.

There is preaching three times a day on the stand to large congregations, besides preaching in the large tents. These, with the meetings all about the settlement, make it a heavenly place to the lover of Jesus and his Advent.

The Lord smiles, the weather smiles, the disciples smile; in short, it is a smiling place. There is a large number of preachers; all phases of Adventism are represented, and the spirit of liberality prevails; and others not identified with us are in the meetings; they enjoy it, and so do we. Thus we are having a foretaste of that heavenly rest together.

There is a manifest desire for a higher state of spiritual life; and, thanks be to God, some by humble trust in the Lord, confidence in his word, and a renewal of the love of his glorious appearing, are finding it, and are progressing; joy unspeakable is the consequence. The woods are made to ring with the songs of forgiveness. "Yea, the trees clap their hands with joy, and the solitary places are made glad thereof." It is good to be here and unite in the chorus of praise.

There will be an influence going out from this meeting that will permeate and lighten the whole region, and spread the good news of soon entering the better country. So I hope, believe, and expect. More when the meeting is finished. L. BOUTELL.

THE TWO-HORNED BEAST.

E. MORRILL.

Some suppose that the rise of the two-horned beast is an event yet future. Now it is generally understood by those who are looking for the Lord soon to come, that Rev. 16:13–16 is now being fulfilled; that the "three unclean spirits like frogs," which "are the spirits of devils working miracles," are being developed in Spiritualism, which is going "forth to the kings of the earth and the whole world." If this is so, we are living under the pouring out of the sixth vial. See verse 12.

Now the two-horned beast must have existed before the first vial was poured out; for the second verse reads—"And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth; and there fell a noisome and grievous sore upon the men which had the mark of the beast, and upon them which worshiped his image." And as the two-horned beast "had power to give life unto the image of the beast," he must have existed before the image.

How, then, can we look for the rise of the two-horned beast as an event yet future? And if it has arisen and done its work, why may we not look for our Savior to come within a few months?

East Concord, N. H.

IT is a great and glorious work, worthy of a long life of care and toil, to be able to erect a guide-post on the highway of time, that shall direct and turn the feet of but one bewildered, sinful traveler into the narrow path that ends in heaven.

LEAVING FOR ENGLAND.

(From our English Correspondent.)

MR. EDITOR:—Two years ago your correspondent was standing on the prow of the Australia—one of the beautiful vessels belonging to the excellent fleet of steamships owned by the "Anchor" line—among the living hundreds of her passengers who crowded that part of the ship, watching with eager and piercing eye for the first discernible land of the American continent. Carefully we focused our sight for the longest distance by means of the straight cords of the eye, that we might discover land. The beginning of our watch was fruitless; but as we continued to make observation, we descried off far away in the distance, away where the horizon and the sea-wave twined arms, pressed cheek to cheek, and blended their elements in indistinguishable union, a shadow. Among those distant tints and shadows there was this one shadow, a trifle blacker than the rest. Its appearance was as a vein, a streak, or a line. It seemed to have grown up out of the water; and then it looked as if it was up among the clouds. Which was it? Was it standing in water; or was it up in the ether? which? We sailed toward it; we drew nearer that fairy-like and puzzlesome penciling; it became denser and bolder; we traced its form; its ambiguous positions became defined, and by the naked eye, unaided by the telescope, we delighted as we realized "land ahead," and not "afar off" either. O how welcome! Leaped many a heart in that hour. Did Columbus feel glad when he heard the cry, "Land ahead"? Equally pleased were we at the same sound. For sea-tossed, wave-bound, sky-ceilinged, water-floored, for ten tedious days, each of twenty-four realisable hours, we had been sailing for the States, and now we should soon be there, our voyage over, our end reached.

Our good steamer had glided over her seaway; she had behaved admirably. Her wedge-like bow had plunged thousands of times into the surging billows, cutting the main, tossing the foam, opening a pathway in the mighty deep. One terrible night, when the wind howled, and the waves dashed furiously against her sides, she still "bore ahead," outriding the storm, and swimming afront the boiling ocean, leaving the turbulent waves behind to finish their frightful battle.

But we were tired of our confinement; tired of our solitude; tired of that unvarying monotony, a ring of blue and a belt of water; tired of the sameness of all things. Our only relief, with the exception of a few schools of fish being the vision of a score or two of snow-white sail forming a fishing fleet, ranged in the shape of a crescent, and seen in the mellow hues of a gorgeous sunset; and a number of screams of a true representative of the States—an emblematic and bald old eagle, that flew out to our ship, perched on the top of our mainmast and sails in turn, screeching, as our lively imaginations conceited, in bird voice, "Welcome, strangers! to 'The land of the brave,

And the home of the free.'"

But presently we sailed into the bay of the Metropolis, and the anchor went down with a splash. This was at night. Morning came, and saw us on the wharf; and many a one in that early day inhaled a great free breath of relief and satisfaction in standing on terra firma once more. We felt our old and accustomed freedom had returned; and we might now go ahead over thousands of miles of rich soil, east, west, north, or south, as we willed, either for pleasure or profit.

I need not tell you how new and strange everything seemed to your correspondent, who had always lived in the old country. You can readily imagine all. But a few weeks served to acquaint me with the customs of the new land, and I became a tolerably fair Yankee. My tongue slid glibly round his peculiar phrases; I could call shops stores; and, in short, got on well enough, except when I trembled into an Anglicanism to my mortification and horror.

Two years have passed since I landed. A retrospection of those two years is needless. God knows all,—my labors, sufferings, afflictions, wanderings, mistakes, confessions, pardons, and all the threads of warp and woof that enter into the fabric of life.

But now there stand two boxes in my bedroom, packed and ready to be carted off, and in silence they are profoundly emphatic in this suggestion—leaving the country.

Yes, going home! Home, how beautiful even the thought of it. None but those who have first had a happy and inviting home, and have left it to be worn with the friction of other climates, and to wander in the shelterless outside, can fully appreciate the delights of "the old house at home." The grass grows greener on the plot fronting home. The fields all about it are more verdant. The "chatter" of the brook near by is more musical. The flowers bloom prettier, and emit more fragrance to bathe in perfume our "sweet, sweet home." The skies are brighter above it. The sun-beams that dance on it, that climb up its walls, and enter into its windows, seem to have a deeper tinge of gold in their heavenly laugh. The rooms are more cozy than those of other homes. The fire in the grate or stove is cheerier. Our loved ones are the best of all loved ones. Their voices are more symphonious; their songs more musical. Their eyes are expressive of the best of good-will. Criticism does not always sit at ear-gate to try our awkward sentences. Their kiss is balm and myrrh. The prattle of our little ones is inimitably sweet. Our prayer-meetings are united and loving applications to "our Father" in heaven through our Elder Brother, for his grace to keep us still in the unity of the Spirit in righteousness by faith. Our praise-meetings are gushings of heart-rivers into the illimitable Ocean. The church in our house is high church, for it is the church of God; low church, for it takes in the little ones; and broad church, for it admits all into fellowship. O what place is there like home? Where love is, it is a type of the home beyond. Home, sweet home! And sweet the thought, "Homeward bound."

"How are you going?" "By what route?" "Which way?" Mr. Editor, people will be curious; but perhaps some of them will want to go to England some day, "when they can afford it"; and I feel sure you will not object to my telling you and them about a way I call our way. Yes, going by "our route"; for there is one route decidedly ours; ours by constant patronage; ours by the preference which our people seem to give it. Five of us came over in the same ship at one time by it; three have just returned by it; others known to me have made this route their step-over line; by the same way your correspondent expects, if the Lord will, to return. I refer to the "Anchor" Line.

A brief account of this line will be of general interest as showing what industry, civility and perseverance united may accomplish. In the year 1863 it began with a triplet of steamers; but additions have been continually made to meet the increasing demand for accommodation, until, in the brief space of nine years, the "Anchor Line" sails a fleet of forty vessels, as trim and handsome a set of clipper steamers as specks the ocean. The agents are those canny Scots, the Messrs. Henderson Brothers, whose reputation on both sides of the water is only bounded by the limits of language and human kind. As for the vessels and accommodation, as far as our experience extends and we are competent to judge, they are equal to the best; they are of the best; and the question is if they are not the best. The New England agents are Messrs. C. L. Bartlett & Co., 16 Broad St., Boston. Gentlemanly, courteous and obliging, they tell your correspondent they will give all the advantages to our people and their friends which can be given by the New York agency. One of the inducements they offer is a $65 and $75 Cabin passage, as against $75 and $85 by other lines. Steerage $28, as against $30 and $33.

But I hope to make my next letter more interesting by detailing life on ship-board. Let me, then, wave to the readers of the Crisis for the present a hearty Adieu! The grace of Christ sustain each beloved saint in trial. And may that God whose "way is in the sea," whose "path" is in the great waters," and whose "footsteps are not known," go before the good ship Anglia, and lead the way propitiously and calmly to its destination, restoring your brother and correspondent to his friends and home. "Finally, brethren, farewell!" W. K.

WHAT WE NEED.

E. JOHNSON.

We need to be "baptized with the Holy Ghost." The apostles were commanded by their Lord, saying—"Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." We need the same anointing, especially we who preach; and if we are destitute of that power we had better tarry until we obtain it by fasting and prayer. There is no substitute for the Spirit of God; not any thing that will answer in its stead. Education has made great claims, and has taught us theology, philosophy and science, and many things which are good to know; but the sinner's heart remains untouched and he is not saved. Some have tried eloquence, but without the Spirit it falls to the ground; yea, it is powerless, as regards the salvation of men.

Dear brethren, shall we preach to others when we ourselves are destitute of those qualifications requisite for a christian life? Never. Let me first be qualified, being filled with the Spirit of God and sent out; then shall I stand where my God can speak through me to his own glory and the good of his people. I thank God that he has promised his Spirit to those who ask him. Luke 11:13. Notice the strong language used in Scripture on this point. 1 Cor. 6:19.—"What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" And again (2 Cor. 6:16)—"And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."

But although the word of God is so plain on this point, it is to be feared that there are many even among those that teach, who never knew by experience that there is any Holy Ghost. Hence the false doctrines, self-praises, dry sermons, jesting, and clownish stories, which we are sometimes obliged to listen to from the pulpit. The Spirit of God is manifested in every heart that receives it. Mark the contrast in Peter. Before the Spirit was given, timorously denying his Lord (Luke 22:57–60), and after it was given, his boldness in telling the Jews they had killed the Prince of life. Acts 3:15; 4:10.

The same heavenly boldness is still manifested in those who possess God's Spirit. Besides, the apostle Paul says (Gal. 5:22)—"But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." If we possess these heavenly graces, the cross of Christ will be our delight; the salvation of sinners our joy; the promises of God (to us) an eternal reality. Yes, my dear brethren, we can then take sinners by the hand and lead them to Christ. O for more of that loving, weeping spirit manifested by our Savior when he wept over the sinners of Jerusalem! I am fighting for a deeper work. Jesus is coming. Let us be ready. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

COMMUNION WINE.

G. W. GILLESPIE.

"I am the true vine," says Jesus, and only the pure juice of the "vine" is the true emblem of his blood. The sacrament is too holy an institution, and its observance too binding for us to remain ignorant of its value. "I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing." John 15:5. Now, as the branches live and bring forth fruit by virtue of the life-giving juice or blood of the vine, so do we as christians, by abiding in Christ, the true vine, and partaking of his blood, the pure juice, have "life" in us, and bring forth fruit unto holiness.

The conditions of eternal life are of this nature; for Jesus say—"Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6:54.

To eat of the bread and drink of the wine, without discerning thereby the Lord's broken body and spilled blood, which was given for us, for our salvation, is to eat and drink "unworthily," and the consequence is condemnation. Let us therefore understand that we are to use the emblems only that represent the body and blood of our Lord Jesus, for without faith in this matter it is impossible to please God.

Cain's offering to the Lord was rejected because it was the fruit of the ground, and represented no part of Christ, the Lamb of God; and I fear too many, who use fermented wine (one-fourth of which only is the juice of the vine, and sour at that), and others who use water only, will be accounted "unworthy," inasmuch as they represent no more than Cain's offering did, concerning Christ, the Lamb of God, the true Vine. Leavened bread (bread made with yeast) is unfit; it represents the leaven of malice. Fermented wine is too fit an emblem of the ferment and discord that exists in too many churches in the land.

Unleavened bread and the pure juice of grapes (unfermented) are the only emblems that answer to the broken body and spilled blood of our blessed Savior, the Lamb of God. Let us, believers in Christ, abide in him; eat of his flesh and drink of his blood (by faith), that we may have "life" in us, and be raised up at the last day.

The pure juice of grapes can be kept the year round by sealing in fruit jars, as you would fresh fruit. Neither sugar or water should be added; pint jars are large enough for one sacrament for a small church.

"CONSCIOUS OR UNCONSCIOUS."

Before Mr. Spiller can overthrow my main view of the unconscious state of man in the condition of death, he must establish the following points: 1st. That the spirit of man is different in its nature from that of the lower animals. 2d. That the spirit of man is identical with the soul of man. 3d. That the spirit when separated from man in death, is after all the man himself. 4th. That when thus separated it is immortal, and continues therefore to live. I would invite his attention to these points. If he should establish them, I freely confess that he will not only overthrow my theory of hades, but also that of future punishment. Until he has done this, his view of the distinction of man's spirit from that of God does not affect my argument for the unconsciousness of man in the intermediate state.

And now a word or two on that passage from St. Luke, which he tells us is so clear for his view of the consciousness of man when he is dead that a child should understand it. I have so much of the spirit of a child that I take this passage to prove what Christ says it proves, viz., "that the dead are raised." Luke 20: 37. Mr. Spiller, on the other hand, supposes it to prove that the dead are not dead at all, but are really alive. Let us see which of these views is borne out by the passage.

When our Lord says that "God is not the God of the dead but of the living," he lays down the simple principle that death and life are essentially opposite things. This is indeed taught us throughout the Scriptures, though reasoners like Mr. Spiller would tell us they are quite harmonious, and that a man may be both dead and alive at the same time. Our Lord, however, here lays down that these two conditions are essentially opposed.

Now in which of these two conditions did our Lord suppose that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob then were? In the state of death! He calls them "the dead" (verse 37). He could not therefore by any possibility have supposed them to be then "living," since he laid down the principle that life and death were opposite conditions.

If, then, they were not actually at that time alive, in what sense could they be said to be alive? Only as having God's promise of the resurrection to life eternal! It was in this sense that they were alive, and it could be in no other. And thus we see the perfect soundness of our Lord's argument that for God to call himself the God of a man who was actually at that time dead, was proof that that man would be raised from the dead. In this sense Christ's argument is a good one. In Mr. Spiller's sense it is a fallacy. The immortality of the soul has no connection with the resurrection of the body. It was, in fact, when Job's grand faith in the primitive doctrine of resurrection was abandoned, that men, who longed for immortality, took refuge in the speculation of the immortality of the soul.—HENRY CONSTABLE, in Rainbow.

Extracts from Letters.

BRO. R. M. HURLBURT writes from Farmer's Grove, Wis.:—"The deep waters of affliction have almost overwhelmed me. August 18th I laid my wife in the cold grave, to await the coming of the Redeemer to give immortality to all who have loved his appearing. How lonely are the hours! Beloved friends, give me your prayers to help me bear this heavy affliction. If it was not for the blessed hope, I should sink beneath the load; but by the help of God I will strive to meet the dear one where parting scenes are over. She was a kind and christian wife, was respected by all who knew her; but she sleeps in Jesus. She suffered very much, but without a murmur. She said it was all for the best. She embraced the Advent faith about four years ago, and was always ready to defend the same. She had a good deal of opposition when she first came out, and that from her nearest friends. Pray for me, that this affliction may be sanctified to my good and the good of her friends."

BRO. E. H. DAVIS writes from Radical City, Kan.:—"The Crisis, an old and acceptable newspaper, which I used to read years ago, before I came out west, has been subscribed for in my name, and I have received the same. It seems like an old friend to me, I can assure you. I hope it may be the means of doing some good away out here where the Advent is seldom heard. Permit me through its columns to return my most sincere thanks to the friend that has been so interested in my welfare."

THE GENEVA AWARD.

LONDON, Sept. 15. A despatch to the London Times from Geneva, says the award by the tribunal of arbitration to the United States will only exceed 3,000,000 pounds by a trifle.

The decision of the Court is signed by all the Arbitrators except Sir Alexander Cockburn, who will give a separate judgment agreeing with his colleagues only in relation to the Alabama, the award in which case constitutes the greater portion of the total sum.

Damages were granted in the case of the Florida 4 against 1, and in the case of the Shenandoah by 3 against 2. All the other cases presented by the American Government were dismissed by the Court. The Times says: "Willingly will we pay this sum to improve the law of nations."

LONDON, Sept. 16. The London journals of this morning rejoice over the conclusion of the Alabama claims controversy, and express the hope that the foundation has been laid for a permanent good understanding between the two nations now that all the necessary reparation has been made to America. The Standard, however, thinks that the tribunal should have awarded damages only for the depredation of the Alabama.

GERMANY.

THE RELIGIOUS QUESTION.

A deputation of English Protestants waited upon Prince Bismarck, and presented an address on the Jesuit question, taking strong grounds in opposition to that order. The prince, in replying to the address, said he regarded England as an unsafe bulwark for the defence of religious and political freedom. The present battle of Germany is with the view of combining religious peace with perfect liberty of conscience.

At the conference of emperors, the subject of making a concession in favor of Denmark was introduced. The Emperor William, however, refused to entertain any suggestion for making such concession, and the subject was dismissed.

RELIGIOUS.

The German Catholic Bishops' Conference at Fulda is fixed for to-morrow (Tuesday.) It will be attended not only by the Prussian bishops of the Roman Catholic Church, but by the episcopate of all Germany and German-speaking Austria. The clerical Germania denies that the conference has any special political significance with respect to the questions of the day. It is merely the ordinary biennial conference provided by established usage, the last such having been held in September, 1870.

THE RECENT CONFERENCE.

It is stated authoritatively that, at the recent conference of emperors in Berlin, the Czar Alexander asked for the abrogation of the tripartite treaty of Paris as the price of Russia's co-operation with Austria and Prussia.

ITALY.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE AND THE POPE.

Cardinal Antonelli has received a communication from the Papal nuncio at Vienna, that at the Imperial conference just ended at Berlin the Emperors agreed to forward a note to the Pope, asking him to break with the Jesuits, as the latter are the enemies of the Roman Catholic Church. The nuncio states that the Emperors promise to intercede with the Italian Government in behalf of the foreign corporations at Rome.

FRANCE.

PRESIDENT THIERS.

Thiers arrived at Paris yesterday morning from Trouville. He was waited upon by city officers and was presented with an address. Thiers in his reply expressed his pleasure at the favorable relations existing between France and other nations. He said that be would endeavor to remove all cause of contention among the French people, and would continue to govern the country in the same spirit he had heretofore. The reception extended to President Thiers was of the warmest character. He visited the American man-of-war now lying in the harbor. When he stepped upon the deck of that vessel the band played the Marsellaise, and the yards were manned. Upon his return three cheers were given him by the crew. A large crowd of citizens gathered upon the quay and loudly cheered the Americans.

ARREST OF ABOUT.

A despatch from Saverne, in the Department of Bas Rhine, France, twenty miles from Strasbourg, states that Edmond Francois Valentin About, the well-known political writer and romancist, has been arrested by the German authorities. The cause of his arrest is unknown, but it is generally surmised that some of the late productions of M. About, bearing on political subjects, have given offence to Germany.

Count De Remusat, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has addressed a note to the Prussian government asking an explanation of the arrest of Edmond About.

PERE HYACINTHE'S MARRIAGE.—Pere Hyacinthe (Hyacinthe Loyson), the celebrated French priest, has written a long and eloquent letter defending his recent marriage. He seems anxious to convince the world that he did not enter upon his independent course toward the Catholic Church (departure from his convent) for the purpose of marrying. He says:—

"No, my marriage has no connection with any religious conviction nor with any act of the 20th of September, 1869—or, rather, let me say, it is most intimately connected with them, but in that large and generous sense which binds together all the steps achieved by a soul in progress toward light and liberty. I will express my meaning with entire openness. I owe to the rule of religious celibacy some of the most exquisite joys, some of the most profound and decisive experiences of my existence. From the age of eighteen, when I chose it, I have observed it with a fidelity for which I give glory to God. If now, at the age of forty-five—in the calmness, as well as in the maturity of my judgment, of my heart, of my conscience, in a word, of my whole being—I believe myself bound to renounce it, it is that marriage comes home to me as one of those laws of the moral government of the world which cannot be set aside without overturning the fabric of life, and without running counter to the will of God. I did not say that this law comes home to all. I believe that celibacy may be a holy and glorious exception. I only say that this law presents itself unmistakably to me. When a man has received in his heart, as another exception no less rare, holy and glorious, that pure and lofty love in which the world does not believe, because it is not worthy of it, such a man, be he priest or be he monk, has the most absoulte proof that he is not of the number of those self-dedicated victims of whom the gospel speaks. Such a man am I; and here once more I give glory to God for what he has wrought in me. Such workings of his Spirit may appear contradictory; but their true harmony is known to him. At the very moment when I seemed to be abandoned, renounced by my friends and by my kinsmen, exiled by blow upon blow from my church, from my country, from my family, he sent on my solitary and desolate path a noble and holy affection, a sublime devotion, poor in this world's goods, rich in the gifts of intellect and of heart; and, when all had crumbled away, alone, or almost alone, this support remained to me. Surely this support would not be what it ought to be; I should not recognize the blessing which God has given me, were I to hesitate in seeking for it the consecration of marriage."

On the question of his right as a priest to marry, he remarks:

"I see no reasons which make marriage unlawful for me; for I cannot admit as such the law of any ecclesiastical system, and still less the prejudices of my fellow-countrymen. I will ever submit myself to the laws of the church when I am not called upon to recognize as such what Jesus Christ, speaking to the Pharisees of the ancient people, already designated as 'the commandments of men which made of no effect the commandments of God.' (Matt. 15: 6–9.) It is fully admitted that celibacy is not an article of faith; it ought to be acknowledged that it is not even a matter of Catholic discipline, but merely of the discipline of the Latin Church. Even at this hour, in the East, the Catholic clergy are married, with the full approbation of the Holy See. It is true that such marriage must precede and not follow ordination; but this restriction, besides being full of objections, is without meaning in the eyes of sound judgment, and does not the less establish in all its strength the principle that, in the mind of the Church there exists no real incompatibility between the two great sacraments of ordination and marriage. The countervailing prejudice belongs to a perversion of moral ideas, which one has a right to marvel at finding amongst Christian nations."

In concluding he declares that France, no less than the Church, needs the example which he gives, and that the nation's regeneration must come through the life of the family.—Journal.

In Brief.

—— A leading thoroughfare in Liverpool was lately discovered to be settling at one point, and upon exploring for the cause the engineers came upon a cavity twenty-five feet long, eighteen feet wide, and twelve feet deep, full of water, the crust over which at the thinnest part was only twelve inches thick! Horse cars were constantly running over this pit.——The Correspondence Genvoise, which was said to have been written under the direct influence of the Pope, has ceased to appear.——The middle classes of the Prussian capital, it is said, feel greatly alarmed at the increasingly hostile attitude of the populace. The menaces of which they have been the object have led them to initiate measures of self-protection.——The Gazzetta d'Italia says that Monsignor de Merode has gone to Brussels to arrange with the Belgian Ministry for the reception of the Pope in Belgium. The probability of the Pope's departure from Rome is attributed to the desire of avoiding in the case of his decease the necessity of holding the conclave at Rome.——A letter from Bucharest reports a curious atmospheric phenomenon which occurred there on the 25th of July, at a quarter past nine in the evening. During the day the heat was stifling. The sky was cloudless. In the evening everybody went out walking and the gardens were crowded. The ladies were mostly dressed in white, low-necked robes. Towards eight o'clock a small cloud appeared on the horizon, and a quarter of an hour afterward rain began to fall, when, to the horror of everybody, it was found to consist of black worms of the size of an ordinary fly. All the streets were strewn with these curious animals.——The Catholic religion has been as much a State religion in New York as it was in Rome before Victor Emanuel took possession. It took blocks of valuable land for sectarian purposes without a dollar's compensation, it controlled every office of profit in the city—from 1869 to 1871 it received over a million and a half of money from the City Treasury to carry on its various institutions. The Catholics took their children out of the public schools and put them in an institution called the Protectorate, and received from the city funds in the year 1871 the sum of $240,000 to carry the institution on. Eighty per cent. of all the money expended in improving the condition of the poor was spent on Roman Catholics, and the same parties have received during the past few years land from the city government amounting to several millions of dollars.——The census is at last complete. It shows that the total population of the United States is 38,558,371. Of these, 19,493,565 are, as a contemporary puts it, "gentlemen, and the rest "ladies." This gives the ruder sex a majority of 428,656.——The longest bridge in the world is said to be on the Mobile and Montgomery railroad, over the Tensas and Mobile rivers. It is fifteen miles in length, and has ten draws, one for each navigable channel. The bridge of itself is of wood, but the supports are iron cylinders. The structure cost $1,500,000, and has been three years in the course of construction.——Palestine has, according to the latest census, a Jewish population of only 11,293, half of whom live in Jerusalem.——President Thiers has been informed by Bourgoing that the Pope has abandoned the idea of leaving Rome.——Among the many artistic objects that will figure at the forthcoming international exhibition at Vienna, one of the most interesting will be a model of Solomon's temple, carved in lime tree wood, from the descriptions of Flavius Josephus.——The Rev. Jacob Knapp, for many years well known as a revival preacher, is said to be failing in health.

THE New York State Advent-Christian Mission Tent will be pitched in Syracuse, for a series of meetings, to commence Friday evening, Sept. 20th. Let all interested in the welfare of the cause in that city pray earnestly for wisdom from heaven to direct in all things pertaining to this effort; that truth may triumph, God be glorified, and the church be built up and put in order for the coming of the Lord.
WM. E. BROWN, Director.

As there has been much inquiry to know why we did not have a campmeeting at Pittsfield this year, as we have for four years past, and also if there is to be any in future at that place, we would say to all that, after a mutual consultation with preaching and lay brethren of Maine and N. B., we think it duty, if the Lord will, to continue our east Maine campmeeting at Pittsfield annually while time continues. The grove will be selected in a few weeks, and some work done on the ground this fall. Therefore we would say to all who are interested in this meeting, be ready to lend a helping hand in partly preparing the ground this fall. Due notice will be given.

THE first quarterly meeting for the Eastern District of Wis. will be held (the Lord willing) with the Big Creek Church, about eight miles north of Taunton, Sauk Co., to commence on Friday evening, Sept. 20th, holding over the following Lord's day. Let all the churches in the district send delegates, and it is expected that all preachers will attend. Friends from other districts are cordially invited to attend. GEO. THOMSON.

A QUARTERLY session of the Advent Christian Conference of New Brunswick will be held at Middle Simonds, Carleton Co., to commence Thursday, Oct. 10th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue through the week, and over the following Sunday. A general invitation is given to all to come and labor for sinners. RUFUS SNOW.

TO BRN. IN CANADA:—I shall, as agreed last fall, come over to Picton, Prince Edward Co., Canada, about the middle of Oct., and shall stay in the Province as duty may seem to demand. Shall go home around the head of Lake Ontario, and if any brethren not having already engaged my labors wish me to visit them, let them write me immediately at Albion, N. Y., or at Picton, Ontario, Canada, care of J. E. Lent.

A CAMPMEETING will be held in Savoy, Mass., within a few rods of the old ground, commencing Saturday, Sept. 21st, and continuing over the two following Sabbaths. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, together with a good number of able preaching brethren, will be with us during the meeting. The large Tent belonging to the Hoosick Valley Conference will be pitched on the ground, and used as a tabernacle for preaching and conference meetings during the day and evening; and for lodgings during the night to all who are not provided with small or family tents of their own. Board for man and beast at a reasonable rate on the ground, and lodging to all who do not wish to sleep in tents, can be had with private families near by. All who have enjoyed so many happy happy seasons during former campmeetings at this place, together with all others, are cordially invited to come, and do all that can be done for the salvation of ourselves and others before the day of destruction comes from the Almighty. Board and lodging free to all who preach the word and co-operating with the American Advent Christian Conference. Those who come expecting to sleep on the ground, bring blankets and bedding. H. K. FLAGG, for the Committee.

TENT MEETING.—The Lord willing, there will be a meeting under the Mass. Mission Tent, on land owned by Dr. Horne, near his residence in Watertown, Mass., commencing Friday, Sept. 20th, and will continue afternoons and evenings for eight days. This is a place where an extra effort is needed, and help from abroad is needed. Let brethren and sisters from abroad come, and bring provisions and blankets with them, and lodging will be furnished on the ground. Fare from Boston 15 cts. Horse and steam cars run close by the ground. Come and help us.

ENOCH MORRILL.

TIME CONFERENCE AT LAWRENCE, MASS.—There will be a Conference of the above nature at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sept. 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, and others from all parts, are earnestly invited to attend. The evidence that the prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and that the great plan of salvation under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a great interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved all over the land.

Watchman, what of the night? Come, men of God, from the north, south, east and west; come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned, for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things are true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they be without foundation in God's word, let it be exposed. Come, brethren, from every part. Those who have argument against are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it. We hope, by the blessing of God, to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally, like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom. Brn. Cunningham, Barbour, Sheldon, and others are expected to be present.
GEO. H. CHURCHILL, MOSES PROCTOR, J. T. MERRILL, } For the Church.

THE R. I. Mission Tent will be pitched at Green Station (on the Hartford and Providence R. R.), meetings to commence Sabbath, Sept. 22nd, and continue as long as the interest demands. It is desired that the brethren and sisters in the surrounding places come in and help us.
E. BELLOWS.

THE MAINE STATE CONFERENCE.—Where shall it be convened? The time for it is the second Tuesday in Oct. What church desires it held with them? If any, please notify me by letter at once, that the notice may appear in due time.
I. C. WELLCOME, Sec.

SPECIAL MEETING.—Providence permitting, I expect to hold a series of meetings in the Court House at Hennepin, Putnam Co., Ill., commencing Oct. 8th, and continuing as the interest demands. Let the friends in the region about come in and help us. Come to work for Jesus.
C. C. MARSTON.

THERE will be a protracted meeting of days at Belgrade Mills, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to brethren and sisters to come and labor for the salvation of the lost, as provision will be made for all. Strangers will call on Brn. Towle and Golder, and others. Will preaching brethren come, and give meat that is due? For the church, H. B. SEVEY.

HEREAFTER, Bro. C. C. Barker's Hymn Book, entitled, "Hymns of the Morning," will be sold at the following prices: Cloth covers, by mail, 50 cts. each. Per dozen, by mail, $5.00. Leather covers, 75 cts. each. Sold at wholesale by C. W. Sargent, Box 426, Concord, N. H. For sale at the Crisis Office.

A SPECIAL TIME CONFERENCE will be held on the Life and Union camp-ground, at Springfield, Mass., Sept. 18th, to continue over the following Lord's day. The object of this meeting will be to earnestly and prayerfully investigate the prophetic word, especially the definite time for the coming of Christ and deliverance of God's people, the justification of the sanctuary, and to consult as to what are our special duties growing out of the evidence that Christ is immediately coming, and take such action as may be deemed advisable in view of the vast responsibility resting upon the servants of Jesus Christ. Let such as can, bring their provision; but those who cannot, may obtain it on the ground at reasonable rates. Bring also such clothing as will be necessary for night protection. A large tent will be on the ground, also other accommodations. Let there be a general rally at this important meeting.

HIS COMING.

"At even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning."

"It may be in the evening,
When the work of the day is done,
And you have time to sit in the twilight,
And watch the sinking sun,
While the long bright day dies slowly
Over the sea,
And the hour grows quiet and holy
With thoughts of me;
While you hear the village children
Passing along the street,
Among those thronging footsteps
May come the sound of my feet;
Therefore I tell you—Watch
By the light of the evening star,
When the room is growing dusky
As the clouds afar;
Let the door be on the latch
In your home,
For it may be through the gloaming
I will come.

"It may be when the midnight
Is heavy upon the land,
And the black waves lying dumbly
Along the sand;
When the moonless night draws close,
And the lights are out in the house,
When the fires burn low and red,
And the watch is ticking loudly
Beside the bed;
Though you sleep, tired out, on your couch,
Still your heart must wake and watch
In the dark room,
For it may be that at midnight
I will come.

"It may be at the cock crow,
When the night is dying slowly
In the sky,
And the sea looks calm and holy,
Waiting for the dawn
Of the golden sun
Which draweth nigh;
When the mists are on the valley, shading
The river's chill,
And my morning star is fading, fading
Over the hill;
Behold I say unto you—Watch!
Let the door be on the latch
In your home;
In the chill before the dawning,
Between the night and morning,
I may come.

"It may be in the morning,
When the sun is bright and strong,
And the dew is glittering sharply
Over the little lawn;
When the waves are laughing loudly
Along the shore,
And the little birds are singing sweetly
About the door;
With the long day's work before you,
You rise up with the sun,
And the neighbors come in to talk a little
Of all that must be done;
But remember that I may be the next
To come in at the door,
To call you from your busy work
For evermore.
As you work your heart must watch,
For the door is on the latch
In your room,
And it may be in the morning
I will come."

So I am watching quietly
Every day,
Whenever the sun rises brightly,
I rise and say—
"Surely it is the shining of His face!"
And look unto the gates of His high place
Beyond the sea;
For I know he is coming shortly
To summon me.
And when a shadow falls across the window
Of my room,
Where I am working my appointed task,
I lift my head to watch the door and ask
If He is come;
And the angel answers sweetly
In my home—
"Only a few more shadows,
And He will come."

"NEW TESTAMENT STANDARD OF PIETY."

Bro. Grant:—Permit me through the medium of our paper to invite the attention of the dear ones scattered abroad to the above work by Rev. Wm. McDonald, Editor of the Advocate of Christian Holiness, Boston. A clearer and more concise treatise I never saw on the subject; so practical, and in its theory so scriptural, as to meet the demands and answer the objections of any honest inquirer. From chapter seven we copy the following:

"1st. It is objected, that the presentation of entire sanctification as a distinct work is calculated to disparage justification. We were never able to see the force of this objection. If sanctification as taught in our standards of Christian doctrine be true, it should be preached, if it should disparage other doctrines. But this is not the case. Justification is no more disparaged by a faithful presentation of sanctification, than is sanctification by an exclusive presentation of justification. Why should it be so if they are both of God? Does the teacher disparage the alphabet by urging the pupil to leave it and proceed to combine letters into syllables, and syllables into words, and words into sentences, and sentences into discourses? Does the instructor disparage the axioms of mathematics by urging the student to leave them and proceed to construct his demonstrations? Does the architect disparage his foundation by leaving it to erect a beautiful superstructure thereon? If the objections urged against our doctrine be sound, they would be open to such charges. It is no disparagement of the alphabet that the pupil thinks more highly of the finished discourse than of the letters of which it is composed. Still, without the letters first learned, he knows that no such discourse could have been produced. It is no disparagement of the axioms that the demonstrations are regarded with greater interest; for the mathematician knows that no such results could have been reached without their aid. It is no disparagement of a foundation that the superstructure is more highly prized, when it is clearly understood that the superstructure derives much of its permanency from the foundation on which it rests. So with justification and sanctification. It is no disparagement of justification that sanctification occupies a place in christian experience that God never assigned to justification. The one is to the other what the foundation is to the superstructure; what the alphabet is to the language. Sanctification completes what justification so gloriously begins; as the superstructure completes what was so well begun with the foundation. Must we stop with the foundation, fearing that a beautiful superstructure thereon will disparage it? Shall we cease presenting the subject of sanctification, fearing that justification will suffer by the presentation? We believe that justification is glorious, much more so than we deserve; but we believe that sanctification excels in glory, and still no more than all have a right to expect. * * * * * * * *

2nd. It is objected that a distinction in point of time between justification and sanctification represents God as doing his work imperfectly. It is said, The sinner, when seeking God, asks to be saved—fully saved; and if God does not save him, he does not do his work perfectly; and if he does fully save him, a second work is unnecessary and false. This seems to be a plausible objection, but when it is examined closely, it will be found to be without much force. That God does his work perfectly there can be no doubt. But this work is always in harmony with faith. Whatever the intelligence comprehends, and faith grasps, is bestowed. How is it with the man seeking justification? The language of Christ is, 'Whatsoever things ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.' God gives a sinner, then, what he asks for. What does the sinner most desire? What does he most need? What constitutes the burden of his prayer? What does he know about a clean heart? He is condemned, and under the sentence of death, and he feels it. He is guilty, and he wants pardon. He feels that God is offended, and he pleads for reconciliation. He feels that every element of his nature is averse to God, and he wishes his heart changed and given a heavenward tendency. His cry is, 'Father, forgive!' 'Be merciful to me a sinner!' 'Turn away thine anger from me!' God God hears, answers and forgives the culprit, and he rejoices in a sin-pardoning God. His sins have all been forgiven for Christ's sake, and a new element—love—has been introduced into his soul, by which his whole nature has received a heavenward tendency. He receives just the blessing sought. The penitent seeker knows little of the deep depravity of his heart. It is well he does not, for such a discovery would paralyse his faith, and quite extinguish hope. He receives, so far as he comprehends his wants; and, as further discoveries are made, and corresponding faith exercised, grace is given. I do not deny but the sinner might, should he see all his wants, and understand all the depths of his corruption, receive complete cleansing. But this is not God's ordinary method, as is proved by the experience of the church.

* * * * * * * *

"We repeat, God does his work perfectly. If the penitent asks for pardon, he is pardoned and 'justified from all things.' If he asks for a clean heart, and comprehends his needs, according to his faith, so shall it be done unto him. This is God's method of saving souls. If regeneration and entire sanctification are always experienced at the same time, what is to be done with the tens of thousands in the church who profess justifying grace, and yet are conscious that they are not sanctified wholly? They are among our most active and worthy members. But if this doctrine be true we must set them all down as children of the devil, and fit subjects for perdition. I could not thus curse whom God the Father owns and blesses; but should be obliged to do so to be consistent with my theory, if I believed the dogma here opposed."

The above is a specimen of the valuable work referred to, and we heartily recommend it to those interested in holiness. Outside the word of the Lord, your money could not be better invested.

JOSEPH DES LAURIERS.

In the Crisis of Sept. 4th, a note from Bro. Owen informs us of the death of this dear brother on the Springfield Camp-ground. The news came to us like an overwhelming wave, and startled and saddened us, as we left him in health on Thursday, as he was preparing for baptism, and knew nothing of his sickness till he was dead and buried. His case was somewhat peculiar as he was separated from friends by long distances, and by his faith, and dying thus and being buried away alone, with all the circumstances of the case, as none will weep over his grave and friends will never know where he sleeps, perhaps makes it seem advisable to write a few words in memoriam, and present some facts with reference to his case, which will be of interest to the readers of the Crisis.

Bro. Des Lauriers was born of French parents and educated a rigid Catholic; was not a "colored" brother as was stated by mistake, although from his dark skin he might be taken for such. His parentage was of the old French stamp originating in Normandy, in a locality famous for its laurels, where the name Des Lauriers (of the Laurels) originated.

We formed the acquaintance of this brother in Hinesburgh, Vt., where we were engaged during the last winter in a protracted effort. He came into the first meeting, and his attendance was so constant as to cause remark and lead us to expect him as we would the sun to rise. He possessed a clear intellectual perception, and became much interested in the Bible truths we presented, although they were so much opposed to the views he entertained and cherished. He soon manifested a desire to know the truth, and purchased, we think, his first English Bible, having by his own efforts acquired a tolerable proficiency in reading and writing the English language. He was however an excellent French scholar, having received a liberal education at the Jesuit College in Montreal, and having been engaged as a teacher for some time in a Jesuit school there. He was discharged from that position, as he told us, for intemperance, and became engaged in working at a trade.

While attending the meeting his Bible and French Testament were his constant companions, and were proof of the thoroughness with which he studied the Bible and tested both his faith as a Catholic and our preaching by that unerring book. God's Spirit helped him; he gave all to Jesus, received heartily all the truth, and became an exemplary christian and an earnest advocate of the truth both among the English and French speaking people. The ministers of the denominations and others found his positions hard to overthrow, and were sometimes evidence that the truth had at least some power over them,

He subscribed for the Crisis, Times and Bible Banner; purchased tracts, which he read and studied and loaned to others. He bore testimony both in meeting and out of his love for Jesus, although affected by a diffidence on account of, as he thought, his poor use of the English language. He was beloved by the little band of those who love the appearing of Jesus, and as far as we know was respected by all, at least, after he became soundly converted to Christ. It was a long step for him to go from the dogmas of Catholicism to Bible truth, but there was never a man more thoroughly convinced of the errors of the "harlot woman" than he. He had heard a French Baptist missionary before he came to the meetings we held, but said too much was said against the Catholics to suit him; we said nothing against any, but presented truth which he saw and believed. After a time we gave a lecture on Rev. 17, after which he said, "I can be a Catholic no longer."

He had a strong desire to attend the campmeeting at Springfield, and enjoyed the meetings exceedingly, although taking but little part. He was baptized on Thursday of the meeting, but for some reason unknown to us did not take off his wet clothes (perhaps because he stopped in a large crowded tent and had no good opportunity of doing so) until a late hour at night, or the next morning, and doubtless from this exposure took cold and died.

Dear brother, we loved him. He made himself dear to us, and we mourn for him, and yet not as for those who die without hope. We know of his having but one near relative, a sister, and a few cousins. He lived in Hinesburgh simply because he worked there, but had no relatives; still the gentlemen for whom he labored took a deep interest in his welfare, and he had as pleasant associations as friends in Jesus could give him.

He sleeps in Jesus, and will soon awake in the resurrection morning. Yes, Joseph—

"Asleep in Jesus! far from thee
Thy kindred and their graves may be,
But thine is still a blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

NEW YORK A. C. CONFERENCE.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The first quarterly session of this conference, this year, by a special vote of the Annual session, was held in connection with the State Campmeeting at Fairport, Aug. 14th to 17th, 1872. Properly this was an adjourned meeting of the Annual Conference;—certain unfinished business belonging constitutionally to that body having been made the special order of this meeting, as advertised in the President's call. The business meetings, of which there were six, were each called to order by the President, and opened by devout prayer, and singing. At the first session Wednesday morning, Bro. Warren Vreeland not being present, the Address was postponed, and finally given, on short notice, by his alternate, Bro. J. E. Wells, Thursday A. M.

Committees: Business—J. H. Whitmore, W. J. Hobbs, and R. C. Brown. Devotional Exercises—D. Cogswell, A. P. Moore, and B. P. Stevens. Campmeeting—B. P. Stevens and R. C. Brown, eastern district; D. Cogswell and N. T. Withington, southern district; B. C. Simonds and P. M. Grinnell, western district; and Marshall S. Hall, Canada. Brn. D. T. Cooper and Wm. I. Lord were appointed to fill a vacancy in the present acting committee.

The following delegates were received, the sums following their names being the amount of their quarterly collections, taken by their respective churches:—N. McCulloch and D. T. Cooper, Rochester, $6; Moses Whitaker, Darien, $5; O. B. Brown, Honeoye, $4.10; N. T. and S. Withington, Springwater, $5.37; Edward Sanderson, East Shelby, $6.05; D. Cogswell, Dansville, $10; and A. E. Bowe, Le Roy. Total amount of the collections, $36.52. This, together with $38.48 from the camp collections, making $75, was put into the hands of the devotional committee for an equitable distribution among the ministers, in view of their (generally) small support in the mission field. (May the Lord bless it as he did the five loaves and two small fishes.)

In the examination of the standing of ministers, some inquiries were made relative to the active services (as ordained ministers) of Brn. Ira Allen and J. H. Lutteuton. Brn. D. Cogswell and A. C. Newell were appointed to confer personally or by letter with them respecting the same. No charges being preferred against any member of the conference by any, this order was passed, and the reports of delegates and ministers taken up. These, generally, were interesting and not more varied than is usual; all had trials, hopes and fears, discouragements and encouragements, sunshine and clouds; but all reported firm resolutions to press the battle till Jesus comes and gives release. Letters were read from Brn. C. H. Williams and J. W. Taylor, and from the church at Lockport. The special business of the session was now reached, and the chairman of the business committee reported the following preamble and joint resolution, which was, with little discussion, adopted unanimously:—

Whereas, it is desirable that a full attendance of the members of this conference should be had at each of its general meetings; and whereas such meetings have grown so large with us, as that this result cannot well attain under our present custom of holding four general meetings each year; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That for the purpose of meeting this difficulty, this conference shall hereafter be composed of (for the present) three quarterly-meeting districts. 2. The churches of each district shall hold three regular quarterly meetings succeeding the general Annual session, each year. 3. The churches at Darien, LeRoy, Lockport, Brockport, Knowlesville, Murray, East Shelby, etc., shall be known as the Western District; the churches at Honeoye Flats, Springwater, Dansville, Fremont (Stevens' Mills), Rodgersville, Hornellsville, Cohocton, etc., shall be known as the Southern District; and the churches at Rochester, Seneca Falls, South Butler, Conquest, Wolcott, Alton, etc., shall be known as the Eastern District. 4. The officers of these districts, until the next annual meeting, shall be as follows: Western District—President, A. C. Newell; Vice President, W. Vreeland; Secretary, A. P. Moore; Treasurer, B. C. Simonds. Southern District—President, D. Cogswell; Vice Pres., W. J. Hobbs; Secretary, H. H. Brown; Treasurer, S. H. Withington. Eastern District—President, M. R. Miles; Vice Pres., W. A. Fenn; Secretary, Wm. E. Brown; Treasurer, R. C. Brown. 5. It shall be the duty of the Secretaries of the several districts to report to the Secretary of the general Conference at least four weeks before the annual session.

Those churches in the several districts desiring the next quarterly meeting will, of course, correspond immediately with the proper officers who are expected to call the meetings about the first of December, March, and September. May the Lord greatly bless this new plan of conference for advancing its general interests through the State; and we earnestly pray that a new impetus may be given to the cause in each district. Brethren and sisters, do all help; do not miss a meeting, one of them, one of you.

The character of the religious exercises of this session has been set forth in the report of the Campmeeting.

Wm. E. Brown, Sec.

— Most people drift. To do this is easy. It costs neither thought or effort. On the other hand, to resist the tide one must have principle and resolution. He must watch and pray and struggle continually. And yet no thoughtful person, who cares for his own soul, will dare to drift.

Dull Preachers.—Never complain that a preacher is dull unless you can put your hand on your vest and solemnly declare that you did not overeat at breakfast that morning. The most wide-awake preaching cannot hold its own against Sabbath gluttony.

INDULGENCES.

In Europe nearly all the inhabitants profess religion. Christianity is established by law. In some countries the Protestant form of worship is maintained; in others, the Roman Catholic. But whatever the religion, nearly all the people adopt the prevailing faith and attend, with more or less strictness, upon the established ordinances. This shows how easy it is to make votaries of the cross by the wholesale.

The low state of morality which prevails in all these nations, demonstrates how little influence their religion has on their hearts and consciences. They are much more ready to fight for Christianity than they are to live according to its precepts. Their claim to the name of Christians rests upon a traditional, unintelligent belief in its doctrines as handed down to them, and in an external observance of the forms and ceremonies which they have been taught to venerate.

The religion of this country is rapidly assuming this character. Our voluntary system of supporting the means of grace instituted by the gospel, renders each denomination eager to obtain as many adherents as possible. The fierce rivalry which prevails between the leading sects, as to which shall outshine the others in the magnificence of its houses of worship, and in the splendor of its public performances, makes the support of rich men absolutely necessary; and it must be secured at any cost.

A system of indulgences has been adopted. As competition increases, greater inducements are offered to the wealthy to unite with the leading churches. Indulgence is allowed to pride. This is catered to, by building fine churches, and then selling the best pews to those who will pay most for them. Then extravagance in dress is tolerated, until today you will find women advocates of holiness—who would not, in their gorgeous attire, have been admitted to a Methodist class, as a seeker, forty years ago.

2. Indulgence is granted to appetite. Splendid churches are built, with kitchen, dining-room and parlors—duly furnished with cookstoves, crockery and costly furniture—not for the preacher's residence, for that would be considered degrading; but to attract worshipers, and to beguile them to pay their money for some benevolent enterprise.

Well does inspiration forewarn us against those who thus pervert the gospel of Christ. "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ; whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things." Phil. 3: 18: 19.

3. Indulgence is granted to worldly pleasures. As enjoyment is not found by formalists in religion, it is sought for in worldly amusements. Ministers tolerate, if they do not advocate, the practice. There is not an amusement which moral, respectable men and women of the world feel free to indulge in, that is not patronized by professors of religion in good standing in popular churches. Where, then, is the cross? Where the self-denial? Where the separation from the world? And where, then, are the disciples of Christ?

This system of indulgences may bring to the church numbers, and money, and influence; but does it lead souls to heaven? Is it authorized by God? There is not a single passage in the Bible which, rightly understood, gives the slightest countenance to this worldly, self-indulgent religion. The terms of salvation are the same as they ever were. Jesus still says—"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Matt. 16 24–26. The very first step to be taken is to deny self—to renounce utterly, and forever, the life of self. Conversion is a radical change. It affects our entire nature. It makes a still greater change in our motives than in our actions. The very first step, in a real christian's life, is to stop living to please ourselves. It is not merely in ceasing to indulge ourselves in needless gratifications that the true idea of self-denial lies, but in throwing off, utterly and forever, the life of self. "Ye are not your own, ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Cor. 19, 20.

The great defect in the religion of the day, is the failure to insist upon putting aside what God has forbidden. It is an easy thing to make a profession of religion. It has become popular. The opposition is, to putting off the world. But this is just what God insists upon; and what the churches of to-day do not insist upon. The Bible, from Gen. to Rev., breathes but one spirit in relation to this matter. It teaches us, by a great variety of commands and illustrations, ... that it is quite as necessary that we put away sin, as to practice righteousness. When Jacob was going up to Bethel to worship, he said to his household, and to all that were with him—"Put away the strange gods that are among you, and be clean, and change your garments. And let us arise and go up to Bethel; and I will make there an altar unto God." Gen. 35: 2. Here, the first thing to be done was, to put away the strange gods. When the children of Israel kept the passover, they were, the very first day, to put away leaven out of their houses. Ex. 12: 15. Paul says, that if you have heard Christ, you have been taught by him, "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Eph. 4: 22. The "old man" is to be put off before the new man is put on. But the prevailing effort is to put the new man on over the old man.

Multitudes are willing to assume the garment of salvation, but only on condition that it be so worn so as to show off their own purple and fine linen to the greater advantage. They are ready "to put on Christ," but demand that they be allowed to make "provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof." Rom. 13: 14. Too many ministers and churches are ready to yield to this demand. Against this unhallowed attempt to unite Christ and Belial, we utter our solemn protest. It is unscriptural. . . . Protestant preachers have no more right to grant indulgences than popish prelates. There is no more authority to give license to sin to build a meeting-house than to decorate a cathedral; to sustain a Sabbath school than to found a convent. "Let us not do evil that good may come."—Earnest Christian.

— We can do more good by being good than in any other way.

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.

William IV. expired about midnight at Windsor Palace. The Archbishop of Canterbury, with other peers and high functionaries of the kingdom, were in attendance. As soon as the "sceptre had departed," with the last breath of the King, the Archbishop quitted Windsor castle and made his way with all possible speed to Kingston Palace, the residence at that time of the Princess—already, by the law of succession, Queen—Victoria. He arrived long before daylight, announced himself, and requested an immediate interview with the Princess. She hastily attired herself and met her venerable prelate in the anteroom. He informed her of the death of William, and formally announced to her that she was, in law and right, successor to the deceased monarch. "The sovereignty of the most powerful nation at the feet of a girl of eighteen." She was de jure Queen of the Anglo realm, in fact or history on which the "sun never sets." She was deeply agitated at the formidable words, so fraught with blessing or calamity, and the first words she was able to utter were these: "I ask your prayers in my behalf."

They kneeled together, and Victoria inaugurated her reign, like the young King of Israel in the olden time, by asking from the Highest who ruleth in the kingdoms of men, "an understanding heart to judge so great a people, who could not be numbered nor counted for multitude."

The sequel of her reign has been worthy of such a beginning. Every throne in Europe has tottered since that day. Most of them have been for a time overturned. That of England was never so firmly seated in the loyalty and love of the people at this hour. Queen Victoria enjoys personal influence too, the heartfelt homage paid her as a christian woman—incomparably wider and greater than that of any monarch now reigning.—Evangelical Messenger.

E. OWEN.

Kind father, as thy children meet
In this oft-hallowed place,
And humbly bow before thy feet,
To seek thy gracious face;

Do thou in mercy condescend
To grant thy blessing, Lord!
And may thy Spirit now descend,
According to thy word.

Thy children come from East and West,
From mountain, hill, and dale,
Oh! bless them as thou seest best,
Nor let their Foe prevail

To cast them down in their own eyes,
Nor lead them to despair,
From feelings, frames, or moral size,
When men themselves compare

Among themselves, and are unwise,
But may the "Pattern," Lord,
And best assurance of the "prize,"
Lead them with one accord

To praise and worship, thank and love
The sinner's Savior, Friend,
Who loves them from his throne above,
And will, world without end.

Oh! may they look to Him and live,
And ne'er forget the grace,
Which saves and keeps from Satan's sieve,
In this and every place.

MAN AN ANIMAL.

Under the above heading, the following appeared in the New York Herald. In this way the truth is being scattered. Thank the Lord.

"To the Editor of the Herald:—Concerning the meaning of the word 'soul,' any Scripture student knows—first, that Moses uses the word in exactly the same sense as we, in modern English, use 'animal;' second, that 'souls' (animals) were created before man—Gen. 1: 20 (Reference Bible). Now it will be observed that in the discussion that has passed in your columns it was at first assumed that souls are immortal; but lately it assumes a different aspect. 'O. H.' has suggested a different theory, seeing that the ordinary orthodox premises are untenable. 'The soul, it dies,' he says; 'but the immortal germ within the soul is to be raised to a sphere,' etc. It will be our object to prove Scripturally that the animal (soul) man has no more existence after death than any other inhabitant of our planet, earth. Examined in the light of science, the body of man exhibits no very remarkable characteristics, except in the superior development of the intellectual faculties, which places him at the head of the animal races. Like them he derives food from herbs and flesh; like them masticates, digests, and absorbs it into his system; like them he sees, hears, smells, tastes, feels, through like organs; destroy his eye, he cannot see; destroy his ear, he cannot hear, and so on; he shows no property that is not exhibited in the lower classes of souls or animals, except in his superior mental or phrenological development. If man had an immortal 'germ' (or whatever name one chooses to give it) that can see, hear, think, etc., do you not think when the ocular or auricular nerve was destroyed, its immortal powers would be called into requisition—it would lead the blind and supplant the ears of the deaf? But, alas! science and the Bible are of one opinion in this respect, that man hath no pre-eminence above a beast—all go to one place. (Eccl. 3: 19). Yes, that is the emphatic language of the wise king Solomon. As all animals are supported by the spirit of life, which is the marvelous power of nature, or God, so, when this spirit of life is withdrawn by the prerogative of that God, the intellectual faculty and all the five senses that it commands are destroyed by the surrounding forces of nature and return to their original elements. 'His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish.' (Ps. 144: 4.) And 'the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward, in heaven nor anywhere, 'for the memory of them is forgotten, also their love and their hatred, and their envy is now perished.' (Eccl. 9: 5.) 'That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth so dieth the other.' (Eccl. 3: 19). This is the Bible definition of death.

— Whose "is the kingdom of heaven"? Theirs who are persecuted for righteousness' sake.

— Kindness is the music of good-will to men; and on this harp the smallest fingers may play heaven's sweetest tunes on earth.

— Discriminate: take the good and reject the bad, either in a question or in a person.

— Do a thing well, and nobody will ask you how long you were about it.

— Self-sacrifice is the saint's first step on the ladder to heaven. The higher he goes, the less be knows of it; for his will conforms to the Lord's, and it becomes no sacrifice to do whatever his King requires.

— A chief art of the spiritual life is to do natural things spiritually, and spiritual things naturally.

— If we would succeed in the work of saving souls we must secure the help of God.

— Value the friendship of him who stands by you in the storm; swarms of insects will surround you in the sunshine.

— If God be taken as a witness to our alms, no other is needed to establish the fact or to perpetuate the record of what we do.

— There is more bitterness following upon sin's ending than ever there was sweetness from sin's acting. You that see nothing but weal in its commission, will suffer nothing but woe in its conclusion. You that sin for your profit will never profit by your sins.

"This is for your Health."

THE MORAL AND THE PHYSICAL.

That there is an intimate relation between the moral and physical part of man, and such that what oppresses the one will painfully and injuriously affect the other, and what has a favorable or profitable effect on the one will have a similar effect on the other, is a fact admitted by all who have given the matter consideration. A mutual sympathy exists between the two natures. Intense fear, or anger, or grief, has been known to take away life in a few moments, and it has been proved that these passions, in a less degree, have retarded digestion, taken away appetite, and brought on sickness. A fretful, malicious, or discontented man cannot expect to have as perfect health as he would have if love and cheerfulness shed their bright beams in his heart, on his face, and all around him. Who does not know the sustaining and restoring power of hope? When the last remedy failed, hope, long fled, and by some particular circumstance returning to the despairing bosom, has reanimated the whole system, and reclaimed the patient from the verge of the tomb to the glow and vigor of health. Illustrations of this are abundant.

Further, the influence of the religious state upon the health is greater than is often supposed. So long as one is distressed about his relation to his God, conscious of his anger and distrustful of his favor and mercy, or suffers remorse for his moral turpitude, or loathes himself, his health will suffer. All this religious anxiety and distress make large draughts upon the nervous energy. His vitality and strength are remarkably depreciated. They take away the animus which is essential to the continuation of the work of the physical functions with its proper intensity. On the other hand it is equally true that ill-health is very unfavorable to moral development. It tends to make men peevish, harsh, and uncharitable. Besides giving a positive bent to character, it often casts a dark shadow over one's religious feelings.

A sincere christian, with a crazy stomach, or a redundancy of bile, or an oppressed, overworked, feverish brain, will consider himself so sinful as to be beyond the reach of infinite mercy—will doubt God's grace; in fact, will distrust everybody whom he has the greatest reason to trust, will think everything going wrong with himself and with everybody else. At other times, when the physical functions act normally, he will be transported with God's grace and love, his heart will overflow with peace and gratitude, and he will feel "strong in the Lord;" whereas before, he felt he could do no good in the world.

In ill-health one thinks that he is the most miserable of all men (perhaps this is not far from the truth), that no one has so many misfortunes as he. It seems to him the world is cold, and no one cares whether he lives or dies. There is no beauty in nature. The earth is of iron, and the heavens are of brass. Everything is against him, and he might better have never been born. But when the blood has resumed its healthy flow, and lost order and normal activity have been restored to his "earthly tabernacle," everything moves on harmoniously, and he wonders how any one can be unhappy in such a beautiful world. All his bugbears have vanished. There is no such thing as fail with him. His fears have gone to the winds. He is brimful of hope. Every one he meets greets him with a smile.

A remarkable case of religious gloom, very probably occasioned by ill-health, is that of the unhappy, yet pious, Cowper. He was possessed of a religious despair which, toward the end of his life, never left him. It was painful to witness. Whether his religious state was the cause or the result of his ill-health may be a question. Very probably his moral and physical distresses mutually aggravated each other; but it seems to us that his physical derangement or disease was the great agent of all his misery, and that this, in the first place, was a great cause of his despondency. We meet with illustrations of these truths daily. Seeing these things are so, how careful we should be to preserve or or regain health by rational means, that we may not only feel well, but we may thereby favor our moral development and thus further our highest happiness; and, on the other hand, to improve our characters and live virtuously, and make our peace with God, that we may thereby promote our health and bodily comfort. Hereby we appeal to the dispositions of two classes of people. To those who are inclined to be immoral or vicious, but prize their health, we say, Live godly, that you may have good health; for "godliness hath promise of the life that now is." To those who are careless of the laws of health, but foster the hope of being Christians and living accordingly, we say, Live hygienically, that you may promote your godliness. It is very hard work to serve God with a sickly, deranged body. Especially to those who carry about a troubled mind in a feeble frame, we would say, You will never be well until your mind is at rest. Throw all your cares on the God of all grace, resign yourselves to him whom your sins have pierced, and think no longer of that misery. When you find "peace in believing," you will be freed from a serious obstacle to the recovery of your health.

Mental anxieties or excitement have been the cause of more disease or ill-health than is generally supposed. Many a one for whose recovery all imaginable expedients have been used in vain has sat daily brooding over his soul's misery, who needed a physician for the soul before the physician of his body could expect success in his most unremitting efforts. So long as he pleases to look on his misery, his ailment will not be mitigated. He must look on the Physician of souls. His disease is moral, and demands moral treatment; then all will be right. His physical system will be righted by having his moral nature righted.

There is danger on the one hand of ignoring physiological causes and agencies, and on the other, of ignoring or slighting moral causes or operations. Both should be acknowledged, not only abstractly, but in the most intimate connection with each other. The same God formed both natures, and there should be, and is, no schism in this grand structure of humanity.—Health Reformer.

Remedy for Wounds.—A correspondent of the "Country Gentleman" gives the following as one of the best remedies known for the cure of wounds:

"Take a pan or shovel with burning coals, and sprinkle upon them common brown sugar, and hold the wounded part in the smoke. In a few minutes the pain will be allayed, and recovery proceed rapidly. In my own case, a rusty nail had made a bad wound in the bottom of my foot. The pain and nervous irritation were severe. This was all removed by holding it in the smoke for fifteen minutes, and I was able to resume my reading in comfort. We have often recommended it to others, with like results. Lately, one of my men had a finger-nail torn out by a pair of ice-tongues. It became very painful, as was to have been expected. Held in the sugar smoke for some twenty minutes the pain ceased, and it promises speedy recovery. As a good substitute for this, we will merely add that a tablespoonful of the tincture of arnica added to a pint of cold water will answer an excellent purpose.

Comparative Climate of Hill Tops and Valleys.—The Scientific Record of Harper's Magazine for September says: "As the result of a series of investigations upon the comparative temperature of hill tops and valleys made by Mr. Davies, we are informed that air on the top of a hill is colder than in the valley in the daytime, and warmer at night. The daily range at the higher station is not so great as at the lower, the difference being about four and a half degrees. In cold weather it is found that the air on the top of a hill is never so cold as that in the valley. These observations were prosecuted in a valley at Cobham and on a hill at Denbies, the difference in height being about six hundred feet.

REACH DOWN TO THEM.

The other evening a gentleman told me that he went into the room where his son was taking lessons in singing, and found the tutor urging the boy to sound a certain note. Every time the lad made the attempt, however, he fell short, and his teacher kept saying to him, "Higher! higher!"

But it was all to no purpose until, descending to the tone which the boy was sounding, the musician accompanied him with his own voice, and led him gradually up to that which he desired him to sing; and then he sounded it with ease.

As I heard this simple incident described, I received a lesson from it in the winning of souls to the higher life in Christ. We must put ourselves in some respects upon a level with those whom we would elevate, if we would be successful in raising them. This is the great gospel law, and it has its most glorious illustration in the work of Lord Jesus himself.

In dealing with the young, for example, we must become ourselves young again in thought and feeling for the time, entering into their occupations, and even into their amusements, if we would do them permanent good, or lead them to the highest happiness in Christ. We must find out that which most deeply interests them, and descending to that and entering into their interests, we shall, by the help of God, be able to lead them up more easily to nobler things. This is a different thing however, from speaking childishly to a child. There is nothing which young people so soon discover, and so bitterly resent, as the effort to speak down to them in "baby talk." Every thing like that is an offense. But when they see that one feels a genuine interest in what they delight in, and knows much about it and loves it in its own place as much as they do, then they they give to such a one their hands and their hearts too, and he may lead them to the Lord with ease.

A brother in the ministry, whom I knew and loved in Scotland, told me that one evening, when a farmer's son had been sent to drive him home in a gig, a distance of six or seven miles, he got into conversation with the lad. He talked about the farm, the horses, and the dog; and then by some subtle link of association, the favorite study of the lad, so he asked him what he was doing in that.

"Oh," replied the boy, "I am in Profit and Loss."

"Can you do all the examples in it?"

"Yes, some of them were very hard, but I have done them all. I did the last one today."

"I think I could give you one in that rule that you could not do."

"I doubt it. Let me hear it."

"It is this—'What shall it profit a man if he should gain the whole world and lose his own soul.' Could you work that out?"

"No," said the boy, as a thoughtful expression came over his countenance. "Nobody could do that one."

His confidence and affection having been thus won, our friend preached to him a little sermon full of love and pathos, which issued in his conversion to the Lord.—Ex.

THE NEW BONNET.

A foolish little maiden bought a foolish little bonnet,
With a ribbon, and a feather, and a bit of lace upon it;
And that the other maidens of the little town might know it,
She thought she'd go to meeting the next Sunday just to show it.

But though the little bonnet was scarce larger than a dime,
The getting of it settled proved to be a work of time;
So when 'twas fairly tied, all the bells had stopped their ringing,
And when she came to meeting, sure enough, the folks were singing.

So this little foolish maiden stood and waited at the door;
And she shook her ruffles out behind, and smoothed them down before.
"Hallelujah! hallelujah!" sang the choir above her head,—
"Hardly knew you! hardly knew you!" were the words she thought they said.

This made the little maiden feel so very, very cross,
That she gave her mouth a twist, her little head a toss;
For she thought the very hymn they sang was all about her bonnet,
With the ribbon, and the feather, and the bit of lace upon it.

And she would not wait to listen to the sermon or the prayer,
But pattered down the silent street and hurried up the stair,
Till she reached her little bureau, and in a bandbox on it
Had hidden safe from critic's eye her foolish little bonnet.

Which proves, my little maidens, that each of you will find
In every Sabbath service but an echo of your mind;
And that the little head that's filled with silly little airs,
Will never get a blessing from sermons or from prayers.

How to Treat Strangers.—A Sabbath school missionary in the west, while addressing a Sabbath school, noticed a little girl shabbily dressed, and barefooted, shrinking in a corner, her little sunburnt face buried in her hands, the tears trickling between her small fingers, and sobbing as if her heart would break. Soon, however, another little girl, about eleven years old, got up and went to her, whispered kindly to her, and taking her by the hand, led her toward a brook, then seated her on a log, and kneeling beside her, she took off her ragged sun-bonnet, and dipping her hand in the water, bathed her hot eyes and tear-stained face, and smoothed the tangled hair, talking in a cheery manner all the while.

The little one brightened up, the tears all went, and smiles came creeping around the rosy mouth.

The missionary stepped forward and said, "Is that your sister, my dear?"

"No, sir," answered the noble child, with tender, earnest eyes; "I have no sister."

"Oh! one of the neighbors' children," replied the missionary,—"a little schoolmate, perhaps?"

"No, sir; she is a stranger. I do not know where she came from. I never saw her before."

"Then how came you to take her out and have such a care for her, if you do not know her?"

"Because she was a stranger, sir, and needed somebody to be kind to her."

SUBMISSION.

Since thy Father's arm sustains thee,
Peaceful be;
When a chastening hand restrains thee,
It is he.
Know his love in full completeness,
Feel the measure of thy weakness;
If he wound thy spirit sore,
Trust him more.

Without murmur, uncomplaining,
In his hand
Leave whatever things thou canst not Understand.
Though the world thy folly spurneth,
From thy faith in pity turneth,
Peace thy inmost soul shall fill,
Living still.

Like an infant, if thou thinkest
Thou canst stand—
Child-like, proudly pushing back
The proffered hand—
Courage soon is changed to fear,
Strength doth feebleness appear;
In his love if thou abide,
He will guide.

Fearest sometimes that thy Father
Hath forgot?
Though the clouds around thee gather,
Doubt him not.
Always hath the daylight broken,
Always hath he comfort spoken,
Better hath he been for years
Than thy fears.

Therefore, whatsoe'er betideth,
Night or day,
Know his love for thee provideth
Good alway.
Crown of sorrows gladly take,
Grateful wear it for his sake,
Sweetly bending to his will,
Saying still—

To his own the Savior giveth
Daily strength;
To each troubled soul that boweth,
Peace at length.
Weakest lambs have largest share
Of the tender Shepherd's care—
Ask Him not then "When"? or "How"?
Only bow.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

I. E. LOMBARD.

NUMBER EIGHTEEN.

Another account of this battle is given in the close of the 15th chapter of Rev., where Christ is represented as coming "on a white cloud, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle." The account closes with the language—"And another angel came out from the altar, which had power over fire, and cried with a loud cry to him that had the sharp sickle, saying, 'Thrust in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vine of the earth; for her grapes are fully ripe.' And the angel thrust in his sickle into the earth, and cast into the great winepress of the wrath of God. And the winepress was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the winepress, even unto the horse bridles, by the space of a thousand and six hundred furlongs." Rev. 14: 14, 18–20.

The account as given in the 19th of Rev., shows that God assembles "the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven," saying, "Come, and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God, that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses and them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great." (This call to the fowls is also noticed by Ezekiel in the 38th chapter.) John then says—"I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth, and their armies, gathered together, to make war against him that sat on the horse, and against his army. And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshiped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone. And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth; and all the fowls were filled with their flesh." "And I saw an angel come down from heaven having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand; and he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent which is the devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand years," etc. Rev. 19th and 20th chapters.

These several accounts of this battle, though often expressing the same things in different language, may be found to harmonize as well as the accounts of any several persons among us concerning anything which may come under their observation. They differ in two respects: 1. In speaking of the same things they often differ in terms, though agreeing in substance. 2. Some mention some things, others mention other things, and some mention nearly all things, while some things are mentioned by all.

The first difference is illustrated in the place of this battle. Daniel says it shall be "between the seas in the glorious holy mountain." Ezekiel says it shall be "upon the mountains of Israel." Joel says it shall be in "the valley of Jehoshaphat" (joining Jerusalem on the east). In Rev. 14, we learn that it shall be "without the city." In Rev. 19, we learn that it shall be at a "place called Armageddon," which means, according to Dr. Cumming, "August City." In Zechariah we learn that they shall be gathered "against Jerusalem." All these may point to the valley of Jehoshaphat, though only one uses this term.

As to the last difference, we find in Ezekiel and Revelation an allusion to the call of the fowls, but nowhere else. In Ezek. and Rev. 16, we have the hail. In Ezek. we have "a great shaking." Joel says "the heavens and the earth shall shake," and Rev. 16th says "there was a great earthquake, such as never was since men were on the earth so mighty and so great." In Ezek. we read that "every man's sword shall be against his brother"; in Zech., that "a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them, and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor." Ezekiel mentioned a "pestilence," and Zech. a "plague," in which their flesh consumes away while they stand upon their feet, their eyes consume away in their holes, and their tongues in their mouths. Most of them mention the sword, and fire, and "all nations," and the Lord and his "voice," and all mention his triumph.

As the nations were gathered to this battle by the efforts of the dragon, the beast, and the false prophet, who sent out the three unclean spirits to the nations, it seems that they are more responsible in the deception, and should suffer a severer punishment than the mass; and so it is. The beast is the only one of these three parties who is represented as in actual service in the battle, and is probably at the head of the political power. The false prophet is represented as miracle-worker or diviner to the beast, and probably the head to the spiritual power. "These both are cast alive into a lake of fire, burning with brimstone." The dragon seems to be head over all as "false Christ," "the man of sin," "wicked one," etc. I think he is first, or at the head of all, for he is mentioned first of the three parties as being of the first importance in speaking of their sending the spirits forth to assemble the nations to this battle. But he must be at the head of this whole arrangement, for when he is bound as the dragon he is explained to be the Devil and Satan, who would not occupy any other than the first place—not even the second—in the management of this his most important work.

We will now conclude the subject by giving the order of the principal events to be developed in the approaching conflict between the church and the powers of darkness. We will first mark the successive steps in the development of Spiritualism, in union with the Papacy, as the great anti-christian power that is coming; and then consider the warnings and movements of the church during the same time.

The Order of Events in the Coming Struggle.

The first important development that I look for tending toward the approaching anti-christian confederacy is the two-horned beast. I think it is to arise in Europe, and most likely by the next revolution in France, which is liable to occur almost any time. The person at the head of this power will be a miracle-worker of wonderful powers, and among other things will make "fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men." Like Bonaparte of old, he will march in triumph through Europe, the idol of his friends, and the terror of his enemies. His successful career will revive the drooping hopes of the Catholics, unite them in alliance with the Spiritualists, and throw the balance of power into their hands. Still strengthening and increasing the popularity of his cause, and supported by Catholics, Spiritualists, and revolutionists generally, he advises them to assume all authority and power, and bring about another union of church and state, and a confederacy of nations in support of it. When they have got the control of the nations, they will require all people to receive a mark of loyalty to the new arrangement, in their right hand or forehead, under penalty of death, also confiscating the property of all who refuse.

The mass will fall in with them, and they will soon have everything their own way. And the religion and philosophy of Spiritualism prevailing, they will now have a season of revelry, licentiousness and blasphemy, such as this world never knew before. But their seeming triumph over Christianity will be short, and will soon be followed by the seven last plagues poured out on them in the midst of their revelry and blasphemy. These plagues give them first a "noisome and grievous sore," and then turning their waters all to blood, they have only blood to drink. Then power is given to the sun to burn them. Then their kingdom is filled with darkness. And suffering all these plagues together, "they gnawed their tongues for pain," it is said, "and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores."

And now, enraged at God as the author of these plagues, and learning by the spirits that Christ is soon to descend to the earth to set up his kingdom at Jerusalem, they prepare to meet him, assembling all their forces at Jerusalem, armed with the improved weapons of this age, with the thought of thus overthrowing Jehovah. But the spirits, by whom they are blindly led into this presumptuous attempt, have artfully concealed from them the real nature of the enemy they are to encounter there; and when they hear the thunderings of Almighty power, and behold in the war of the elements over their heads, and under their feet the certainty of Almighty wrath, they find themselves betrayed by the spirits, and doomed to destruction. Here the judgment takes place, and Spiritualism ceases.

The order of events in the church will receive their character and impetus from the developments in Spiritualism. As they see the two-horned beast on its course, as marked in the prophecy, their present feeble hopes will give place to a new energy, life and zeal, in sounding the alarm of coming judgment. The warning voice will be heard in every direction. And as Catholics and Spiritualists become intimately related under him, the faithful watchmen will double their diligence, and warn all to get ready for the trial that is approaching. And when it appears evident that the Catholics have embraced Spiritualism, the solemn cry will go through the land, "Come out of her, my people." In the mean time, brethren will be losing their interest in worldly business, and attending meetings more than ever; and in view of the approaching triumph of Spiritualism, they will be disposing of their property preparatory to their flight.

When the hour of trial comes, the warnings of the watchmen toward the world cease, and they are left to the delusions of the spirits. The prudent, foreseeing the evil, hide themselves from the knowledge of their enemies; while many, no doubt, will delay too long, be overtaken in their flight, and perish by the way. I should think that this Reign of Terror would last three years, more or less, in the nature of the case; but I have no scripture to settle the point to my own mind. While separated from the world in this time, they will no doubt escape the plagues of having their waters turned to blood, and having the sun "scorch them with fire."

I now draw this solemn subject to a close. As I lay no claim to infallibility, I would not presume that I have everything that I have given in this article just right. But I have no doubt that I am correct in the main. So far as I may have erred, be it more or less, I would be glad to be set right. I do not desire that my friends or my foes should conceal any real defects; and I hope they will not make too much account of any seeming defects, or mere inaccuracies on minor points. If the subject as here presented be true, it is terribly true, and too solemnly important to be set aside because of some minor defect in my statements in some instances. I ask no one to accept of my statements, as taken for granted, and I hope that none will wrong themselves by rejecting them through mere prejudice. I have written from a sense of duty, and I close the subject with a profound sense of its general correctness.

FAITH.

T. L. WAUGH.

"Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."—Heb. 10: 38.

Faith is something besides an intellectual assent to the doctrines of the gospel. It is not simply belief in them; but it is a firm trust and reliance on the promises given to us in the Word of God. The child even, understands the lesson of faith better than many who are more advanced in years; so we read, "they that seek me early shall find me."

Many seem to think if they can get some peculiar experience in religious things, and can feel as such a brother or sister, it will be easy to exercise faith. Are not God's promises sure? Shall we not then trust in them without regard to our feelings or emotions? It is true that consecration must precede faith; then the believer may come with boldness to the throne of grace. Are we complying with the conditions incident to a life of faith? Are we looking to Jesus instead of looking into our own sinful hearts? How important it is that we believe God, and then yield ourselves servants to obey him!

We dishonor God when we yield to the temptation to doubt or distrust him. The definition of faith is "taking God at his word." "Without faith it is impossible to please God."

Faith makes the darkened cloud withdraw. When passing through affliction and adversity we have a strong consolation in the blessed hope that is like an anchor to the soul. We can say "Thy will be done." "All things shall work together for good to them that love God." Dear pilgrims, are you mourning over the loss of loved ones who have fallen by the cruel hand of death? Do you feel sad and lonely as you journey on toward the better land? Jesus cares for you. You are precious in his sight. Trust in him; for "as a father pitieth his children, even so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

Be not discouraged by the enemy. He would make you believe there is no hope for you. He tells you there is no use in trying to live a christian life; that you never can overcome. He would have you think that God requires something of you that you cannot perform, and so tries to turn your attention away from Christ who gives you the assurance—"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Here is where many draw back. The devil may tell you that if you were a christian you would have more feeling. Tell him you belong to Jesus. Reckon yourself dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God. Walk by faith. Keep down low at the feet of Jesus, and let your adornment be that of a meek and quiet spirit. All these temptations to doubt come from Satan. The promise is yours. The blessing of a clean heart is for you. Those gates of pearl will open for you if you are faithful to the end of life's journey. Yes soon you may walk those streets of gold in Paradise restored. Soon shall you be over yonder, in that bright land of wonder, where the angel voices mingle, and angel harps ring. You who love music here, whose hearts are attuned to sing God's praise, will be permitted to sing the new song, and hear the ravishing strains of celestial music on that heavenly shore.

We may enjoy these glories and delights if we keep God's commandments, and are found of him in peace. But we must be separate from the world. We must have pure hearts and clean hands if we ever are saved. Are we so near the judgment as we profess to believe? Is our faith unwavering, and our confidence unshaken? God help us to realize these things, if we do not. We may be tried as by fire, but let us hold on by faith, nothing doubting, for he is faithful that promised. Perils increase as we near the haven of eternal rest. Now is the time to stand up boldly for Jesus and the truth. We shall have to meet the ridicule and opposition of worldly-minded professors, and of the ungodly, if we do this; but the favor of God is of more importance than all else. There must be a cutting loose from the world.

As followers of Jesus, we must not be conformed to the world either in its practice or spirit. We shall not be led to seek the gay parties of pleasure, nor array ourselves in such a manner that we shall look like the children of the world. We need to be humble and child-like in the sight of God. Faith and obedience go together. One is not complete without the other. We are to be overcomers if we inherit the kingdom of God. "Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him."

Morris, Ct.

SUGGESTIONS TO SEEKERS OF PURITY OF HEART.

Do not deem it strange if you meet with great trials in seeking full salvation. You may expect that Satan, and fallen human nature in yourself, and in others, will interpose many hindrances to your pursuit of holiness of heart. Besides this, you must be deeply convinced of your need of this grace, and the old man must be crucified; and all this is painful. But be like a little child, and let the Lord lead you into the depths of humility, and you will soon find full redemption in the blood of the Lamb.

Your efforts may seem to be futile, but they are not lost. In this way you are being abased, crucified to self, led beyond all creature trust, to rely wholly in the atonement, power, and indwelling of Christ for salvation.

You are a beloved child of God, in a justified, regenerate state, and you are not left to yourself, or given into the hands of your spiritual enemies; but God takes care of you, and is now specially showing you the importance and excellence of holiness, and creating an intense desire for it, and guiding you in God's hands, and very soon the Holy Spirit will enable you to

"Sink into the purple flood,
And rise to all the life of God."

You will soon discover and surmount all the difficulties in your way. Perhaps you have failed because you aimed above it—aimed at angelic, or Adamic, or some kind of mental perfection, instead of seeking a heart cleansed from impurity and filled with divine love. Or you may have come short of it by aiming too low—by accepting a clear sense of adoption, and a great degree of enjoyment, as entire sanctification. Inexpressible enjoyment often holds empire in the heart of the merely regenerated child of God, but this does not prove that all the depths of the soul are purified and "renewed after the image of God."

The seeker of purity should pray God to show him clearly the remains of unholiness—the remains of pride, selfishness, inordinate desire, impatience, etc., in his heart, and then, being taught and led by the Holy Spirit, he will intelligently go to the fountain of Jesus' blood and wash away all his unrighteousness.

The believer should have an assurance of adoption in order to rightly and successfully engage in seeking a clean heart. It is not probable that a backslider, in being reclaimed, will step at once from spiritual Egypt into the Canaan of perfect love. Justification lies between the former and the latter state. The clearly justified should immediately seek to be fully sanctified. Further, you may have erred by looking for marvellous exercises in speaking or praying, or for prostrations of your bodily powers, of for something allied to visions. Let me remind you that these wonderful things are not promised to the believer; are not essentially a part of holiness; and you need not expect them. What you want is purity of heart, the mind of Christ, a heart filled with God and his love. Inexplicable demonstrations, such as prostrations of the bodily powers, are merely incidental to christian experience, and I suppose it is our duty to leave these mysterious things wholly with the Lord, to send or withhold them, at his own pleasure. Moreover, you may have been seeking it by works. The penitent is strongly inclined to trust in his penitence and performance of duty; and generally it is with great difficulty that he is brought to receive saving grace by faith in Christ. Just so the believer, in seeking purity, is strongly inclined to think he must have this or that; or he must do, or suffer, this or that, before he trusts fully in Christ.

Dear seeker of full salvation, let me remind you that all possible doing and suffering, and all kinds of mental perceptions and exercises, cannot cleanse your heart and fill it with God. Only God can do this. Just as you are, and just now, take Christ into your heart as "your sanctification." 1 Cor. 1: 30. As a child of God, convinced of our need of sanctifying grace, it is your privilege, your right; yea, it is your duty to immediately receive Christ into your heart, by faith, as your full Savior, your portion, your all and in all. Then you will be "washed in the blood of the Lamb." Then the Father, Son and Spirit will dwell in you. This will meet all the wants of your soul! "This is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." 1 Thess. 5: 15–54.

Lastly, if nothing mentioned above meets your case, it is possible you do not fully consecrate yourself to holiness of heart, with all the self-denying godliness it implies. Though doing and suffering can never sanctify the soul, yet if we cling to any known wrong in our hearts, or if we are unwilling to do and suffer all things according to God's will, he will not cleanse our hearts and fill us with himself. But if we give all, then we may truly take all. . . . This blessed salvation is for every lover of Jesus.—Guide to Holiness.

ETERNAL LIFE.

J. W. THOMAS.

Eternal life. What is there even here that we prize so much as life? Who is willing to part with it? The devil told the truth once, when he said—"All that a man hath will he give for his life." Death puts an end to life. We do not want to die. We love life. Nothing gives us so much uneasiness as the thought of dying. Death is an enemy, and there is something in our very nature that shrinks from it. If sickness comes we employ doctors and medicine to restore health and keep us alive. We know that upon life is suspended all enjoyment. What are beautiful homes, beautiful gardens, beautiful children, abundance of riches, without life? Sweet sounds and beautiful sights attract not the dead. They see not, feel not, hear not, think not, taste not, work not, know not, enjoy not. It is only the living who can listen to enchanting music, gaze upon beautiful landscapes, and enjoy the luxuries which nature affords.

There is nothing attractive or lovely in death. Man was not made to die, he was made to live. He never has been and never will be willing to let go his hold on life. Even the very best of men have held on to life till the last moment with an unyielding tenacity. Good old Hezekiah wept and prayed when it was announced to him that he should die and not live. He could not bear the thought of it. He wanted to live, and he besought the Lord to spare him a little longer. His prayer was heard, and the Lord added to his days fifteen years. His prospect in view of death was not so cheering as some theologians at the present day would have us think. Hezekiah did not think that death was the "gate to endless joy," if so, he would have talked differently. Let us hear his own language—"I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years. I said, I shall not see the Lord, even the Lord, in the land of the living; I shall behold man no more with the inhabitants of the world. Mine age is departed, and is removed from me as a shepherd's tent; I have cut off like a weaver my life: he will cut me off with pining sickness; from day even to night wilt thou make an end of me. Behold, for peace I had great bitterness: but thou hast in love to my soul delivered it from the pit of corruption: for thou hast cast all my sins behind thy back. For the grave cannot praise thee; death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise thee as I do this day: the father to the children shall make known thy truth."

But notwithstanding we prize life so highly, love it so fondly, and cling to it so tenaciously, we must part with it. No man can keep alive his own soul. Sin entered the world, and death by sin, and so the sentence of death has passed upon all men. We are mortal. Our existence here is limited. Death closes the circle of human vision, and bounds the horizon of human hope. In the beginning man was excluded from that which would have perpetuated his existence, consequently he continues only a little while, and then returns to the dust from whence he was taken.

Now if man ever gets eternal life he must receive it as a gift from God. There is no other source from which he can derive it. He has it not in himself, and he has nothing with which to purchase it. He is lost in death, and unless God through his great mercy devises some plan by which he can bring man out of death, and give him life, he must forever remain dead. This the Lord has undertaken and promised to do. A way has been found by which man, though lost in sin and death, can be saved. God is love. He loved man when he made him, and he loves him still. He will not let his own image be forever defaced, and the earth, once so beautiful, forever remain a howling wilderness.

Better days are coming. A Redeemer is promised. A Savior is found. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, might not perish, but have everlasting life. Jesus came to seek and to save that which was lost. He went into the dark prison and wrestled with the king of terrors in his own dominions. It was a fierce battle, a mighty contest. He was fighting for the treasure hid in the field. It was an awful hour. Who shall conquer? Devils rejoice, disciples weep, and all heaven waits in silence. It is the crisis of the ages, the turning-point in the great system of redemption. Will death reign and the devil triumph, or will Immanuel gain the victory? Glory to God, I see him rising. Roll away the stone, ye mighty angels. Stand back, ye hosts of darkness. Fall to the ground, ye cowardly soldiers. Shout, ye weeping disciples. Strike your harps, ye heavenly host. Jesus lives! See! he rises. Look! yonder he has the keys of death and the grave. Hear his voice, ye conquered foes—"I am he that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive forevermore." "O death, I will be thy plague. O grave, I will be thy destruction."

Jesus has abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. In him is life, and the life is the light of men. Beyond the surges of the dark rolling stream, he has brought to view the sainted realms of uncloying bliss, the sparkling crown of glorious triumph, and the spotless robes of unfading immortality. When He who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. He will raise up all his saints and give them bodies like his own. Tears shall be wiped from every eye. Voices now choked with sighs shall then chant the song of eternal redemption. Brows furrowed with care, and hands scarred with toil, shall grow fair with the vigor of eternal health.

Paradise, once closed, will be re-opened, and the saints of every age and clime welcomed to share the joys of their Lord. From beneath the throne shall gush the life-giving stream, and on its banks shall flourish the tree of life. "There shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things have passed away." "And he that sat on the throne said, Behold, I make all things new."

PATIENCE AND TRUST.

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him." "Trust in the Lord."—Psalms.

Patience and trust; sweet lessons, Lord,
Thou teachest us from out thy word;
Thy weary ones, who rest in thee,
Shall of thy gracious promise see.

Patience and trust; though dark and drear,
When neither sun nor stars appear,
And no small tempest on thee lay,
Cast out the anchor, wait for day.

Patience and trust; the fire, though hot,
Refines, but will consume thee not;
Trust, and the Son of God may be
Walking the hottest fire with thee.

Patience and trust; O wondrous power!
Through tribulation's darkest hour
Shall joy unspeakable be won,
Earth's heaviest cross, heaven's brightest crown.

CHRIST THE WAY.

Christ is "the way, and the truth, and the life." The grace which sanctifies, as well as that which justifies, is by him and through him. He is the true and living way; and no man can gain the victory over sin and be brought into union with God, without Christ. And when, in some mitigated sense, we may be said to have arrived at the end of the way, by being brought home to the divine fold and reinstated in the divine image, it would be sad indeed if we should forget the way itself, as Christ is sometimes called.

At every period of our progress, however advanced it may be, our life is derived from God through him and for him. The most advanced souls are those which are most possessed with the thoughts and the presence of Christ. They often find themselves placed in the same states and dispositions in which they suppose him to have been. They often see nothing but Christ in themselves. They speak with him every hour, as the bride with her bridegroom. He becomes something so intimate in their hearts that they look on him less as a foreign and external object, than as the internal principle of their life. Any other view would be extremely pernicious. It would be to snatch from the faithful eternal life, which consists in knowing the only true God, and Jesus Christ his Son whom he hath sent.

Pure Love.

The doctrine of pure love, involving as it does the entire transformation of our nature and the state of divine union, has been known and recognized as a true doctrine among the truly contemplative and devout in all ages of the church. The doctrine, however, has been so far above the common experience, that the pastors and saints of all ages have exercised a degree of discretion and care in making it known, except to those to whom God hath already given both the attraction and light to receive it. Acting on the principle of giving milk to infants, and strong meat to those that are more advanced, they addressed in the great body of christians the motives of fear and of hope, founded on the consideration of happiness or of misery.

It seems to them that the motive of God's glory, in itself considered, a motive which requires us to love God for himself alone without a distinct regard and reference to our own happiness, could be profitably addressed, as a general rule, only to those who are somewhat advanced in inward experience.

Divine Union.

Among the various forms of expressions, indicative of the highest experience, we sometimes find that of "divine union" or the synonymous expression, "union with God." The expressions are proper, because they indicate such experience as existing in particular relations.

Union with God, which is not a physical but moral or religious union, necessarily exists in souls that are in the state of pure love. In other words, the state of "divine union" is not a higher state than that of pure love; but may rather be described as the same state, developing itself in a particular way or in a particular relation.

To this state, whether we call it "transformation," or "pure love," or the "divine union," or by what other name, it is the duty of all christians to make efforts to arrive. This is that blessed state which refers all to God, and leaves nothing to the creature.

Strive after it; but do not too readily or easily believe that you have attained to it. The traveler, after many fatigues and dangers, arrives at the top of a mountain. As he looks abroad from that high eminence and in that clear atmosphere, he sees his native city; and it seems to him to be very near. Overjoyed at the sight, and perhaps deceived by his position, he proclaims himself as already at the end of his journey. But he soon finds that the distance was greater than he supposed. He is obliged to descend into valleys, to climb over hills, to surmount rugged rocks, and to wind his tired steps over many a mile of weary way, before he reaches that home and city which he once thought so near.

It is thus in relation to the sanctification of the heart. A soul free from selfishness, true holiness of heart, is the object at which the christian aims. He beholds it before him, as an object of transcending beauty, and as perhaps near at hand. But as he advances toward it, he finds the way longer and more difficult than he had imagined. But if on the one hand we should be careful not to mistake an intermediate stopping-place for the end of the way, we should be equally careful on the other not to be discouraged by the difficulties we meet with; remembering that the obligation to be holy is always binding upon us, and that God will help those who put their trust in him. "Whosoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." 2 John 5: 4.—Sel. from Mdme. Guyon, by G. E. Merrill.

PEACE.

T. P. TUKESBURY.

Peace is a Bible principle, a moral duty, enjoined on all universally, but especially required of christians. It is a virtue quite incompatible with wars and fightings. A true peace cannot exist with carnal warfare better than a fountain can yield sweet water and bitter at the same time. Some will say they "believe in peace in the abstract." But such a belief has no gospel proof to sustain it. As well might we say it will do to believe in any of God's commands in this way. Is this a christian way of believing God's truth?

To believe it wrong in the abstract to steal, to commit adultery, to worship idols, or to kill our fellow men, and yet right to commit the same deeds of wickedness on some extreme occasions to suit one's convenience somewhere outside of the abstract, is the most senseless and criminal absurdity. All virtues rightly belong to one unbroken chain, and all vices belong to another, tending to opposite ends.

It cannot be denied that peace is one of the most prominent virtues taught in the Bible, where its author is declared to be the "Prince of peace," and where from the very lips of this Prince himself come the commands and precepts touching this point with so much prominence and frequency. In two commands were comprehended love to God and love to our fellow men. Everything in which it is ever duty to engage must harmonize with these. See Matt. 22: 37–40.

As peace belongs to the chain of virtues, it will accord with love; but carnal warfare will not under any circumstances, for it is an opposite principle coming from a different quarter, "even of your lusts." (James 4: 1), producing the greatest destruction of human life and happiness of any crime known. Dr. Dick in his "Philosophy of Religion" (p. 100), estimates the number who had "been slaughtered in war since the beginning of the world" to be fourteen thousand millions, then "equivalent to "the destruction of the inhabitants of eighteen worlds of the same population as ours." This estimate must have been made some thirty or forty years ago. How many millions have been butchered since, later histories will show; enough, we think, to prove to all that war is a crime of crimes; the blackest of all vices; enough to palsy the hearts and hands of savages from lending it their approval. It is attended with the greatest destruction, suffering, and waste of treasure of any vice in which man ever engaged. It is therefore the duty of all, and especially of christians, to take no part in it whatever, under any circumstances.

And what is greater than all considerations, it is in direct opposition to the commands and precepts of Christ—"But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil." Matt. 5: 39. "Love your enemies." And many other texts might be cited. Did not the example of the just accord with Christ's commands?—"Ye have condemned and killed the just, and he doth not resist you." James 5: 6. Whose commands and example is it proper to follow, the just or the unjust? It is important that the duty be urged upon professed christians especially, to retain God's word in its purity, and not to pervert its meaning, or let it pass with neglect, as the many are wont to do, by denying its plain truths both in principle and in practice, as in rejecting the little word not in plain commands. They really do this when they resist or kill their enemies, or encourage others to do it, whether in self-defence or for any other cause. We are always to trust in God, obey his word, and leave consequences with him. Are we not? Then let it be actively and faithfully applied —"Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man." Eccl. 12: 13.

God has given us no exceptions when we may kill our fellow men, or resist with deadly weapons. "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal."—2 Cor. 10: 4. Thou shalt not kill." "He that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill." James 2: 11. If it be wrong to kill our enemies, it must also be wrong to vote for one who might do it, or order the wicked deed to be done.

We cannot expect one of defensive war principles to act on peace principles when placed in power, unless his views be changed. Therefore no consistent peace man will deem it safe to vote in political affairs under a war government, when the nominee is to be invested with any power to take the lives of his fellow men, or should claim the right to do it in any case under any deliberate provocation. Did governments duly appreciate the words of Christ they would be disarmed of carnal weapons, and in a condition to justify co-operation; but so long as their codes of human butchery are retained, it will be quite inconsistent for christians to grant them voluntary support, by vote or otherwise, giving any approval of their evil deeds of whatever nature. "For he that biddeth . . . God speed is partaker of evil deeds." 2 John 11.

What deeds are more truly evil than those of war? Nothing has ever competed with such a vile exercise of man's powers impelled by every war government. Is it not proper for christians to walk in wisdom's ways? How can war be one, if "all her paths are peace"? Prov. 3: 17. Why should the christian feel to approve any other path, or other weapons than those "not carnal, but mighty," alone provided by God himself?

Religious Speculation.—We cannot sink too low in humility, nor yet rise too high in heavenly mindedness; but we may soon be lost in the wilderness of needless speculation. Such as are sober minded will keep within their depth, and when the Lord directs us to launch forth we may do it with safety. If we are wise according as it is written, we shall be profitably wise; but if we want to be wise beyond what is written, we shall smart for our folly.—Rowland Hill.

WESTERN TRIP.

Monday morning, Sept. 9th, we left Rochester for Chicago, via the Great Western and Michigan Central. We passed again on the Suspension Bridge over the foaming waters of the Niagara. At the Falls a dense cloud was rising like steam from an immense boiling cauldron, showing the gigantic power of the falling deluge which tumbles out of Lake Erie into the awful chasm below, from whence originates the Niagara river, so deep in some places, that its bottom has not been found. One never tires in looking at this sublime waterfall.

After crossing the Suspension Bridge into Canada, our route lies through a good farming country, heavy timbered, till we reach Detroit. After crossing the Detroit river, we enter Michigan, which is a superior State for farming and fruits, abounding in very heavy timber. All things considered, we should give Michigan a first class position for a western home.

CHICAGO.

It is truly wonderful to see how rapidly Chicago has arisen from its ashes. We believe the like was never before witnessed in the history of the human race. The Chicagoans seem determined not to be defeated in their purpose to make their city the centre of trade on the western continent. Their ambition knows no bounds. It is said more business is now done in Chicago than before the fire. Like ancient Babylon its prosperity may lead to its ruin. Pride and wickedness usually go hand in hand with riches rapidly gained. Luxury, voluptuousness, and destruction are sure to follow. History keeps repeating itself from generation to generation; and we must not expect to find an exception in these last days. A haughty spirit goes before a fall. The whole world seems now to have reached the brink of ruin, and must soon close forever its carnival of wickedness, and give place to the peaceful, holy reign of the King of kings.

The church in Chicago is prospering under the faithful ministry of Bro. Burr. He has recently received the blessing of perfect love, and feels like laboring with renewed zeal and joy in the vineyard of the Lord. Jesus is now more precious to him than ever before. Others in the church "have entered the valley of blessings so sweet," where Christ is all in all; and the spirit of consecration has taken strong hold of many other hearts. The prospect is very encouraging. The field seems ripe for a plentiful harvest. If we would successfully advance the cause of Christ, we must raise the standard of piety to where it is placed in the Bible. Nothing short of holiness of heart will give satisfaction. It is surprising that any one who professes to believe that Jesus is soon coming, should manifest the least opposition to this all-important subject. Sanctification, purity, perfect love, entire consecration, gift of the Spirit, holiness, and such like terms, express the richest part of Christianity—its very cream. Let us cherish a love for what they express, and not rest till we have it in our hearts. He is rich who gives up all to obtain this priceless treasure.

AMBOY CAMPMEETING.

We left Chicago at four P. M., Tuesday, Sept. 10th, and arrived at Amboy at half-past ten the same day. The next morning we went to the camp-ground, which is a pleasant grove about a half a mile from the village. Among the first to greet us was Bro. C. W. Smith, of Jericho, Ill. He is a true man of God, and formerly lived in Rutland, Vt., where he first heard the reasons of our hope, and was made to rejoice in the light and truth as never before. He is now a faithful and devoted minister of Christ. We found many other dear friends present, whom we had met in other days.

There were about twenty tents, including the large Chicago tent, in which the public meetings were held. After our arrival, there was preaching by Bro. G. W. Hurd, C. C. Marston, H. L. Hastings, W. Sheldon, A. S. Calkins, and Sr. M. Mansfield. Five were baptized. The morning meetings at 6 o'clock were excellent, and increased in interest every day. The subject of holiness received special attention, and produced glorious results. Many had been prejudiced against it in consequence of misrepresentation, and a misunderstanding of the matter, but who are now satisfied in relation to its great importance in the plan of salvation. Quite a number consecrated their all to Christ, and received the gift of the Holy Spirit, producing great peace and joy, with a bright assurance that all is well. It was frequently remarked on the last day of this feast of tabernacles, that it had been the best one they had ever enjoyed. It was believed that more good would result from this meeting than any one ever held in the State. We felt special blessings from the Lord during the meeting, and an increased attachment to Jesus and all his children. To us the week was one filled with more of special providences and answers to prayers than any other one during our entire christian experience of about thirty years. It seemed as though the Lord directed in all things.

Sabbath, Sept. 15th, was a blessed day. The weather was exceedingly fine—even charming. The six o'clock A. M. meeting was one long to be remembered by those present. It was truly a heavenly feast. The Spirit of the Lord was indeed with us to comfort our hearts with peace and joy. It seemed as a foretaste of what we shall enjoy in the coming kingdom. A hallowed influence pervaded the ground, cementing our hearts in christian love. We have much occasion to rejoice that it was our privilege to attend the Amboy campmeeting. Elements, which which were antagonistic at first, became sweetly harmonized by the power of the Holy Spirit. Threatening storm-clouds passed away, and instead came the warm, genial sunshine of Christ's smiling face. It was marvellous to see the guiding hand of the Lord in all things connected with the meeting. The bond of christian union was greatly strengthened in the hearts of many of Jesus' disciples, and they parted filled with new courage to labor in the vineyard of the Lord to save sinners and comfort the saints. The exercises were closed with an interesting communion season, when about one hundred and forty gathered around the sacramental table, to commemorate the death and sufferings of our dear Savior. We parted in strong faith that we should soon meet in our paradise home with all the saints, to part no more forever.

TRI-PERSONALITY.

It is well-known that some believe that our heavenly Father is made up of three persons, which are equal in power, wisdom, and all other attributes, and still the three are one. We have yet to learn how there can be equality without plurality. It is absurd to say that three persons, equal to each other, are only one person. One person could be composed of three parts; then each part might be one third of the one person; but three persons cannot be one, any more than three units make but one. If our heavenly Father is one person, he is not three; but if there are three persons, equal to each other, in the Godhead, then we have three Gods instead of one. "What saith the Scripture?" "Hear, O Israel; the Lord our God is one Lord." "And the Scribes said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth; for there is one God, and there is none other but he." Mark 12: 29, 32. This language is too plain to be misunderstood.

At the last annual meeting of the "Ministerial Union" in Boston, the annual address was delivered by Cyrus A. Bartol, D. D., upon "The Logic of Unity," when he remarked, as reported, that "tri-personality was dropping out of sight in favor of simple personality, and that the triad was disappearing with the tripod." Protestants have partaken long enough from the cup of "abominations," found in the hand of the Roman woman. The doctrine of "tri-personality" originated in the Roman Catholic church. Let us shake off her corrupting poisonous doctrines, and no longer lend them our support.

CHRIST AS A RULER.—"The Presbyterians of St. Louis Resolve, That Christ is the Ruler of this country. There is but one place, or society, in which he is ruler—at least, only one that we have any knowledge of—and that is in the Oneida Community, where all the members eat, drink, sleep, wake, walk and work in the name of and for the sake of Christ, and they are the most consistent christians we have ever met with. We might as well put them into the Constitution as a sample of pure christianity, since evangelical christianity is already played out and old fogy.

Puritanism, which has long since 'gone to seed' in New England, seems to be just breaking out like a cutaneous disease in some towns west of the Mississippi. It may cause some scratching at last on election tickets."

The foregoing is from the Banner of Light, Jan. 6th, 1872. The Oneida Community is composed of practical Spiritualists, without christianity. Their Christ is not the Christ of the Bible, but one of their own creating.

ADVANCE OF CRIME.—That crime is rapidly increasing, especially that of the worst form, there is no room for doubt. The facts are appalling. "Worse and worse," is echoed from every side.

"The condition of criminal affairs in the great metropolis calls out the following from a leading New York daily: 'It has become a common saying that it is safer to kill a man in New than to commit a burglary. Our criminal classes have not been slow to learn the lesson. The records of the past year show in how many instances murder has been committed under circumstances of slight provocation, and in mere wantonness."

POLITICAL CONGLOMERATION.—Never before, we think, were political matters in such a confused state as at present. From a report of the "Cosmopolitan" political conference in New York, published in the New York World, comes the following:—

"The young International is the rising giant, but Spiritualism, women's rights, land reform, currency reform, etc., etc., must have a voice in selecting the reform candidate for President. The fact came out in the discussion that Henry Ward Beecher is a favorite candidate among these conventionalists."

WRITE PLAINLY.—The following from one of our exchanges is to the point. Please observe the request:—

"Our brethren should be careful to write everything sent to this office (to be printed) very plainly—but most especially names of persons and places, and also numbers—otherwise it will be impossible to avoid typographical errors."

THE SUBTLETIES OF DIPLOMACY.—A correspondent of a German journal called the Kolnische Zeitung speaking of an offensive and defensive alliance between Germany and Austria, says that these two powers could easily raise a million of soldiers. It would be sufficient for "the armies of the two countries to manœuvre together from time to time, and for portions of the two fleets to visit together the ports of foreign countries, in order to show to the world, in a palpable manner, the close union existing between the two countries." Such a spectacle would have an imposing effect in the West and East alike; it would secure for a long time the peace of Europe, and would render possible a general disarming. "If it were seen at Paris or St. Petersburg that the two Empires in question are quite free from any idea of war and conquest, but are united for the defence in case of need, of their existence, and their possessions, would not the Governments in those two capitals make up their minds to diminish the exorbitant preparations for war which are at present being made there? And if they acted thus at Paris and St. Petersburg, it is certain that the same thing would be done at Berlin and Vienna." Thus the great plan betrays itself through all the subtletics of diplomacy. The object is to neutralize Russia by exciting the fears of Austria, to neutralize France by keeping up the disquietude of Germany, and to guard against the eventual, distant, but fatal alliance of Russia with France, by raising between them the wall of an Austrian Empire vassalized to the Empire of Germany. If Prince Gortschakoff saw through the plan, and sought to thwart it by causing the Czar to take part in the interview at Berlin, it must be admitted that that was a clever stroke, and that M. de Bismarck may well have some cause for ill humor.

☞ TO THOSE of our subscribers who have paid money on their subscription, and do not see the figures changed on the little slip, we would say, Be patient. We hope to be able by another week to have our list corrected and revised.

HOLINESS.

The theme of holiness, though often abused, is nevertheless a Bible theme. We should not look with suspicion upon it simply because others have perverted it. So have they perverted all the cardinal doctrines of the Bible; shall we therefore spurn all Bible doctrines? This principle carried out would work ruin to the christian system. Let all the doctrines of the Bible shine out in their original splendor, even though they have been for a time hid by the cloud of error. And prominent among those doctrines stands "holiness." Shall we shun it? Shall we admit it theoretically, and deny it practically? We are too near the judgment to do this. Let us strike for experimental holiness of the Bible stamp. Let us have the mind of Christ, rising above the controlling power of carnality, and living in the atmosphere of perfect love. W. S.

SPIRITUALISM.

At the present date (Sept. 19th) I am listening to a discussion on Spiritualism between Bro. Marston and D. W. Hull. The more I look at this system, the more I am convinced that it is Satan's last great effort to delude the world. It always leads away from God and holiness, and never leads men to God; indeed, it both ignores and blasphemes the God of the Bible. It reduces God to a mere principle, angels to good ghosts of dead men, and devils to bad ghosts of dead men; overlooking the fact that both angels and devils preceded man. The cherubim (a species of angels) was in existence to guard the tree of life before Adam died, and all the angelic "sons of God shouted together for joy" even before Adam lived. Spiritualism repudiates the remedial scheme proffered by Christ, and is at war with Bible christianity. If it is not of the devil, nothing is. If it is true, Christ is not a Savior. W. S.

NICODEMUS.

Nicodemus belonged to the sect of the Pharisees, being a ruler of the Jews, and a member of the Sanhedrim. He was a representative man. His high standing among men led him to conceal his convictions of truth, which would, if made public, infringe upon his popularity; so he came to Jesus by night.

Jesus once said—"How can ye believe that receive honor one of another?" Human honor blinds men to the obligations of heaven. Many at the present day, like Nicodemus, are clothed with official honor, and feel restrained, not daring even to come and hear the truth, except "by night," when they will not be seen by their peers; still they feel sure we are teaching the truth. The trouble is, it is not popular, and its adoption brings reproach. W. S.

CAMP AMBOY.

It was my privilege to attend a part of this campmeeting, where I met many old fellow-laborers, and formed acquaintance with new ones. It is to be hoped that an influence will go out from this gathering that will be salutary, and lead many to live in a higher current of religious enjoyment—to "abide in the vine"—and thus "bring forth much fruit."

As a general rule, our people need a new baptism of love, and a new consecration to the work of God. We need to be more heavenly minded. That we may rise to this higher life as a people, it is important that our ministers take the lead. We trust this meeting has done something toward inducing the ministry to take an advanced step, and also many besides ministers. Let the fire of Bible holiness burn in every heart. W. S.

THE word of the Lord abideth forever; his covenant is sure, his love is unchangeable; his promises are immutable. Draw nigh unto him in the full assurance of faith, and your night of trouble will be turned into joyous day.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 22d, 1872, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

THE GREAT ADVENT CAMP-MEETING.

The Alton Bay campmeeting has closed. It was the largest meeting ever held on the ground, perhaps the largest campmeeting ever held in New England. The numbers continually increased till the last Sunday, when fifty cars, five steamboats, a thousand carriages, beside a great many people on foot, poured their crowds upon us in an unnumbered, uncomfortable multitude. Standing upon the hill, you could see the grove literally crowded with one living mass of moving heads, hardly knowing which way to move. The day was propitious. The multitude were as orderly as they could be, under the circumstances, but it was a hard chance not to be crowded out of order.

There was preaching at the appointed times at the stand, on the balcony of the Portland tent, corner of Main St. and Camp Square, also in the Mass. Conference Mission Tent, beside a number of others, so that a multitude could hear the gospel. But many came, not to hear, believe, and obey, but to take pleasure in the excursion and return as careless as before. But they will soon be overtaken. What will they do in that day? Judgment without mercy! No help, no hope. Order was well sustained, wonderfully so, considering the size of the meeting. The preaching was timely, truthful, and admirably adapted to the times and the occasion, especially as it came from more than twenty preachers. The prayer-meetings were spiritual, earnest, free, with outspoken testimonies, making deep impressions, with a desire and determination to progress and do better, the Holy Spirit quickening, which brought about a revival and reformation cheering to all that "weep for the slain of the daughter of thy people," with strong desire and prayer to God that holiness to the Lord may be the motto after returning from this pentecostal feast.

Great liberty was used in the holiness meetings under the Mass. tent, directed somewhat by Bro. Morrill, who was jealous for the rights and liberty of all the little ones. Questions were freely asked and as freely answered, and I think improvement and progression in the divine life will be the result. It was a searching time; the Spirit seemed to carry the truth home to the hearts and consciences of the hearers, and they felt a necessity to be right in the sight of God and man.

The soon coming of the Lord was continually urged upon us with all the light clustering around the prophetic periods and positive events, showing beyond successful contradiction that the Second Advent of our Lord is right upon us, with all our responsibilities to let our light shine by sending "this gospel" as a special work, as much as in us lies, to every place where the way may be opened. A new interest is awakened, and I hope a new era among us will be inaugurated.

All minor subjects should be swallowed up in the great and glorious subject—the coming of our Lord, and what he is coming for. All should rally here, be one, and by faith, grace, and the power of God, concentrate our efforts for the spread of truth and the salvation of men. Then should we exert an influence, swelling the tide that would sweep error, tradition and fables into oblivion, in spite of their able defenders.

The daily children's meetings under the care of Sr. Wood were peculiarly interesting; and while they were devoted to the children and youth, some older children esteemed it a delightful privilege to drink from the same stream, whose gentle flow will make glad the city of God. Others gave excellent advice to the little disciples, while some that volunteered would have done full as well to have sat still, and been prudent, and learned what was revealed "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings."

Many ministers of other christian bodies, and lay members, were at the meeting, deeply interested, with a conscious feeling (I doubt not) that the Lord and the Bible were with us as a whole. When they admit, as is common now, "We are with you, only we differ a little about the state of the dead";—when our brethren admit they are with us on the literal coming of the Son of man, the resurrection of the dead, the renewal of the earth as the home of the saints, the victory is gained. This is enough to welcome them to our embrace, with good fellowship and strong union, with love's cementing power. Those little things will soon vanish before the sunlight of the blessed gospel.

Brethren, let love be the great fountain at which we continually drink; then our hearts will enlarge, and then we like Christ will be ready to teach others also, and there will be a drawing of all to this healing fountain, and we shall exert a power that will bring the confession that we have been with Jesus, and a power not to be gainsayed or resisted. The influence of this great and good campmeeting must and will be extensively felt. Amen.

There were but few things to detract from the union, harmony and abiding love of this Advent body of believers, and we hope they will grow fewer as we near the haven of glory and rest. We hope none will ignore the Second Advent of Christ, for he is soon coming. It will be blessed to be found ready.

L. BOUTELL.

BE ashamed of your unbelief; it damps your joy, brings a dark cloud between you and the blessed Sun of righteousness, and withholds the glory of your heart. "Be not faithless, but believing."

FAITH IN GOD.

J. B. SMITH.

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

FAITH is the assent of the mind to the statement or proposition of another, on the ground of the manifold truth of what he asserts. Faith in Scripture is a condition on our part whereby we come to be partakers of the new covenant. Justifying faith is a saving grace wrought in the heart by the Spirit of God, whereby we receive Christ as he is received in the gospel, to be our Prophet, Priest, and King, in whom we trust, and upon whom we rely, and him alone, for justification, sanctification and redemption. This faith takes God at his word, and begets a sincere obedience in the life and conversation; for says the apostle, "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature: old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new."

This faith works by love, purifies the heart, and overcomes the world, the flesh, and the devil. This faith stands firm and will not shrink, though pressed by every foe; it will not tremble on the brink of any earthly woe, for it has a "more enduring substance." This faith is "the evidence of things not seen," which assures us of the reality and worth of eternal and invisible things; which produces a satisfaction and assured confidence that God will infallibly perform what he has promised, whereby the believer is as confident of them as if they were before his eyes and in his actual possession. The object of faith is the word of God in general, and especially the doctrine and promises that respect the salvation of men through Jesus Christ. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God"; and when the believer is clearly justified by faith, and Christ becomes a present Savior, he can then "glory in tribulation also; knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience hope; and hope maketh not ashamed: because the love of God is shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost which is given unto him." And when the spiritual understanding is clearly illuminated by the divine rays of the Holy Ghost, and Christ dwells in our hearts by faith, then we are "enabled to comprehend the height and depth and length and breadth of the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, and are filled with all the fulness of God," and can then "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, receiving the end of our faith, even the salvation of our souls."

This faith is obedient, and is ever ready to say—"Here am I, Lord, send me." This faith believes God and takes him at his word. Abraham had faith to "believe God, and it was accounted unto him for righteousness"; and "when called to go out into a place that he should afterward receive for an inheritance, obeyed God and went out, not knowing whither he went." "By faith he sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." And when God made promise of this possession unto Abraham, "he confirmed it by an oath; and because he could swear by no greater, he aware by himself; that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold on the hope which is set before us; which hope we have as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the vail." The firm foundation of faith is based on the unchangeable promises of God and his immutable word. This faith is based on the "foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." This faith is based on the infinite goodness of God, and his Almighty power, which is able to keep us "through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time; wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season (if need be) we are in heaviness through manifold temptations; that the trial of our faith, being much more precious than gold which perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and glory, and honor, at the appearing of Jesus Christ." "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ."

The christian has faith in God, and finds peace in believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, and joy unspeakable and full of glory in the Holy Ghost; and the spring and source of all his joy, happiness and comfort, in this life and in the life to come, is centred on the promised coming of Jesus, who, when he was assembled with his disciples at a certain time upon the Mount, told them it was necessary that he should go away; for if he went not away the Holy Ghost would not come: and while they were sad and sorrowful, and troubled at his expected departure, he comforted their hearts with the blessed assurance that he would come again. For says Jesus, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." How sweet to believe that this very same Jesus which the Galileans saw "taken up from them into heaven, shall so come in like manner as he was seen to go up into heaven." And how sweet the assurance that he is now preparing a place for us, who are kept by the Almighty power of God, through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed at his glorious appearing. Glory to God! Where are our affections? Awake! my soul, and give glory to the Lamb "who wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by his blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests," and hath promised us that we shall reign with him upon the earth.

Hallelujah to the Lamb! for this blessed assurance; here the christian has no continuing city, but seeks one to come; "wherefore the rather, brethren, give all diligence to make your calling and election sure"; for "blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." This city, which good old Abraham looked for, and which Jesus is preparing for those who are also looking for the same blessed hope, was revealed unto John the Revelator while upon the isle of Patmos; and in referring to that glorious inheritance, which is reserved in heaven for the saints of God, he says—"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I John saw the holy city, New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

Glory to God! Then let sorrow's rudest tempest blow, each cord on earth to sever; our King says come, and there's our home forever, O, forever. "And He that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write; for these words are true and faithful." Hallelujah to God and the Lamb! "which was, and which is, and which is to come," for the blessed assurance of living forever in that city of glory and beauty and blessedness, where no sickness, pain or death shall ever enter; when Eden shall once more be restored to its primeval beauty, and the saints of God shall roam all over those elysian fields, and pluck ambrosial fruit from life's fair tree amidst the paradise of God. The throne of God and of the Lamb will be in this city, for it is to be the city of the great King; and its location is to be Mount Zion, for says the apostle—"Ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels." Then "the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed because of the glory that excelleth, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients, gloriously." Then the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, with all the worthies, and martyrs, and all who have died in the triumphs of faith, will come up out of their graves and inherit "that city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." For they with us looked for "the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." For they with us have sought for glory, honor, immortality, and eternal life, and that "life is hid with Christ in God; and when Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory"; and when he comes to be glorified in his saints and set up his kingdom upon the new earth, "then shall the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, be given to the people of the saints of the Most High."

Glory to God! this kingdom will be "an enduring substance." It will stand when the kingdoms of this world shall have passed away, and shall have become "the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." "And the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and shall possess it forever; even forever and ever." And when this takes place, "then shall the righteous shine forth like the sun in the kingdom of their Father." Then shall they shine more gloriously than Moses shone when he came down from Mount Sinai with the tables of testimony; then shall they shine forth like Him whom the Revelator saw, "whose countenance was as the sun that shineth in his strength." Then will be fulfilled the word of the Lord, who has said—"As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord." This glory proceeds from the throne; for when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, and when he shall sit upon the throne of his glory, then in that resurrection morning, "when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Then will all the prophets and apostles and the saints of God in all ages, who have died in the triumphs of faith, receive the inheritance of the purchased possession, which was promised unto Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, who all died in this faith, "not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off [beyond the resurrection], and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth"; and when this sin-cursed earth shall be purified by fire, and the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters now cover the mighty deep, then will Jesus set up his kingdom upon the new earth, and then shall the will of God be done on earth as it is in heaven. "Wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God, for he hath prepared for them a city." And when that holy city, that New Jerusalem, which John saw, is prepared, it will come down, and the overcomer shall possess it; for "him that overcometh I will a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name." Hallelujah to God! "Faith is the substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things not seen."

THE SHIELD OF FAITH.

GEO. E. LEE.

How simple is faith. How comforting are the promises of God, when we simply take him at his word. When we ask aught in his name, simply believe that we shall in due time receive the thing we ask for, and it is done. For we read that God is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, but is long-suffering toward us, not willing that any should perish.

Then why need we doubt, and groan, and weep, and sigh, and continually keep pleading with God to save us, when the promise is so plain, that "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved." Praise the Lord for salvation. It is promised unto the faithful, and let us believe it. To him give all the glory for his mercy and compassion toward us.

The sole object of God in sending his only begotten Son into the world to die on the cross, was to save "them that are lost." It was, according to the Scriptures, to benefit mankind, to abolish death, and bring life and immortality to light through the gospel. "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved." John 3: 17. Then let us freely accept of this glorious gift, and believe on the Son that we may not be condemned; for "he that believeth not, is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

Then let us drink of the living water that is flowing so freely from that fountain of which Christ is the Living Head. For "whosoever shall drink of this water shall never thirst, but it shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

To the sinner we would say, we entreat you to come to this fountain, and drink, not through slavish fear, but through the love which the Father has bestowed upon us, and that you might taste of the joys of the world to come. Certainly the glory of the Son and holy angels, the New Jerusalem, with its golden streets, the river of the water of life, in the midst of the paradise of God, on whose banks are the trees whose leaves are for the healing of the nations, and an immortal life with the pure and holy, must far exceed any thing of art or nature that we can behold in this present world, with its curse of sin and death resting upon it.

Soon, we believe, the King of glory will appear to take his ransomed people home, and let us each one ask the question, "Shall I among them stand?" It is for us alone to decide and not another. If we do thus decide to "stand for God, though we stand alone," we must carry the shield of faith daily, that the fiery darts of the enemy may not overpower us, and we be left to fall in our weakness in the last great day, when the faithful ones, who have fought the fight manfully, are gathered into the fold of everlasting rest.

TO YOUNG PREACHERS.

M. D. FEAVY.

A young preacher, in order to be fitted for the tilling of God's vineyard, and being an aspirant for advancement in knowledge, and wisdom, and usefulness in God's system of salvation, must feel that a faithful discharge of present duties is incumbent upon him. His present position has been assigned him by an overruling and intelligent providence; his talents are lent to him by his Creator; and that all-wise Being says, Use these talents for the benefit of your fellow men, and the advancement of a fallen race, by pointing them to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of all that follow his advice, and purges their souls from all uncleanness, by virtue of his blood. You may feel that you desire a more conspicuous sphere, that your talents are not rightly appreciated, that you do not receive just merits for your acts and efforts. You may think you are a genius at sermonizing; so much the worse, if you do, for "a genius is one who can do anything but that which is useful." And in general, men who think they are geniuses, make a grand fizzle. As I have already stated, you may have the impression that your talents are not rightly appreciated by the church. It may be so, you may be mortified with your slow progress. "But after all there is no progress with any thing that is not slow." "Life is made up of trifling duties," and not by a momentary creation or act. It is far better to make haste slowly, and by a faithful discharge of present duties, in doing present work well, fit yourself for the future; remembering that your pesent position, although lowly, is not less important on that account. We are commanded to be meek and lowly, and are also informed that none but the meek are to inherit the earth; even our Lord refrained not from washing his disciples' feet. Therefore, "nothing is degrading which a high and graceful purpose ennobles, and the most lowly acts cease to be lowly the moment they are wrought in love." The work which you are doing must be done by some one, and if your motive is pure it is none the less acceptable to God.

With God nothing is little, everything is important, and everything you do should be done unto the Lord and not unto men. Preach not to please, but preach the word, though it cut to the quick. The world is full of people-pleasing preachers, and God does not want another one, but is continually calling for faithful laborers, who are willing to work in his vineyard by a sacrifice of all their worldly aspirations. If you are one, "a faithful discharge of present duties is the best possible preparation for the more important work of the future." The greater part of our men of eminence to-day were once obscure, and those who have had to contend with the most difficulties have been the most successful. Therefore it is best to push steadily forward, either with the current or against it, thankful for human aid and encouragement, but able to do without it, God being your helper. "If a mountain is before you, climb it, and never look for a winding, uncertain road around its base," remembering that "next to divine help is self-help." Do not wait for some golden opportunity, but make the most of the present, and if a better comes you are better for it. It seems to be a law that things which are to last, or which are the most precious, shall grow gradually, and that the humble present shall precede a glorious future. Example: The human being, lord of this lower world, is conducted to his supremacy through a helpless and protracted ascent; none of the creatures he rules have an infancy so helpless or so lasting; none furnish themselves so slowly with the knowledge needful for self-subsistence; as if time were to him no object, and no elaboration of growth were too great for his futurity. And if God will that years shall pass before you attain your supremacy in his work, so be it. Amen. For the result will repay a hundred fold the cost, and every severe test and trial you meet on the way, will teach you to appreciate your good fortune when it comes, and may be as valuable as your success. Therefore a faithful discharge of present duties will invariably insure success and be followed by a recompense.

As we can never be qualified to do important work without first learning to do unimportant work faithfully, so God requires us to work humbly and at that which is least, before he will trust us with that which is greatest. The previous discipline is necessary for ourselves; the knowledge of our conduct under it necessary for others. The ministry is one long continuous probation, and the greater the work to be done, the more severe the trial. Even the Son of God, though destined to rule and save humanity, at one time was driven from place to place without where to lay his head, and at another was forsaken by God himself while dying on the cross.

God's ministers are to be tested. They must as it were be tried in a furnace, before they are approved by God, and there is no better way to gain his approval, than to do present duty faithfully and well. I do not say, preach to dead churches, pay your own way, and board yourselves, but I do say, go out into the region beyond, do your duty there well, trust God for the result, and he will never see you suffer. If he has called you to preach he has also prepared you a field of labor. Then enter it, and do not rust out trying to brighten up old rusty churches. There are too many preachers rusting out on this score, who would soon become beacon lights on the shore God has prepared for them, and may the Lord show them the light, and compel them to follow its course.

But in speaking of reward, we should remember this world is only a small fragment of the sphere we are to occupy and enjoy. We are trying to live so as to inherit the earth redeemed from the curse. Therefore if we are pure-minded and disinterested in carnal things, and are self-sacrificing and earnest in the Lord's cause, and have suffered the loss of all worldly things in consequence, we may "rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." But after all we do not know what true success is, and who really are the most successful. "The Lord's estimate and man's materially differ." Often man writes failure, while God writes success; man writes degraded, God writes exalted; man writes impoverished, God writes enriched; as man writes wrong, God writes well done. Therefore you and I must be content to walk by faith and not by sight; and if we continue faithful to our God, we "shall in no wise lose our reward."

Brethren and sisters in the ministry, life is before us. Let us gird up the loins of our mind, be diligent, and hope to the end. We know not what the future will bring, and we cheerfully leave it in our Father's hand. He shall choose our inheritance for us. Cultivating a spirit of entire dependence upon him, his strength shall be made perfect in our weakness. His providence will call us to the work and sphere for which his grace has qualified us; and at length, when earth's weary probation is over, he will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, . . . enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Then, and not till then, shall we know how true it is that the faithful discharge of divinely-appointed present duties shall be followed by an everlasting recompense that shall last as long as heaven itself remains.

FAULT-FINDERS.

E. JOHNSON.

There are a plenty of this class of people. You can find them almost anywhere. They are generally very pious, i. e., in their own estimation; but with them there are none else just right. No matter how humbly you walk before the Lord, no matter how hard you toil to save sinners, no matter if your heart is pained, or your eyes run down with tears, you must bear all their slang and calumny. I sometimes go into a new place to hold a few meetings. Then "woe is me" if I happen to fall in with any of these fault-finders. There will be some fault in every preacher that was ever there before me. And I am obliged to listen to the supposed faults of all their neighbors, professor or non-professor, until my ears tingle and my heart aches. And if I could credit what they say, I should think I had found "even where Satan's seat is." Lord, deliver me from these treble-tongued monsters.

There is, however, one thing of which even the fault-finders can boast; and that is, of long pedigree. For I can trace their genealogy almost nineteen centuries back. As long ago as that, one of their ancestors found fault with one of God's children because she anointed her Master for his burial. Hear him (John 12: 5-6)—"Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor? This he said, not that he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein."

This Judas was a fair representative of his fault-finding children ever since; and their motives are just about as pure as his. "First cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye."

THE EXECUTION OF COMMUNISTS.

L'Olive, Deschamps and Denville, the Communists who were executed yesterday, at Satory, died bravely. Their last words were, "Vive la Republique. Down with traitors."

SWEDEN.

DEATH OF THE KING.

A despatch from Stockholm announces that King Charles of Sweden died at Malmo last evening.

DUBLIN, Sept. 10. A meeting to protest against the occupation of Rome, which was advertised some days ago, has been indefinitely postponed for unexplained causes.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A PROPOSED TREATY.

LONDON, Sept. 20. It is learned officially that the governments of Holland, Austria, Germany, Russia, Italy and the United States are negotiating, through their respective representatives, for the recognition of the inviolability of private property at sea in time of war. It is understood that the sanction of the different European powers will be asked to such an understanding, and that a formal treaty embodying the results of the negotiations will be drawn up and signed by the respective powers above named, or their plenipotentiaries.

EDMOND ABOUT SET AT LIBERTY.

Sept. 22. Word has been received at Paris, from Berlin, that the efforts of M. de Remusat, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, to secure the release of M. Edmond About from imprisonment at Strasbourg have been successful, and the German government has notified the foreign office in this city that M. About is at liberty. The commission of inquiry declared the charges weak. It is stated that the release has been granted on the condition that he immediately quit the German empire. Much satisfaction is generally expressed over this act on the part of Germany, and M. About's friends are jubilant at his acquittal. A warm welcome awaits him on his return to France.

AUSTRIA.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST CHOLERA.

Advices from Vienna state that, owing to the aggravated form in which cholera has broken out in Czernowitz, the Austrian government has ordered all prisoners there detained for slight offences to be released. Barracks are erecting in the open fields outside the town to receive the grave offenders. The Roumanian government has subjected the route by Czernowitz to vigorous precautionary measures, insisting on a strict quarantine to be undergone by all travelers into Moldavia.

ITALY.

DEATH OF GUISEPPE MASTAI.

Guiseppe Mastai, the eldest brother of the Pope, is dead. The sad event has cast His Holiness into the deepest affliction.

REJOICING AND LAMENTATION.

Sept. 22. The anniversary of the occupation of Rome by the Italian troops was celebrated on Friday with much enthusiasm. The city was profusely decorated. The Pope received visits of condolence from his adherents, and addressed his visitors, lamenting the misfortunes of the Catholic Church and the injustice done it by the Italian government.

GERMANY.

RELIGIOUS.

The Old Catholic Congress assembled at Cologne yesterday, with a full attendance of delegates. The English and American Episcopal representatives first addressed the meeting sympathetically.

In order to ascertain what are "kindred orders" to the society of Jesuits the Prussian government has issued forms to all municipal authorities, which are to be filled up, stating what conventional orders there are in their districts, what number of members they contain, and chiefly what organization they are are subject to. Orders resembling the Jesuits, i. e., demanding blind obedience to the superiors' behests, will be mercilessly expelled.

IRELAND.

SYMPATHY FOR THE POPE.

Sept. 22. At a meeting of the members of the League of St. Sebastian, at Dublin, on Friday, steps were taken for the formation of an organization to afford material help towards restoring the temporal power of the Pope.

PORTUGAL.

ANOTHER OCEAN CABLE.

The Portugese government has granted a concession to Baron Mana, to enable him to proceed with the construction of a telegraphic cable between Portugal and Brazil.

ROUMANIA.

TERRIBLE RAVAGES OF THE CHOLERA—THOUSANDS DYING OF THE PLAGUE.

Advices received to-day from Bucharest in Roumania, give later particulars of the dreadful ravages of the cholera in the Danubian principalities. There is no abatement to the spread of the epidemic, and it is estimated that over ten thousand persons have already died from the disease. The nature of the plague is epidemic in the extreme, and it is feared it will spread over the entire country. A large number of physicians, sisters of charity, and other persons disposed to minister to the afflicted, have arrived at Bucharest from St. Petersburg, Odessa and other neighboring cities. Great impetus is given to the disease in Bucharest from the swampy nature of its location, and the filthy condition of the city itself. The disease has been most violent in those sections of the city where filthy mud huts or cabins abound, hundreds of which have been completely depopulated, in many instances the inmates dying from want of care and their bodies left unburied for several days. A letter received to-day by our correspondent presents a frightful picture of the condition of affairs.

DOMESTIC.

THE KU-KLUX PRISONERS AT ALBANY.—It is stated that the President refused to pardon certain Ku-Klux prisoners at the Albany penitentiary, who had been recommended for executive clemency, because of the protest coming from a district where the criminals were convicted, and from those who would be most endangered by their release. The character of most of the convicts is very bad; some of them are ignorant, lawless, desperate men, who, it is believed, would not hesitate to wreak their vengeance on all who testified against them.

THE INTERNATIONAL.—For the last two years the society of the International has been looked upon as of immense power and influence, and writers upon the subject have variously estimated the number of its members at from 800,000 to 1,000,000. It now appears from reliable statistics just published in Germany, that the number has been grossly exaggerated. Before the war it was estimated that there were from 40,000 to 50,000 in France. There is now hardly a third of that number. In Belgium it has been stated that there were 150,000. Investigation shows the number to be less than 12,000, while in England there are 8000 only. Out of 50,000 workmen at Gand, only 1200 were found to be members. The society is rapidly crumbling to pieces, and in three or four years at the utmost will cease to exist.—Globe.

CRIME IN CHICAGO.—The recent movement in Chicago for the suppression of crime is one of the most praiseworthy in which the people of that city have ever been concerned. Twenty-five well known and reliable citizens have been selected to aid the city authorities in the prompt arrest, speedy trial and sure punishment of criminals, lawlessness, robbers and even murder, having become alarmingly frequent in that city, and the police and courts having proved powerless to stay the evil. The committee are empowered to offer rewards, engage counsel and employ the services of special detectives and other agencies, whenever deemed advisable by them, and it is expected that the funds for their work will be furnished by voluntary subscriptions of the law-loving and law-abiding of the people of the city. Leading bankers, merchants and business men of all kinds are engaged in this movement, and the meeting at which the committee was appointed was composed of the best citizens of Chicago. Such a committee, if its mission be properly performed, and there is little doubt on that head we presume in this instance, cannot fail to exert a powerful influence in behalf of law and order, and in the prevention of crime.—Ibid.

In Brief.

—— The thirty-eight bare-footed friars exiled from Gautemala, who lately arrived at San Francisco, will proceed to Milwaukee to enter a convent of their order.——The twelve nations of the world own two hundred and eighty-five iron-clads.——A large cargo of Mormons has arrived in this country from Europe within the past few days.——Eighty per cent. of the crime committed in New England is committed by those who have no education, or none sufficient to serve them a valuable purpose in life.——Milk, even at ten cents per quart, is the cheapest animal food that can be used.——A London letter says Isaac Pitman, the inventor of phonography, has become embarrassed, and a public subscription has been started to pay off his debts.——News from Trouville says that M. Thiers, when conversing recently with a deputation from Cherbourg, dwelt particularly on the future commercial importance of that port, and remarked that the present tendencies of the European Cabinets were more than ever favorable to peace.——The Kalamazoo Telegraph says: "Many years may come and go, but a richer, more beautiful, more easily gathered and valuable harvest than that of 1872 will rarely be witnessed."——Garrett Davis, one of the best known of the Southern politicians of the old school, died at his residence in Paris, Ky., after a public career of nearly forty years.

STAND UP FOR JESUS.

In these last days of peril, and troubles and temptations, who will be a brave soldier in our Master's cause? We want volunteers, those who will fight manfully the battles of life in the spirit of the divine Master. We live in an age that is in need of earnest defenders of the faith once delivered to the saints, those who will stand up in defense of the truth. Error prevails all over the world to a sad degree, not only in the minds of men and women, but also in the minds of our young people. Go to the majority of the Sabbath schools in our land, and listen to the erroneous ideas that are taught the young people of the nineteenth century. They are told if they are christians when they die, they will immediately be transformed into angels and fly away, "beyond the bounds of time and space." But if wicked, God will cast their invisible, immortal, and never dying souls, into a place called hell, and there they will suffer the death that never dies.

Now these young people suppose of course their superintendent and teachers know, and thus they grow up with these foolish, senseless, and unscriptural ideas. And so there is much work to be done in the cause of God's truth. Who among our young folks will enlist to put down error, to tell to a dying world Jesus is soon coming to gather home his bright jewels? Shall we not be among that number who shall hail him King of kings, and with him ever reign? V. HUNT.

TENT MEETING AT NEW PRESTON, CONN.—The Conn. Mission Tent will be pitched, and a meeting held, on the old camp-ground, New Preston, Conn., commencing Tuesday, Sept. 24th, and hold over the following Sunday, the 29th. The Shepaug Valley R. R. will charge full fare to the meeting, and give free return passes. Call for Tent Meeting tickets. The stage will carry passengers from the station at half price. We propose to make such arrangements for this meeting as shall be for the glory of God, for the comfort of those who come, and with as little expense as we can. There will be a stove on the ground, and a tent to eat in. You can buy and cook your own food, thus living as cheaply as at your homes. Should any wish to get board or lodging at private houses, they can do so at a reasonable price. We hope to see a general gathering at this meeting from the first day to the last. H. J. BALDWIN, Committee.

P. S. Those who do not choose to lodge in the tent, can find lodging at our homes free as long as we can find room for them. We shall do the best for you we can. H. J. B.

TO WESTERN FRIENDS.—We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16th, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object. D. MATHEWSON, WM. SHELDON, WM. MCCULLOCK, DAN'L S. CLARK, O. S. KNAPP, FRANK BURR, H. G. MCCULLOCK.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that our Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work.

WILLIAM L. HIMES, Bus. Ag't.

THERE will be a meeting under the Mission Tent (the Lord willing), at West Canterbury, N. H., commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 3d, and continue for one week. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to come, and bring blankets and provisions, and stop with us through the meeting. Lodging room will be furnished for all that will come and bring blankets. Let us see a general rally to this meeting. Preaching brethren, who have the cause at heart, are invited to come and labor for the salvation of the perishing. ENOCH MORRILL.

OUR TENT meeting at Watertown will continue through the week, and over Sunday, Sept. 29th. The interest is good. We have small tents and plenty of straw. Come, brethren and sisters, bring your blankets and provisions, and stay through the meeting and help in the work. The Lord will bless those who make a sacrifice to help spread the truth. ENOCH MORRILL. LUTHER BOUTELL.

THE ANNUAL session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the Advent Christian Church at Hoosick, N. Y., commencing Oct. 16th, and continue over the following Sunday. Particulars hereafter. A. W. SIBLEY, President. A. P. BUMP, Secretary.

THE Fourth Annual Meeting of the Conn. A. C. Conference will hold session in Morris, commencing Wednesday, Oct. 16th, and continuing over the Sunday following. There will be a team at Thomaston for the accommodation of all who wish to attend the Conference. Passengers by the Hartford road will take stage at Terryville for Thomaston. Let there be a general rally of preachers and delegates. Per order,

B. HITCHCOCK, President.
L. S. LUDINGTON, Secretary.

THE New Hampshire Mission Tent, from Alton Bay, will be pitched at Concord, N. H., Sept. 18th, the Lord willing. Meetings will be held through the week, and over the following Sabbath. Subject—Evidences for the coming of the Lord in 1873. ISRAEL DAMMAN. N. H. BARBOUR.

THE Maine Mission Tent is pitched at Oxford, Craig's Mills, and deeply interesting meetings are enjoyed, with signs of a good work of grace. We continue during this week, and over Sunday, Sept. 29th. May the Lord give the reviving and converting grace. Amen. I. C. WELLCOME.

THERE will be a conference meeting in Chesterville (Borough school-house), commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 3d, holding over Sunday. Brn. will call on Lewis Bean, Torrington, and others, who will provide for all. For the Brn., H. B. SEVEY.

THE regular Quarterly meeting of the A. C. Church will meet in Springwater, Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 28th and 29th. We extend a cordial invitation to all the friends of the cause of our soon coming Lord to be present. We are expecting help from Sr. M. Stoddard. S. H. WITHINGTON.

THE undersigned has tendered his resignation of the pastoral charge of the A. C. Church, Salem, Mass., to take effect at the close of this month. Brethren desiring his labors after the present month, can address C. E. BARNES, Salem, Mass.

BRO. GRANT:—I received through Bro. Jenkins, of Halifax, $3, from Bro. Hand, and another brother (name forgotten), of N. B.; $5 from some one in Cal., and $5 from Sr. D. Merrill. Dear brethren and sisters, I thank you very much for your kind remembrance of us in adversity, and I do pray that you all may never want for any good thing here, and that you may have eternal life in the world to come. S. A. INGHAM.

TIME CONFERENCE AT LAWRENCE, MASS.—There will be a Conference of the above nature at the Lawrence Advent Chapel, beginning Sept. 26th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren, and others from all parts, are earnestly invited to attend. The evidence that the prophetic periods are pointing to the year 1873 for the coming of the Lord, and that the great plan of salvation under the gospel is about to end, has awakened a great interest, not only in this and surrounding churches, but the hearts of God's people are being moved all over the land.

Watchman, what of the night? Come, men of God, from the north, south, east and west; come filled with the Holy Spirit, and let this subject have a thorough investigation. If the judgment is indeed so soon to come, the world must not go unwarned, for God will require their blood at our hands. If these things are true, we cannot afford to be found opposing them, either by open or silent opposition. If they be without foundation in God's word, let it be exposed. Come, brethren, from every part. Those who have argument against are as cordially invited as those who think they have reasons for believing it. We hope, by the blessing of God, to have a time such as has not been experienced for these many years. Come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty. One more rally, like that of 1843, and we go into the kingdom. Brn. Cunningham, Barbour, Sheldon, and others are expected to be present.

GEO. H. CHURCHILL, MOSES PROCTOR, J. T. MERRILL, } For the Church.

A CAMPMEETING will be held in Savoy, Mass., within a few rods of the old ground, commencing Saturday, Sept. 21st, and continuing over the two following Sabbaths. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, together with a good number of able preaching brethren, will be with us during the meeting. The large Tent belonging to the Hoosick Valley Conference will be pitched on the ground, and used as a tabernacle for preaching and conference meetings during the day and evening; and for lodgings during the night to all who are not provided with small or family tents of their own. Board for man and beast at a reasonable rate on the ground, and lodging to all who do not wish to sleep in tents, can be had with private families near by. All who have enjoyed so many happy happy seasons during former campmeetings at this place, together with all others, are cordially invited to come, and do all that can be done for the salvation of ourselves and others before the day of destruction comes from the Almighty. Board and lodging free to all who preach the word and co-operating with the American Advent Christian Conference. Those who come expecting to sleep on the ground, bring blankets and bedding. H. K. FLAGG, for the Committee.

Hay and stabling will be provided without cost for as many as may come with teams. A. B. SWANESBURG.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.—The Lord willing, there will be a quarterly conference at the school-house, near Elder H. S. Mitchell's, in Bowdoinham, Me., two miles from Richmond, commencing Thursday, Sept. 26th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We hope the brethren and sisters will come with the Spirit of God, and work for the salvation of perishing sinners. I. C. WELLCOME. H. S. MITCHELL.

AS there has been much inquiry to know why we did not have a campmeeting at Pittsfield this year, as we have for four years past, and also if there is to be any in future at that place, we would say to all that, after a mutual consultation with preaching and lay brethren of Maine and N. B., we think it duty, if the Lord will, to continue our east Maine campmeeting at Pittsfield annually while time continues. The grove will be selected in a few weeks, and some work done on the ground this fall. Therefore we would say to all who are interested in this meeting, be ready to lend a helping hand in partly preparing the ground this fall. Due notice will be given.

For the Committee, F. A. BAKER. R. R. YORK. JER. CARR.

A QUARTERLY session of the Advent Christian Conference of New Brunswick will be held at Middle Simonds, Carleton Co., to commence Thursday, Oct. 10th, at seven o'clock P. M., and continue through the week, and over the following Sunday. A general invitation is given to all to come and labor for sinners. RUFUS SNOW.

TO BRN. IN CANADA:—I shall, as agreed last fall, come over to Picton, Prince Edward Co., Canada, about the middle of Oct., and shall stay in the Province as duty may seem to demand. Shall go home around the head of Lake Ontario, and if any brethren not having already engaged my labors wish me to visit them, let them write me immediately at Albion, N. Y., or at Picton, Ontario, Canada, care of J. E. Lent. C. F. SWEET.

SPECIAL MEETING.—Providence permitting, I expect to hold a series of meetings in the Court House at Hennepin, Putnam Co., Ill., commencing Oct. 8th, and continuing as the interest demands. Let the friends in the region about come in and help us. Come to work for Jesus. C. C. MARSTON.

THERE will be a protracted meeting of days at Belgrade Mills, Me., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, and hold over Sunday. A general invitation is given to brethren and sisters to come and labor for the salvation of the lost, as provision will be made for all. Strangers will call on Brn. Towle and Golder, and others. Will preaching brethren come, and give meat that is due? For the church, H. B. SEVEY.

THE Fourth Quarterly Meeting of the A. C. Church of Honeoye, Ontario Co., N. Y., will commence Friday, Oct. 4th, and continue over the following Sunday. Sr. E. S. Jennings, or others, are expected to preach the word. The brethren and sisters in adjoining towns are cordially invited to attend. H. H. BROWN. O. B. BROWN.

WHO DO I OWE?—Campmeeting return tickets were left in my hands to sell at Alton Bay, by persons who wished to dispose of them. Perhaps some were sold that I did not settle for, as I could not see the owners before I left. If any did not get their ticket back, nor the money for it, they should write to me and say what their ticket was, and how much it was worth; then I will send them the pay, if sold, or return the ticket to the owner. I. C. WELLCOME, Yarmouth, Me.

FOR THE NORWEGIAN TRACT FUND.—Loring Morse, $5; H. & C. Smith, $1; C. D. Jones, $2. I. C. WELLCOME.

THE church in Bath, Me., expect the Maine Ministerial Conference to hold its session with them Oct. 8th. J. HAM, Clerk.

THE MERCY-SEAT.

"There I will meet with thee, and I will commune with thee from above the mercy seat."—Ex. 25: 22.

When to my closet I repair
To breathe my soul's desire in prayer,
And bending low at Jesus' feet,
I look towards the mighty seat,
This promise, Lord, shall be my plea—
There, sinner, I will meet with thee.

When Holy Scripture I peruse,
And o'er the sacred pages muse,
Oh! then this precious word fulfill;
And while I seek to learn thy will,
Draw near, in answer to my prayer,
And, gracious Savior, meet me there.

When in thy temple courts I stand,
Amid thy little chosen band,
Assist me then my soul to raise
In earnest prayer and cheerful praise;
There let me thy salvation see,
And, gracious Savior, meet with me.

Or should it be thy wise decree
To lay thy chastening rod on me,
And make the couch of suffering mine,
Yet would thy servant not repine,
If only this my portion be,
My Savior! there to meet with thee.

When sorrow's gloomy path I tread,
And threatening clouds meet o'er my head,
I'll onward go without a fear,
If only Jesus' voice I hear;
Even then the darkness light shall be,
If there my Savior meets with me.

And when my closing hour draws nigh—
That solemn hour when I must die—
When thou in glory shalt descend,
My Savior, my Almighty friend,
On Canaan's shore, oh! let me hear,
That my dear Savior loves me there.

SANCTIFICATION.

H. A. F. GILBERT.

BRO. GRANT:—I have for a long time felt deeply the necessity of light on the subject of sanctification, and greatly rejoice to see such a waking up to write and talk, and I hope feel, about it. I have watched closely what has been written, and feel afraid the subject is not clearly understood by many. There seems to be such a hanging on to former teachings,—that a person can be a christian, justified, or in a salvable state, without being sanctified. Why, the very meaning of the word shows that we cannot be justified from personal sins without sanctifying ourselves; and when this is done on our part, is God slack to perform his? No, verily.

To sanctify is to set apart for a holy or religious use. This must be done by us, and God never fails to accept the offering the moment it is made. This setting apart is nothing more or less than a giving up of all to God, a feeling of the heart which says—

"Here, Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do."

I yield my will to be controled by thine. The very moment we feel in our heart to say, "Not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done," in everything, that moment we have done our part of the work of sanctification for the time being, and God accepts and sets us apart for work in his service, and gives his Spirit as a seal, or witness. This Spirit brings peace and joy.

Now does any brother or sister who has received this blessing believe there was ever a real conversion to God without this giving up or yielding of the will to God's will? All say, No. Well, theory calls this justification, but what more can we ever do? We have given up all; we have nothing more to give, or consecrate. God requires no more. But, says one, there is a second consecration necessary, as is proved by so many witnesses. I answer, Because they have taken the sacrifice from the altar, and must do their first work over again.

I have had many years' experience (and some of it very bitter) on this subject. It took me a long time to understand the truth, but I now know whereof I affirm. There is a shorter and more direct way to sanctification than to frame a ladder and point out the steps one by one; just one short step, and one alone, can bring you there, whether you be sinner, church member, or minister. Submit your wills to God's will; let God choose for you, and then follow where he leads. But how can I do this? Just as you have told the sinner, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Believe when God says he will direct thy steps, if you trust in him and acknowledge him in all your ways. Read Prov. 3: 5, 6—"In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths." Believe it. You can search yourself by the text. Are you willing, yea, anxious, that God should direct you in everything, in dress, where you go, and in what you say and do; and to say, whether in sunshine or shadow, All is well? If you are sure you are willing to be directed by God, believe he will do what he says he will, then take the first step you see and go forward, trusting and stepping, stepping and trusting.

Again we read in the Bible, "God is a very present help in time of need." Venture out on that, fearing nothing; in short, believe all the promises, but be sure you comply with the conditions. Look at yourself and see that you can make yourself no better with all the steps and efforts that you can make, for all your "righteousness is as filthy rags." Every moment you wait to prepare, you are further away from God.

If your all is not this moment consecrated to God, where are you? Did God ever accept half an offering, and the rest retain for the offerer's own use? Think of Ananias and Sapphira. If you were ever converted to God you made this entire consecration, for you could not become a christian without it. Then if your will, and of course your all (for your will stands at the head of your all), is not this moment consecrated to God, it is because you have taken the sacrifice from the altar; and will God accept you in this condition? Why, do you not see that you are rebelling against his will? and yet do you hope you are a christian?

What better are you than one who has never made a profession, when the apostle says, without "holiness" no man shall "see the Lord"? Do you still claim the name of christian? But you say, I try to do my duty, and sometimes enjoy meetings, and am happy. So do many Spiritualists, and others who are deceived. Try yourself by the word—"If you have not the spirit of Christ, you are none of his." Rom. 8: 9. You can know for a certainty if you have this spirit, for you will assuredly bear the fruits thereof, which are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." "For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness, and righteousness, and truth." Do you manifest these fruits? Is your peace unbroken by opposition, scoffs, or ridicule, or by petty trials at home in your family? Dig deep, and lay your foundation sure.

TRUTH being founded upon a rock, you must boldly dig to see its foundations, without fear of destroying the edifice.

JUSTICE IN THE PULPIT.

R. M. RIPLEY.

There are certain inalienable rights which individuals, as such, can exercise, and not infringe upon any known law. And among them may be mentioned the free exercise of thought, and proper action based upon such thought. Especially is this the case in theological matters. All classes of christians hold, that obedience to the commands of God is one of the essentials of proper christian conduct. But that said conduct must be based upon the faith of others, be they of the ministry or of the laity, we deny. If we were to be held finally accountable to our minister for our acts, the case would be different. But as God is to be our judge and not man, so must we base our action upon our honest conviction of what his word teaches.

I was very forcibly reminded of this by a sermon delivered in one of our "evangelical" churches one Sunday forenoon. The subject of the text was the resemblance of the modern religionist to the Scribes and Pharisees. The comparison is a good one if the analogy is made to correspond; but in this case there was an unpardonable blunder.

After condemning for their justification of themselves by an observance of forms and ceremonies, long prayers, etc., the speaker comes down to the present time and deals out his maledictions on those of his church members who have been so unfortunate as to have done some necessary labor on the first day of the week. His remarks were inclined to be personal, consequently unproductive of good.

I was led to think of the enormous amount of sin there was in the world, upon which he might have vented his wrath, without taking those matters upon which honest parties differ, and making them the subject of cutting remark. Such a course will drive the cold professor or reckless sinner to the wall; and the minister instead of saving a soul from death, and hiding a multitude of sins, becomes the messenger of damnation.

It is well known that the Jews condemned our Savior as a Sabbath-breaker; but we do not find them condemning him for transgressing on the first day of the week. Why do not those who are so strenuous for the observance of the Sabbath, keep it, and not substitute another day for it and not half keep that?

Brethren of the ministry, let it be a great aim with you to rightly disperse the word of God. Let the love and justice of his dealings with us through his Son be made prominent in your teachings; and while the law was our school-master to bring us to Christ, let us remember that, being under Christ, an act that is sin to-day will be sin to-morrow; that we must be as free from sin on Monday as on Sunday. "There are many called to preach the gospel, but I fear that few of the called are sent of God." And although the ceremonial laws of Jewish times are past, we see many who by observance of laws, make clean the outside of the platter, yet within they show no evidence of the cleansing power of the blood of Christ. While such act as spiritual guides, we need not expect to see God's wrod honored, his cause advanced, or finite justice done to man.

"I HAVE NOTHING TO SPARE."

E. L. BITLER.

"I have nothing to spare," is the cry of the penurious. Nothing to spare to help the poor. Nothing to spare to send the gospel to them that sit in darkness.

"I am taxed to the utmost of my ability," said a man who was worth a million of dollars, and was building a house that cost one hundred thousand dollars to live in. He professed to be a follower of Him who had not where to lay his head; yet he had nothing to spare for the hungry, naked, and sick. Nothing to spare. Poor humanity!

A collection was taken up at a meeting of a benevolent society, which was attended by a lady whose dress and jewelry cost fifteen hundred dollars. She put twenty-five cents on the plate! Persons now reveling in luxury are persuading themselves that they have nothing to spare for the Lord.

"How about the heathen," said one; "will they be saved?"

"They that sin without law shall perish without law," was the reply, "but their blood will be required at our hands."

"How so? I have not been called to preach the gospel."

"But you have been entrusted with your Lord's money, and you ought to use it for his glory. 'Occupy till I come.'"

A man whose annual income is thousands of dollars, complains when he is asked to give sixty dollars yearly to the church of Christ. Laying up treasure on earth.

"I wish the Lord would put it into somebody's heart to give us fifty dollars to finish the house in which we worship," wrote a Southern missionary to a wealthy relative. He wrote in reply, "I would give the required sum, but my wife objects." The above mentioned house was without doors or windows, and the seats in campmeeting style, planks laid across logs, and in cold weather an oilcloth was used for a door. "The rich man died and was buried." His wife and children are quarreling about his houses and lands.

"If I knew the Lord would come soon, I would give what money I have with me to the missionaries," said a sister. She was not certain the Lord would come soon, and kept her money.

Several years ago one of the Lord's faithful ones attended a campmeeting for the last time. She seemed to be conscious that it was the last meeting of the kind she would be permitted to attend, for she said, "This is my last visit here. Before I leave I have a message from my heavenly Father; it is this—Be holy; live alone for Jesus." After pausing awhile she added, "I have a special message for you who have an abundance of this world's goods, and can come here and spend a week or two with your families. It is this: Look around you previous to coming, and see if there are no poor in your community who would like to enjoy such a privilege as this, if they had the means to defray their expenses. Think of the good it might do them; and you who are able try to bring one such person at least with you." She added, "I have done so, and would have brought more if I could."

I heard that one ask an interest in the prayers of God's people, saw her bow at the mercy-seat, and heard her testify that God had forgiven her sins.

Edward D. Griffin says—"Man may persuade themselves that they have nothing to spare, but in the awful hour when they with the pagan nations shall stand at the bar of God, what comparison will these objects bear to the salvation of a single soul? Eternal Mercy! let not the blood of millions be found on our skirts. Standing as I now do in the sight of a dissolving universe, beholding the dead arise, the world in flames, the heavens fleeing away, all nations convulsed with terror, or wrapped in the vision of the Lamb, I pronounce the conversion of a single soul of more value than all the wealth Omnipotence ever produced.

Place yourself in their stead. Were you hastening to the judgment of the great day in darkness and pollution, and were they living in wealth, how hard would it seem for your neighbors to neglect your misery. How would you reproach them that they did not even sell their possessions, if no other means were at hand, to send the gospel to you. My flesh trembles at the prospect. But they shall not reproach us. It shall be known in heaven that we pity our brethren. We will help them all we can, and believe we shall receive in return a blessing from above."

ENCOURAGEMENT.

E. OWEN.

Saturday has come again,
And to-morrow's care with pain
Stares me in the face;
I have read, and wept, and prayed,
Yet no light has been displayed
But the Savior's grace—

"I am with you to the end,
I called you to be my friend,
I give the increase.
I commissioned you to preach,
I instructed you to teach
Men the way of peace."

"Blessed servant, giving meat,"
With his Master he shall eat,
When the Master serves;
Thou wast faithful in few things,
When the "nation honor brings"
To Him who deserves,

Thou shalt "sit upon my throne,"
Thou shalt hear the word "well done!"
From the Savior King;
Thou shalt "walk with me in white,"
When there shall "be no more night,"
Thou the "new song" sing.

Oh! these gracious, cheering words
From the mighty Lord of lords,
Stay up my weak faith;
And I feel to venture on,
Trusting the eternal Son,
Even unto death.

Jesus will provide a text;
'Twas not him who thus perplexed
His poor servant's mind;
He is anxious for the seed
Scattered for the people's need;
He knows just the kind.

Oh! my Master, help me sow,
Let me thy salvation know,
Make my courage strong;
Help me scatter morn and night,
Only careful for the right,
Though the way seem long.

"In due season" I shall reap,
Even though I "fall on sleep"
Ere the Savior come;
I shall hear the trumpet's blast,
And ere the trouble is o'erpast,
Be in my Eden home.

EXPERIENCE.

DEAR BRO:—Looking over your May No. of the Crisis, I saw the article entitled "Our Privilege," and further on, I read that such as enjoy the blessings which are there described, or, to use your language, those who know the peace and joy that arise from a pure heart, would write out condensed accounts of their experience. I receive that as an invitation extended to myself—perhaps to encourage me in my newly found faith, by thus committing a statement of my position to paper. I have reason to bless the Holy One, I say it reverently, that I have been permitted to attend the National Campmeeting which has very recently been held here in Maine. And just here, let me praise God that he is in our day, raising up a holy people, who hold meetings especially to proclaim the truth as it is in Jesus. A full salvation! what wonders of grace will not be wrought by these blessed means? To be personal, I was led by one step of faith (in the most natural manner, too), to commit myself to God, "who is wonderful in counsel, and excellent in working."

The reading of those last six or seven verses of the twenty-eighth chapter of Isaiah, helped me greatly to believe that God understood exactly the difficulties of my peculiar case. I had endeavored so many times to enter "the land of rest from inbred sin," that I was almost discouraged from seeking such an exalted state for myself, but I was led to believe that the Good Father knew well how to deal with the human heart, if he may but be permitted to have his own way. Just believing that the great work of our full salvation is a matter in which the Lord is even more interested than we can possibly be for ourselves, will help wonderfully in the exercise of faith; and if we find we are in any degree exercised by the blessed Spirit within us, which of itself inspires our desires and prayers, how thankful we should be just to give ourselves fully into his hands, ceasing from our own works and permitting God do his work in us. In stillness and awe let us bow before him, and our faith, supported by some distinct promise, in the written word, will rise higher, and still higher.

Let us hold on to the position we may gain by pleading the largeness of one promise, while we climb still higher by bringing forward another promise even more glorious. For instance, let the perplexed soul commence with the sweet words, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out"; then if we find ourselves at a stand, let simple belief assure the fearful, trying-to-believe soul that God to whom we have come (although we have come to him times without number) understands the peculiarity—if any—of our case, and desires that we should just sit still in patient waiting upon him, and he will, sooner or later, show us his salvation. The blessed verse—"For he loved us, and gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify us unto himself, a peculiar people, zealous of good works," came to me in very good time, i. e., I found it in the blessed Word, and I just made the first two clauses of it my altar, to which I brought my soul, and believing, simply, the result is expressed in the succeeding clauses, "redeem from all iniquity," etc., simply judging and holding as truth what God had declared to be true. If we only had wisdom of heart enough to believe God! This believing God because he has declared, not because of any feeling in us, honors him more than all our ecstasies after some revelation he may sometime please to give us.

For myself, I have had as yet no illuminations, or special revelations, only what I find in his word, and which I am enabled to rejoice in as being true, because however glorious they may be (some are wonderfully so) I may justly claim it as belonging to me, meeting and suiting my individual case. Let the anxious soul insist that "Jesus loves me," and I think he will easily make a personal application of passages that otherwise might stagger his faith. If such an one says, "That is one great trouble with me; I cannot realize as I ought the great love of Christ to me;" dear friend, let me request you, as a favor to yourself, and as honorary to Christ, to read upon your knees, and in a prayerful spirit, the seventeenth chapter of St. John, and the last few verses take in by faith, and by them conceive, as fully as possible (but, alas! so feebly) of the mighty love which led him to give himself for us, to the end that he might redeem us from all iniquity. You behold what God on his part has already done for you; you may understand by your inward desires what the Spirit still does within you. Now, your part is to lay hold of his promise, and yield your heart to the silent aspirations of the Spirit, who worketh in you (so far as you will let him), both to will, and to do, of his good pleasure.

Thus do we acknowledge God's power to perform a radical work, and consequently you will accord to him all the glory when it is accomplished in you. I woke up one morning with the first part of the apostle's benediction, where he says, "Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," "keep you from falling and present you blameless unto the day of his coming," in my mind. Now, what a glorious promise that was! But I am inclined to think that in the earlier stage of my faith, I should have staggered at appropriating such largeness or magnitude to myself, as the "exceeding abundantly above all," etc. But when we are convinced that it is wholly God's work, and that therein his honor and glory are concerned, and then consider that the benediction was of the Holy Ghost, why, all we have to do, is to allow (in wondering awe) the faithful Promiser to do the utmost of his will in us, even to the "exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think," and then what? to keep us from falling, and preserve us blameless until the day of his coming. Amen! even so, let it be done unto us.

J. E. E.

"BABYLON IS FALLEN, IS FALLEN."

J. E. CLARK.

There is no hope of regenerating the church of Rome. In the language of Revelation—"Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold [or den] of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird. For all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, and the kings of the earth [the old Roman earth] have committed fornication with her."

We have brought to view in Rev. 17 a harlot woman, arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication. And she has a name written upon her forehead—"Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots [or fornication] and abominations of the earth." Thus we ascertain whom Babylon the great represents; a corrupt religious system, with a pope at its head. There is no church on earth that will answer the description here given (Rev. 17: 18) but the Roman Catholic church, having her seat at Rome. This is the bloody persecutor, intoxicated with the blood of the saints of God. Her judgment and fall are brought to view in Rev. 17 and 18, which we consider in the past. This whole system is but a mass of gangrene, and there being no hope for it, the sooner it passes from human sight the better. Through the providence of God, Rome has been entered by the friends of liberty, of Luther, and of God.

The moment the pope was declared infallible, he lost the last vestige of his temporal power. July 15th, 1870, Napoleon, the pope's firmest friend and ally, declared war against Prussia. On the 18th, the council of Seventy in the Vatican declared the Pope infallible. Pope Pius IX. declared (by a set of the vilest men on earth) infallible. Previous to all this transaction a man dare not lift up his voice at Rome in preaching Jesus Christ; if he did, he would have been imprisoned for life.

How is it now at Rome? Jesus is preached freely in the very hearing of the infallible pope; churches and Sunday schools are established, and are well attended. Over forty thousand copies of the New Testament have been distributed and sold at Rome. The free Christian Testament is published in Rome without the permission of the pope. Is not this a wonderful change? Over the door, on one of the principal streets in Rome, bright golden letters meet the eye, which read as follows—"General Depot of the London Bible Society." This is indeed a triumph. And a singular fact in connection with the establishment of this "Depot" is, that it faces, on the opposite side of the Tiber, the Vatican, from the windows of which, and without glasses, the "old gentleman" may read the sign to his infallible heart's dissatisfaction.

Babylon the great is fallen, has gone down, and shall be found no more at all. What next? The saints shall possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever.

After the fall of Babylon, what does John hear? A great voice of much people in heaven (the symbolic heaven) saying, "Alleluia; salvation, and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God."

We may soon expect the visible, personal appearing of Jesus Christ in the clouds of heaven. These are important moments. Therefore we should watch.

THORNS.

Every one has a thorn sticking him. The housekeeper finds it in unfaithful domestics; or an inmate who keeps things disordered; or a house too small for convenience, or too large to keep cleanly. The professional man finds it in perpetual interruptions, or calls for "more copy." The Sabbath school teacher finds it in inattentive scholars, or neighboring teachers that talk loud, and make a great noise in giving a little instruction.

One man has a rheumatic joint, which, when the wind is north-east, lifts the storm signal. Another a business partner who takes full one-half the profits, but does not help earn them. These trials are the more nettlesome because like Paul's they are not to be mentioned. Men get sympathy for broken bones, and mashed feet, but not for the ends of sharp thorns that have been broken off in the fingers.

Let us start out with the idea that we must have annoyances. It seems to take a certain number of them to keep us humble, wakeful, and prayerful. To Paul the thorn was as disciplinary as the shipwreck. If it is not one thing, it is another. If the stove does not smoke, the boiler must leak. If the pen is good, the ink must be poor. If the editorial column be able, there must be a typographical blunder. If the thorn does not pierce the knee, it must take you in the back. Life must have sharp things in it. We cannot make up our robes of christian character without pins and needles.

We want what Paul got—grace to bear these things. Without it, we become cross, censorious and irascible. We get in the habit of sticking our thorns into other people's fingers. But God helping us, we place these annoyances in the catagory of the "all things that work together for good." We see how much shorter these thorns are than the spikes that struck through the palms of Christ's hands, and remembering that he had on his head a whole crown of thorns, we take to ourselves the consolation that if we suffer with him on earth we shall be glorified with him in heaven.

But how could Paul positively rejoice in these infirmities? I answer that the school of Christ has three classes of scholars. In the first class we learn how to be struck with thorns without losing our patience. In the second class we learn how to make the sting positively advantageous. In the third class of this school, we learn how even to rejoice in being pierced and wounded; but this is the senior class, and when we get to this we are near graduation into glory.—S. S. Times.

— The joy of the spirit is a delicate, sacred deposit, and must be kept in a pure casket, as an unholy breath will dim its lustre and fade its freshness.

— He loseth little that loseth not God.

— To tell a falsehood is like the cut of a sabre; for, though the wound may heal, the scar of it will remain.

— If the whole world should agree to speak nothing but the truth, what an abridgment it would make of speech!

— Adversity is the christian's harvest time.

— The actions of men are like the index of a book; they point out what is most remarkable in them.

— Justification is a work done for us, regeneration is a work done in us, and purity is the state into which the soul is thereby introduced.

— People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy after.

What a friend we have in Jesus,
All our griefs and woes to bear;
What a privilege to carry
Every thing to God in prayer.
O what peace we often forfeit,
O what needless pain we bear,
All because we do not carry
Every thing to God in prayer.

— Never lose an opportunity of seeing any thing beautiful. Beauty is God's handwriting —a wayside sacrament; welcome it in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower, and thank him for it, the fountain of loveliness; and drink it in, simply and earnestly, with your eyes; it is a charmed draught, a cup of blessing.

— If we would have powerful minds we must think; if we would have faithful hearts we must love; if we would have strong muscles we must labor. These include all that is valuable in life.

AFTER CAMPMEETING.

L. M. CHAFFEE.

Along the old, familiar, trodden way,
That leads me to the consecrated ground,
Where late with voice of prayer and song of praise
I heard the echoing forest trees resound,
With dusty feet, in dreamy mood, I come
This mild, inspiring autumn afternoon,
To see the dreary emptiness around,
And hear the solemn stillness, if I can.

As when the wondering, thoughtful traveler,
Beyond historic Jordan's winding flood,
Beholding far away those ancient tents,
Whose time-defying walls and doors, 'tis said,
Resound and ope no more to voice and hand
Of long-departed, long-forgotten men,
In fancy revels in the distant past,
And dreamily compares the Now and Then,—

So I in spirit turn me backward now
To days whose memory my heart delights,
When scattered pilgrim bands from far and near,
Whose hearts the 'like' most 'precious faith' unites,
Came up once more to tread these rustic courts,
And, on their journey toward the heavenly home,
Take courage for the coming "little while,"
The patient waiting-time till Jesus comes.

Among the gay, yet sad September leaves,
The sighing breezes pass with lonesome sound;
No voice of joy through all the silent camp—
No tread continual on the dusty ground;
But roofless tents and naked frames and seats,
And pulpit mute where sits no listening ear.
Where is the preacher? Where the living throng?
And will they all again be gathered here?

God knoweth. Future things we cannot tell.
But when the scenes of mortal life shall end,
When down from heaven, the far-off, holy heaven,
The golden-streeted city shall descend;
When all the scattered tribes of God's elect
Shall find their everlasting home of peace,
Then all the faithful ones, and only they,
Shall meet once more in better scenes than these;
And after earth's long night of watch and toil,
Shall greet the dawn of God's unending day,
Where Jesus shall his people feed and lead,
And God's own hand shall wipe their tears away.

THE HAPPY MAN AND TRUE GENTLEMAN.

The happy man is one that is born in the city of regeneration, in the parish of repentance unto life, and educated at the school of obedience, and lives in the town of perseverance. He works at the trade of diligence, notwithstanding he has a large estate in the country of christian contentment, and many times does jobs of self-denial. He wears the plain garb of humility, and has a better suit to put on when he goes to court, called the robe of Christ's righteousness. He often walks in the valley of self-abasement, and sometimes climbs the mountain of spiritual-mindedness. He breakfasts every morning upon spiritual prayer, and sups every evening upon the same; he has meat to eat that the world knows not of, and his drink is the sincere milk of the word. Thus happy he lives, and happy he dies.

Happy is he who has gospel submission in his will, due order in his affections, sound peace in his conscience, sanctifying grace in his soul, true humility in his heart, real divinity in his breast, the Redeemer's yoke on his neck, a vain world under his feet, and a crown of glory over his head.

Happy is the life of such a person; in order to gain which, pray fervently, believe firmly, wait patiently, live holy, die daily, watch your heart, guide your senses, redeem your time, love Christ, and hope for glory.

A true gentleman is God's servant, the world's master, and his own man. Virtue is his business, study his recreation, contentment his rest, and happiness his reward. God is his Father, the church his mother, the saints are his brethren, and he is a friend to all that need him. Heaven is his inheritance, religion his mistress, loyalty and justice his two ladies of honor, devotion his chaplain, chastity his chamberlain, sobriety his butler, temperance his cook, hospitality his housekeeper, Providence his steward, charity his treasurer, piety the mistress of his house, and discretion is porter to let in and out as is most fit.

Thus is his whole family made up of virtues, and he is the true master of the family. He is necessitated to take the world in his way to heaven, but he walks through it as fast as he can; and all his business by the way is to glorify the name of God, and do good to mankind. Take him in two words, he is a man and a christian.—Sel. by Z. P. Hibbard.

HOLINESS.—The duties of holiness are very irksome to men who are not in the element of holiness; but when once those men are cast into the element of grace, they bear ten times more and feel no weight, but are refreshed thereby with joy unspeakable.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

A SUNDAY STORY.

A story, children? Well, draw close,
Ere die the Sabbath hours,
And ere your weary eyelids droop
Like little wilted flowers.

We love to make this day, you know,
The brightest of the seven;
To think of all things sweet and sure,
Of Christ, and rest, and heaven!

* * * * * * *

The weary day was spent, and now,
As night fell on the sea,
A group of men pushed out their boat,
And launched it silently.

Their sunburned faces, as they rowed,
Were full of earnest thought,
For they had been with Christ all day,
And pondered what he taught.

From him, that day, with wondering awe,
Their hands had taken bread,
And with a few small "barley-loaves"
The multitude had fed.

And now, when eventide was come,
He had withdrawn apart,
For weariness and care oppressed
His sacred, loving heart.

The night grew black with heavy clouds,
The wind roared on the sea,
And tossed the frail boat, while the men
Toiled hard and hopelessly.

A shimmer on the waters black!
A gleaming through the storm!
And to their straining eyes appeared
A bright approaching form.

No wonder that they shook with fear,
And raised a startled cry!
But hark, the voice so calm and clear,—
"Fear not, for it is I!"

Oh, think the rapture of their hearts,
When, 'mid the storm's fierce din,
The little wave-tossed boat received
Their Lord and Master in!

And children, life has many a cloud,
And sorrow many a storm,
And happy those who see through all
The dear Lord's gracious form!

No matter how the waves may roar,—
How black may be the sky;
His voice floats sweet above the storm,—
"Fear not, for it is I!"

IT WILL HURT MY FATHER.—Two little boys were at play in a garden where there was a tree full of ripe cherries.

"O, Frank," said one of them, "let us pick some of the red cherries; look how fine they are!"

"No, Willie," said the other, "we must not touch them. You know we were told not to pick one of them."

"But, Frank, there is no one here to see us; you need not be afraid. And if your father should find out that we took them, he is so kind that he would not hurt you."

"That is why I will not touch them," said Frank to Willie. "I know my father would not hurt me; yet for me to disobey would hurt my father, and I would not wish to grieve him."

Did not that little boy know what it was to obey? We think he must have loved his father.

POLITE TO GOD.—"Mother, should we be more polite to people than we are to God?"

"No, my son; but what made you think of it?"

"Well, so I thought; but last evening when Uncle Ralph was walking in the garden with Miss Helen, little Carlo ran up to him and put his muddy paws on his clean, white pants, and he said an ugly word. He looked scared; his face turned red, and he said, 'Do excuse me, Miss Helen.' And I wonder if he will ask God to 'excuse' him when he says his prayers to-night."

"I hope so," said his mother; "but you had better remind him of it."

"Yes, mother, I will."

WATCHING ONE'S SELF.—"When I was a boy," said an old man, "we had a schoolmaster who had an odd way of catching boys. One day, he called out to us, 'Boys, I must have close attention to your books. The first one of you that sees another boy idle, I want you to inform me, and I will attend to his case.' 'Ah,' thought I to myself, 'there's Joe Simmons, that I don't like. I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book, I'll tell.' It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master. 'Indeed,' said he; 'and how did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' said I. 'You did; and were your eyes on your book when you saw him?' I was caught, and I never watched for the boys again."

SANITARY NOTES.

C. COLEGROVE.

COLD FEET.

Many persons are much troubled with the inconvenience of cold feet, which, besides being itself a serious discomfort, is constantly menacing or producing positive injury to the health. It may be a consequence of simple debility, but is perhaps more often due to some derangement in the circulation. There is unequal distribution of the blood, and the various internal organs are therefore receiving an undue supply; especially is this true of the brain and spinal marrow. In perfect health the blood is equally and properly distributed to every part of the body. Now, this evil of cold feet, so comparatively common, and so often and so wrongly neglected, should be promptly corrected. If not, then look out for headaches, and congestions, spinal tenderness, bronchitis, and consumption.

What shall be done? If necessary have a daily pediluvium, or hot foot bath. Of course warmth to the feet should be artificially applied, by the means of various heated substances, as convenience may supply, when the heat of the stove is not directly available. Gentle and frequent frictions may be advisable. Attention should be given to exercise and diet also. But I merely wished to mention one convenient form of local application to the feet. Let fine mustard be carefully and evenly sprinkled upon the inside of the stocking feet, and the stockings worn sufficiently to excite gentle heat and irritation of the skin. This is a very convenient, and, I think, useful expedient, for it has the advantage of being always available, and the mustard is kept just where it is wanted, without danger of being scattered and mis-adjusted.

Let no one think this a trifling subject. Thousands are asleep in death through inattention to the state of their feet. If the feet are cold, there is too little blood in the capillaries of the skin. Necessarily, some other part of the body has more than its proper allowance. And, unhappily, those portions are but too often some of the vital organs, such as the brain, and lungs, and spinal cord. Nay, the joints suffer also, and hence rheumatism is another result. Look out and keep the feet warm. After awhile the difficulty may be so far overcome as to require much less attention.

But consider the superlative folly of those who venture out in thin shoes, and whose lower extremities are poorly and thinly clad. And this sometimes for fashion's sake. I know it may be said that cold feet are a consequence of disease. True, a consequence sometimes, but more often a cause, and if a consequence, of some fault in the system, such as local congestion of some organ; then the evil is intensified by allowing the lower extremities to lack their due supply of blood. Illustration. A woman recently confined, was suddenly attacked with congestion of the brain, simulating somewhat that dangerous disease known as puerperal mania. Coincident with this development was marked coldness of the feet. Happily, by instant and diligent effort, the attack was speedily subdued.

Again, a young lady of my acquaintance actually wet her shoes before going to a party, in order to get rid of the nuisance of their squeaking. Result—she sleeps in the cemetery on the hill. Her excessive and imprudent care cost her life. This subject leads me to speak of another very extensive trouble, almost exclusively peculiar to women. I mean

SPINAL TENDERNESS.

This is, in a large proportion of cases, a marked feature of the habitual poor health of many women. The palmar surface of the thumb may be applied to the vertebræ, from the head downwards, and somewhere there is tenderness, with flinching from the pressure, more generally between the shoulders. Now this is a case of congestion, or undue vascularity of the spinal cord or its sheath, or the intervertebral and ligamentous connections, also, possibly. The numerous nervous branches that pass off from the chief or trunk line are naturally affected. No wonder there is poor health, neuralgia, and nervousness. Such cases are truly entitled to commiseration. And sometimes they are hard to cure. The operation of remedies is slow and sometimes uncertain. Still perseverance may accomplish wonders. Obviously, the remedy is counter-irritation to the back, steadily and courageously persevered in, while attention is given to promote and maintain warmth to the lower extremities. A liniment of a little sweet oil with ammonia, and also a little croton oil, rubbed on different portions of the spinal surface from time to time, taking care not to touch the oil to the eyes by accident, as it would produce severe smarting. (The attendant might inadvertently do this.) The liniment should be carefully prepared, and carefully and faithfully used. We think the counter-irritation is, humanly speaking, almost indispensable to revovery. If I am not mistaken, this expedient was employed with great thoroughness and good effect in the case of Senator Sumner's injury in the Senate chamber.

It is useless to expect perfect health along with serious spinal irritation. Thousands upon thousands of American women are suffering from this difficulty. It is often the result of simple inattention. Want of exercise, nervous excitement, cold feet, and sometimes insufficient or unsuitable nutrition, may be numbered among the causes. The malady itself is the fruitful source of much suffering and poor health. Attention should be given to any and every means of invigoration.

APPLES AS FOOD.—Besides the large amount of real nutriment which the apple contains, in the shape of saccharine, mucilage, etc., it also contains vegetable acids, aromatic principles, and is exceedingly valuable medicinally, being cooling, laxative, and useful in various inflammatory diseases.

During a season of great scarcity in England, apples were used as common food by the laborers, and it was asserted by them that they were superior to potatoes, or, in other words, they could "stand their work" on baked apples without meat; but a potato diet required meat, or some other as substantial food, to enable them to sustain themselves. On the continent of Europe, especially in France and Germany, and wherever the apple is easily raised, it is used in its season as a common food by the laboring classes; and why not in the United States, where it is one of the commonest and most easily raised of cultivated fruits? . . .

There is no fruit that is capable of so multifarious changes in its manner of being served as the apple; none so eagerly craved by the multitude. Why, then, should its use not be universal?—Nashville Union.

WALL PAPERS.—Dr. Hall notes the fact that many persons sicken and die after moving into new houses; others after sleeping in somebody's "spare room;" and traces the cause to poison in the paper on the wall. In one case four children in one family sickened and died one after another; and it was found that the paper on the wall contained three grains of arsenic to every square foot. Curtains, carpets, and wall paper having a green color should be avoided.

PURITY IN A SICK ROOM.—In a sick room there should be no standing liquid, not even the purest cold water. The tainted atmosphere is sure to settle upon its surface which, if not drank, is evaporated, mingled with the air, and taken into the lungs to be incorporated with the blood. Everything perishable by evaporation should be removed from the room, as food and fruits, as the air is contaminated by their exhalations.

REMEDY FOR CORNS.—Mr. Rose, a merchant of San Diego, announced that these creators of so much torment, can easily and surely be cured by applying gum arabic mucilage every evening on going to bed. He had them for nearly forty years, and tried nearly all the corn remedies in existence without relief, until he tried the above, which rapidly cured him in a few weeks.

FRENCH and English physicians almost universally prescribe a free use of lemon juice to effect a cure for the rheumatism.

HYMN.

1 Thess. 5: 22. 2 Cor. 8: 13.

Thou Father of mercies, whose love, never ceasing,
Comes down in rich blessings from day unto day,
Like the flow of a river whose waters, increasing,
Give verdure and richness to all on its way!

Oh! help me to live for the good of my brother,
Whose faith may be weak, and his knowledge quite small;
The disciples of Jesus must help one another,
Avoiding what causes another to fall.

Those things in themselves I deem harmless and proper,
And think it not wrong to indulge or enjoy;
If by my indulgence my weak brother suffer,
My example is bad when his faith I destroy.

Each act of indulgence, though seemingly lawful,
Like the eating of flesh or the drinking of wine,
If a snare to my brother, is wicked, is awful;
Self-denial is noble, is godlike—divine.

PERFECTION.

H. PRATT.

"The law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better hope did."

Then it is the better hope that produces perfection, and this is what John says—"He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Who believes it? Is John right or not? Who says No? The law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. It was added by reason of trangression, till the seed should come to whom the promises were made. And by him (Christ) all that believe are justified from all things from which we could not be justified by the law of Moses. The law was weak; it could bring nothing to perfection. See Rom. 8: 3—"For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh," God could accomplish through his Son.

"The bringing in of a better hope" made our Captain perfect. Heb. 5: 9—"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them [who feel well?] who obey him." How was Christ made perfect? By suffering,—suffering for well doing. Was he ever imperfect? Yes. How? In character, as in stature, and both were perfected in due time; the former by suffering, as saith the Scriptures. He did not always feel well. He was a man of sorrows, but the Father always felt well toward him. "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Being the Son of God, he was partaker of the divine nature, as well as of the human, and has been touched with the feelings of our infirmities, and consequently knows how to succor us when tempted.

This better hope makes us partakers of the divine nature, as saith Peter, and enables us to escape the corruptions that are in the world, through lust, and enables us to pray for our enemies and do good to them that hate us, and thereby be perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect.

There was one man who had kept the law, who wanted to do some good thing, and get eternal life. The Savior told him that if he would be perfect he must sell and give alms, and follow him; and such as love possessions more than the cause of God, will doubtless have to do the same, to be perfect.

God has not left us to our feelings, impressions, or consciences, about this matter, as those that are without law. He has a perfect will, and it is good will, and acceptable to all his children. To understand this will, we have directions in Rom. 12: 1, 2. After learning his will, if we have the better hope, it will be our greatest pleasure to do it. This will be perfect obedience, perfect submission, perfect love.

A knowledge of his will is all important in the estimation of Paul, and he says all Scripture given by inspiration of God "is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect."

Again—"Now the God of peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will." Here is something to do, and when Abraham got hold of this "better hope," it made him obedient, and by works was faith made perfect. This is pleasing to God, and without faith it is impossible to please God.

If, then, perfect faith is pleasing to God, which produces corresponding work, then he loves us; certainly, if he is pleased with us. Now having obtained his love, and the love of Christ, how shall we abide in his love, so that we may have boldness in the day of judgment? Hear him. "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love."

Brethren, is not this sufficiently plain, whether we feel sorrowful or joyous? If we keep his commands we shall abide in his love. This is the perfection of the better hope. "The law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did." Blessed be God forever. Amen.

— The great wealth of the world is its great and good minds.

HE IS COMING.

J. W. THOMAS.

"The Lord himself shall descend from heaven."—1 THESS. 4: 16.

Jesus is in heaven. He came into this world over eighteen centuries ago. He lived a holy life, and died on the cross for his enemies. He was buried in Joseph's sepulchre, and a band of soldiers was stationed to guard it until the third day. A great stone was placed at the door of the tomb and sealed, so that it was impossible for any one to steal him away. On the morning of the third day, an angel from the courts of glory rolled the stone away and sat upon it. He said to the women who had come to embalm the body of their Lord—"Be not affrighted; ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; he is risen, he is not here; behold the place where they laid him."

The same day at evening Jesus showed himself to his disciples. While they were gathered together suddenly he appeared in their midst and said—"Peace be unto you! But they were terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and blood as ye see me have. And while they yet believed not from joy and wondered, he said unto them, Have ye any meat? And they gave him a piece of a broiled fish, and of a honey-comb. And he took it and did eat before them. Then were the disciples glad when they saw the Lord."

Thus the evidence concerning his resurrection is very clear. It was the very same Jesus that the disciples had loved and followed before his crucifixion. He was with them on different occasions until the day in which he was taken up; after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen, "to whom also he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. And being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. When they therefore were come together, they asked of him saying, Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? And he said unto them, It is not for you to know the times nor the reasons, which the Father hath put in his own power. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you.; and ye shall bear witness unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel, which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

Jesus, then, is in heaven. He has not been back to this earth since he went there. No matter what some tell us in reference to his coming at "death," or at the "destruction of Jerusalem." We know that he has not yet come. Our eyes have not seen him. But we believe he lives, and with Peter we can say, "Whom having not seen, we love, in whom, though now we see him not, yet believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." He lives as an advocate at the Father's right hand. He lives as our High Priest, presenting the merits of his own blood in the heavenly sanctuary. He lives as a Prince and a Savior.

But he will come again. "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Blessed hope! It has been the support and comfort of the church through ages past. Good old Job in the midst of his severe afflictions looked forward to that glorious day. "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand in the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." He will speak; and the dead will hear his voice. Our loved ones will come from the land of the enemy. David said—"As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness; I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Isaiah sang with eloquent lips—"He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces, and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth. And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him; we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."

This was the hope of all the prophets and apostles. This was the comfort Paul administered to his afflicted brethren—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others that have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we be forever with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words." So let it be.

CHRIST OUR EXAMPLE.

C. H. BARNES.

"He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2: 6.

As christians, we profess to abide in Christ, for we are taught that if men do not abide in him they are cast forth as branches and are withered. Now after making this claim of relationship to Christ, do you walk in harmony with it? that is, do you walk in accordance with Paul's request—"I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called."

Do you ask what it is to walk worthy of your calling? I will tell you what it is. It is this: "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."

Jesus walked in humility. He was a man of humility. It is said of him that "he humbled himself." He was "meek and lowly in heart." His followers were chosen from the lower ranks of men. Peter and Andrew were fishermen. So were James and John. Matthew was a tax gatherer or receiver of customs. He was humble in his manner of preaching; so humble that the common people heard him gladly. He was willing to preach wherever he could find hearers. He preached on the mountain top and by the seashore. He expounded the Scriptures in the synagogue, and he also declared their contents while resting by Jacob's well.

Christian brother, you perhaps are a preacher. Are you as humble as your Master? Are you willing to declare your message to the lowly? If you have but a small attendance, can you joyfully preach the word? Christian brother or sister, are you humble? do your friends and associates think you are? and if they do not, is n't the main reason because you give them but little evidence that you are?

Jesus was charitable. He was mindful of the fact that "the flesh is weak," and knew how to make proper allowance for infirmities of his fellow creatures. Even in his dying hour, having undergone an unjust trial and condemnation; having been subject to abuse, mockery, and insult, and having been nailed to the cross on which he was to die; with heavenly compassion and tenderness he is led to pray, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." Notwithstanding their hard-heartedness, he could see in their very ignorance occasion for clemency.

Are you, reader, possessed of a similar spirit? When some one has offended you, do you ever consider the imperfectness of human nature? Instead of being so ready to condemn, think if there be not some extenuating features which call for mercy on your part.

Jesus was charitable. His theological platform was broad compared with that of many of his followers, and whoever is like him is free from bigotry. A bigot is one who is so wedded to certain opinions that he has but very little if any sympathy for those who belong to any sect or party. All who do not subscribe to his confession of faith, he is ready to consign to the regions of the damned. He has no love, no sympathy, no good wishes nor prayers for any enterprise carried on independently of his party. Good works and pious undertakings may be engaged in, yet if they follow not with him, he would forbid any and all men to cast out a single devil.

Now I affirm that if a man be abiding in Christ his Spirit will banish such a disposition, and will lead its possessor to fully endorse our Savior when he rebuked the uncharitableness of his disciples for forbidding a man to cast out devils because he followed not with them. When told of this their adventure, his reply was, "Forbid him not, for he that is not against us is for us." This sentiment needs to be repeated in the present time, for it is a lamentable fact that the same selfish spirit Jesus then rebuked is only too manifest even now. Men bearing the name of Christ have yet so little of his spirit that they have nothing but frowns for many a noble work, simply because they did not originate within the narrow borders of their own circle. O poor, weak humanity! remember Jesus does not thus feel, but says "he that is not against us is for us."

Further, for a platform of christian fellowship, true love will adopt one as broad as that laid down by our Savior. On a certain occasion, being told that his mother and brethren desired to speak with him, he improved the occasion by stretching forth his hand toward his disciples saying, "Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother."

If a man be doing the will of God; if He look upon him with approval; if the Savior receive him as his brother, who are you, or what am I, that we should refuse to fellowship him whom the King delighteth to honor? Christian love led John to write that "every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him"; and if we possess it, it will lead us to thus feel and act also. Reader, is it thus with you?

Jesus relied upon God under all circumstances. He delighted to do his will. He loved to pray. At all times and under all circumstances he manifested the principles of the religion which he designed to establish. Having thus lived, he has left his people an example that they should follow his steps.

Brother, sister, how does your life compare with your profession? If you say you are abiding in Christ, to be consistent, you ought "also to walk even as he walked."

— A great soul will be strong to live as well as strong to think.

THE 1000 YEARS OF REV. 20.

L. BOUTELL.

WHERE are they located? A few suggestions I may be permitted to utter. They are very important, as they relate to the manner and time of Christ's coming. We can often tell more readily what a thing is not, than what it is. It may be so with this passage. Since I first commenced the study of the Bible relating to the application of the truth to the events as they are to come in their order, I have found it best not to urge or put a passage where it does not belong. The thousand years and the binding of the devil are associated, and necessarily go together. If you cannot find the one, then you cannot find the other. There should be no unpleasant feeling while alluding to or discussing this question; we should be willing to look it in the face, and all the disciples of Jesus would be pleased to have him disposed of as soon as possible and consistent with the divine plan.

Now to the question. Is there a promise in the Bible that the "devil" that "goeth about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour" shall ever be bound? that devil whom when ye resist shall "flee from you"? He has tempted, worried, and made havoc of the church everywhere, getting fearful control of men, both mentally and physically; and while this mighty warfare has been going on, he has been multiplying his subjects and will continue to do so till Jesus comes. Not an intimation anywhere in the Bible that he is to be bound. He is loose now, and doing his best to deceive, drag down, and destroy, is he not? He knows his time is short, and he exerts himself to his utmost to enlarge his dominion. Will he not till Jesus comes make all possible progress?

Well, what advantage to bind the old liar, when Jesus comes and takes his own to their chambers till the indignation be overpast? How could he hurt them then? All the loyal subjects of Christ are out of his reach, housed away safely. No need of binding for the safety of the church. And in the winding up of events there is no place for the binding of the devil.

At the sounding of the last trump the dead shall be raised, the righteous incorruptible. Is there any trump to sound after the last one? Then it follows that all the dead come forth at the sounding of the last trump. The voice of the seventh angel has been heard crying—"The hour of his judgment has come," or, "Behold he cometh"; and when it has finished sounding, the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. No time for binding here. Here is a purified kingdom—new earth. No devil here, none to be deceived. The devil and all his subjects have gone in the cleansing conflagration.

Yes, but what do you do with the devil of Rev. 20? Let him stand everlastingly as God put him, a symbol of a God-hating, wicked government. He is used in no other way in the book of Rev. but as a symbol, representing those governments that are in the past. This obviates all those necessary difficulties that trouble you, such as the making of a thousand years between the resurrections of the dead, when Inspiration puts them at the same time, or hour. All hear one voice; all come forth. The field (the world) is harvested at the end of this age, and the tares burned up "root and branch." At the coming of our Lord Jesus, the saints are all caught up to meet him, enter their chambers, and stay—how long? Until the indignation be overpast, and Nahum declares it an "utter end"; and "affliction shall not rise up a second time."

Is it possible the "father of lies" can live after Jesus comes? Will not death and the devil be destroyed together? And will not this be when he is "revealed from heaven in flaming fire"? This being so, shall we not all rejoice to know his destruction is so near? I think the good disciples will respond heartily, So mote it be, the sooner the better.

MY NEW BIBLE.

E. S. WILLARD.

"And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Matt. 21: 22.

The above was the first verse marked; and the sweet experience of faith came with the words as I knelt in prayer. I did believe the Lord would help me now on our return from Alton Bay campmeeting to do my duty at home, and give me an unction for the saints scattered abroad.

We found our home in peace. "The angel of his presence" who had gone and come with us had kept all in perfect safety; and how sweet was the family altar night and morning as we mingled our voices in holy song, reading, and prayers. O, is there anything like religion in this world? What good children it makes; what good parents, friends, and blessed homes! Not sweeter to our tastes were the delicious pears, apples and grapes, all waiting for us in their perfection and profusion, than were the subdued tones of affection and the grasp of the faithful hands that had faithfully worked for our interests while absent, and all because Jesus abode with them and daily renewed their strength. Amid the contending elements of earth, what should we do without Jesus to speak the calm? O my Lord, without this it were better that we had not been born! But he gives the calm that is a calm; he gives the sunshine that is a sunshine; he gives the peace that is a peace. Bless his name!

And now, beloved brethren and sisters, as I think of your songs, your sermons, your prayers, your greetings, I am lifted up, and up, and up, until I feel that I sit in an heavenly place in Christ Jesus, and earth and all its toils for the time are quite forgot. We do bless God that he suffered us to meet with you upon that consecrated ground. It is a token of his love we may never forget. After all this, can we doubt that God has a people in the earth? As soon doubt our own existence! The prayer of faith at the sick-bed and its immediate answer, even while we were yet speaking, told us of the Living God; the precious, loving Spirit manifested from the desk caused us to exclaim—"Behold how these brethren love one another." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." To see the dear servants of God embrace each other in the stand, and weep aloud for joy of heart in view of the blessed truths brought to light in God's holy word, was truly touching,—the North and the South in each other's embrace, made one in the good Samaritan work of binding up the wounds and pouring in the oil and the wine to restore the prostrate traveler. God be praised that we were there to witness it, and that it was there to be witnessed. "God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him."

How blessed to be thus enveloped in God, thus shut in of God like Noah in the ark. How he rode over the waters that were the destruction of a wicked world, because God God had shut him in. Love is the ark that will cause the saints to ride above the flames unharmed.

Then, beloved, let us love one another, for love is of God, and we rejoice to witness that "ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another; but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more"; for time is short, and perils thicken, and we shall need this shutting up in God and he in us in order to stand the fiery ordeal through which we shall have to pass.

Beloved brethren and sisters, our heart burns within us as we contemplate this subject, as the day of glory and of sacrifice looms up before us, when the "little cloud" that is now like a man's hand, and seen but by single watchers, shall overspread the whole horizon of the church, and fall in a copious shower to revive her for her last deadly conflict with the "powers of darkness"; for her last bloody sweat in the Gethsemane that awaits her; where, in her own body, she will fill up that which is behind in her "of the afflictions of Christ," her living Head; and with him, having been "made perfect through sufferings," obtain "eternal redemption" through his blood, and forever sit down with him upon his throne, as he has overcome and is set down with his Father upon his throne. Rev. 3: 21.

Haddonfield, N. J., Sept. 20th.

AM I HOLY?

This is an important question, one that all should be able to answer truthfully in the affirmative, for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." It is not, "am I almost holy, or partly holy, but "am I holy?" Perhaps many who make this inquiry are in some doubt what the inquiry implies and therefore do not try to answer it themselves, but say they will leave it with God. But we should know for ourselves so that we are not deceived in our minds with regard to our standing before God.

I think all will agree that a condition of holiness is one of purity, or entire freedom from sin. But what is freedom from sin? Is it only forgiveness? But forgiveness is only for transgression, and does not affect the condition of the flesh by purifying it of worldly lusts. With only the forgiveness of "sins that are past" there yet remain "fleshly lusts that war against the soul." In the conflict with these inward foes, the justified person may gain many victories and rejoice in them, but he more often finds himself too weak, and they obtain the mastery, and he needs to be justified or forgiven for open transgression again, with only this difference, that whereas before he transgressed wilfully, now he is overcome, but the act is the same, and as hateful in the sight of God. Grieving over it he starts anew only to return to the same condition of condemnation to be forgiven again, and try again. Such an one is continually "laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works" and cannot "go on unto perfection." His journey is but a circle, to come to the same starting point over and over again. When temptation comes there is ever a response in the flesh, and a struggle to keep down the lusts of the flesh lest they prevail, but often in vain. And the victim cries out—"O, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

This person needs a further work within, a cleansing of the flesh, so that his very body may be presented "holy and acceptable unto God;" or, in the words of Paul, "the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and your whole spirit, soul and body be presented blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Here the body is to be blameless and presented so unto the coming of Christ. Here is an explanation of the question, "am I holy?" Is my body blameless? Are there foes within? When temptation comes, is there a response to it in my nature? Am I continually struggling to keep down my passions, lest they gain the victory over my love for Jesus? If so, then those passions are unholy and need something more than conquering. They need eradicating. The flesh needs cleansing in order for the body to be blameless. The spiritual emotions may be all right, but the fleshy emotions are all wrong. In this case the body is not holy, and I think we all believe the body is a very essential part of the man. Now then, am I holy? What shall we say to this inquiry? Is it yes, or no? Let it be candidly considered and candidly answered, even if we find the response to be in the negative. . . .

CAN I BE HOLY?

When once a person knows, or rather comes to a realizing sense of the fact that sin dwells in the flesh, and that how much soever he may seek to do good, yet evil is present with him, then the legitimate and natural inquiry is, Can I be delivered from this power? A deliverance from this condition, so that a person's carnal desires in the flesh are dead, and the whole impulse of the body is spiritual, is the point under consideration. Can the body be controlled by the Spirit of God so that its emotions are not carnal but spiritual? Mark the point. I am not writing about a man's desires for holiness, but about the thing itself. A man may be converted to God so that he loves the things of God and takes delight in his service, but he "finds a law in his members warring against the law of his mind," and the question is, Can he be delivered from this condition?

This is as important a question as the one, "am I holy," for if a person fully realizes that notwithstanding his love to God and his service, there yet remains the "sin in the flesh," it is very important to know whether it must always remain there during mortality, or whether it can be rooted out now.

Must the flesh always in this life be a battle ground of the devil, or can its emotions be made pure so that the warfare will be one against outward temptations rather than inward lusts? Some are always talking of the trouble they have with self. Cannot self be purified so that we have no more trouble with it?

I know of many who think this cannot or will not be done in this life, and so they go on making the best of it, as they say, and don't allow it to trouble them, but leave it for God to take care of, while others mourn over it and are continually struggling for deliverance, and feel downcast because of their condition.

The first class make no progress in divine life to speak of, but are always moving in the same circle round and round. Their emotions die out, but they stick to principle, and will serve God if they die for it, but they always acknowledge that they commit sins every day, and every day they ask forgiveness, and thus they keep on sinning and asking forgiveness, and this is their highest attainment, namely, a pardoned criminal.

The second class are more conscientious, and they mourn and sigh for deliverance perhaps for years, and, with the general teaching of the present day, might mourn on comfortless until their last moments of this life, without receiving that for which they mourn, unless, perchance, light from God illuminates their minds, and suddenly they discover that this inner foe can be dethroned by the power of God, and the whole being be make pure, and they can be "kept by the power of God" from sin.

Can this change be wrought in us? Can our members be made holy and acceptable unto God? Can the foes within be turned out and we have peace? Can we become so filled with the Spirit that there will be no inward response to temptation without? Can our bodies be "blameless" and cease to be the battle-ground between God and Satan? Can we become thus holy?

Dear reader, I beseech of you "by the mercies of God" that you have faith to answer this inquiry in the affirmative. Your growth in grace depends upon thus answering it. Your increase unto the edifying of the body of Christ depends upon it. And then you will be ready for my next inquiry, "How can I become holy?"—FRANK BURR, in Advent Christian Times.

"WHAT IS MAN?"—Ps. 8: 4.

J. W. TAYLOR.

In the second chapter of Genesis we have a record of the creation of man, and there we are informed that after God had created him "out of the dust of the ground," he "breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." From this brief record it is quite evident that breathing into his nostrils the breath of life made him a living soul. So far as his physical organism was concerned, he was perfect before the life was added, but he could not move, could not think, could not act. He was like the engine without the steam: perfect in its mechanism, yet unable to move. The physical organs are all perfect, the brain is ready to act, but something must be done to produce life and consciousness.

Some tell us that this was done by putting a conscious entity in the man already created. They gravely inform us that the Hebrew, n'shamah, from which the phrase "breath of life" is rendered, should be rendered "breath of lives," evincing that God breathed into man two kinds of life—natural and spiritual; and that the spiritual life became the "inner man," the "immortal soul." All the attributes of the man are therefore accredited to this mysterious being inside; it is he that thinks, it is he that speaks, it is he that loves, hates, and desires.

I have before me a Sunday school paper, from which I copy the following:—

HAVE YOU A SOUL?

There are some people so silly as to say that neither they nor any one else have any souls. Queer, is it not? You see it takes a man with a soul to say he has n't one. Well, one of those would-be wise men met a preacher one day, and jeering at him said—

"I'd like to know what is a soul? Come, old fellow, can you tell me that?"

"My friend," said the preacher, "you have asked me that question, not because you wished to learn anything, but to puzzle me. Now, you know, two can play at that game. So, before I answer you, I will ask you to tell me what are the component parts of oxygenated muriatic acid of lime?"

These big words puzzled the man, as I suppose they do you, and he was silent. After a few moments the missionary asked, "Can you tell me? Well, at least you can repeat my question?" Still the man was silent. "Can't you repeat it?" urged the preacher.

"I am thinking," replied the puzzled man.

"Thinking, eh? What with? With your fingers? With your feet? With your hair? What is it in you which thinks?"

The man's looks showed that he was fairly caught in the preacher's trap. And as he did not reply the preacher added,

"Your question, sir, is answered; that which thinks is your soul."

Children, the preacher was right. If we had no souls, we could not think. Trees do not think. Horses do not think. Bodies without souls do not think. It takes a soul to think. So you see how silly it is for people who can think to say they have no souls. Should one of you ever meet one of these silly people, you can say, I know what a soul is; it is that in me which thinks, and loves, and hopes, and grieves.—Sunday School Advocate.

Well, all I have to say is, it was a silly man who wrote the above, if he had a dozen souls.

We learn from the above that "it takes a man with a soul to say he has n't got a soul"! So it is the "soul" that speaks, and not the man. Then what of a dumb man? He must have a dumb soul, for it is the soul that speaks. To say the cause of his dumbness is in the deficiency of the organ of speech, is to admit that the soul cannot speak without the physical organ, and is virtually admitting that it is not the soul that speaks, after all! One position, therefore, is true; it is either the physical man that speaks, or else the dumb man has a dumb soul!

But "it takes a man with a soul to say he has n't any soul." That is, it takes a man with a soul to speak. Then from the same parity of reasoning we must conclude that it takes a jackass with a soul to speak, and Balaam's must have had a soul! To say the beast spoke by the power of God, is to admit that man can speak without a soul, for he may speak by the same power. That is, if God could make the beast speak once without a soul, he can also make man speak a thousand times without a soul. Or did God lend the jackass a soul just long enough to speak once? If he did, then why not assume that he may lend man one just through his lifetime, and then take it back?

But again—"It is the soul that thinks, and loves, and hopes, and grieves." Then we can easily learn whether the soul is immortal, or ceases to exist at the death of the body. Not by asking the wonderful preacher above referred to, however, but by consulting the word of God. David says—"In that very day [i. e., the day of his death] his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 3, 4. See also Eccl. 9: 6,—"Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy, is now perished." So according to God's word, the soul ceases to think, ceases to love, and ceases to hate or envy, when the body dies.

The above article, therefore, instead of being a demonstration that man possesses an immortal soul, as it was intended, is simply a few foolish assertions; calculated, however, to mislead the young. Satan is truly working with all power, and signs, and lying wonders. Even under the cloak of christianity, through the instrumentality of so-called "orthodoxy," he is inculcating his terrible heresies in the minds of the youth of the land. And is God going to hold men guiltless who thus pervert his word, and teach for doctrines the commandments of men?

No wonder men turn infidels when they grow up, and see what absurdities they have been taught. Teach a child that a horse does not think! Surely, it takes a man without a soul to make such an assertion as that. Raise your whip over your horse, and then ask your "preacher" what made him jump.? You did not hit him; he did not feel anything, but he thought you were going to hit him. He thought, did he? Then he must have a soul, for "bodies without souls do not think."

This, however, is true; bodies without souls do not think; and we suppose our preacher above referred to would of course be ready to admit that bodies with souls can think. Probably he never read what Job said, that "every living thing possesses a soul" (chap. 12: 10); if he had he would not have presented such a foolish argument to prove that man has a soul.

No one denies that man possesses a soul, but we do deny that God breathed an immortal soul into man when he breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. If he did, he just as virtually breathed one into the beast, for in Gen. 7: 21 we read—"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath of life (n-shamah), of all that was in the dry land died."

Here the same word occurs again, in its plural form, and is equally applied to man and beast. The same "breath of lives" is in the nostrils of both; and this breath of life constitutes the spirit, which leaves man when he dies. Solomon says, when speaking of man and beast, "Yea, they have all one breath." Eccl. 3: 19, 20. So if the breath breathed into man became in him an immortal spirit, it just as virtually did in the beast. The fact that the phrase "breath of lives" occurs in Gen. 2: 7, does not prove that he possesses two kinds of life, by any means; it merely shows that he possesses the same breath of life common to all animals; hence the breath of "lives." And the pre-eminence that man possesses over the beast is attributable merely to the organization of his physical being.

BLAME is safer than praise. As long as all that is said is said against me, I feel a certain assurance of success. But as soon as honeyed words of praise are spoken for me, I feel as one that lies unprotected before his enemies. In general, every evil to which we do not succumb is a benefactor. As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.—Emerson.

— Let no one count the number of his friends till they are bolted in the sieve of his own adversity, for there is much bran in prosperous friendship.

WESTERN NOTES.

In compliance with an earnest request from D. S. Clark, at Amboy, we commenced meetings there Monday evening, in the Chicago tent, which was pitched in the heart of the village, in the rear of the Methodist church. Bro. Clark is a true man, whose labors in the west have been much blest by the Lord in building up the church of Christ. His health is poor at present. He has a bad cough, and feels an unpleasant weakness and prostration of his physical system. Pray for him.

Bro. C. Marston also resides at Amboy. He is an intelligent, earnest young man, who preaches in the place one half the time. We also met Bro. Kendall here, who is a true minister of Christ. Our meetings at Amboy produced happy results. The quickening power of the Holy Spirit was felt by a goodly number. Several requested prayers for a deeper work of grace in their hearts, and received special blessings. We had reason to thank the Lord for the fruits of the tent-meeting. We trust the results will be lasting. We left the Brn. and Srs. in good cheer, with bright hopes of seeing Jesus in a little while. The prospect is continually brightening, showing very clearly that our hope will soon be realized. The pilgrims were refreshed in looking over the evidences which prove beyond all controversy that the King of kings will appear in a short time to set up his everlasting kingdom.

Monday evening, Sept. 23d, we commenced meetings in the Baptist meeting-house in Rochelle. Last week Bro. Marston held a discussion in the place with D. W. Hull (a Spiritualist), a brother of Moses Hull. So far as we could learn, Bro. Marston did credit and justice to the side of truth. Spiritualism has taken strong hold in the western states, and is spreading its poisonous and demoralizing effects in all directions, ruining the peace of happy families, crushing out every thing sacred to virtue and a pure christianity; being at war with God and the Bible, Christ and his followers. As is arsenic or the bite of a rattlesnake to a healthy constitution, so is Spiritualism to the welfare of mankind. Its effects are evil, and only evil continually. It pulls down and never builds up the best interests of society. Every true lover of humanity should stand firmly against this Satanic delusion, as he would against the spread of small pox.

So far as we could determine, the general religious interest in the west is in a low condition, as is the case in all other parts of the world. Pride, fashion, pleasure and cold formalism are the terms to represent nominal christianity at the present day. While this is true of the mass of professors, there are some noble exceptions in the various churches, who are wholly consecrated to the Lord, and others who are earnestly seeking the "higher life." In Rochelle we found a few of the latter class. Others became newly interested in the subject of holiness, and felt the importance of being pure in heart, in order to be ready to meet Jesus.

We met Bro. Sheldon at Rochelle, who had been holding a few meetings there since the close of the discussion noticed. His health is improving, with a good prospect of a complete cure. He has received much benefit from the use of the Bethesda water from the springs at Waukesha, Wis., owned by Col. Richard Dunbar. The water of the Bethesda springs has a remarkable power to cure Bright's disease, diabetes, hemorrhage of the kidneys, cancer in the bladder, and other diseases of the liver, kidneys and urinary organs. We hear of wonderful cures produced by the use of this water. It has magic healing properties unknown in other remedies for these terrible diseases. Many are using it and receiving the most satisfactory and joyful results. From what we learn of its effects, we do not hesitate to recommend it as the best known remedy for the diseases named. The water can be ordered from Mr. Dunbar at Waukesha, Wis., or from Mr. L. Carroll, 153 Bunker Hill St., Charlestown, Mass. It is sold at $1 per gallon, or $25 per bbl. of thirty gallons.

"PROOFS OF IMMORTALITY."

The "Radical Club" in Boston recently held a meeting, in which the "proofs of immortality" were presented by Mr. Nicholas E. Boyd, Mr. Whipple, Mr. Wetherbee, M. Oliver, Mr. Hinckley, Mr. Verity, and Dr. Bartol. The first speaker is reported as follows:—

"He began with a rapid review of the proofs of individual immortality which had been assumed as conclusive, viz.: The faith in the doctrine, which he declared was falsely assumed to be universal; the general desire for continued existence, which he thought might be a mistake, wisely permitted to occupy the human mind until it should be prepared for something better; the inadequacy of the present life for the development of our faculties, in answer to which he urged that if not fully developed in the individual they might be in the coming, crowning race of the future; the stock arguments drawn from a suppositious knowledge of the divine nature, which appeared to him to be presumptuous; the argument of the progressive nature of the soul, which, even if proved, did not bring to him a conviction of the permanence of the personal consciousness of the individual, since we lived in our children, whether of the brain or of the body; the idea that what is must continue, in support of which he thought that only misty and inconclusive arguments could be urged; the simplicity and oneness of the living agent, which, he said, if proved, proved too much, it demonstrated the immortality of the dog, the elephant, the iguanodon, and the plesiosaurus quite as clearly as that of the human race. The truth of the doctrine must be spiritually discovered, not proved by argument; no plea from without could have any influence, he said, and, for himself, he owned that he had not as yet found anything to convince him."

Mr. Verity said—"After all, death seemed to him like taking a leap in the dark." Mr. Wetherbee believed he was immortal because the spirits had told him so. Dr. Bartol said—"The idea of immortality was one upon which argument was inadmissible."

Thus we find the wise men of the world still groping in the dark on the subject of immortality. Science, philosophy and reason give no proof that man is naturally immortal; neither does the Bible. Their teaching is uniform and harmonious. Every thing in science and nature teaches that man is a mortal being, and the Sacred Scriptures declare the same, and that the only way to obtain immortality, if we die, is by the resurrection of the dead, through Christ. No wicked man, who dies in his sins, can become immortal. He must die the second death, and then remain dead eternally. None but holy persons are to live forever.

A FREE PAPER.

The following sensible remarks are from the Advent Christian Times:—

"What is 'a free paper'? A paper that will publish anything and everything written by anybody and everybody. Such a sheet must needs be of enormous size, in order to contain the matter offered for its columns. And its contents would match a city sewer for variety, and frequently for quality of contents. Orthodoxy and heterodoxy, materialism and immaterialism, Spiritualism, Infidelity, Nothingarianism, Mormonism, Universalism, Restorationism, and all the other 'isms' to the end of the long chapter. For that party in Christendom, or the world, is small or select indeed, which has not one member in whom ability to write well bears no comparison to the desire to appear in print, and who would inequitably take advantage of 'a free paper' to get his or her lucubrations before the public.

There is no such thing published as 'a free paper'; and it is only prating cant to affirm that there is. . . . Every paper is devoted to some purpose (or it has no excuse for existence). Its charge is committed to some man or set of men. They may excel in skill and judgment, or be deficient in the talent necessary to the successful conduct of a periodical. But one thing no editor or editorial committee can do—please everybody, or publish all the matter they receive. Happy the editor who succeeds in pleasing the most people. He will have the credit of publishing what comes nearest to A FREE PAPER!"

A "free paper," in the true sense, would be like a swill pail. No one would want it in his house. Such a paper should be open for articles in defense of Christianity, Infidelity, Spiritualism, Free-love-ism, Catholicism, Protestantism, Mohammedanism, Swedenborgianism, Shakerism, eternal torment, destruction of the wicked, sleep of the dead, the immortality of the soul, resurrection of all the dead, the non-resurrection of the wicked, universal salvation, atheism, no Spirit, no devil, etc., etc. If either of these parties named should be refused the privilege of having their articles inserted, the cry is raised, We need a free paper." We beg leave to differ. We do not believe Christianity needs a "free paper," or that Christ could be honored by such a monster. It is the duty of honest christian men to do all in their power to present to their readers the "pure religion" of Jesus, and to avoid those things which are calculated to divide the body of Christ, which is the church.

LIGHT ADVANCING.

In the Christian Statesman is found the following in relation to the immortality of man and animals. The subject is receiving special attention from able and devoted men, and the investigation usually leads to the conclusion that the Bible nowhere teaches that a part of man is now immortal:—

"Ed. Ch. Statesman:—You profess to be the fearless advocate of truth, and practice more of this spirit than many of the religious journals of the age. You have admitted criticisms on Mr. Talmage's views on hell. These have called out other views and opinions. I do not, probably, agree with any views yet expressed so far as I have seen, but send you an extract from the London Spectator, that I have little expectation you will publish, however much you may be urged to do so. It seems to modify this doctrine of revelation, so that it shall no longer be "fierce as the furies and terrible as a modern hell," and leaves it as it was, an ancient gehenna, which destroys what is not worth preserving. Here then is the extract from the London Spectator.

'There seems room for a word, if you can find space for it, in reply to 'Philosooist,' not so much in the way of argument as history, in reference to the opinion on immortality. Your correspondent says 'if man's immortality be accepted, as proven, certain consequences will follow favorable to the survival of the higher animals.' But what if it be not accepted as proven? There is no small company of our cotemporaries who think that the phenomena of intelligence and moral feeling, taken in connection with animal death, throw more doubt on the natural, eternal immortality of mankind, as proven, than extending a similar hope to the 'higher animals.' Under any theory of evolution, we seem to be compelled either to abandon the doctrine of man's immortality, or to extend the expectation of eternal survival to all living creatures.

In this difficulty, it is not to be wondered at that an ancient belief is reviving with immense force over all Christendom (held, as I understand among others, by the late illustrious Rothe,) that the notion of man's absolute immortality under a sinful condition is a mistake, that it is the very object of the incarnation of the divine life to communicate immortality to mankind, but that its enjoyment will be restricted to regenerate and curable men, the evil residue of the human race, which may resist all the present or future redemptive methods, lasting long enough to receive the due reward of their deeds, in a judgment usually described as 'death,' 'perishing' and 'destruction.' It is evident that under this view of conditional immortality, communicated by supernatural grace, the christian faith of many may be preserved, who at present feel themselves compelled to reject, in toto, a revelation supposed to base itself on an immortality in man which comparative science, both physical and metaphysical, does not seem to support by evidence."

This, sir, is the extract, and it is a doctrine which has been familiar to my thoughts for more than thirty years until now. I can see nothing that conflicts with it, either in history, philosophy, or theology. I would recommend the reading of Henry Constable's work (Prebendary of Cork) on the subject. I would say of the work, though the reprint is very recent, and the book less than one hundred pages, a Connecticut secular paper says it has unsettled the faith of one-half of the orthodox clergy of Connecticut in the doctrine of eternal misery. It is also stated that a large portion of the evangelical ministers of England embrace these views. Is this so? Don't let us try to put out the light, and thus shut the gates of mercy on mankind."

THE INTERNATIONALS.—It is said the International Society propose "to combine every element of strength within their organization, to effect the complete overthrow of the present government of France." Things look very stormy in Europe, and all over the world. It is generally believed by observing men that a terrible revolution is not far in the future. The train is laid, waiting the application of the match that shall produce the awful explosion that shall break up the present order of things. Terrible scenes are rushing up to our doors. The hour is at hand when the christian will feel the need of "the whole armor of God," in order to stand against the embattled hosts of the Prince of darkness.

WHAT IS SPIRITUALISM?—"Man is an immortal spirit, retaining identity and individuality after separation from the physical form, and possessing the power to communicate with earth."—Hudson Tuttle.

A system founded in error cannot be true. This is the case with Spiritualism.

HOLINESS.—In another column will be found an excellent article from Bro. F. Burr, on the subject of holiness. It deserves a careful reading.

RESURRECTION OF CHICAGO.

The rebuilding of Chicago is without a parallel in the history of the world. The amount of building done the present year since April seems almost incredible. The following, from the Chicago Tribune, will give some idea of the Chicago enterprise:—

A YEAR'S WORK.

We know of no words which will convey to persons residing outside of Chicago an idea of what has been done in the way of rebuilding the city, than to say that, beginning on April 15th, 1872, and ending Dec. 1st, 1872, excluding Sundays, counting two hundred working days, and each day of eight hours, there will be completed one brick, stone, or iron building, twenty-five feet front, and from four to six stories high, for each hour of that time. In other words, the buildings of that size and character completed, and that will be completed by Dec. 1st, will average one for each sixty minutes of two hundred days of eight hours each.

This estimate, which will fall below the actual fact, does not include the many stone, brick, iron, and wooden buildings built outside of the burned district, and which alone equal the ordinary new buildings put up in Chicago annually. There is no precedent in the world's history of such a growth; no precedent for such energy and bravery by a people who, within the year, had seen two hundred millions of their property destroyed by fire. The statement will sound extraordinary that, for seven months in 1872—beginning the first day the frost was out of the ground,—there was built and completed in the burnt district of Chicago a brick, stone, or iron warehouse every hour of each working day in that time.

The extraordinary achievement in rebuilding Chicago is not confined to the number of new buildings, but applies equally to their size and their superiority in construction and materials. It will strike those familiar with Chicago before the fire that, while four stories was the general height of business blocks at that time, the present buildings, as a general thing, are at least one story higher, thus adding one-fifth to the warehouse capacity. While the brick structures still bear a large proportion to the whole number of new edifices, the proportion of stone fronts has largely increased,—that material superseding, in many cases, the iron fronts.

Another peculiarity of the new buildings is the greatly increased number of double and and treble stores; that is, stores having fifty and seventy-five feet, and, in many cases, one hundred feet front. While this rebuilding has been going on, the business of Chicago has grown with marvellous rapidity. It has not been confined to any one branch of trade. Excluding the immense trade in building materials, the regular commerce of the city has surpassed even the increase of the past. It is not extravagant to say that the dry goods trade of 1872 will be fifty per cent greater than that of any year before the fire. We have increased by many additions the number of the wholesale dealers in dry goods, and yet there is no old house that has not nearly doubled its trade, and no new house that has not entered upon a prosperous business.

The same may be said of all branches of the wholesale trade. In boots and shoes, millinery, straw goods, hats, caps, and furs, cloths and clothing, groceries, paints, oils, and glass, crockery and glass-ware, iron, steel, and hollow-ware, and, in fact, in every branch of wholesale trade, the sales of Chicago have never equalled those which have followed the resumption of business after the fire. . . .

Merchants who, before the fire, found room enough in a single store of twenty-five feet front and four stories high, now, as a general thing, demand, for their increased trade, a building fifty feet front, and as high as it can be safely built. There are now no "back" or "side" streets in the burnt district. Every street is a thoroughfare, and every block is a business quarter.

This vast labor has not been without an increase in the business of all the great transportation companies tributary to the city. Nor has all this been accomplished without a corresponding increase of population. In June, 1870, the Federal census gave us a population of 299,227, and a year later the directory census gave us 334,270. When it is remembered all that has been done in Chicago since January last, and the increase of trade in every branch of industry, it will not surprise any person to know that our population, to-day, is at least 400,000, a part of which, however, is probably transient.

IN the Crisis of Sept. 18th, in article—"Strange Theology," for "make both from the shadow of a phantom rose," read—"make broth," etc., a typographical error. Also for "city without foundations," read—"city which hath foundations."

THE LAST DAYS.

The phrase, "the last days," so often used in the Scriptures, is not void of meaning, nor is its meaning incomprehensible. It has a uniform meaning when applied to the same thing; that is, it always signifies the latter part of the space of time to which it is applied, never meaning either the first or middle portion of it, but that part which succeeds the middle days of the given space of time; so when the phrase is applied to this dispensation, as it sometimes is, it means the part that succeeds its middle days; and, when applied to the whole history of the world, as it often is, it signifies that part of its history which comes after its middle days have passed away.

A sensible note on this use of the phrase is found in the Douay Bible:—"The whole time of the new law, from the coming of Christ till the end of the world, is called in the Scriptures the last days; because no other age, or time, shall come after it, but only eternity."

Let it be borne in mind that the phrase, "the last days," when applied to a given dispensation, means the latter part of that dispensation, and when applied to the world's age, means the latter part of its continuance, and all will be plain, and apparent confusion will disappear. With this understanding, the great fact looms up conspicuously that we are now living very near the judgment, for Peter took the position that "the last days" had commenced over eighteen hundred years ago (Acts 2:17); not the last days of this dispensation, but the last days of this wicked world.

This being true, there is no escape from the conclusion that the great and notable day of the Lord must soon dawn, and a new world be introduced for the saints to enjoy. This fact, if there were no other proof, shows the end near. W. S.

WHY CHANGE?

The question has been raised, Why did God change his plan of government in setting aside the system of judgeship over Israel, and substituting the Davidic dynasty? And does not this show that the primary plan did not include a kingly reign? We insist that the original plan contemplated the restoration of "the first dominion" to Christ, "the tower of the flock," even long before the judgship or the Davidic dynasty came into existence.

But knowing that a kingdom on the mortal basis would not prove a success, God commenced governing Israel through judges, till the people clamored for a king, when God in his wrath gave them a king, who soon forsook God, and God rejected him, sending Samuel to anoint David, a better man, for his successor, and told him that as long as his children would rule in righteousness, they might succeed him on his throne; at the same time giving David a promise under oath that whether his children would rule in righteousness, or not, he would ultimately place an heir of David on the throne to reign eternally—or, "as the days of heaven"—which heir Peter asserts is Christ.

God's original plan contemplated a kingdom on the immortal basis, but he finally allowed the experiment on the mortal basis, informing David that when the rulers became corrupt he would chastise them, and exterminate the kingdom, till the immortal heir should claim possession—then the kingdom once on a mortal basis, with a mortal king and mortal occupants, will be restored to David's great heir, to exist on an immortal basis, having an immortal King, with immortal occupants in the kingdom.

In other words, though God granted them a kingdom in its incipient stage on a mortal basis, as a trial, his original plan was not thus dispensed with, but merely preceded. W. S.

ARE THE FALLEN ANGELS SOULS OF WICKED MEN?

An effort is now being made to prove that the fallen angels are disembodied souls, by perverting the following text—"And the angels that kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he hath reserved in everlasting chains, under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day. Even as Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, in like manner, giving themselves over to fornication," etc. Jude 6, 7.

The expression, "in like manner," is tortured into a reference to the angels previously spoken of, and thus the statement is made to signify that the Sodomites committed fornication "in like manner" as these fallen angels had once done, and that consequently these fallen angels must previously have lived in human bodies, and have been fornicators before leaving their bodies. Lest others should be puzzled by this claim, I here call attention to the fact that the expression "in like manner" has no reference whatever to the fallen angels, but simply to "the cities about" Sodom and Gomorrah, which "in like manner" to Sodom and Gomorrah had given themselves over to fornication, and had consequently incurred the same calamity: "Sodom and Gomorrah, and the cities about them, in like manner [to Sodom and Gomorrah], giving themselves over to fornication," etc.

This puts a different complexion on the question, and does not charge the crime of fornication upon the fallen angels in like manner to the Sodomites, but simply upon the cities round about Sodom and Gomorrah, which had "in like manner" to the Sodomites practiced fornication, and were also in like manner destroyed for their wickedness.

Again. Let it be remembered that these fallen angels "kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation"; or, as Peter says, "God . . . cast them down." Now if Spiritualism is true, it is an elevation to leave the body, and tartarus is a realm of progression, and "the summer land." What, souls "cast down" to the summer land, and "delivered into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment"? Said Christ—"I saw Satan fall from heaven as lightning." W. S.

IS JEHOVAH A DEAD MAN'S SOUL?

I recently endured the opportunity of listening to a discourse from a Spiritualist, who took the position that Jehovah, who held frequent conversations with Moses, was simply one of the souls of dead men—the soul of one of Moses' predecessors who bore the name of Jehovah in this life, and after being separated from the body it became one of the gods, still retaining the name of Jehovah.

Now if assumption will prove anything the matter is settled till a counter assumption comes in collision with the first; then we must appeal to evidence. We have a right to reject any assumption till the proof is adduced, even if we could not prove the negative; else we would be obliged to concede the assumption that the moon is made of green cheese, simply because we cannot prove the negative.

But in this case we are ready to prove the negative of the unproven assumption that Jehovah is a dead man's soul, for Jehovah existed before man did, and even before the world did, and was himself the Creator both of man and of the earth; and if this is so, Jehovah cannot be a dead man's soul. Here is the testimony—"In the day that the Lord [Jehovah] God made the earth and the heavens." Gen. 2:4. Thus Jehovah lived early enough to make the earth. This was before man existed. "And the Lord [Jehovah] God formed man out of the dust of the ground." Gen. 2:7. Certainly there were no ghosts of dead men then in existence, before men died, and even before men lived. And if there were, who made the man that the Jehovah-ghost came from? and who made the ghost to put into that man, and clothed him with power enough to make another man and a world to live in?

Did man live and die before the earth was created, and before the heavens were formed? This work was done by Jehovah, and if he is a departed soul of a dead man, where and when did that man live, and who created him? He could not have lived on this earth, for it was created by Jehovah; and if such a man lived before Adam, the scripture is contradicted which affirms that Adam was "the first man." If a ghost of a dead man could then make a world, and men to live on it, why not do it now? W. S.

HOME RELIGION.—Religion that flourishes only in the atmosphere of campmeetings, or revival meetings, and deserts its possessor when he gets home, is a poor article. A religion that feasts only on excitement, and gets away from its possessor several times a year, is not worth having. We want a religion that rises above a spasmodic "hurrah" for God. There is a kind that springs from love, which consecrates the affections, and warmly allies us to Christ; and whether in secret or public, at home or abroad, this sacred affinity is the ruling element in the heart. It lives in cold or warm weather, and is not dependent upon excitement for its existence. It thrills the heart at home, and gives a sweet trust in Christ, a warm relish for prayer-meetings, and a strong attachment for secret devotion.

I care more about knowing how religiously a man lives at home, than how loud he shouted at the campmeeting. Home religion is the best. W. S.

SANTA CLARA, CAL.

BRO. GRANT:—We have closed an interesting meeting at Santa Clara, Cal. Brn. Wilson, Reed, and myself, with our wives assisting, have made an effort to get the truth of the Advent faith before this people; and not without success considerably satisfactory in these days of increasing wickedness and unbelief.

Santa Clara has been the headquarters of Roman Catholic influence upon this coast, from the earliest settlement of California. Thousands have gone down to their graves in this superstition as taught in the institutions here. Next Methodism has tried to gain a foothold here, and with considerable success. And probably there is no place upon this coast where there has been more preaching, and more labor bestowed by that denomination than here. Their headquarters, as to schools and influence, is now located on the Almeda; the Roman Catholics still holding on with large and flourishing institutions.

Being residents here, somewhat by necessity, and also by choice, from the fact that in this valley we are under covert from the cold coast winds and fogs further north; we felt that we must have an Advent meeting and church here; and also let the citizens of Santa Clara know our faith and hope, and try to save some. And besides, we made it a subject of prayer and fasting, that this community which has been so long under the influence of superstition, might have the truth of God among them. The Lord has heard us; and as one brother remarked—"Santa Clara now bids fair to become the headquarters of Adventism in turn." We hope, at least, we shall have a growing interest here under the blessing of the Most High.

After a course of prophetic lectures, and doctrinal sermons, Sunday, Sept. 8th, Elder Wilson organized a church of twenty-two members. And last Lord's day (Sept. 15th) Elder Reed received four more into the church, giving them the right hand of fellowship. Others will soon join us. The community has given us a fair hearing considering all things; and the light is shining, praise the Lord.

The people on this coast are reckless and unbelieving; especially is it the case in San Francisco. Four thousand people last Lord's day gathered at Woodward's Gardens, to attend its theatre and amusements. Alas! that city is given wholly to idolatry. It has no sacred day of rest; and its ministers to obtain audiences are preaching "sensational sermons." One clergyman has had a series of discourses on "Dead Flies," "Short Beds," etc., and others on "Hoodlumism," "Insanity," "Valley of Dry Bones," "Æsop's Fables," "Spiritualism;" and so the church is downward. Sound doctrine and Bible expositions nearly or quite abandoned. Heathenism is not far distant. Dr. Stone has progressed, since he left Boston, into the belief and advocacy of the existing ghosts, immaterial or immortal, of beasts, as maintained by the priests of Egypt four thousand years ago.

We go next Lord's day to Vallejo, to give a second course of prophetic lectures and doctrinal discourse; and in the chapel now newly plastered and finished. We hope that that growing church will be abundantly blest, and the city be stirred up to the study of the Scriptures, while some shall be plucked from the burnings of the great day.

Mrs. Fassett is now laid aside from labor by a recent cold, and through exhaustion by overtaxing her physical energies. We ask the prayers of the church at large, that she may be restored to health. We greatly need her aid just at this time to fill the calls pressing upon us. We do not see how she can be spared from the field. Her case is somewhat critical. My own health is now nearly recovered; my eyes are restored to their usual health nearly; they are a little weak when used too long in study or writing. I wish to publicly acknowledge the goodness of the Lord in thus restoring to me me eyesight, and in my recovery to a good degree of health.

We shall probably now remain on this coast to finish up our earthly labors, waiting the Lord's return. Providence seems to indicate duty. It is with a degree of sadness that we look back far to the East, and bid farewell to kindred, friends, and brethren and sisters in the Lord. But we cannot leave the post assigned us by the Great Head of the church (not our own choice, certainly) till he bids us. This people must have the gospel of the kingdom, and the offers of immortality through the great Redeemer.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 22d, 1872, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

TRIBULATION.

F. M. CHAMBERLAIN.

I have been in the furnace of affliction the past season; and O that I could say with Job, "when I am tried, I shall come forth as gold." My feet have been almost dipped in the dark river, and I am now but beginning to recover. I was wasted away greatly, so that after having been gaining slowly for some weeks I only weighed ninety-eight pounds, when quite heavily dressed. I have suffered greatly in various ways, and not the least of my sufferings has been personal abuse. Although I was spared the threatened blows, yet the scourge of the tongue was most cruelly applied. I felt that it was unjust and unmerciful, yet found consolation in the blessed word. This passage came to my mind—"For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God, endure grief, suffering wrongfully."

I have been, as it were, in the lion's den, while I was subject to the abuse of those whose "tender mercies" are cruel. I am too weak to write much at this time, but I desire all who read this to pray that this tribulation may work patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, even that good hope that maketh not ashamed. And also pray that I may be led in the Lord's own way, the way of life and peace.

Oxford, Mass., Sept. 1872.

Correspondence.

From Bro. H. B. Sevey.

BRO. GRANT:—By the Lord's permission, I have attended two campmeetings in Maine; one at Belfast, the other at Mechanic Falls. Both meetings were good, yet quite a contrast in the preaching. At Belfast the preaching was mostly on the signs of the Lord's coming at hand, and a few believe it will be next year. This meeting was well attended, and all minor points of doctrine were absorbed in the one great theme—Jesus is coming; go ye out to meet him. Many received sweet peace by consecrating themselves anew to the Lord. Others were convicted of the truth. Good attention was given to the preaching. The people were quite orderly and kind, as much so as at any meeting I have attended. The Lord's Spirit seemed to hold them.

The meeting at Mechanic Falls was largely attended. Preaching able and eloquent. I should judge by what I heard they were not looking for Jesus to be here next year. One discourse only on the signs, which was by Bro. Couch, and timely. His position was, the generation that saw the sun darkened in 1780 would not all pass away until Jesus would come. I believe it beyond a doubt. Ninety-two years have passed away. A few months more only and Jesus comes. In this meeting the lack was earnest labor for the salvation of sinners, and on the part of many who profess to be looking for Jesus, who seemed to be too far in the background. If any people ought to be awake and in earnest, it is those looking for Jesus. Quite a number found peace in believing; many made a start for the kingdom.

To have a good campmeeting we must work, not spend the time in pleasant talk with dear friends. I have not attended campmeeting for years. I am satisfied the same amount of labor and expense divided into small meetings would result in much more good. Let one preacher or two, with a few brethren, go into a destitute place, spend a week with tents, or in school-houses; by so doing we could hold twenty-five to fifty meetings with less expense than one campmeeting, and many more would be reached with the truth, I am satisfied. I have tried this way; it works well. I was glad of the privilege of attending these meetings; my health improved while there, for which I thank the Lord.

Our quarterly meeting in Rome was one of the best I ever attended. The children came with a mind to work, and faith claimed the promise. The sweet heavenly Spirit at times filled the house. One evening especially, the power was felt by all present. It was remarked that the walls of the house seemed to speak. Some came forward for prayers, and were filled with the Spirit. All praise to Jesus. Sunday evening several came out for prayers, and have found peace in believing. Backsliders are coming home. The work still goes on, meetings evenings through the week following. Brn. Rines, Rhodes, and Jackson, were present to preach the word. Pray for us.

From Sr. L. B. Weaver.

BRO. GRANT:—For the past few weeks, and especially the last few days, my mind has been wholly, or almost wholly, taken up in dwelling upon the goodness of God; and my heart has been so filled with the love of God, at thoughts of his goodness to poor unworthy me; truly it is the goodness of God that leads us to repentance. Last night as I lay here upon my bed in pain too severe to sleep, I thought how good the Lord is, how good he has been to me through all the long years of my life of pain and sorrow, suffering and tears; and as I thought of all the trying places I had been through, and of the sorrowful days and hours I had passed, when near and dear loved ones were taken from me by the cruel hand of death; and how, when all seemed so dark and cheerless, how sweet the words in the blessed volume of truth, spoken by our dear Savior—"Come unto me, . . and I will give you rest." How true those words are. I came to him, and he has given me rest. Sweet rest! so blessed, that words can never express the sweet comfort and peace that there is in Jesus.

My heart overflows with praise to my dear Savior for his great goodness to me. O the rest there is in Jesus, the Good Shepherd of the sheep. I never can tell the true, deep thankfulness there is in my heart to-day, for all his manifold blessings and favors to me. He has been a Father to the fatherless; he has dried the orphan's tears, and given joy for heaviness, and been so good. While I have been deprived of a dear father and mother, He has kindly cared for me; and when days here seemed so dark, and friends so few, that to look at outward things it would seem there was no place for me, 'twas then I heard his loving voice saying, Be of good cheer; I'll strengthen thee, help thee, and cause thee to stand, upheld by the hands of dear Jesus. Yes, I have found him to be a "present help in every time of trouble."

I feel, as I lie here and write in distress and pain, that I never can praise God half enough for his goodness to me. He is my sanctification, my redemption, my all. I know to-day that nothing but the goodness of God could have borne with me; nothing but his loving care, his gentle, winning smiles, his precious loving kindness, could have upheld me in the dark and cloudy day, when all other refuges had failed. O that I could tell everybody, and make them see just how good the Lord is. O that the world might see and love him too. It seems as if eternity will be too short to praise him for all his goodness.

I will be a good and obedient child, by His help. Never did Jesus seem more precious, never did I want to see him more than now.

No. Dana, Mass.

From Bro. C. W. Baker.

DEAR BRN:—Some years have passed since I took any, or, but little active part in the ministerial service of the Lord; although I have never given up the faith once delivered to the saints, nor my hope of receiving a share in the promise made unto the fathers by the prophets, yet for the past few years I have preached occasionally, and remained at home with my family attending to my secular business, preaching occasionally on the Sabbath as the way opened. Some years ago I became involved and exceedingly perplexed in financial difficulties which resulted in bringing me into difficulty with some of my brethren, and as a final result the withdrawal of their confidence in me, which increased my difficulties. I was so engrossed in secular business at the time, that my mind was not in a condition to bear patiently the burden of grief so suddenly forced upon me, as I ought to.

Time has passed on; the judgment is just upon us. I must not, I cannot be lost. There are duties for me to do, responsible duties rest upon me as a husband, a father, a neighbor and a christian teacher. I must be saved. I want my family and others to be saved. I began to preach because I felt it my duty. In an evil hour I gave way, in a measure, to the devices of Satan. The peaceful relations hitherto existing between me and my brethren were disturbed, and for lack of wisdom and christian prudence I became involved in financial and other difficulties, as above stated, which brought me into bondage, destroying in a great degree my activity as a christian preacher.

Six months ago a christian paeacher came to our place to hold a series of meetings. Encouraged and strengthened by the kind teaching and counsel of my christian brother and others, I resolved to start anew in the service of God. I gave up all my secular business, and consecrated myself, my business, my family, and all to God. I started out with new life, new vigor, and new resolutions to live and act in the service of God; the Lord has crowned my feeble efforts thus far with success. Many christian brethren have encouraged me; many new truths have opened to my mind; I want the path clear, the way plain, and all obstructions to my usefulness to be removed.

In view of these facts, and as a christiau duty, I humbly ask all my brethren and sisters to forgive me for all my faults and my wanderings; and at the throne of grace will you ask God for Christ's sake to prepare and keep me in a position where I can meet and perform cheerfully every duty toward my brethren, toward my God, and to my fellowmen? C. W. Baker.

Plainfield, Mass.

Sr. G. J. Myers writes:—"The Crisis is like a Christian visitor every week. I am convinced that nothing short of holiness will fit us to meet Jesus with joy and gladness. I am striving by his grace to have a home in the kingdom with him and all the dear saints of all ages, and rejoice the prospects are that time is short for the waiting ones."

Obituaries.

Vanderbeck. Died in Philadelphia, Aug. 14th, 1872, at her father's residence, of consumption, Sister Fanny J., wife of Dr. C. C. Vanderbeck, of Allentown, N. J., aged twenty years and six months.

Words of comfort were spoken at her funeral by Joseph C. Clark, pastor of the Fitzwater Street M. E. Church. She had been a bride but five short months.

I learn from her mother that she was always a mild, gentle, and loving child, but never made a public profession of religion until May last; since that time her chief object has been to honor Christ and bring souls to him.

When on her dying bed, a few days before she fell on sleep, she expressed a desire to work for Jesus. She obtained a promise from her father, sister and bridesmaid, that they would follow Jesus. Amid all her suffering (and it was great), she murmured not. Her face was lighted with the glory of God, and Jesus was to her "all and in all." Once when in great distress she pointed up and said (with a heavenly smile—"I have one friend that will never leave me—Jesus."

May the friends who so loved her be also ready, for Jesus is soon coming to give eternal life to all who love his appearing. John G. Hook.

Chapin. Died in Brewer, Me., June 2d, 1872, of congestion of the lungs, Bro. Wm. Chapin, aged sixty-six years and six months.

He has been connected with the Advent people since 1842, and we have ever esteemed him as a worthy brother in our faith. He left a wife and children to mourn his loss, which they deeply feel. The church also sustain a loss, and we were reminded of it afresh in consequence of his absence at our late yearly gathering at our Maine Campmeeting (which I think he had not failed to attend for the previous thirty years.) Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Rev. 21: 4. E. V. B. Edgerly.

THIERS AND GAMBETTA.

Sept. 30. A rumor is in circulation that, upon the reassembling of the French Assembly, the question of a successor for Thiers will be agitated by the friends of Gambetta, and the latter put forward as the candidate for the presidency of the French republic. Gambetta is preparing an address to the people, setting forth his views on the present political situation in France. The government condemns Gambetta's course in addressing the people in the provinces. His speeches are considered indiscreet and ill-timed, and calculated to needlessly agitate the country, which needs repose.

THE RECENT ROYAL GATHERING.

Andrassy, in receiving visits from political delegations, has informed them that the recent visit of the Emperor Francis Joseph to Berlin was for the purpose of manifesting the friendliness of Austria toward Germany, and that the conference would be replete with beneficial results, not only to the powers immediately concerned, but to the whole of Europe. Andrassy also stated that no convention was concluded between the monarchs, but the mutual good feeling displayed and the friendly and harmonious nature of the conference were sufficient guarantees that it was held in the interests of European peace.

The Antioch Earthquake.—Many of the reports of the earthquake have been wide of the truth. The total number of killed in the city is eight hundred and twenty-seven, and in the villages between the city and the sea is one hundred and eighty-one. This does not include the number of injured. Of the 3003 private houses in the city, over 1950 were destroyed, and the rest, except fifty or sixty, considerably injured. Over seven hundred shops and offices were demolished, besides khans, baths, all the Christian churches, Protestant, Armenian, Greek and Catholic, and some mosques were seriously damaged. All the grist mills on the river were ruined. The energy of the local Governor in furnishing food and shelter to the sufferers, and in guarding the deserted houses from plunderers, greatly mitigated the horrors of the calamity.—Aleppo Cor. of the Globe.

DOMESTIC.

Death of a Patriarchal Preacher.—A telegram announces the death, at his home in Illinois, of the Rev. Peter Cartwright, of the Methodist church, at the advanced age of eighty-seven. The event was not unexpected, for, in addition to the infirmities of more than four-score years, this venerable man has for months had laid upon him the hand of disease, and last spring there was a premature announcement that he had passed away.

The Rev. Peter Cartwright, who was born in Virginia in 1785, was for a longer time Presiding Elder of the Methodist church than any one of his predecessors or contemporaries, and his missionary labors, entered upon when the region beyond the Cumberland Mountains was a wilderness, form no inconsiderable part of the history of Methodism in America. His autobiography, in which he has recorded the singular experiences of his wonderful career, has many a strange and deeply exciting page. At the age of one-and-twenty he tells us how he struggled with sinners at campmeetings in the woods at Tennessee, struggled with them in a double sense, reproving and chastising their sins with spiritual and bodily weapons. When a riot was made "in meeting," as not unfrequently happened, by the godless young reprobates of the frontier, the sturdy young preacher "went in" and restored order vi et armis. Though he did seek to — prove his doctrine orthodox

By apostolic blows and knocks,

he was ever ready to stand up to the defence of his faith against all assailants, and many a disorderly sinner has gone down before Peter Cartwright's strong arm. Once, it is said, when some one threatened to "whip" him, the fighting preacher said, 'Well, sir, I never like to live in dread. If you really intend to whip me, come and do it now." The man continuing to menace and bluster, the unterrified Peter dismounted from his horse and walking up to the bully said: "Now, sir, you have to whip me, as you threatened, or stop cursing me; or I will put you in the river, and baptize you in the name of the devil, for surely you belong to him." On another occasion, when Cartwright was preaching before the Nashville Conference, the time serving clergymen, whose pulpit he occupied, seeing General Jackson standing in the aisle, leaned over and said in a loud whisper, "General Jackson has come in, General Jackson has come in." "Who is General Jackson?" cried Cartwright, in a voice of thunder, "if he don't get his soul converted, God will damn him as quick as he would a Guinea negro." In both instances the pluck and independence of the man gained for him the esteem and confidence of the men he confronted. The person whom he proposed to baptize in the name of the devil supported him the next year for public office, and Gen. Jackson ever afterwards treated him with the greatest consideration and respect.

Many years ago the Rev. Peter Cartwright removed from Tennessee to Illinois, where he continued to labor for the church to the last. He did not often visit the East, for he had little toleration for the luxuries and conventionalisms of modern times; and it is recorded of him that being assigned a room once on the top floor of the Astor House, he said he should have to blaze his way to get back again. His eloquence was, therefore, but little known by Eastern Methodists, but in the West it lingers like the strain of a trumpet, and it will be long before his name shall be forgotten. In the sixty-eight years of his ministry he estimated that he had received into the church no fewer than twelve thousand persons. —New York Post.

The Ink Plant.—Botanists are engaged in planting all over Europe, says the Swiss Times, a new plant imported from New Grenada, which, if grown successfully, will be a formidable rival to our manufactured ink. It is known as the "Coriaria Shymifolia," or ink plant. The juice which escapes from it has been given the name of "Changi," and is a little red in color, but in the space of a few hours after exposure to the air turns into an intense black. This liquid does not corrode steel pens as the ink in ordinary use, resists chemical substances, and preserves its intensity for many years.

It has been decided that the movement should be continued in the mountains, in preparation for a "grand coup" when the favorable moment arrives. Carlist bands begin to reappear in the Basque provinces, and the leaders of various bodies of insurgents have taken up their posts in the mountains to await the day of conflict.——The prospect of an Ultramontanist Ministry in Bavaria excites considerable anxiety and irritation in north Germany. An official paper makes the ominous announcement that if it suits Bavaria to exact its strict rights, it has nothing to say against it, but the empire also, let it be well aware, will know how to protect its own rights and guard the common safety. In Austria there is still greater excitement, some of the papers seeing in the near future a revival of a German Sonderbund, the old ally of reactionary Austrians. It is to be feared that the new empire has troubles in store from other sources than its ecclesiastical opponents.

"THE COMMON PEOPLE HEARD HIM GLADLY."

"The common people heard him gladly":
 Oh, tender words of life divine!
Where'er among thy blessed teachings
 Runs there a sweeter, fairer line?
The Pharisee with captious question,
 Still doubted what he came to teach;
While watching priest and lordly Levite
 Listened, to catch him in his speech.

The ruler over great possessions,
 Though sorrowful, came back no more;
And kingly Herod, conscience-smitten
 For what the bloody charger bore,
Trembled within his guarded chamber,
 Lest that which bought a woman's smile
Had breathed again, and stood before him,
 With watchword won on Patmos isle.

But common folk, in sin and sorrow;
 The fishermen with broken net;
The hungry crowd upon the mountain;
 Meek Magdalen, with tresses wet;
Sweet children with their speech unfettered
 And unrebuked, about his knee;
The triple household, meek and lowly,
 Whom Jesus loved at Bethany;

The sick, the blind, the lonely widow—
 All homeless ones, in this akin,
That he too had no waiting pillow,
 No home where he might enter in—
What wonder these, the common people,
 Should hear him gladly as he told
The story sweet of homes in glory,
 To them so new, to us so old!

He wore no trailing robe of splendor,
 He asked no incense-clouded rite;
His temple was the sky above him,
 His crown the starry one of night;
Mingling with publicans and sinners,
 Hungry and weary by the way,
He spoke at first among the lowly
 The words whose echo lives to-day.

INTERESTING LETTER.

Bro. Grant:—By some means the Crisis has been coming to me since last November. I do not know who was so kind as to order it. I intend to send you the pay for it as soon as I can possibly spare the money from my family. It is the most welcome visitor (together with the Bible Banner) I can receive, and comes every Monday as regularly as the day comes, and I always become impatient waiting for the week to pass and bring it to me. I really love the blessed truths with which its columns always abound.

Perhaps you remember hearing of a contemplated discussion on the nature of future punishment. I accepted the challenge by letter, made by the brother in person, and he replied to my note of acceptance in the following rough style, which I hope you will give a place in your worthy columns, together with my answer, that the brethren may see what one in these ends of the earth has to bear for the sake of Christ and his blessed word. Through courtesy to my brother I will withhold his name. His note is as follows:—

"Anderson, Tenn., Sept. 4th, 1872. Rev. Jno. Cargile, Dear Sir:—Your favor of the 1st inst. is to hand. In answer I would say that the proposition I made to debate with you, etc., was not made in seriousness, but was only a little pleasantry. I cannot think of such a thing now.

1. I do not think it would be productive of any good.
2. I have not got the time.
3. I cannot consent to debate with you unless you were better endorsed by your church and the community at large.
4. I would dislike to discuss religious topics with a man who is identified with a semi-infidel party at the North, who deny the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the future punishment of the wicked; who believe in free-loveism, and repudiate the King James' translation of the Scriptures, etc., etc.

For you personally I wish to entertain kind and friendly feelings, but your 'damnable heresies' (St. Paul) I hate, and will do all I can to put them down. Yours, etc."

On the back of his note he says:—

"I have kept a copy of this. I will not make this matter public unless you desire it, or do so first yourself."

I replied to the above letter as follows:—

"Stevenson, Ala., Sept. 9th, 1872. Dearly beloved brother:—Your very interesting letter of the 4th inst. is at hand, and contents noted. In reply would say the 'pleasantry' with which you say you made the challenge, was not a proper way to treat a serious subject, and especially one in which God's truth is involved; and also that 'pleasantry,' as you call it, is not a very beautiful ornament for a minister of Jesus in vindicating his truth. I will now reply to your excuses, and number them in the order in which you made them.

1. It would undoubtedly be productive of good to let the people see both sides of the argument, and thus find which of us is on the side of truth.

2. You should always have time to spare from worldly pursuits to defend the truth, if you preach it.

3. You prove plainly to me, that you do not understand the usages of my church. With us (Baptists) every church is an independent body, not under any obligations to or control of any other church. If you do not think I am endorsed by my churches, for whom I preach, you are mistaken. As to being 'endorsed by the community at large,' I do not think from what I can learn, that either of us have any thing of which to boast in that line.

4. The word 'infidel' without the prefix 'semi' is an assertion without any foundation whatever. I am able to prove that the 'God-dishonoring doctrine' of 'eternal torment' has made more infidels than any thing else. As to denying the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, thank God I do deny it, and I know that I am able to establish it despite all contradiction.

You are pleased—in 'pleasantry' I suppose—to call it a Northern heresy. I will just say that one of my Bibles was published in London, and the other by the Southern Publishing Co. of Memphis, Tenn. They both contain the doctrine. If I were you I would declare non-fellowship with the South for selling such books.

In reference to future punishment you again prove to me that you are ignorant of the doctrines I preach. I believe in a future punishment, and an eternal punishment, too, but not 'eternal torment.' The accusation of free-loveism I declare positively to be a false charge, for I am able to prove that the doctrines I preach will kill Spiritualism, of which 'free-loveism' is a prominent ingredient.

You say I repudiate the King James Version. I deny it, and I am willing to meet you on that 'Authorized Version.' In the language of Mark 12: 24 I will say—'Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures,' or you would never apply the phrase 'damnable heresy' to my preaching.

In conclusion, let me say (though I am only twenty-eight years old, and two years and a half in the ministry), with all due reverence for your gray locks, that I received the challenge to debate as cold earnest, and I accepted it in the same spirit.

Dear brother, I have always loved you, and always will, for it is a part of true religion to love even those who abuse us; and, thank the Lord, there is a spirit of divine love in my bosom which prompts me to love everybody; and I am sure you need have no fear of insulting me; but if I were you, I do believe I would not hesitate to defend my faith. (?) As to keeping this matter a secret, as you say on the back of your letter, let me say that I have no secrets in religious matters, and I have reserved a copy of this, and expect to have them both published; but if you desire it I will withhold your name.

Now, my beloved brother (if you will let me love you), let me advise you never to challenge another young minister for a debate, for he might be fool enough to accept it, and cause you the trouble of claw-fishing. I pray God to bless you and your family, whom I love, and may He enable you to see and love the truth in preference to tradition. I hope I am your loving brother in Christ,

John A. Cargile."

Thus it will be seen by noticing the above letters, that things here are assuming a very critical phase—theologically. I have been struggling hard for the truth for nearly three years, but God's grace has been sufficient for me, for by his grace I am what I am.

Dear brethren and sisters, pray for me when it goes well with you. I am hopefully looking for the speedy coming of my dear Jesus to save his persecuted and trusting people in the kingdom prepared for them "from the foundation of the world." O, may he soon come with power and great glory, and may we be prepared to enter into eternal life with him. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Bro. Grant:—The Lord bless your efforts to spread the truth by your valuable paper, and other means which you are using.

J. A. Cargile.

Stevenson, Ala., Sept. 16th, 1872.

BRIEF NOTICE OF THE TIME MEETING.

J. B. COOK.

Having been called to Springfield to preach, I yielded to request, and to my interest in the subject of prophetic time, and attended mostly from Wednesday, the 18th, to the close on Sunday, the 22d ult. The rain and cold occasioned a thin attendance at the beginning; but the fine weather and beautiful grove, and the crowning theme of gospel grace, brought out a very large concourse toward the close, which was profoundly impressed with the truth and solemnity of the heavenly theme, especially on Sunday morning and afternoon.

My conviction has been deep and abiding that there will be an outcome to our Advent movement, as a whole; that the time is "appointed"; that the time so appointed is as essential to prophecy as is the time in a note, or deed, or other business document; that our knowledge is not based so much on an exposition of Scripture as on the matters of fact that fulfill the Scriptures touching the time; that the four kingdoms, for instance (with the first advent), are accomplished to near the last touch of the pencil that pictures "the time of the end"; and that we are to anticipate the liveliest interest possible in "the consummation" to which the whole Bible points.

Note. At all meetings where the gospel is read, and the name of Jesus is preached, there will be a measure of the good Spirit, proportioned to the depth of devotion to its life-giving power; but where the key-note of "the new song" is most completely sounded, there the loftiest joy and the deepest thrill of final triumph will be experienced. Hence, our brethren who know no cause to doubt the impending "day of God" will be, at least, a little enthusiastic.

A devout Jew, who heard the unbelieving laugh at religious excitement in a campmeeting, shamed them by saying—"These people think their Messiah has come!" So now, we would put to silence all objections against the profoundest feeling touching the second coming of Messiah in his kingdom—his great salvation.

My knowledge of the Bible—of the corresponding history of man and earth—constrains me to the conclusion that the nearest point of time indicated in prophecy is most demonstrably the right time at which to look for our Lord. Yet I can but know that "we know but in part, and prophecy [quote it] in part"; and we must wait for the divine sanction to give us "that which is perfect." 1 Cor. 13.

We are not yet "called, as was Aaron"; nor appropriated and prayed for, as was poor erring Peter. No, no. We are hedged around and bound by gospel precepts that determine our duty to God, to our families, to our co-laborers, and the obligations of the present life. We are "subject still to tutors and governors" (Gal. 4), where "the wrath [erring zeal] of man worketh not the righteousness of God." Jas. 1.

The argument for the advent near is based on "the word"—the providence and people of God, for ages—not on any one, or any few of us.

The policy of the gospel is union and co-operation; not distraction, or isolation.

The wisdom from above dwells with prudence. Prov. 8: 12; Jas. 3: 11–18.

The papers that have just published this '73 time may publish it much further, and at a tithe of the expense, to God's "little ones," that would be required by a new one! Only pay over the tithe; then the surplus may sustain missionaries.

The time for acceptance with God is "now"—not next year! "Now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation."

The argument presented at the camp was honey-combed with such marked mistakes, rather than built on "the foundation of God," as a whole, that "standeth sure"!

Hence, while I co-operated, as I would in any company of christians met to pray and praise and preach in the name of Jesus, I deeply deplore the isolating and divisive "new departure." Although I did dissent publicly on the ground from the expensive and cumbrous movement toward separate action, I did not appreciate it there, as I have since. My interest in prophecy, time and all, will prompt me, I trust, to love and co-operate, as far as possible, with all who love and look for Christ's coming and kingdom. Amen.

THE NUMBER OF THE ARMY.

J. B. CLARK.

"And the number of the army of the horsemen were two hundred thousand thousand; and I heard the number of them." Rev. 9: 16.

In this verse the exact number of the army of horsemen is given; for the Revelator tells us he "heard the number of them." And if we should understand the prophet to mean, as some suppose he does, two hundred thousand multiplied by a thousand, then the sum total would be two hundred millions, which would be incredible, being more men than were ever on our earth at one time capable of bearing arms. Therefore this cannot be the meaning of the prophet; neither do I think it was a succession of armies during the whole period of three hundred and ninety-one years, making the sum total of two hundred millions; for this, too, would be incredible. Allowing a standing army of fifteen million three hundred and eighty-five thousand to be recruited every thirty years, it would only make the two hundred millions, and this sum would be more than five times the number of all the standing armies in the known world.

For these reasons I conclude the prophet John heard the number of two hundred thousand repeated, or twice told, which would make an army of four hundred thousand horsemen. Some writers say three hundred thousand. Thus—two hundred thousand, thousand; that is, two hundred thousand, and one hundred thousand, making three hundred thousand in all; and this would not be incredible.

God's word is true and credible.

LETTER FROM SR. C. TULLER.

Dear brethren and sisters:—The extreme heat, and labor in school, with other cares, has so depressed my mind, that I have delayed acknowledging your kind favors. A change of weather gives me new life, and as I feel many are interested, will give a brief report. Should have rested during August, but had several promising pupils, who walk over four miles, and cannot do that by and by. Several bring their food and cook by my stove, and sleep in a chamber.

My young man and wife have progressed nobly. They have proved themselves worthy of the help that has been given them. In christian character, education, and personal address, he does and will command respect here, and will, I am confident, be useful as a teacher among his people. He will study two weeks longer, and then seek employment The wife is reading nicely in the Testament, and commits a portion to memory every day, and enjoys it much; has learned to write so as to communicate with her friends intelligently. They both express much gratitude for this privilege, and the little that has been expended for them could not, I think, have been better applied.

There has been an earnest effort, by most of the people, to learn as much as possible, and the effect upon their characters and manners is marked. In view of the shortness of time, and my dependence in part upon charity to support these schools, or to meet my own wants while teaching, I am often tempted to give up my special work, and seek a home and work demanding less labor, and let the care, which friends have bestowed here, go to support the preaching missionary. But quick comes the question, "Will I, or will friends of the cause, let our own youth go without trying to cultivate their minds, and elevate their characters, by the diciplinary process, which we have enjoyed and now prize?" And then comes a strong conviction that till Jesus comes, each should earnestly "occupy" wherein they are called.

First in importance is the work of the living preacher. Oh that many more could be sent out into the dark places!

Next is the work of the teacher; and how many nooks and corners in the broad South might be occupied by humble ones, not called to preach publicly, but whose every day work might unearth many a diamond. Such must encounter privations and hardships, but what of that? Ruffles, and ribbons, and paper flowers can well be dispensed with, as well as many luxuries which pleasant homes afford; but the smiles of the All Father, the light of his word, and the foretastes of the grand reunion jubilee, can still be retained; besides, there will come some restful moments when nature can be enjoyed. An occasional walk among the rocks and rills affords me pleasure, and the way is not all thorny.

I did much desire to greet the household at Springfield. The first article looked for in the Crisis was an account of the meeting, and am truly glad you had such a blessed feast. You who enjoy such privileges can little realize the struggles the isolated ones encounter to keep their lamps trimmed and burning. We are so constituted that mind acts upon mind more powerfully by personal presence. But while Jesus lives none need complain.

For every gift received from friends, I am grateful. Let me assure you that I study to appropriate them wisely. I shall be obliged to rest a little soon. For arrangements for the winter, I wait, and watch the "Guiding Hand."

THE WAY OF HOLINESS THROUGH FAITH.

It is manifest that every approach to God must humble him who draws near; and the nearer the place into which faith brings the believer, the more entire the withering of the flesh and self. The two evils which separate the soul from the Savior are sin and self-righteousness; and, of these two things, self-righteousness seemed to be the most effectual barrier during the days of our Lord's ministry on the earth. The self-righteous Pharisees, who wore Scripture texts up and down their garments, and who would not eat their soup till the tithe of their mint and anise had been paid over, derided him; but the publicans and sinners heard him gladly, and were saved. We are all born Pharisees. Pharisaism is bred in our very natures; and if we escape the upbraidings of conscience for gross sin, the natural resource of the evil of our hearts is this legal self-righteousness.

The doctrine, without the life-giving power of "Christ formed in you," is but the colorless shadow, the faint copy of the living, breathing reality. It is the possessors of this shadow who have brought reproach upon this "way of holiness," by an imitation which, while it presents some of the outlines, lacks the reality of the resurrection-life in Christ. We know that the devil always imitates, but never originates; and we ought not to be ignorant of his devices to throw, at every point, discredit on the truth of God. There seems to be a special and most marked effort by the evil one to destroy in every way the testimony of those who preach a redemption from all iniquity. We are not careful to reconcile the fleshly walk of those who evidently profess, without possessing or practicing, the truth of God, whether the "profession" be that of pardon of sins, or that of the faith which gives real victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil.

There is a wide difference between "professing" and "confessing." Peter professed what he would do, and fell. Paul confessed Christ living in him, and triumphed. In a more exact translation of the Scriptures we should find the word "profess" applied in an evil sense to those who, "professing themselves wise, became fools;" while we should read of Timothy that he "confessed a good confession before many witnesses." It is just here that the point before us lies; we profess nothing of ourselves, but we confess that "Jesus, who delivered us from the wrath to come," now keeps us by the power of God practically within that kingdom which is righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

So long as there is the least legal taint in our ideas as to how we were saved from just judgment for our sins, so long will the taint of self-confidence be found in the "professor of religion." But so soon as the soul recognizes that "salvation is of the Lord," wholly of the Lord, without work or merit of our own, then at once the "profession" (implying something partly our own, which we will carry out) is changed to a "confession made unto salvation," of what Christ has freely done for us. Then, without any other trust, the soul rests on the sacrifice of Christ, and for the first time is thoroughly humbled before the Lord, finding it now not "a presumption to be sure of a fitness for heaven." Those who have not the assurance of salvation will not believe this; but reading such a confession by their own legal thoughts of salvation, that confidence in Christ is presuming on one's own merits. Only those who have found that holiness is no longer a desperate negative strife, but a blessed positive attainment or gift, can know how exactly parallel to the above are the thoughts of brethren who charge with presumption and self-confidence believers who confess Christ as a present Savior from sinning.

It is because with us it is all Christ that we are so humbled, and that we have such confidence. We find, alas! that the moment anything else intrudes into the ground of our confidence, our strength is gone; this life is one of continuous self-despair, and of continuous trust. The instant the soul pauses to rest in anything "already attained," in that moment our feet slide. Just so far as any element of unbelief qualifies the simple, absolute trust in Christ, just so far is there transgression. Faith is the measure of holiness.

But let us always remember, that uniformly victorious faith is not an impossible faith; but that, as Jesus is the author of faith, he is also the finisher or perfecter of faith. Here again it is all Jesus; and while looking to him, we are not sent empty away. The vessel may be small, but it is filled to-day; tomorrow it will be larger, and still its utmost capacity shall be filled. Truly here all "boasting is excluded. By what law? Of works? Nay, but by the law of faith." And yet with David we say—"In God we boast all the day long, and praise thy name forever." Saved from Egyptian bondage by the outstretched arm of Jehovah alone, neither did we get the land of Canaan in possession by our own sword, nor did our own arm save us, but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance.—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

GOOD LIFE.

He liveth long who liveth well—
 All else is life but flung away;
He liveth longest who can tell
 Of best things truly done each day.

Then fill each hour with what will last,
 Buy up the moments as they go;
The life above when this is past,
 Is the ripe fruit of the life below.

Sow love, and taste its fruitage pure;
 Sow peace, and reap its harvest bright;
Sow sunbeams on the rock and moor,
 And find a harvest home of light.

THE IOWA CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

This conference met according to appointment, at Hartford, June 18th, 1872. Job Gildersleve, President, A. Raymond, Secretary, both present. President appointed P. S. W. Deyo and J. J. Towsley, committee on credentials. Visiting brethren were invited to take part in our deliberations. A. Raymond was elected President, and N. F. Eggleston, Secretary for the ensuing year. W. H. Peck, Eben Dunham, and J. J. Towsley were elected as conference board. P. S. W. Deyo, C. C. Ramsey, and N. F. Eggleston were appointed as committee on ordination. Job Gildersleve, S. B. Ensign, and J. J. Towsley, were appointed committee on membership. On motion, the conference sanctioned the action of the conference in receiving the Ettie church.

New Hartford church reports one hundred and fifty members. Sunday school of thirty-five scholars; are in the background, need a revival. Tama City reports forty-three members. Bear Creek reports seven members; are increasing in spiritual life; have preaching once in a while. Little Cedar reports fifty-eight members; are in a flourishing condition. Have preaching by Elders P. S. W. Deyo and A. A. Wilbur. Floyd reports sixty members; do not enjoy that degree of consecration that we desire. Future prospects those of joyful hope in God. C. C. Ramsey, pastor. The church at Ettie, Tama Co., reports—was organized April 4th, 1872, by P. S. W. Deyo, with twenty members, four have been added; have no regular preaching, and are in need of help. Parkersburg reports eight members; are alive and doing what they can.

Our Evangelist, P. S. W. Deyo, reports—have preached at Floyd, Clear Lake, Tama City, Ettie, Boylan's Grove, Osage, Little Cedar, in this State; in Illinois at Streator, Ancona, Deer Park; have spent two months in protracted meeting, have assisted in one that continued one month, have attended two quarterly meetings, baptized forty-three, organized one church, and traveled about fifteen hundred miles.

P. S. W. Deyo was elected as evangelist for the ensuing year. Our conference was one of harmony. There was not a discordant note. The ministers seemed filled with the Spirit, and expressed their firm conviction that the end of all things was at hand, and their determination to do more in the future than they have in the past. We parted with the joyful hope of soon seeing the King in his beauty, of clasping glad immortal hands in a country where the inhabitants will never say, I am sick. May the Lord hasten it in his time.

N. F. Eggleston.

I wish to say to the brethren and sisters interested in this report, that circumstances over which I had no control have caused it to be delayed until the present time.

— Solitude is the aspiration and the solace of sages, for there they can best commune with their own thoughts and enjoy the fruition of their accumulated mental stores. And this thought applies to the wealth of the heart quite as fully as to that of the intellect. The wisest and the best of men have ever delighted in being alone.

PLEDGE OF THE TRY COMPANY.

We, the Undersigned, hereby pledge ourselves to abstain from Tea, Coffee, Tobacco, and all Intoxicating Drinks as a Beverage.

THE BOYS.

There come the boys! oh dear, the noise!
 The whole house feels the racket;
Behold the knees of Harry's pants,
 And weep o'er Bertie's jacket!

But never mind, if eyes keep bright,
 And limbs grow straight and limber;
We'd rather lose the tree's whole bark
 Than find unsound the timber!

Now hear the tops and marbles roll!
 The floors—oh, woe betide them!
And I must watch the banisters,
 For I know boys who ride them!

Look well as you descend the stairs,
 I often find them haunted
By ghostly toys, that make no noise
 Just when their noise is wanted.

The very chairs are tied in pairs,
 And made to prance and caper;
What swords are whittled out of sticks!
 What brave hats made of paper!

The dinner-bell peals loud and well,
 To tell the milkman's coming;
And then the rush of "steam-car trains"
 Sets all our ears a-humming.

How oft I say, "What shall I do
 To keep these children quiet?"
If I could find a good receipt,
 I certainly should try it.

But what to do with these wild boys,
 And all their din and clatter,
Is really quite a grave affair—
 No laughing, trifling matter.

"Boys will be boys"—but not for long;
 Ah, could we bear about us
This thought—how very soon our boys
 Will learn to do without us!

How soon but tall and deep-voiced men
 Will gravely call us "Mother";—
Or we be stretching empty hands
 From this world to the other.

More gently we should chide the noise,
 And when night quells the racket,
Stitch in but loving thoughts and prayers
 While mending pants and jacket!
—S. M. W. in Chris. Union.

OUR LITTLE RAY.

Ethie Bayard laid her little sunny head upon her pillow one calm Sabbath night, a very happy child indeed. A great wise thought had been revolving in her busy brain all day, and out of that had grown a purpose which our heavenly Father must have smiled upon with sweet approval. Her Sabbath lesson had been very short, and easy to repeat; and as she sat that night upon her mother's knee, and listened to some simple explanations, her tender young conscience made its own application, and a whole bound volume could scarcely have taught her more.

"Let your light shine before men, that they, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father which is heaven."

Ethie repeated it softly, again and again, until her own sweet tones mingled with the dream-land voices far away, and the child slept.

Some early sunbeams stealing through the shutters woke her in the morning; but, turning with a little yawn, she was most asleep again; when, suddenly opening her eyes upon the bright beams on the carpet, she whispered, "Let your light so shine," and rose at once. Kneeling reverently beside her bed, she prayed in a low voice, "Dear heavenly Father, I told you last night I'd try to make somebody happy to-day; and now I will, if you'll help me. I thank you for taking care of me all night; and I'm so glad you've given us such a pleasant day! I don't just know how I can do it; I mean, make somebody happy; but you can make me see how when the time comes. Please don't let me forget it once." Truly this was coming as a child to an earthly parent.

Bounding gayly down the stairs, the very tone of her "Good-morning" sent a thrill of pleasure all over the house. Baby only was unmoved by it. He was sick and fretful; and though Ethie loved best of all things to run out among the flower-borders before breakfast, and count the new blossoms which had opened their soft eyes to the light, she sat down directly by the little crib, and let mamma go down and make the coffee. Babies so easily catch the spirit of those about them, that Ethie's little charge, worn out by a restless night's tossing, soon grew calm and quiet, and at breakfast-time slept sweetly.

Bridget's washing was early, and breakfast was late, that morning; and Dannie and Burt had been very careless with their books, so that school-time came, and one still was missing.

"I'll look for it, Burtie, and you can get ready," said patient little Ethie.

"Thank you," said Burt; yet he looked up in surprise; for his little sister had always been particularly sensitive about being asked to wait upon these big brothers, and this quiet kindness was not without a little inward struggle.

"'Tis a very little light; but I let it shine," she said to herself as she searched for the old worn book in every possible corner.

All this time a greater trial was in waiting for the little girl. It came in a message from old Roxy Blane, who, with a gray-haired daughter, lived alone in a dark, low chamber over the village grocery. She had been sick all winter, and her daughter Ann had been obliged to give up her place in the sewing-rooms to take care of her. But now that the spring had come again, and the old lady was getting better, she wanted to look for work again; for they were very poor, and needed some money at once. "Could Ethie go in and stay with the sick woman, giving her her medicine, and waiting upon her, till Miss Ann returned?"

Ethie had called there with her mother more than once; and as she thought of the loud, rude shouts she had heard in the shop below, of the rattling of the rats in the wall, and the dark old chamber itself, it was very hard for a little girl of six to say "Yes." But she did it, though a few silent tears would come into her eyes as she walked away.

'Twas a long, dreary day, to be sure; but, as she bounded into Dannie's arms when he came to take her home, she heard the widow say, "God bless the sweet child! what a sunbeam she has been in our dark old room today!" and she thought that the happiness of that moment more than paid for all the trial had cost her.

Ethie Bayard is a woman now; but the little ray is still shining, and growing brighter and brighter every day of her life; and God has blessed the little beam that shone so softly, and by its constant light led Burt and Dannie to look upward to the heavenly fountain from whence it sprang, and thus to "glorify their Father which is in heaven."—Well-Spring.

THE POT OF PANSIES.

Leisurely as Alfred Hays sauntered home one evening with his cigar in his mouth, he met his friend, Louis Steadman, walking briskly along with a pot of pansies in his hand.

"'Pon my word," said Alfred, taking his cigar from his lips, "you must have got into a new business."

"These are for my mother," said Louis, enthusiastically. "Are they not beautiful?" and indeed they were beautiful, with their rich gold and purple tints, and the delicate perfume which breathed from every blossom.

"Oh, they are well enough," said Alfred, indifferently; "but I wouldn't spend money for such things, even if I could afford it."

"These cost no more than five of your cigars, and I know they give us all a hundred times more pleasure, too. Your indulgence is only ruining you. You know this, Alf; but these flowers do us good, both in mind and in body."

"That will do, old fellow; I haven't time for one of your regular sermons to-night, but I'll wish you much joy over your flowers," and with a careless good-night he sauntered on.

Louis bounded up the steps of his home, sure of a glad welcome. The bright eyes and happy faces which gathered about his simple gift, spoke more than words can express; and after being duly admired, they were placed in the sunny window, beside the beautiful fuchsias and sweet geraniums already blooming there.

Surely he had gained far more in their delicious perfume and their charming presence than his friend by his tobacco investments. Alfred had gained a hot, dry mouth, a foul breath, discolored teeth, sallow skin, drowsiness and headache, and worst of all, a taste that would call loudly for other stimulants to gratify it. Surely Louis had made a far better choice in expending a few odd shillings—a choice that would make him happier, nobler, and better, and would lay the foundation for a truly honored character in after years.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."—Paul.

HOW I REARED MY BABY.

I was just twenty years of age when our first child was born. I was wholly inexperienced, never having had the care of a babe a day in my life; yet I was not a little conceited, for I had read extensively upon the subject and was determined to teach our mothers and grandmothers a lesson in bringing up children. A few hours previous to the birth of baby, I said to the nurse, "I wish you to promise me one thing, that my baby shall not be compelled to swallow one drop of that nauseating liquid which grandmother's cup contains, but, in its stead give it a little pure, cool water." Thanks to the nurse, I believe she obeyed me.

After the boy was dressed and all was quiet, I asked to have him brought to me. Nurse replied that he was already sucking his fist and must be fed. I said, "Not a bit of it. Nature has provided nourishment for babes." She chided me for being so foolish, but I was persuaded in my own mind, and carried my point, and in twenty-four hours baby was abundantly supplied from the maternal fount.

In a short time it was found that baby had lungs. Then came the inquiry, "Have you paregoric or soothing syrup?"

"No! I have made no provision for colic pains, for I think that such a state of things can be avoided. If baby has nursed too much, loosen his clothing, sit near the fire and manipulate him with your hand, and soon all will be right. Don't keep up that perpetual trotting, unless you wish to kill him."

"Oh! but there's wind in his stomach, and I wish to drive it out."

"But don't you know that in that way you are liable to drive more in than you drive out?"

As early as was possible nurse was dispensed with, and the whole care of baby then devolved upon me, and very cheerfully I assumed the office. Every morning he had his bath, and every evening, loving magnetism transmitted through the mother's hand.

"What?" says one, "have you no cradle? I would not think of getting along without one."

Really, I had no use for one. I consider a cradle a nuisance. Every one gets tired of rocking it, and sometimes it causes unkind words to be spoken; and besides, it keeps the infant's brain in whirl, and without doubt the visual organs have in many instances been affected by it. When it was time for our baby to have his nap he was nursed, and lain upon a bed in a room as far from all noise as possible, covered warmly, curtains dropped, doors closed, and the little one left to enjoy two or three hours' sleep.

Before he had entered upon his fourth month, one little tooth had pierced the gum, to our great joy, and from that time onward one after another made its appearance without causing apparently the least disturbance. We never looked for nor discovered precocity in our boy, sad as this may seem to some. At one time a mother called, bringing her own babe, and after remarking upon the healthy appearance of our child, said, "O! well! I have buried three little ones and do not expect to raise this one. The truth is, my children are born all brains and no bodies."

I acknowledge I was a little piqued, and replied that I was happy to know that my child had no deformity.

I nursed my babe eighteen months, a long time some may think, but both mother and child were so healthy and happy it was thought best to do so. Never once during the period of nursing was the child brought to the table. He was allowed water to drink but no mixtures, no concoctions. When he was eight months old we went a short journey to visit friends. On arriving a sister-in-law exclaimed, "What a beautiful baby! so plump and fair," and taking him on her lap commenced taking off his wrappings. Finding him in a flannel dress, (it being in the month of December) she cried out, "What a cruel mother! to put a flannel dress on so young a child, with long sleeves and high neck, too," and looking up she said, addressing me, "Just look at my daughter there. She is ten years of age, and never wore long sleeves nor high necks, day nor night. To be sure she is delicate and always was. I suppose your baby wears flannel night-dresses with long sleeves and high necks."

"Yes, most certainly he does."

At last the time for weaning came. It was often asked me, "Don't you expect a dreadful time in weaning your baby?" "Not at all, for I do every thing my own way, and seldom have trouble." Instead of giving him to the care of another, I kept him with me day and night. I fed him with gruel, made of Graham meal and fresh new milk, through the day, and nursed him as usual once through the night, for a short time, when he would sleep the whole night, not awaking to call for his food. Managing thus, neither mother nor babe experienced any trouble. Indeed, not once during the period of lactation were our nightly slumbers disturbed by a sick or crying baby. Perhaps the dietetic habits of the mother had something to do in making him healthy and sweet tempered. I ate no pickles, and nothing which contained pepper. Never having drunk tea nor coffee, I thought it not wise to commence, but used for my drink water with cream and sugar added.

I now have two sons, with the second I managed the same as with the first, and with the same good results. Both are grown to manhood, and as I look upon them, so strong and healthy, I wonder if the little red flannel dress, with its long sleeves and high neck, had any thing to do with it.—Mrs. Pratt, in Laws of Life.

Discoloration of the Skin.—Often persons receive an accidental blow or a fall, from whence discoloration of the skin is apt to ensue. To prevent this, take a little dry starch or arrow root; merely moisten it with cold water, and lay it on the injured part. This must be done immediately, so as to prevent the action of the air upon the skin. However, it may be effectually applied some hours after. Raw meat is not always at hand, and some children have an insurmountable repugnance to having it applied. These applications are not always of certain effect. There is no remedy for a black eye but bathing in hot water, which is often very tedious, but if immediately applied it is a sure remedy or preventive.—Ex.

For Dropsy.—Take equal quantities of highland brake and the blade of green wheat. Steep together. Add a little wild turnip. While steeping, drink freely. Steep often, that the patient may have it fresh. The brake to be used remains green all winter.

I have used the above in my family with great success. Have known it to be used for the last eighteen years, and never knew it to fail.

BEHOLD, THE BRIDEGROOM COMETH!

"And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the Bridegroom cometh."—Matt. 25: 6.

Behold! the Bridegroom cometh in
The middle of the night,
And blest is he whose loins are girt,
Whose lamp is burning bright;
But woe to that dull servant
Whom his Master shall surprise
With lamp untrimmed, unburning, and
With slumber in his eyes.

Do thou, my soul, keep watch, beware
Lest thou in sleep sink down—
Lest thou be given o'er to death,
And lose the golden crown;
But see that thou be sober, with
A watchful eye, and thus
Cry—holy, holy, holy God,
Have mercy upon us!

That day, the day of fear, shall come;
My soul, slack not thy toil,
But light thy lamp, and feed it well,
And make it bright with oil;
Thou knowest not how soon may sound
The cry at eventide—
"Behold! the Bridegroom comes, Arise!
He comes to meet the Bride.

Beware, my soul! take thou good heed
Lest thou in slumber lie,
And, like the five, remain without,
And knock, and vainly cry;
But watch, and bear thy light undimmed,
And Christ shall gird thee on
His own bright wedding robe of light—
The glory of the Son.

SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

The coming of Christ will be the greatest event that the world has ever witnessed. The awful glory and grandeur of that day will infinitely surpass anything that the finite mind is capable of conceiving. Prophets, apostles, and saints in all ages have looked forward to that day with the profoundest interest. At the present day the children of God are waiting patiently for their Lord and King.

Though it is not essential to our salvation to know the time of his coming, yet the Lord has told us to "watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. . . . . . Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." Matt. 24: 42, 44. These words are very applicable to us who are now living in this wonderful and eventful age. "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night." 1 Thess. 5: 1, 2. "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition." 2 Thess. 2: 3. These words of the apostle have been literally fulfilled in this nineteenth century. Jesus did not reprove his disciples for asking the question with regard to the signs of his coming, and the end of the world; but said—"Take heed that no man deceive you." Matt. 24: 4. He cautioned them, and then told them the awful state the world would be in before his coming, and said—"But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Matt. 24: 36, 37.

He never said one word about the millennium, as modern professors do at the present day, who are waiting for the world to be converted, and imagine they are living on the eve of that day; but said—"Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Here is where the Gentile world will be deceived in the second coming of Christ, as the Jews were in his first coming. Christ will find a few that are waiting and living for him when he comes; but oh! how precious few they will be in comparison with the masses that are unsaved.

Christ saw the awful state the world would be in just before his coming. He saw that they would be covetous, grasping and seeking for position and honor; connecting themselves with secret societies and organizations of various kinds, so that he was led to ask the question, "Shall he find faith?" There is no room for faith to work where men and ministers are trusting in secret societies, wealth, and position; faith is dead, with nothing but skin and bones hanging to it. Why! it does not even compare with the faith of devils, for they "believe and tremble." It means something to have faith in God. A man who is trusting in God is not trusting in anything else. Take property, friends, reputation, and all that he has, from him—yea, his life—and he is trusting in God, and is like "Mount Zion that cannot be removed." God can do as he pleases with him; he is living for God and doing all the good he possibly can. His life is a life of faith on the Son of God; and when "Christ who is his life shall appear, then shall he also appear with him in glory."

The Lord let the beloved Paul have a view of the awful state of things that should be on the earth just before his coming. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy; without natural affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." 2 Tim. 3: 1–5.

This is a correct representation of the present day. There never was a time when people loved pleasure more than they do now, especially professors of religion. Talk to them about the power, and they will scout at the idea. Talk money to them—they know what that means; talk theatre, tea-meetings, festivals, and fashions, and they are right at home with you on that subject. But the power—the real life of God in the soul—they are strangers to. And the real child of God is as much of a wonder to-day as ever. It requires as much grace and courage to live for God, as in the days when the bloody axe and torturing wheel were the test of every man's religion.

Yes, Christ is coming very soon, for he says, "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 12. He is coming to take his children home. "Then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."—Matt. 24: 30, 31. This will be the end of their sorrows, and the beginning of their eternal joys. "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him; and all the kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so. Amen." Rev. 1: 7.

Children of the Most High, look up, and regulate your lives in view of that glorious day! Worldly professors do not like to hear much about the coming of Christ, but God's children do, and so did the apostles, for they referred to it in almost all their epistles—they kept it fresh in their minds, and it was a glorious incentive to a holy and useful life. "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. And every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself." 1 John 3: 2, 3. O, glorious hope! big with immortality.

Christ is coming quickly, to avenge his children who call on him day and night. "Seeing it is a righteous thing with God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you, and to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day." 2 Thess. 1: 6–10.

He is coming soon, much sooner than many of us expect. He told John to "seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book, for the time is at hand." Rev. 22: 10. The world is growing old with age, and ripe for the judgment fires. The armies of heaven are preparing for this great and glorious day.

"Great triumph day of God's incarnate Son—
Great day of glory to the Almighty God;
Day whence the everlasting years begun
Their date, new era in eternity,
And oft referred to in the songs of heaven."

Christ is coming as a mighty conqueror. He has conquered death, hell, and the grave, and ascended up on high and led captivity captive. "Behold, he cometh with ten thousand of his saints, to execute judgment upon all, and to convince all that are ungodly among them of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him." The busy world will be suddenly startled at the unexpected appearance of Jesus Christ in the clouds. Behold, he cometh; not as the once despised Nazarene, and the man of sorrows acquainted with grief, but as the "King of kings, and the Lord of lords," and as the "Judge of the quick and the dead." "Our God shall come and shall not keep silence; a fire shall devour before him, and it shall be very tempestuous round about him. He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people." Ps. 1: 3, 4.

Stop, dear reader, just a moment. Are you living and regulating your life in view of this "great and terrible day of the Lord?" This will be the day that is to end the affairs of this world, and to determine the destiny of all mankind. Have you a living faith in God and not in circumstances, but a faith that overcomes the world, the devil, and the flesh? Are you kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation? Are you living a holy, useful life, and doing all you can to win souls to Christ, and to help on the cause of God? "He that winneth souls is wise." Death will surely overtake us soon, and this will be the coming of Christ to us. And should we fall asleep in death, it will not be long before the trump of God shall sound, and we must all march to the "judgment seat of Christ." "And every eye shall see him." "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 2 Thess. 4; 16, 17. "Behold I show you a mystery: We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." 1 Cor. 15: 51, 52.

Oh, glorious and happy change! Behold him, ye followers of the Lamb, and wonder and love. This is he who bore all your iniquities on the ignominious cross. This is he who fulfilled all righteousness for your justification. Behold him, ye despisers of his grace, and perish. This is He whose merciful overtures you have contemned, and on whose precious blood you have trampled. You would not give Christ the pre-eminence in your heart, but now he comes to gain it by conquest. Christ will come with a shout, and every living creature will hear it, and the trump of God will sound, and that will shake the pillars of heaven, and startle the dungeon of hell; and the sleeping millions will hear that sound, and understand what it means, and come forth—"they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

The world moves on, and has for several thousand years, and the coming of Christ to many has become an old fable; and the Apostle Peter says—"Beloved, I now write unto you; in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: . . . knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. . . . But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; and the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Peter 3: 1, 3, 10.

Dear reader, what a dreadful day this will be for you if you are unsaved! And oh, what consternation and excitement will seize the guilty world then! All business, of every description, stops at once; every establishment closes for the last time; no more buying and selling; all the busy marts have closed. No idle spectators looking on now, but every living soul that God has made is tremendously interested. They had no time for these things once, but now they must take time. Everything of an earthly nature sinks into insignificance. The children of God have been living for this day, and they are prepared to meet it with triumph and joy. All earthly pomp and display sink into contempt. The rich and noble—where are they now? They, with the multitudes, are trembling and frantic with fear, and rushing here and there in wild amazement, looking for escape. But, alas! alas! escape is hopeless.

"And the heavens departed as a scroll when it is rolled together, and every mountain and island were moved out of their places. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb. For the great day of his wrath hath come, and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. 6: 14–16.

The uprisings of nations, and the downfall of kingdoms and empires; the dethronement of the man of sin, the Pope, and his right-hand man, Napoleon, and the turbulent state that mankind are in, and the dreadful corruption of both church and state—are fulfilments of the the word of God. Lastly, but not least, that long-looked-for and expected day, the gathering of the Jews to Jerusalem, is another blessed event in the world's history, and is a forerunner of that great and glorious day which is about to dawn upon us. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly: Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen." Rev. 22: 20, 21.

ALL FOR CHRIST.

GEO. E. LEE.

To give all for Christ comprises a great deal more than is commonly admitted. But this one thing is certain: if we would have the peace of God dwell richly in our hearts, we must be perfectly willing to submit our will entirely to God's will. It is oftener the reason we do not feel wholly sanctified to the Lord from this cause than any other. For instance, we may give up to the Lord that which we think we can spare the best, and still cherish that which is most important of all to be given up.

It is required of us that we present our "bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God." This, of course, includes everything which is connected with us and our life which is dishonoring to God. We may each of us have some "besetting sin" that we fondly cling to, for fear some great evil would befall us should we let it go and leave the consequences with the Lord. But is not the Lord able to take care of his own property? If we have given ourselves and all we have, will and all, into his hands, we are but stewards for him; and it will matter not whether we live or die, if it is for his glory.

When Abraham was told to offer up his only son as a sacrifice, he could not see God's object in so doing, but through faith he obeyed the command as far as was required of him, and then another was given, and how seasonable it was. Abraham found out that all things did "work together for good to those that love the Lord," and by this test of his faith he proved himself to be a good and faithful servant.

But how often at this present day do we meet those who are unwilling to give up what their own consciences tell them is wrong, giving as an excuse that they "could not live without it," or that their health is such the "doctors tell them to use it." We refer more particularly to tobacco. This argument appears to be quite weak, for it is very evident that the Lord has kept very many alive who have given up the use of tobacco, and we do know that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick," let doctors tell us as they may.

There are those who come to us and talk of sanctification, and of the speedy coming of the Lord to establish a pure kingdom; while at the same time they are rolling the petted quid in their mouth, with the filthy juice ejecting at the corners, while the atmosphere around them is so disgusting that one wonders if that is to be a sample of what we shall have in the kingdom of God.

And this is not the worst of all, either; we are sorry to mention it, but it is a fact that some who stand before the public, and claim to preach a pure gospel to a dying world, set a very poor example by using that which they would not and do not recommend to others. And their simple reason for so doing when referred to it is, that their health requires it, or that they should die if it was discontinued. Well, then, if it is God's will that you should die in consequence of giving up that which he requires, leave it all with him, and submit to whatever may be the result. He certainly will do all things well.

We must remember that when we have given up ourselves, we are not our own, we are "bought with a price"; and if we would be true disciples, let us cleanse ourselves from "all filthiness of the flesh," that our bodies may become fit temples for the Holy Ghost to dwell in. Then, let what will come, we can say from the depths of our hearts, "Lord, thy will, not mine, be done."

ENDURE UNTO THE END.

J. R. SMITH.

When Jesus was upon the Mount of Olives his disciples sought him privately, to inquire what should be the sign of his coming, and of the end of the world. Jesus told them to take heed that no man deceived them, that many would come in his name saying, "I am Christ;" and should deceive many; but he that should endure unto the end, the same should be saved. It is also written that "in the latter days some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their consciences seared with a hot iron."

There never was a time in the history of the world when it was more necessary for the followers of Jesus to have on the whole armor than now. If there is any weak point in the fortifications of the heart of the christian, the devil will bring all his forces to bear on that point, that he may make a breach in the walls of his faith; he may not succeed; nevertheless, it will be necessary to have on the whole armor of God that you may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil; for "he is going about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." He will come in many different forms; but take heed; look out for him; be not deceived; follow none of his devices. He desires to have the children of God, that he may sift them as wheat; but remember that Jesus has prayed for you, that your faith fail not. The devil is thoroughly practiced in his business; he is never found sleeping. But take heed; resist him, and he will flee from you. When his assaults are the hottest, and trials are the heaviest, remember that "he that endureth unto the end, the same shall be saved." "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers; against the rulers of the darkness of this world; against spiritual wickedness in high places." The devil in the form of mammon will assail the christian. He will tell him he must make haste to be rich; that he must get money at any rate. "But what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Take heed, and beware of covetousness; "for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." It is written upon the fortunes of the millions, he that drinketh of these waters shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the waters that Jesus gives shall never thirst; but they shall "be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

It is proof of the sin of the soul that it seeks to satisfy itself with the things of this world; therefore "love not the world, neither the things that are in the world; for if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." "Set your affections on things above, and not upon things upon the earth; and when Christ who is your life shall appear, then shall you also appear with him in glory."

Resist the seductions of the world, remembering that Jesus has said—"He that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved." Nothing but vital, experimental and practical godliness will endure in that great and terrible day when the Lord shall come. The great day of his wrath is coming, and "who shall be able to stand?" None but those whose hearts are made pure by the cleansing blood of Jesus.

There are various types of religion having their forms and their ceremonies, some are saying—"I am Christ's" while having fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; but believe them not; take heed, and be not deceived. Have no fellowship with these mystic workers of iniquity, for a day is coming when their works of darkness shall be tried by fire, and they shall not stand; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. They shall be as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind of God Almighty's wrath; "wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord." "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communication hath light with darkness?"

There is another form of religion which lodges in the head. It does not spring from conviction, nor secure adoption; it springs from the imagination, and indulges in the sentiment. It is not the religion of the heart. It covers up every awful truth in beds of roses, making the commandments of God of no effect. It gets up church sprees, and vanity fairs, tea parties, and oyster suppers, for the licentious and profligate. It decorates churches and fits up the sanctuary of God so as to please the eye of the sensual. This is not the religion of Jesus Christ. A church that advocates this is not the church of the living God. This kind of religion cannot endure. The advocates of it will be cast into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.

There is another form of religion which is all form. It has the form of godliness, but denies the power thereof; this kind worships God by proxy, and has a system of arrangements, by which they substitute for the Spirit of God, forms of prayer, and exhortation, and scientific singing. They worship their minister and their ostentatious surroundings, instead of worshiping God. The cross is very light andeasy to be borne; you will generally find it around the necks of the ladies. This kind make broad their phylacteries and enlarge the borders of their garments. They love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues. They shut up the kingdom of heaven against men. They neither go in themselves nor suffer them that are entering to go in. There is no endurance in this kind; it collapses the moment it is tested. When the rains descend, and the winds blow and beat upon their house their foundation is swept away; but "he that endureth unto the end the same shall be saved."

Again, there is the religion of tradition; men believe what their fathers believed before them; but this is not the religion of Jesus Christ. He that believes in religion because it was inherited from his father, is not building upon a sure foundation, and when tested it will be found wanting; it will not endure in that great gathering day.

What, then, is the religion that will endure in that great and terrible day when the Lord shall come? The religion of Jesus Christ, pure and undefiled, as it came from his blessed lips upon Mount Olives, will stand the fire, and no other will. The roots of this religion strike down deep into the believer's heart; they take hold upon God. This religion is received and taught by the inspirations of the Holy Spirit. It accepts Jesus as a present Savior, and the love of God is shed abroad in the heart of its possessor by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto him.

Hallelujah! This is the religion that will stand in the day of judgment, and give us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Hallelujah to God! We know that our Redeemer lives, and because he lives we shall live also. The believer feels like joining with the angels in singing, "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and good will to man." He knows that Jesus is able to keep that which he has committed to his care until that day, when he will receive a crown of righteousness that fadeth not away.

This religion is not the mountain torrent fed by the shower, leaving its channel dry when the clouds are emptied of their contents; but it is the stream that moves on, through belts of greenness, sprinkling its banks with fragrant flowers, until it mingles with the river of life, and is lost in wonder, love, and praise.

This religion is like the mighty oak of Bashan, that waves its branches amid the storm, and strikes its roots deeper in the howling tempest, developing itself while basking in the divine rays of the Sun of Righteousness; in winter or summer steadily advancing towards the kingdom of immortal glory. He that thus believes and lives shall be clothed in white raiment; he shall sing that new song; he shall reign with Jesus upon the new earth; and shall inherit all things.

Glory to God! he that overcomes and endures unto the end, shall be made a pillar in the temple of God, and shall go no more out. The name of my God shall be written upon him, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and he will write upon him his new name. Hallelujah!

New Bedford, Mass.

"WELL DONE."

A. F. MOORE.

The most exalted position that can be occupied by mortal man, is to be so highly honored by the Lord of life and glory as to hear him say in the great day of accounts—"Well done!" How much is contained in those few words—"Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." He looks over the whole of the past life and says, well done. Can he say well done unless we have done well? Jesus did well. He did his Father's will, and said, "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do;" and for us to hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant," we must do well and faithfully the work left for us to do.

Beloved, how is it with you? Are you doing well? Should the "trump of God" summon you "before the judgment seat of Christ" now, how would you stand the test? Would Jesus say to you "Well done"? Think of it. Would you have "confidence and not be ashamed before him at his coming," or would you want to hide away from his piercing look?

We must soon meet Him. We must stand before him whether we are ready or not. He will not wait for us to get ready after he bids us come before the "judgment seat." It is a good time now to look over the past, but it will do us no good then to do it. He will look it over for us. He has kept the record. He will settle the account. Have you faithfully confessed his name before men? Did you honor him when in the company of the ungodly? Have you honored him by confessing his unpopular truth? Were you willing to identify yourself with the truth? Were you willing to "go forth without the camp bearing his reproach"? Have you lived for your own ease, comfort, or profit? Have you denied yourself and taken up your cross and followed him? Have you spent dollars for personal gratification, and cents for the Lord and his precious cause? Have you paid hundreds for the support of error because it was popular, and you wanted to be on the popular side, while you have seen the cause of truth suffer and you were not willing to help it along with your means?

Will He say well done to you? Did you do well when you saw your brother in need, and you had it in your power to relieve him of his heavy burden, and you refused to do it? Did you forget that Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these my brethren ye did it not to me"? All these things will flash before the mind in an instant, one of these days, when it is too late to make amends, and get pardon, peace, and justification by faith in the blood of the Lamb.

How was it with you, my brother, when you were asked to "take a drink" with some ungodly one? Did you look up and down the street to see if any one would see you that knew your profession? Did you think you was leading that one to perdition? How would you feel to meet his gaze when you both stand before Christ in judgment? When you looked up and down the street, you forgot to look up to see if the Lord's eye was upon you. Do you think he can say "well done"?

Better look these things fair and square in the face now, and then heartily repent of them all and get pardoned, than to have them stare you in the face when pardon cannot be obtained, and justice falls like a millstone.

O! I must hear the "well done." I must hear Jesus say—"Enter into the joy of thy Lord." Will you hear it, too? I will try by the help of the Lord to be real good and faithful, for I do want to be with Jesus in his glory and share his joy.

"A LITTLE WHILE."

L. J. ADAMS.

"A little while and he that shall come, will come, and will not tarry."

Weary pilgrim, lift up your head and rejoice, "for your redemption draweth nigh." We are nearing the consummation of our hope. "A little while and he that shall come will come and will not tarry." O how the heart thrills with joy at the thought of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him. Pilgrims and strangers here, absent from him we love, well may we long for his coming.

"Each day brings Him nearer, nearer,
Soon we'll lay our burdens down,
From our hearts He'll take the crosses,
And place on our brows a crown."

O glorious yet solemn hour, when the "sign of the Son of man" shall be seen in the heavens, and the shrill clarion of God shall reverberate through the vast universe, thrilling with joy the waiting church, but bringing fearful despair to an unsuspecting and unthinking world. Then shall the voice that of yore called Lazarus from death's icy embrace, called to life our sleeping ones, the living saints shall be changed, and together with them ascend to meet the King of glory. Judgment shall be executed upon the ungodly, and the works of nature burned up.

"Every trace of sin and sorrow,
All the curse shall pass away;"

and from the plastic hand of God shall a new creation rise, more beautiful if possible than Eden of old. The new Jerusalem will descend from above as the capital of the saint's inheritance, and the Bridegroom will lead in the bride to present her to the Father. Then will all tears be wiped away. Loved ones will meet and clasp hands never to part again. Suffering, sorrow, and death will never be felt there. No long nights of pain and woe will overshadow that beautiful land, for "the sun shall no more go down, neither shall the moon withdraw itself; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended." The golden streets of the city will re-echo to the tread of the ransomed host; and over the verdant plains, flowery vales, and lofty mountains of Paradise, shall resound in thrilling tones sweet strains of music from the white-robed throng. Jesus the king of the saints will be there, the centre of attraction; all eyes will turn to him, all voices join to sing his praise—

"O 'twill be passing sweet to gaze
On Him in all His glory,
And lost in love and glad amaze,
To sing redemption's story."

Language fails to paint the sublimity of the scene which in "a little while" we shall be permitted to gaze upon with unclouded eyes.

Cheer up, suffering one, "a little while," and then God's time of release will come, and rest will be sweeter than it would have been had the heart never known sorrow. Eyes that have been dimmed with tears will sparkle brighter in that sinless clime. God knows best how much disciplining is necessary. There is a "need be" for every sorrow and trial. "All things work together for good to them that love God."

Unsaved one, will you be there? Shall we meet you with the white-robed? Would you enter through the pearly gates of the city and see "the King in his beauty," and bathe in the sunlight of his glory, and through the circling ages of eternity dwell in his presence? Then come to Jesus while yet the hour of mercy lingers. He came to seek and save the lost. There is hope for you. Accept him as your Savior. He is waiting to cancel all your guilt and make you joint heir with himself to "an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled." God's Spirit will not always strive with you. "A little while and it will take its flight never to return.

"O sinner, come, without delay,
And seek a home in glory;
The Lord is calling you to-day,
He pleads for you in glory."

When the opening clouds reveal the King of glory, which words will burst from your lips—"Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us"; or, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved"?

FROM DARKNESS TO LIGHT.

Bro. Grant:—It is possible some of your readers may be interested in a short recital of, what is to me, a very precious experience. Although I have often related my "experience," I feel that it is but recently I have had one really worth relating.

In the year 1854 I found the Savior, and was baptized in the western part of your State. I have since that time resided in various portions of the country, and been connected with several churches, and have formed the acquaintance of many good and christian people. But until within the past five or six months, I have had but vague ideas of the great truths taught in the Scriptures. Often have I brought into requisition that ever ready and oft quoted "blanket" text—"With God all things are possible," for the purpose of covering up rather than clearing away the seeming inconsistency of the Scriptures.

I have read much in God's word, but rather from a sense of duty, or because of the intellectual entertainment it afforded me, than because I loved the truth for the consolation and the rapturous joy he finds who hath an ear to hear what the Spirit saith.

The belief in "man's immortality" drove me into vague and visionary conceptions of a spirit land, where sepulchral forms winged their noiseless way through the ethereal realms of an immaterial kingdom, and sang, in whispered songs, praises to an immaterial God, who sits upon a throne of mist, issuing his silent edicts by a ghostly sway of his visionary hand. I have been semi-satisfied when told "we would know all about it when we got there"; that "God's ways were past finding out." Now such hopes have failed to satisfy me, any more than would a picture of the moonlight a darkened room.

My theological coat has been hanging on the hook of traditional imagination, and when I ceased to stand by and hold it in place, it fell to the floor, and the wall of nothingness was plainly exposed. It has been to me a sad and weary task, thus to rely wholly on other people's theories, for a "reason for the hope within me."

Some months ago I was induced to examine the Bible, and ascertain what evidence was produced thereby of the immortality of man; and notwithstanding my prejudices, I began to see the truth; and I consider my present clear understanding of God's word entirely due to this first initiatory step.

"Is man immortal?" That question once settled by the Scriptures—which are undeniably in the negative—one can scarcely go astray in studying all other points connected with the subject, viz., "The destiny of man," "The resurrection of the dead," "Salvation through Christ," and "Eternal life in the new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness;" and I regard it safe to affirm that no two persons, differing on the subject of immortality, can ever agree on the subjects which follow.

If A supposes a certain building to be used for a manufactory, and B presumes it is a theological institute, they cannot agree as to the character or purposes of its surroundings, or of the persons going to or from it; and if they both "inquire within," and ascertain the truth in regard to the building itself, their understanding of all things connected with it will be the same.

So after making inquiry about "this house of our tabernacle," I learn that it is to be "dissolved," notwithstanding the delusive announcement of the serpent and of modern theologians. I find God's justice thoroughly vindicated when man dies, and his mercy made clear and glorious when "Christ, who is our life, shall appear" and "abolish death" and "bring immortality to light." I can now reconcile God's "indignation and wrath" with his love and mercy. I view him no longer as an implacable tyrant, torturing his own created beings to all eternity, but as a God of mercy, gathering the wheat into his garner, and destroying in the most abrupt manner possible the "chaff," which is of no possible use in the "garner."

The vexed question when the resurrection is to be, is now easily settled, "and my flesh shall rest in hope," and "I shall be satisfied when I awake with his likeness;" and instead of drowning myself in metaphysics to comprehend where those "mansions" are, and where Christ's kingdom is to be, the pure word of God is all-sufficient, and its assurance that the "meek are to inherit the earth," and that the "tabernacle of God is with men," is enough to fill my soul with gladness, and my "joy is full." There is something tangible about such promises, something which wayfaring mortals, though fools, can grasp and understand.

I now see and realize what I am, and what, in a measure, I am to be. The "tree of life" will be there, and he that "overcomes" may eat thereof, and never die. O! the blessedness of such a hope. "No more sorrow, no more death." "The mountains and hills will break forth into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier, shall come up the myrtle tree." And then shall we see him as he is, for we shall be like him. "And there shall be no night there; for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever."

Pardon me, Dear Editor, if I have trespassed on your time and space, in relating my "experience"; but one purpose prompted this humble testimony, and if one person only in this wide world catches the beam of sunshine by reading this letter, and is induced to examine the Scriptures more thoroughly, and become better prepared to combat the great enemy of man—falsehood—and more earnest in the Master's work, I shall feel that your labor and mine shall not have been in vain.

WESTERN NOTES.

Our meetings at the Baptist meeting-house in Rochelle, Ill., produced good results. The Methodist minister was present, and expressed his sympathy with the character of the meeting. Members of other churches took part and were quickened in spirituality.

Thursday, Sept. 26th, we went to Afton, some twenty-four miles from Rochelle, and had a good meeting in the pleasant chapel, built mostly by Bro. Wm. Watson, who is a true christian man, and delights in well-doing. He has a happy home, where Zion's pilgrims find a hearty welcome. He loves the way of holiness, and carries his religion into all his extensive farming business. Such noble men are scarce in these last days. We had a precious visit in his happy family, and bid adieu with a bright prospect of meeting soon in the everlasting kingdom.

Friday night, Sept. 27th, we were at De Kalb, with Bro. S. B. Mabey, who has been pastor of the church for some eighteen months. He now intends to labor mostly as an evangelist. He and his amiable companion are devoted christians. We had an interesting meeting, and some decided to consecrate all to Christ. We had a pleasant interview with Bro. Ford, the Methodist minister, who expressed a wish to have us remain and hold a series of meetings, remarking, that he would be pleased to have us occupy his meeting-house. We find prejudice is giving away, and sectarian walls are tumbling down. This is progress in the right direction. As a people we are better understood. We have been greatly misrepresented, and consequently much prejudice has existed in the minds of those who have gathered their information from the reports of Madam Rumor. Christian people feel a lack, until they see and embrace the truth, for which we have received most of our reproach. Our own mind is perfectly at rest in relation to the doctrines of the sleep of the dead, the destruction of the wicked, the resurrection of the dead, and the immediate coming of Christ. These are among the foundation stones in the doctrine of the Bible. With these belongs holiness of heart. Without this key-stone in the christian arch, all the rest will not save us. Holiness is essential to salvation. Let us be kept no longer in the background by those who are looking for the coming of Jesus.

Saturday morning, Sept. 28th, we left De Kalb for Chicago, a distance of about fifty-eight miles. We called on Bro. Burr, and found one of his daughters very sick. She is now (Oct. 1st) a little better. Bro. B. is resting sweetly in Jesus, enjoying the perfect love that casteth out all fear. He has been in possession of this rich gift since the 13th of last August, and finds the yoke of Christ very easy, and the burden exceedingly light. As usual we received a hearty welcome at the pleasant home of Bro. Billings. We found him worn down with the cares of a very extensive business, which he is resolved to lay aside as soon as possible, that he may have more time for divine things, in which he takes his highest delight. He is an ardent lover of pure christianity, and feels an increased desire to bathe in its deepest waters. He has done much towards building up the church in Chicago. We have never seen our Bro. and Srs. in C. in a better condition than at the present time. They are hungering after the same rich gift enjoyed by their pastor, Bro. Burr, and quite a number have made a full surrender to Christ, and are really new creatures.

Sabbath, Sept. 29th, was a blessed day in Christ. The Spirit of God rested upon us, producing much joy and peace in the hearts of the saints. We could truly say, "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." Several requested prayers that they might enter "the way of holiness." Some of these had been rather opposed to the subject of sanctification, because they had been misinformed in relation to the true nature of christian holiness, as presented by those who are its advocates. A happy change has come over their minds, and they are now seeking understandingly for the fulness there is in Christ. Besides this important work, which is going on in the church, several who have been faithful servants of sin, are seeking the Lord, resolved to follow Jesus the rest of their days. We are much encouraged at the present prospect. Wickedness abounds alarmingly in the city, but we hope to see some more come to Jesus.

STRANGE THINGS.

It seems almost incredible that any man, who claims to be in a sane condition, should write as the editor of the "Religio-Philosophical Journal," in Chicago, has written in his articles, entitled, "A search after God." Here are his words:—

"Man, and not God, was connected with the organization of matter into worlds and systems of worlds. A large portion of mankind attributes the creation of this earth and the other [planets] to an infinite, omniscient, omnipotent God.] They have no foundation whatever upon which to predicate such a supposition. . . . What! man make a planet; launch into the regions of space a comet; or organize a system of worlds for the unfoldment of other races of human beings? Yes, we say, emphatically, yes, and care not a straw for the denial of others. Worlds and systems of worlds bow to the nod of man. Point me to anything in nature that was made by God. Individualized man is the moving cause of creation. Do we declare that man conceived, made, and launched the earth into the regions of space? Most assuredly we do. We propose to prove that an infinite God is an impossibility. All the Gods we have found are myths. No omnipresent God made this earth."

Such is the fruit of Spiritualism; such the teaching of the spirits, who profess to be our friends who once lived here; whereas, they are but lying demons, following the father of lies, the Devil. We would like to know in what way the editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal examined all parts of the universe to ascertain whether there was any living God; so that he can come back and affirm that an infinite God did not create the earth, the sun, moon, nor stars; and therefore finite man must have made himself at the first, the earth, and all the heavenly bodies, with every other living thing. We say it is strange that Satan can get any one to believe such absurdities as those advocated by said editor.

SCIENCE AND SPIRITUALISM.

Mr. Crooks, F. R. S., London, has published an interesting article in the Quarterly Journal of Science, headed, "Spiritualism viewed by the light of Modern Science," in which he affirms, "That certain physical phenomena, such as the movement of material substances and the production of sounds, resembling electric discharges, occur under circumstances in which they cannot be explained by any physical law at present known, is a fact of which I am as certain as I am of the most elementary fact in chemistry. My whole scientific education has been one long lesson in exactness of observation, and I wish it to be distinctly understood that this firm conviction is the result of most careful investigation. I cannot at present hazard even the most vague hypothesis as to the cause of the phenomena."

When Mr. Crooks turns to the Bible, he will find light on the subject of Spiritualism. Science alone can never explain the phenomena of Spiritualism, any better than it can the creation of man and beast. Where the light of science stops, there revelation begins. Man does not need a revelation to tell him that which he can find out himself. Science gives no light concerning the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the future life, and final destiny of man. The greatest philosopher and the half-witted man are equally in the dark on these subjects, till they come to the sacred Scriptures for their light

INQUIRIES.

BRO. GRANT:—Will you please answer the following questions through the Crisis:—

1. Was it natural life, or eternal life, man lost in his disobedience? Gen. 2: 17.
2. What life did Adam give to Cain, natural, or eternal? Gen. 4: 1.
3. Had man (Adam) natural life before he fell, or eternal life, or both? Gen. 1: 27.
4. What are the component parts of our breath? Gen. 2: 7.
5. If it was the common atmosphere we breathe, it had a commencement. What constituted the existence of God prior to its commencement? Gen. 1: 6–8.
6. Was man mortal, or immortal, before he disobeyed God? How do we get everlasting life, and become immortal?
7. When did man lose eternal life?

G. H. SMITH.

1. Man lost natural life. We have yet to learn that any living being ever had, or ever will have, any other life than "natural life." We have no knowlege of any unnatural life. The only difference between this present life and eternal life is in the duration. The word life means simply the state of being alive. It has no reference to duration or condition. Other words must be connected with it to express its length or state.

2. Adam gave to Cain his own natural life.

3. Adam had only natural life before and after he fell; and if he was living now, and was to live eternally, it would still be natural life.

4. The component parts of the breath of life, so far as known, are chiefly oxygen and nitrogen; about twenty parts of the first and about eighty of the second to the one hundred. We believe the special gift of the first "breath of life" to Adam was vitalised by the immediate power of God.

5. The existence of God was the same before the creation of man as it is now.

6. Before man sinned, it was decided whether he should live forever or not; he was on trial. He was sure of life so long as he obeyed his Creator, and had the privilege of eating the fruit from the tree of life.

7. Adam did not lose eternal life, but simply life. He lost the right to eternal life when he sinned; and lost the means of securing it, when he was driven from "the tree of life."

CRIME IN CHICAGO.

We clip the following from the Chicago Tribune, Sept. 25th, 1872:—

"The alarming increase of murder and other crimes in Chicago is awakening the most serious apprehensions of the whole community. We therefore earnestly invite all order-loving and law-abiding citizens to assemble in mass meeting on Thursday evening, Sept. 26th, at eight o'clock, at the Board of Trade Rooms, corner of Washington and Market streets, to consider the causes of this prevalence of crime, and propose the best means of preventing it, and supporting the proper officials in enforcing all existing laws."

The foregoing was signed by about one hundred prominent citizens. The increase of crime is not confined to Chicago, but it is world-wide. This corresponds with the Bible picture of the last days. Yet there are many professed ministers of Christ who still cry "Peace and safety," and declare the world is growing better, while facts and the Bible contradict them most emphatically.

The time has come when it is very difficult to reach the unconverted; consequently there are but very few revivals in the land. And if persons should be converted to the low standard of piety now prevailing in the churches, it would not afford much cause for rejoicing in heaven or earth. A religion that does not cause its possessors to separate themselves from the spirit, manners, fashions, and customs of the world, cannot be the pure religion of Christ.

ASSUMPTIONS.

Spiritualism, like its author, sometimes has a relish for quoting Scripture, interspersing the same with ludicrous assumptions—such assumptions as are well calculated to mislead those who are determined, against all opposing facts, to cling to immaterialism. Some of these quotations and assumptions which have recently fallen under my observation, I will here refer to as samples:—

1. "I will send you Elijah the prophet." It is assumed that this was fulfilled by having the disembodied soul of Elijah come back to take control of John the Baptist, John being the medium through which the spirit of Elijah accomplished his work. To an immaterialist, this doubtless looks quite plausible; but unfortunately for this plausible assumption, it is confronted by the stubborn fact that Elijah had no disembodied spirit to come back and control John, from the fact that Elijah never died, but was translated bodily, and alive. Yet I recently heard a Spiritualist, in three different speeches, make a strong point out John's being controlled as a medium by the departed spirit of Elijah, in fulfillment of the prophecy, "I will send you Elijah the prophet"—that is, his spirit.

2. It was repeatedly affirmed that Jesus was also under the control of a departed spirit, without telling whose spirit; wonder if it was not the spirit of Enoch, who had been "translated that he should not see death?" But if he was under the control of any human spirit, it must have been a special enemy to Spiritualism, for it made him talk like this—"This is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 40. Not "may have everlasting life," say Spiritualists, for he already has it in his soul, and the body will never have it. Not "raise him up at the last day," say Spiritualists, for the spirit will rise from the body at the hour of death, without waiting for the last day; but the body will never rise at all. So if a human spirit controlled Jesus, it led him to lay the axe of truth at the root of the tree of Spiritualism, by repudiating the present possession of "everlasting life," and claiming that the resurrection will come at "the last day," saying, "Neither can they die any more;" which affirmation could not apply to deathless souls, as the phrase "any more" shows that the class referred to could once die. Thus the effort to make Jesus a Spiritualistic medium works ruin to the cause it was intended to help.

3. It is assumed that it was Christ's spirit, and not his resurrected body, that appeared to the disciples three days after the crucifixion, and that the term rendered "appeared" signifies a ghostly apparition. The last statement we deny, for the term is not once used in that sense, though occurring over fifty times, but is often used to indicate the actual presence of literal beings, as in the case of Jesus' statement before his death—"I will see you again." John 16: 22. Here "will see" comes from the term rendered "appeared." "Again" signifies a repetition of the previous sight, which was literal, and not a spectral apparition: for his statement literally signifies, "I will appear to you again." We also read—"There appeared unto them Elias with Moses." Mark 9: 4. As Elijah had not died, this could not have been a ghostly appearance, or the appearance of Elijah's soul; and Moses appeared in the same sense that Elijah did.

The assumption that it was Christ's spirit, without his body, that appeared to the disciples, will not pass even an ordinary inspection, in the light of facts.

(1) If it was his disembodied spirit that appeared, why did it not appear before the "third day," seeing Jesus "gave up the ghost, or spirit, at his crucifixion? As that part that was resurrected "appeared," and the resurrection took place on the third day, the resurrection could not have signified the raising of the spirit from the body, as Spiritualists tell us, seeing that separation took place three days before; therefore the body was "raised," and "appeared" on the third day, for they said—"The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon." Luke 24: 34. This resurrection took place at the wrong time to be a resurrection of the spirit from the body; and the very thing that was raised on the third day appeared to the disciples, which could not have been the spirit which Jesus committed into the hands of his Father three days before.

(2) That this appearance of Christ could not have meant the appearance of his resurrected spirit, but of the once lifeless form, is further evident from the fact that Paul affirms—"Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept" (Cor. 15: 20), "the first born from the dead" (Col. 1: 18); so this resurrection was the "first" of its order that ever took place, and consequently if it refers to the resurrection of the spirit from the body, as Spiritualists tell us, it follows that this was the "first" spirit ever released from a human body; and therefore all spirits for four thousand years previously must have slept with their bodies, thus disproving the theory of spirit apparitions before that time, and also disproving the claim that devils are spirits of bad men, and angels the spirits of good men. But on the supposition that the body was raised, all is clear, for this was the "first" case of a resurrection to immortality.

(3) When the women came to anoint him, bringing spices, "they found not the body of the Lord Jesus," but an angel was there to say to them—"He is risen; he is not here; behold the place where they laid him." Did they come to anoint a spirit, or a body? The one they were seeking had left the sepulchre; and to refute the idea of his resurrection, as maintained by the disciples, the soldiers were hired to say that he was stolen away, instead of being raised. Now as the effort was to refute the theory of the resurrection as held by the disciples, if they really held that it was a mere resurrection of his spirit, instead of his body, the ludicrous conclusion is involved that the soldiers were hired to say that the disciples stole away the spirit while they slept; for if the disciples did not believe in the resurrection of the body of Jesus, but simply in the resurrection of his spirit from the body, what force could there be in the statement that the body was stolen? How could that story militate against the claim that his spirit had been raised from the body, and had made a ghostly apparition to the disciples?

(4) When Jesus appeared, he affirmed—"It is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." Luke 24: 39. Could he truthfully have uttered these words if he had appeared to them merely as a disembodied spirit?

(5) Thomas not being present when Jesus first appeared, and hearing the statement of those who had seen him, boldly affirmed—"Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe." At a later date, Thomas being with the disciples, Jesus again stood in their midst, saying—"Peace be unto you;" and turning his attention to doubting Thomas, exclaimed—"Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing." John 20: 25–27. What was it that Thomas would not believe? Simply the story of Jesus' resurrection as related to him by the other disciples; and if they had only been telling him about the resurrection of Jesus' spirit from his body, and its having appeared to them in its disembodied state, Thomas is made to talk very foolishly about desiring to see the print ot nails in the hands of a disembodied spirit. And if Jesus really appeared in a disembodied state, his address to Thomas is equally foolish—inviting him to feel of the prints of nails and spear in a disembodied spirit. The nails had been driven through his fleshly hands, and the spear had pierced his fleshly side, but had the same wounds been inflicted on his spirit? Then how did that spirit extricate itself from the cross when Jesus "gave up the ghost," or spirit, if nailed there with literal nails?

It is argued that it could not have been the resurrected body of Jesus that appeared to the disciples, but must have been his spirit, from the fact (1) that while the doors were shut Jesus came into the room; and (2) because on another occasion he "vanished out of their sight." The first argument disappears when we remember that on another occasion, by an exhibition of miraculous power, "their eyes were holden that they should not know him;" so on this occasion their eyes might have been holden while he came in literally through the door, instead of making a spectral ingress through the key-hole. The second argument is obsolete when we consider that the original from which "vanished out of their sight" comes, simply signifies that he disappeared miraculously, not by evaporation, however; or, as the margin reads, "ceased to be seen of them." This sudden transportation of the Savior from land into mid ocean, and even across the sea to the other side, took place before the crucifixion; then why should it be deemed surprising after he was raised to immortality? He could appear and disappear at will; or be seen, or withheld from human sight, at pleasure. W. S.

SALVATION OF THE BODY.

Those who have been educated to believe that the remedial economy contemplates merely the salvation of the soul, independent of the body, in some ethereal realm, will be surprised to learn how much the Bible has to say about the future of the body. Job exclaimed—"And though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold." Job 19: 26. The margin reads—"After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh [or out of my fleshly eyes] shall I see God." When? "After I shall awake" from the sleep of death. The Douay version reads—"And I shall be clothed again with my skin, and in my flesh I shall see my God." Job's anxieties were not for a disembodied state of bliss immediately after death, but for felicity after the close of death's supremacy over the saints, in his resurrected body. And Paul gives vent to a similar feeling—"Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." Rom. 8: 23. Paul's anxiety was not to exist in a bodiless state, but to experience the "redemption of the body"—a work that is never experienced at death, but due only at the resurrection, being then conferred on those who shall be "accounted worthy," of whom the Savior says—"Neither can they die any more."

Nor can there be any mistake as to what body Paul is here speaking about, for in the same discourse, and in the same connection, while speaking of the resurrection of Christ's literal body, he says—"If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also [or, likewise] quicken your mortal bodies." Rom. 8: 11. Christ's mortal body literally died, and was literally raised, or animated by the quickening "power of an endless life;" so our bodies die; but if we possess the spirit of Christ, we are entitled to the same kind of quickening, indicated by the statement, "shall also quicken [or make alive] your mortal bodies"; that is, just as Christ's body was made alive to die no more;—a kind of quickening that the sinner is not entitled to; a kind of quickening that produces the "better resurrection," of which Christ's is the sample.

When ancient "women received their dead brought to life again" (Heb. 11: 3), those dead ones were quickened, but not with "the power of an endless life," as Christ was, and as the saints are to be; so sinners can and will thus be made to live again without sharing in "the better resurrection," which includes not only the re-organization, but likewise the renovation of the body. God will give "to every seed his own body. . . . So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. 15: 37, 42–44. Such is the resurrection promised the saints who "sow to the spirit"; they shall "of the spirit reap life everlasting."

Not so with sinners, who sow to the flesh; they shall "of the flesh reap corruption," and "utterly perish in their own corruption," because at their resurrection they will not, like the righteous, "put on incorruption." They will lack the redemption or renovation of the body, which is a component part of the "better resurrection."

Paul looked not for a change at death that should make him a bodiless man, but for a change of the body itself at the coming of Christ that should make the body undying. "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ: who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. 3: 20, 21. Christ's body, the same one that was once dead, and afterwards was "raised from the dead," and now "dieth no more," is here presented as the pattern after which our bodies are to be fashioned. "This mortal must put on immortality." W. S.

"THE GODS."

Not long since the claim was publicly made by a Spiritualist lecturer that "the gods," so often spoken of in the Scriptures, were the departed souls of dead men, instead of being a race of intelligences distinct from the human family. Against this claim stand the following considerations: (1) It is an unproved and an unprovable assumption. (2) It ignores the fact that these gods were in existence before Adam or any of his race had died, and consequently could not have their departed souls. Before death entered the world, Satan said to Eve, "God doth know, that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened; and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil." Gen. 3: 5. "And the Lord God said [after Adam's disobedience], Behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil." Gen. 3: 22. How would it have sounded for Satan to have talked to Eve about becoming like the souls of dead men, before there had been any death among men? And how would it have sounded for God to have said, "The man is become as one of us" departed souls of dead men, and that too before a single man had died? This would prove God himself but a dead man's ghost, if the other gods were, and all this before the death of a single man—"one of us" human souls.

After floundering in this mire for a while, a new effort is made to sustain the assumption, by asserting that the inhabitants of Nod lived and died before Adam was made, and that these gods were their ghosts.

But right here we are met with the scriptural affirmation, (1) that Adam was "the first man" (1 Cor. 15: 45), and there could have been no man on earth before "the first man"; and (2) "in Adam all die" (1 Cor. 15: 32), for "by one man's offence death reigned" (Rom. 5: 17); therefore there was no death in the world till it came through Adam, and consequently there could have been no disembodied souls before Adam's fall to bear the title of gods; yet there was then a class of intelligences with this title, and not then departed souls, neither have they since been such, but another race. AN INTERESTING LETTER.

BRO. GRANT:—Deacon Washburn of our church at Vallejo, Cal., has been sending to a sister of his living near Boston, Mass., the Crisis of late, and at the same time keeping up a correspondence with that intelligent christian lady. I enclose a letter just received from her, which you and the readers of the Crisis will be glad to read. When she penned it, she did not think of its appearing in print in the Crisis, which she so much prizes. When she sees it in print, she must pardon the liberty taken with her letter, for the good it will do.

What makes this case interesting is this: The Crisis is published in Boston, near where she resides, and where she receives her papers by way of penny post. They first come from Boston to this far-off Pacific coast, and are returned to Boston, and delivered to a man in business by penny post in Boston, by whom they reach their destination. This letter, I hope, will stir up others to do likewise and circulate their papers. O. R. FASSETT.

"My very dear Brother:—It is but a short time since I wrote you, but I want to let you know that the tracts and papers you were so kind to send me have been received, and read and re-read by myself and N. We are both very much interested in them; the Crisis I hailed as an old friend. I used to borrow it of a neighbor some few years since, but she soon moved to a new place, and I have not seen it since till now. I like it better than any of them. I think my mind is open to conviction, and I want to know the truth as it is in Jesus. One thing I noticed when I read the Crisis before, that I lost my interest in reading other religious papers, so much so that I felt tried with myself. It will be just the same now; other reading seems stale. Is it because it is more new to me, or because it is more of truth? I ask myself. The first paper you sent, D. brought with him at night, and as N.'s eyes are so she cannot read evenings, she woke up in the night and said, 'Mother, isn't it most morning? I want to get up and read Uncle Job's paper'; and they have been in one or the other of our hands all the time we could take to read.

The second coming of our dear Lord, the resurrection of the body, and the judgment passed upon the human race, and the reward of the righteous at that time, I have long believed in, and also the coming kingdom of our Lord, the heaven of the redeemed, would be on this earth. The doctrine of an endless hell has always been awful to my mind, but I had heard nothing else advanced, and thought I must believe it, and thought I was wrong in thinking even that it was a hard doctrine. Now I am glad to hope, if not fully believe, that after the second death the unbelieving will be as though they had never been.

I have commenced to read the Bible with this view, to write down all the passages I find in regard to the sleep of the dead. I do think there is more to favor your view of it than otherwise; but the thought presses upon me thus—Why has God suffered so many of his believing children, as desirous to have the truth and be led by his Holy Spirit as you and I are, to live and die in the belief that they would at death go to be with Jesus, and come with him at his second coming? Why has Satan been suffered to triumph so long, so many, many years, in having God's children resting in this lie? Surely we cannot say the Christian church has not been a power for good in the world, with all its worldliness and error. I have read more or less of the various views of the different sects of the present day, and at one time I got so bewildered that I did not know hardly where I was, or what I was, and I came to the conclusion that I had better take the Bible, and let all else go. But I still find myself inclined to read what others think of the word of the Lord. I hope I know enough of truth and faith in the Lord Jesus to be saved from the second death.

'Other refuge have I none;
Hangs my helpless soul on thee.'

In our last meeting of the Bible class, our lesson was in 1 Cor. 1: 18. One of the class asked what was thought of the word 'perish.' 'For the preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness'; remarking that some thought the soul of the wicked was annihilated. I remarked that it seemed to me that God would be much more glorified in the utter destruction of the sinner and all evil, than in the existence of each to all eternity; that to my mind endless misery had always been revolting to my feelings. No one agreed with me, but several said the endless misery of the wicked was as plain in the Bible as eternal life. The same old passages were quoted to prove their view; the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, and the thief on the cross. I longed to say more, and would if I had been a man; but the women in the class are not very free to express their minds, and I am too timid to say much; but I can have my own private opinion, and none can hinder. May I be a learner at Jesus' feet. I am rejoiced, my dear brother, that you feel so free to write me. I do love to get your good letters; and you are so happy in your view of truth, and so fully persuaded in your mind. The dear Lord bless you, and make you a blessing."

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 23d, 1872, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

"NOTHING TO SPARE."

The article in the Crisis under the above caption, by E. L. Bitler, was read and reread with tears and sighs. Its truthfulness is endorsed by our daily experience. It is fearfully true; we live in an age when the god of this world has blinded the minds of the people, and even those who profess to be looking for the King from heaven who will say to the righteous—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was an hungered and ye gave me meat. I was thirsty and ye gave me drink. I was a stranger and ye took me in. Naked and ye clothed me. I was sick and ye visited me. I was in prison and ye came unto me."

Said a dear sister—"O! if I could only have the money those superfluities cost, with which I see my sisters adorned, how much I could do at the South in building churches and hiring teachers and missionaries;" and perhaps if these were solicited to give for that purpose, would say—"I have nothing to spare."

I once knew a prosperous church which gave, for several consecutive months, fifty dollars or more a month on the average for mission purposes, and who were very greatly blessed by the constant conversion of sinners at their weekly prayer meetings, until some one was tempted to believe they had given too much, and that even that had been misappropriated, and consequently they stopped giving and doing. Many influences were brought to bear against the mission, and it ceased, and a long dearth in spiritual things ensued. Some that once gave, have become rich in this world's goods and lost their spirit of labor for sinners, and prayer meetings are very thinly attended.

I once knew a sister in the church who, when asked to give to a charitable object, said—"I have nothing to spare, for my husband does not believe as I do, and will not give me money for such purposes," and at the same time was clad in "costly apparel," purchased with money he had given her to do as she pleased with. But I do know of two dear sisters whose husbands are opposed to the truth we hold so dear, and who give their wives a yearly sum for dress, but who denied themselves for the sake of giving, and one of them was known to have given fifty dollars in one year for mission purposes.

"I have nothing to spare," said a man, "for my taxes have eaten me up nearly, and I do not believe a minister ought to be paid for their labor like other professional men, for if they are they will lose their reward when Jesus comes." And so he adds land to land, and, with a property of twelve thousand dollars, has nothing to give, and professes to be looking for Christ.

"I have nothing to spare," said a man, as he turned a poor child from his door, who asked for bread for her sick and wearied mother; and the very morning of that day he had asked God at family worship to supply the needs of the poor.

"I have nothing to spare," said a professor of religion. "People must work as I have to, or go to the poor-house,' and who at the same time was influencing some maiden aunts to make their will in his favor, which they did, of some forty thousand dollars, at the loss of the friendship of other heirs equally related. At his death he left one hundred thousand dollars to his penurious wife and children; and when all were dead but one daughter, she married a man who bids fair to sink the whole.

Time would fail us to write of the numerous instances where covetousness has blinded the mind, and a miserable hypocritical cloak of religion becomes their satisfying portion. Hundreds of churches are rusting out to-day, because they are laying up "treasures upon earth," while their "garments are moth-eaten" in their closets and drawers, which ought to be used up to clothe the naked. Then I have been many times grieved to see garments cut up for rag carpets suitable even for me to wear in the desk to preach the gospel of Christ, which ought to be put into the hands of some poor Dorcas in the church to make garments for the poor.

Shall we ever forget the earnest appeals for help in the mission work, which were heard on the camp-ground at Springfield and Alton Bay? Shall we arise and "take heed to the sure word of prophecy," which declares the end of all things is at hand?

Do we believe that Abraham, Isaac and Jacob will soon come forth, in spite of Turks who now guard the cave of Machpelah?

Do we believe Job will soon hear the voice of God from his house, the grave, and see his Redeemer? Do we believe David is soon to be satisfied by putting on the likeness of Christ? Do we believe those children in Ramah will soon come from the land of the enemy?

Do we believe that Isaiah's dead men will soon awake and sing? Do we look for Daniel to stand in his lot at the soon ending of the days?

In a word, do we believe the Lord himself will soon descend from heaven, to raise the dead and change the living? If we do so believe from the heart, people will know it by our works. We shall leave no stone unturned where we can alleviate the condition of humanity. And especially shall we strive to send the "gospel of the kingdom" into the "regions beyond" where they are "perishing for lack of knowledge." We shall never say "nothing to spare" when God's missionaries need support, or tracts are needed to help spread the glorious truth of the reign of Christ on earth.

Let us not, then, be "weary in well doing, knowing that in due time we shall reap if we faint not." L. M. STODDARD.

ALTON BAY CAMP-GROUND.

Editors of the Citizen:—

I have been waiting for a lull in this "confusion worse confounded," that I might collect my scattered, bewildered senses, and concentrate them long enough upon a sheet of paper, to give you some sort of a report of this religious carnival, now in full blast; but I have waited in vain; I must write amid this Babel of sounds, or not at all, for the crowd increases every hour,—every train and every boat leaves its thousands. It is estimated that there are over fourteen thousand on the ground. They flock here from the wilds of Canada, the backwoods of Maine, the green hills of Vermont, the valleys of New Hampshire, and even the prairies of the Far West have sent their representatives; still although there is such an immense crowd, and all sorts of characters here from all classes of society, yet there is no rowdyism or disturbance of any kind; all seem disposed to observe the rules; no work for the policemen thus far. It seems as if the prayer of one of the ministers was answered—he prayed the Lord to send his angels to be the policemen, to give them charge over the concerns of the camp-ground.

The prevailing feeling seems to be that they have met here for a higher purpose than mere recreation,—for the worship of God, to mingle their prayers and rejoicings in view of Christ's coming kingdom, and to gain strength from on high "to overcome the world" and to receive more light on this (to many here) new view of God's revelation.

This place, with its novel sights and sounds, it wooden tents (some two hundred and seventy-five in number) covering the hillsides, etc., is strange and new to one who visits it for the first time; but to those who have met here year after year it is "home" hallowed by many sacred associations; for to many souls has this proved the very "gate of heaven." The all-absorbing theme among the crowd is—"Is the Lord indeed coming so soon, and are we ready to meet him?" You notice groups gathered here and there, and the earnest tone, the glad, heart-cheering smile, tells the story—it is of Jesus' love and Christ's kingdom that they are conversing.

Here under my window is a knot of young men, who from their appearance you might be sure were talking of far different matters, but let us listen to their conversation: "Now, Jem, what do you think of this coming of Christ, these people talk so much about; do you believe it is really so?" "Well," says the other, "I never thought much about it before, but you can't get away from it; they put it down so plain." "Yes," says the third, "and they are so earnest and sincere, but I never read my Bible to be able to interpret it." "I guess all your Bible reading won't hurt you, Jem." "Well, I know I never did do much in that line (and I'm ashamed to say it), but I tell you what it is, boys, I'm going to study into this matter; for if it is true, as they say, 'that the last day is at hand,' I for one mean to be ready for it; but there are some things they believe that are pretty hard to get over."

So it is, listen where you will, by the wayside, in the post office, store, on the steamer, in the depot, or wherever you go, the inquiry is for light. The meetings are crowded both at the Stand and in the tents, and the evening meetings at the tents are packed, so that there are usually as many round the doors and windows as there are inside, and all so orderly and quiet; not a loud word, or noise of any kind to disturb the meeting. The meetings at the Stand are characterized by deep solemnity, and earnest, close attention; a holy awe seems to pervade the vast assembly. Standing on an elevation where you can overlook the thousands listening with breathless attention to the words of eternal life; so silent, not the rustle of a leaf, or the chirp of a bird to disturb the solemnity, one is forcibly reminded of the judgment day, when an assembly that no man can number will stand before the Judge of all the earth.

The daily programme is as follows: at five in the morning a holiness meeting; breakfast from seven to half-past; prayer meetings at various tents from eight to ten; ten o'clock, preaching at the Stand and children's meeting at the large mission tent; two o'clock, preaching at the Stand; also at six; evening, prayer and exhortation meetings at various tents, which hold till ten, when the bell rings all to their respective tents to retire for the night. With a little variation is the daily routine. There is a large boarding tent at the entrance of the grounds, capable of seating five hundred; also a cook house, where you can purchase any article of food, cooked or uncooked, at a reasonable price. The victualling accommodations are amply sufficient for the supply of the hungry multitude. Good board at eighty cents per day.

Sabbath, Sept. 15. To-day is the "last great day of the feast." The crowd has increased from fourteen to twenty-four thousand. Extra trains and extra boats have arrived crowded. There are fifty-five cars at the depot with five thousand passengers. The first meeting at the Stand was a love feast, where three hundred and fifty persons spoke in forty minutes. They spoke briefly, of course, some merely saying—"I am so glad that Jesus loves me."

The rite of baptism was administered at noon to seventeen persons; over forty have been immersed at other times. In the evening the communion was partaken of by thousands, and it was a very impressive and solemn scene; after singing the communion hymn, and the fervent benediction, the hand-shaking and farewells began in earnest, and the vast assembly broke up, to meet again another year in this sacred grove, dedicated to the worship of Him who seeketh not his own true followers in the vaulted cathedrals; but here, in this lofty temple not made by hands, has he manifested himself as he does not unto the world, and blest his children with his holy presence.—E. P. C., in Wakefield (Mass.) Citizen.

THE ILL. STATE CAMPMEETING.

Held at Amboy, continuing over two Sabbaths, was one of great profit to the general interest of the cause of Christ in this western field, and we trust much fruit will yet spring up from the seed sown at this gathering. There was preaching by Elds. J. V. Himes, M. Grant, H. L. Hastings, Wm. Sheldon, and others, which was truly a feast to the souls of the righteous present. The attendance for the State was good, also many came from the adjoining towns on the Sabbath. A number experienced religion, and six were baptized. The love-feasts, prayer and conference meetings, were times of refreshing from the Lord. The commemoration of the Lord's Supper was a time of solemnity, and will long be remembered. As they gathered about the table to partake of the emblems of the broken body and spilt blood of Jesus, they conversed not only of Calvary, but of Mt. Zion, and the time when Jesus will come forth and gird himself, and serve his bride at the marriage supper of the Lamb, in the city of God, the capital of the new earth.

The parting season came at last, when they had to depart to their distant homes and respective fields of labor, with the exception of Bro. Grant, who remained to carry on a protracted meeting in the city. Yet with the sorrow of parting there is joy in prospect of the scenes of blessedness and glory to be ushered in at the presence of the coming King, when former things will pass away, to give place to the Eden state. Then immortality will deck the brow of saints, and parting scenes and death and sorrow will be felt and feared no more.

The prospect that unity and harmony will continue to exist among this christian body was never more encouraging. In union there is strength, especially when unity is of God. Elds. Grant and Hastings are heartily welcomed with us in the West. Their labors at this meeting were appreciated very much indeed. They are true men, and God is with them. May they continue to herald the glad tidings of great joy until multitudes shall awake and obey the welcome call of God.

Brethren and sisters, east and west, let us all rally around the standard of Jesus, and continue more faithful, if possible, to do the work God has entrusted in our hands. There is no time for delay. The moments are precious. Let us strive for the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, and heartily cooperate with each other in the one common cause, as co-laborers together with God for the rescue of the perishing.

SILAS B. MABEY.

Correspondence.

From Sr. L. W. Bragg.

While reading an article in the Crisis, headed "The mind of Christ," my heart was much comforted and encouraged to retain and follow out the mind of Christ, as it was exemplified in his life. His language was, I delight to do thy will, O God; yea, thy law is within my heart; therefore his delight was to do his Father's commandments. In this we shall heartily say Amen, if the law of God be as surely written upon the fleshly table of the heart, by the same Spirit of love to God and his law, as it was in his. Then, like a Bro. Paul, we "delight in the law of God after the inward man;" and like a devoted David, can delight ourselves in the Lord, which is the height of our ambition; and pray from the heart, hide not thy commandments from me, which are the joy and "rejoicing of my heart"; for when I had found them, "I rejoiced at thy word as one that findeth great spoil." I made haste, and delayed not to keep thy commandments. And am not in the least "ashamed, when I have respect unto all thy commandments." All his ways and paths are paths of righteousness and peace, to all who fully accept of them; for the commandments of the Lord are pure, enlightening the eyes. The statutes of the Lord are clean, "making wise the simple."

These all having been wrought out by the divine mind, are truly of an heavenly and holy origin; so that we can truthfully exclaim (by the help of the divine Spirit), "In the keeping of them there is great reward," for they are spirit and life, upon which we can feed. Yea, every word that hath proceeded from the mouth of the Lord is meat indeed, when the Spirit of God takes it and showeth it to us. Then we can see and feel the good that the word of God affords us. It is not an empty name or sound, which is incomprehensible, and of no use; but it is perfect, converting the soul to God and godliness in its deepest tone; perfecting holiness in the fear of God; for without this perfect holiness we shall never see his lovely face of beauty upon the glorified shores of unsullied bliss, and glories unfading.

The abundance of grace that we so much need is sure to be ours according to the promise, if we but live and walk in the Spirit; and however much we may see our moral deformity and unrighteousness by nature, we in Christ receive the gift of his righteousness, in which we are without spot or wrinkle or any such thing; holy and without blemish. All is imputed to us through faith in Him, who has paid it all for us, and washed us white as snow. Thank his dear and ever blessed name, forever, for the witness of the Spirit within, crying, Abba, Father, my Lord and my God.

Since I commenced these lines, we have attended the gospel feast with saints gathered upon the Belfast encampment, where the Spirit of divine love to God and one another seemed more fully manifested and enjoyed than it has been for years in the past, for which my heart says, Praise the Lord; for it does look as though the bride was now making herself ready to meet the Bridegroom in her bridal attire of holiness to the Lord, without which no man can see the Lord.

Orrington, Me., Aug. 31st.

SR. R. WESTCOTT writes:—"You, who are abounding in the good things of this life, my message seems to be to you, to remind you in the name of Him whom I humbly hope to serve, to neglect not your all-important duty to the poor, which the blessed Savior said you always have with you. But the worthy subject to which I am now impressed to call your attention is that sick and suffering saint, Luthera B. Weaver, that you fail not to have her share in your prayers and also in your earthly bounty; 'remembering the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

PITTSBURG, PA.

It is now ten months since I was called and came to Pittsburg, Pa., to labor, and, though we have worked quietly and made no flourish of trumpets, we are able to say "the Lord is with us," and the truth is spreading and taking a deep hold in this city and Alleghany. We now propose to "carry the war into Africa," i. e., invade the strongholds of "orthodoxy," by scattering among them "the incorruptible seed," by free distribution of our standard works. The schism in the same body is nearly healed, the fragments gathered up, the marks obliterated, and the brethren are meeting together in harmony and holding public service regularly in Quincy Hall, No. 127 Leacock St., every Sunday at 10.30 A. M. and 7.30 P. M. Through the week all are busy in disseminating and presenting the truth among and to others, as they may have opportunity. We might give the names of some ten or a dozen brethren who are especially assiduous workers, but as distinctions are invidious, and comparisons odious, and all merit commendation, I forbear. Several have put on Christ in baptism, and more are "booked" and will soon be "planted in the likeness of Christ's death," that they may be with him in the likeness of his resurrection. The last three Sabbaths have been seasons of unusual interest and blessedness in our meetings. That the Lord may prosper, build and establish us in all our work and in his ways, preserve us from sin and from evil unto his glorious appearing, is our most earnest supplication to Him who is able to keep us from falling, and present us faultless before his glory. Amen.—G. W. STETSON, in A. C. Times.

Summary of News.

FOREIGN.

Cable News.

FRANCE.

ALSACE AND LORRAINE.

Oct. 3. The departures from Alsace and Lorraine of the inhabitants who decline to assume German citizenship, are upon an immense scale. It is estimated that 88,000 emigrating Alsatians will take up their residence in Nancy alone, while large numbers will go to other places. Eighteen thousand persons also left Metz the last fortnight to seek homes under the French jurisdiction. The population of that city now numbers only ten thousand.

POLITICAL EXCITEMENT.

The provincial canvass is having a very unfavorable influence on the commercial and political prospects of the country. A large and powerful faction is supporting Gambetta by holding meetings and demonstrations at various places, and in every way working to increase his popularity, with the ultimate view, it is stated, of putting him before the people as the candidate for the Presidency.

THE PROGRESS OF RADICALISM.

Oct. 6. The recent progress of radicalism in France and the frequent political agitations in that country are viewed with a degree of dissatisfaction by Russia, Germany and Austria. These agitations, while greatly endangering the stability and permanency of M. Thiers' government, are also held to be inimical to the peace of Europe. The Russian government, in an official note, has expressed its disapproval of the marked progress, and signifies its intention of withdrawing its sympathy if France should become the centre of European agitation.

SPAIN.

DESTRUCTION OF A MONASTERY BY LIGHTNING.

Oct. 3. A despatch from the town of Escurial, twenty-four miles northwest of Madrid, announces that the celebrated monastery of Escurial was struck by lightning this evening. The building was quickly on fire, and so rapid was the progress of the devouring element that the dome and tower of the magnificent edifice had already fallen. The Royal Palace, with its splendid library of books and paintings, and rare and costly manuscripts, is now in flames, and there is apparently little prospect of saving from destruction the mausoleum as well as the summer residence of the Spanish kings.

Oct. 4. While the fire in the palace of Escurial was still burning, the king's firemen arrived and after several hours succeeded in checking the progress of the flames. The damage, however, has been very great. The massive stone walls of the palace are blackened and a great portion of the wood work is gone. Had it not been for the unusual strength and solidity of the structure it would have been doubtless entirely destroyed, so great was the delay before aid arrived. Many rare paintings and other valuables have been saved from destruction by the bravery of the firemen, and although the library is seriously damaged, it is believed that a portion of its contents may be saved. A large portion of the roof of the monastery is destroyed, but the main builing is saved. The damage to the palace is very serious and can hardly be repaired. The fire is extinguished and the treasures have been saved. During the whole of last night the Madrid fire brigade, assisted by citizens of Escurial, worked the engines, throwing a constant stream of water on the burning palace. Towards morning the fire was subdued. The books and manuscripts of the royal library are saved, but many are greatly damaged. These, together with paintings and other treasures, are to be removed to Madrid. The appearance of the palace contrasts strangely with its former magnificence. The windows gone, a portion of the roof destroyed, richly carved staircases and massive doors are ruined. The interior was ornamented with numerous frescoes, many of which are wholly obliterated. All statues, bronzes and other valuable works of art are saved.

AUSTRALIA.

THE OVERLAND TELEGRAPH COMPLETED.

LONDON, Oct. 2. A dispatch from Melbourne, September 11th, says that the overland telegraph line is completed.

ROME.

THE SANGUINE POPE.

ROME, Oct. 3. The Pope in replying to a deputation which visited him on the anniversary of the taking of the plebiscitum in Rome declared that the triumph of the Church would assuredly come, if not in his life in that of his successor.

ITALY.

Oct. 7. The Pope has been the recipient of several communications from Thiers, in which the latter strongly counsels the Holy Father to reconsider his determination to leave Rome for a residence in France. Thiers, while still adhering to his offer, placing a residence at Compiegne at the Pope's disposal, urges that the necessity for the latter exiling himself from his pontificate has passed away with the recent crisis in the affairs of the Holy See, and assures the Pope of the unwavering support and protection of the French republic. The Pope has, in deference to the proposal of Thiers and after due deliberation with the cardinals, abandoned his intention of leaving Rome.

ROUMANIA.

THE LONG-SUFFERING JEWS.

Oct. 7. In consequence of the continued persecution of the Jewish residents by native citizens, large numbers of the former are leaving the country daily. A band of Jewish emigrants, numbering several hundred, left for the United States, where they intend making their future home. Previous to their departure a number of wealthy Jewish residents accorded them a handsome ovation.

In Brief.

—— Twenty-nine of the present cabinet ministers of Europe are free-masons. One is Grand Master of one of the foremost Orders in Europe. ——A recent despatch from Melbourne to London says the Overland Telegraph line of Australia has been completed.——The Shah of Persia is about to visit Europe, and to do so in a style of Oriental magnificence.——Spurgeon, the London preacher, who has been very ill, is pronounced to be convalescent.——There are twenty-five murderers in the Tombs in New York awaiting trial. ——The Citizens' Committee of twenty-five in Chicago are active in devising means for the suppression and prevention of crime. One of their first measures will be to secure the closing of saloons on Sunday.——Two colored grand jurors were empanelled for the first time in the United States Court at Cleveland, O., Tuesday.——The Paris correspondent of the London Times telegraphs that the Russian Ambassador in that city has received a note from Teneiff, secretary of the Emperor's privy council, withdrawing the congratulations which the Emperor had tendered to Thiers, and expressing the dissatisfaction of Russia at the aggressive attitude of the radical party of France. ——The Chinese and Japanese are rapidly preparing for war, to determine by battle to which nation the sovereignty of Corea belongs. The latter for a long period paid tribute to Japan, but now, emboldened by the promised support of China, refuses to do so any longer. Japan has organized her navy on a very respectable footing. The crews have been drilled in seamanship by American and European officers. They have also been taught the man-of-war discipline in the use of guns and small arms. It is predicted that Japan will prove the victor in this contest, and will become the maritime power of the Asiatic nations. ——There has not been a season since 1867, in New York, when there was as much real suffering among the genteel classes as now. There is no money to be had. There is really no business except with a few prominent houses. Men are afraid to buy or sell. The condition of the money market and conduct of the cliques in Wall street have nearly ruined the fall trade. There are persons living in apparent style on Fifth Avenue, who do not know where they will get their bread from day to day. Many merchants are getting their goods off as best they can, tempting buyers with long credits, and breaking over their own rules, to create trade. Yet labor keeps up at an exorbitant price, which operates as a complete embargo on building. Thousands of men are out of employment who will not work for less than $4 or $5 a day.——Speaking of the climate of the Argentine Republic, Professor Gould says: "A bowl of water left uncovered in the morning is dry at night; ink vanishes from the inkstand as if by magic; the bodies of dead animals dry up instead of decomposing, and neither exercise nor exposure to the sun's rays produces perspiration." ——The damage to the Escurial by fire last week is not so heavy as was first supposed. A thorough inspection of the building shows that the loss will not exceed $125,000.——The records of crime in Chicago are such as to afford a ready explanation for the formation of a "Citizens' Committee," to devise means for its suppression. In one day recently there were four murderous assaults there, most of them resulting fatally.—— The Swiss Times says that the work upon the St. Gothard tunnel is being pushed forward with great energy. The workmen on both sides are said to have cut more than one hundred feet into the rock.——The great Summit crater of Mannaloa, in the Island of Hawaii, is again in eruption. No flow of lava yet. At a distance of seventy-five miles the sight is magnificent.

THE LATE INTERNATIONAL FIASCO.—The London Post says it was in an evil hour for the reputation, already sufficiently bad, of the International Association that the chiefs of that mischievous organization determined to let in a little of the light of day upon themselves and their proceedings. Conspirators against public order and peace ought to have been a little more chary of exposing themselves to the risk involved in adopting the procedure of orderly and peaceable gatherings. The International Association has publicly endeavored to earn for itself the character of a deliberate body, and it has only succeeded in publicly earning the amused contempt of every spectator. The Internationalists are unable to cast even the semblance of decorum around their baleful organization, and it is well that no successful hypocrisy should blind the working classes to the true character of their pretended deliverers. As it has turned out, the disgraceful fiasco of the International Congress has resulted in the thorough exposure of the rottenness of the system, and it is an encouraging sign of the progress of sound ideas that, within the very hall of meeting, the shouts of "Weg met de Internationale" (away with the Internationale) announced the disgust of the Dutch auditory at the frantic imbecility which had been displayed.

THE BALLOON trip made by Messrs. Samuel A. King, the noted aeronaut, and Luther L. Holden, of the Boston Journal, during the afternoon and night of September 26th and 27th, from Plymouth, N. H., to Sayabec, Quebec Province, Canada, was one of the most remarkable ever made in this or any other country. The adventurous gentlemen passed over wild regions of New Hampshire, Maine, and portions of the Province of Quebec, to the shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, traveling about five hundred miles in twelve hours and forty-two minutes. They narrowly escaped being blown far out to sea, making a far from agreeable visit to the inhospitable shores of Labrador. The highest peaks of all the White Mountains and many hills, lakes and rivers in Maine and Canada, were passed over during a dark and stormy night, and at an average elevation of two and one-half miles.

Notices.

TO WESTERN FRIENDS.—We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16th, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object. D. MATHEWSON, WM. SHELDON, WM. McCULLOCK, DAN'L. S. CLARK, O. S. KNAPP, FRANK BURR, H. G. McCULLOCK.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that our Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work.

WILLIAM L. HIMES, Bus. Ag't.

THE New Hampshire State Conference will hold its annual session at Concord, commencing Wednesday, at two o'clock P. M., Nov. 20th, and hold over the following Sabbath. Particulars hereafter. J. COUCH, Pres.

THE ANNUAL session of the Hoosick Valley Conference will be held with the Advent Christian Church at Hoosick, N. Y., commencing Oct. 16th, and continue over the following Sunday.

We hope there will be a general rally from all parts throughout the bounds of this Conference, of the lovers of Jesus and his soon coming to this great gathering and annual feast of the saints. Come from the mountains and hills, from the valleys and plains, and meet once more in conference before the great drama of human history shall close. Come with the armor on, and in the strength of our soon coming King make one more charge upon the enemy's hosts before the clarion notes of Michael's voice shall reverberate through the land, saying, "It is done." Come filled with the Spirit, to labor for God and the good of the perishing. In the mean time let special prayers go up to God that this meeting may be the best ever held in Hoosick.

Let there be a full representation of the churches by delegates duly appointed. Do not neglect to send delegates. Please notice the following article in the Constitution—"Each church composed of twenty members or less, shall be entitled to send one delegate; over twenty, two; and over forty, three delegates."

Passengers coming on the Troy and Boston R. R. will purchase tickets to Hoosick Corners, where there will be teams to carry them to the place of meeting free of charge. Teams will be at the depot on the arrival of the 12.48 train from Adams, and the 2.30 train from Troy. Remember at the trains due at Hoosick Corners, at the above mentioned time, there will be teams to take all who come. Let those who wish to have protracted meetings held with them the coming winter, make their wants known, in person or by letter. All letters sent us to Hoosick Falls, N. Y., care of John B. White, will reach us safely during the week of conference.

A. W. SIBLEY, President.
A. P. BUMP, Secretary.

The church at Morris extend a cordial invitation to all to come and help.

B. HITCHCOCK, President.
L. S. LUDINGTON, Secretary.

BELIEVING the Lord has called me to the work of preaching the gospel; that time is short, and what is done must be done quickly; and having a desire to do what I can for the advancement of the cause of Christ and saving the perishing, I hold myself in readiness to labor wherever the Lord shall open the way. Brethren living in isolated places desiring my labors, will please address CHARLES N. WOOD, Jamaica, Windham Co., Vt.

I WAS appointed by the Lawrence Time Conference to bring before the brethren scattered abroad in the New England States, and elsewhere, the importance of another Time Conference, to be held in some convenient locality, for the purpose of still further discussing this most important subject, viz., the definite time for the coming of our Lord from heaven, and to learn or obtain the mind of any church in a convenient locality, if such a convention is desired, or would be regarded as profitable among them. Let any church that desires such a meeting, and could accommodate the brethren that would attend, send notice to the writer of the fact, and as to when it would be convenient for them that such a meeting should be held. Let action be taken on this subject without delay. L. T. CUNNINGHAM, Sec. pro tem of the Lawrence Conference.

"GIVE, AND IT SHALL BE GIVEN UNTO YOU."

A pilgrim at my door,
With weary feet and sore,
In faltering tones asked food and alms one day;
Alas! no wealth had I,
The cruse was almost dry,
A handful only in the barrel lay.

Sadly I answered "No";
Slowly he turned to go,
When down the path there came a bounding tread,
With face of heaven's glow;
"Take this," was murmured low,
"A cup of water and a crust of bread."

Grateful the pilgrim smiled
Upon that angel child;
"The Savior own and bless thee, precious one!"
Then to my wondering ear
These words seemed whispered near
In tones seraphic—"This to me is done."

Again with peaceful look
His course the wanderer took;
I saw him pause beside the rich man's door;
A youth with noble air
Came forth with luxuries rare,
And in his hand a silver goblet bore.

"Rest, stranger, here," he said;
"My father's table spread,
Invites the hungry to its plenteous store."
Again that heavenly voice—
"Thine shall be wisdom's choice;
There is that scattereth but increaseth more."

Quick on my throbbing heart
There fell a sudden smart—
Not mine the joy of giving here below;
Once more that blessed strain,
"No seed is dropped in vain;
The smallest to a sheltering tree may grow.

"Weighed in the balance just,
Earth's treasures are but dust;
The scattered crumbs, the tears that pitying fall,
With richest gems shall shine
In beauty all divine;
For love receives each gift, and hallows all."

SANCTIFICATION THROUGH THE TRUTH.

MRS. A. E. BENNETT.

"Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."—John 17: 17.

The above passage in the Savior's prayer is often quoted. We ask, What is the truth of God through which believers are sanctified? for it was believers for whose sanctification he prayed. We are told "It is the soon coming of the Lord, and its kindred truths, or present truth."

Is it a fact that our Savior had been talking to them of his second coming, and that he had closed his eyes to all other portions of truth, and prayed for their sanctification through that one item of truth? Let us go back to that prayer and preceding chapter, and see if that is the subject under consideration.

In reading them over carefully, we see he scarcely alluded to that portion of truth; but is talking of practical things, such as abiding in him; of praying the Father in his name; the mission of the "Holy Comforter or Spirit of truth," which should be sent at his departure, etc.

Is it proper to take one item of God's truth and call it truth, to the exclusions of all other portions of truth? Might not all other denominational sects select some particular item of truth, that perhaps which gave them identity, and say, "this is the truth through which we are sanctified"? Methinks it would be equally proper. If the soon coming of the Lord, and "its kindred truths," are that portion of "truth" which has given us as a people identity, is the only truth of God through which we are sanctified, the human family is greatly to be pitied when that great event does occur. But, thanks to our God, there are other portions of truth equally dear to us, but no dearer; and these are always dispensational. The apostle says—"But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation, through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." Has not that sanctification always "from the beginning" been of a dispensational sort?

Christ says—"I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." The apostle says further—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Are not these items in God's great system of truth, through which men are sanctified?

To no one's heart is the coming of the Lord and its kindred truths dearer than to the writer's. No one's interests are more largely identified with it than my own; and no one's hopes cluster around it more closely. But I could never be persuaded to the belief that through this truth alone men are sanctified. If so, how needless the great plan of salvation laid out by the all-wise God himself, and which forms the frame-work of the book of God, from Genesis to Revelation. The Lamb slain from the beginning is the foundation; and his second coming, with its attendant events, is the cap-stone.

Christ says—"It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God." In the same sense man shall not live by one isolated portion of God's word and call it "the truth"; but receive every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God as the truth of God, and live by it.

But, says one, "In the days of Noah and Lot, none were saved but those who received 'present truth,' and we do not believe that anything but a belief in 'present truth' can sanctify." Let us ask, Does a belief of what is termed "present truth" sanctify wholly, soul, body, and spirit? Let facts answer; for theories, however nicely adjusted or finely arranged, are confirmed or overthrown by facts; and facts are these: of the many hundreds and thousands who hold to "present truth," there is but a very small per centage of them profess to be "wholly sanctified," in the sense implied in the Savior's prayer; and that few do not claim to have been sanctified by believing those items of truth, dear as they are to them.

While on the other hand are those who do profess sanctification, and do bear fruit unto holiness, and do talk the language which none can talk that are not there; and yet they do not hold to these items of "truth" which are so dear to us. Why? Because they do not conceive them to be the truth of God. They have no more disposition to reject what they conceive to be the truth of God than you and I have. What they do not receive, they fail to understand to be Bible truth.

I think the most of us do that same way; whatever we conceive to be truth we are ready to accept, and what we do not understand to be truth we reject. Holiness is not so much the great corrector of our intellects as our hearts, out of which are the issues of life.

Dearly beloved, let us be careful not to judge on so momentous a point, till we have had a practical peep at both sides of it. Should we not be apt to make a liberal discount on the arguments of an unconverted man who tells us there is nothing real in conversion; that it is all a myth, all a fancy, and yet acknowledges he never tried it? Nor would we endorse the testimony of a blind man, should he tell us there is no tide of sunlight deluging the earth with its grateful, heart-cheering illuminations. Can there be any more merit attached to arguments against the work of entire sanctification of the Spirit, regardless of denominational theology as a distinctive feature in christian experience, when it is scriptural and attested to by scores and hundreds, yea thousands of reliable witnesses; and yet the objector does not profess to know experimentally it is not so.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us walk very cautiously, and tread very softly, when we approach holy ground; for the subject before us is holy ground, sanctified by the "Spirit of truth" and hallowed by the blood of Christ. "For the Spirit takes of the things of Christ and showeth them to us." It takes the blood of Christ and applies it to our hearts, and it (the blood) cleanseth, and the Spirit sanctifieth, and we are purified from even those inward emotions which have caused us so many conflicts in the past; and in their absence how sweetly we rest. No storm can shake our inmost calm. O blessed rest! sweet rest! how grateful to our hitherto storm-wrecked barks. We sing of the "blessed rest, sweet rest, over there"; it is not all "over there," brethren. It will be blessed and sweet over there, but it is blessed and sweet here, and perfectly satisfying. Thanks to our "blessed, blessed Master!"

"FEEDING THE LAMBS"; OR, Preaching to Little Folks.

D. F. NEWTON.

"'Tis from the little ones, O God,
Their simple hearts and artless ways,
Wiser, because more pure than we,
Thou hast perfected praise."

Preach to the little folks, do you, parents? Fail not, begin early, the very moment the eyes of your newly-born babes behold the spangled heavens, nature's beauties, fruits and flowers. "Too little," say you? No, they are not. The instant a child hears nature's voice, its character is forming for time, for eternity.

Parent, have you a beautiful first-born, beautiful as an angel? What the first sermon to this precious gift? A smile from a heart overflowing with love to Jesus and your infant babe? Seest thou not the little one smile in return? And will not this heavenly smile of the loving, godly mother leave an impression for good? A child needs smiles as well as flowers need sunshine. Let every father, every mother, then, smile graciously, be happy, look happy, talk to the "little ones" in a way to make them happy.

"Speak gently! 'tis a little thing,
Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy which it may bring,
Eternity shall tell."

A child's time is more precious than gold. Mothers, preach to your little ones. Fathers, preach to your little ones, lying down, rising up, going out, coming in; preach with smiles, gentle looks, sweet, heavenly, with Jesus in your souls. The first language a child learns is the face of its mother. Smile in love, talk in love, walk in love, do everything in love.

Let the whole atmosphere in the nursery, the kitchen, the dining-room, the parlor, up stairs, down stairs, in doors and out, be permeated with love, angelic sweetness. This atmosphere of love, these smiles of love, thoughts, words and deeds of love, are the first sermons to preach to "little folks"; the best, the sweetest, the most efficacious and permanent. They endure forever.

"Love is the little golden clasp
That bindeth up the trust;
Oh, break it not; lest all the leaves
Shall scatter and be lost."

Ministers of the gospel, preach to the "little folks," do you? at home and abroad, by the way-side, wherever and whenever you meet their cheerful, smiling faces? drop a word, kindly, lovingly, teaching the heavenly kingdom—the way, the truth, and the life.

When you meet the lambs of the flock, in doors or out, do you study to gain their good-will, their affections; labor to interest them in things lovely and of good report, things pertaining to the joys that await the blessed? Smile upon a child,—have you not won its heart? Does it not smile in return? Do not its eyes follow you? Does not its face sadden as you disappear, and smile when you come again? Does that smile cost you anything? What parent will not love you if you show an interest in his child? What church will not value the minister who thus wins the love and esteem of parent and child? Will not "outsiders" come to see and hear, and be converted under the minister who has first won the hearts of their children?

As a matter of fact and personal experience, did you ever know a preacher who paid no attention to the children to be truly popular; or one that did, to be unpopular? He who never notices children may be respected, feared, obeyed; but is he truly loved?

And then on the Lord's day, in the house of prayer and praise, the reading and expounding of God's word, be sure to feed the lambs; have something beautiful for the youngest members of your audience—the sincere, unadulterated milk of the word—angel's food, that they may grow thereby. Preach no sermon to the great folks, without something good expressly for the little folks. Children should be fed on the marrow and fatness of the gospel—the essence and quintessence of all that is pure and heavenly, the doctrines and precepts of the blessed Bible, the word of life. Not a discourse from the sacred desk should omit special reference to the "lambs." "Feed my lambs" is the high and holy mandate. Christ fed them, folded them to his bosom.

"He shall gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in his bosom." These gentle words of prophecy relate to the Lord Jesus, and in him they were fulfilled. His ways of gentleness and of love engaged the hearts of little ones, and many such believed on him, while reasoning and self-righteous despised his grace, and scorned his lowly ways.

At Capernaum, the disciples asked the Lord—"Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said—"Verily, I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name, receiveth me. But whoso shall offend—stumble or ensnare—one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depths of the sea."

"And is it true, as we are told,
That there are lambs within the fold
Of God's beloved Son?
That Jesus Christ with tender care
Will in his arms most gently bear
The helpless little one?

Our Savior in the midst of his preaching, and teaching, and healing, stopped to speak to the little ones, took them to fold in his arms, and said, "forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Jesus is ready to save them now, even to the uttermost—clasp them to his bosom of love.

Jesus always had children among his auditory. They are often mentioned. In the enumeration of those whom he miraculously fed we read, "besides women and children." His triumphant entry into Jerusalem gathered among the most conspicuous of the jubilant throng those children who were heard crying "Hosannah" in the temple. When Jesus "took a little child and set him in the midst," he had not to go far for the living illustration, for the little children were always near the holy child Jesus.

Our Lord Jesus was so guileless, so gentle, the childish nature was so conspicuous, that he attracted the little ones to himself. We shall never forget the voice of the Savior, the Lord of angels, as he cries—"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones."

We do not wonder at the disciples, who in their eagerness to relieve the Savior who was weary with his labors, forbidding the children to come; but since those precious words were uttered, is it not a marvel that any should be found who even doubt the propriety of encouraging children to come to Christ publicly and privately?

How touchingly beautiful is that narrative! There is nothing to compare with it in all of the Savior's ministry. How our hearts swell with emotion when we contemplate the scene! There are the mothers, who had been telling the children the story of the blessed Savior, until their hearts were alive with love for him and eager to rush to his embrace. And as they urge their way through the crowd and draw near, the disciples turn coldly upon them and forbid their coming—even rebuking them for their boldness. How chilling! But the Savior hears; and turning from the throng he was addressing, with extended arms and a look of love, he says—"Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them. Who does not, in looking at this picture, involuntarily exclaim with the poet—

"I wish that his hand had been placed on my head,
That his arm had been thrown around me;
That I might have seen that kind look when he said,
Let the little ones come unto me."

We are bound to take them to Christ now, till they meet him, and we are sure we have put their little hands in his. First of all gather the lambs for Christ. "Take this child and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages." Parents, take your children to the house of God with special reference to their soul's salvation; praying, anticipating the truth's lodgement in the soul and conscience. And when you return from the place of public worship, question them, solicit a repetition of the sanctuary services; bring them home to the heart, water them with prayer, as dew from heaven.

Here is an important moral field, wanting cultivation. Mind in its forming stage, impressible and inquiring; not pre-occupied, gospel hardened, or blinded by the deceitfulness of sin. The attention can be more readily arrested by saving truths than in riper years, the affections more readily won, the purposes of the heart more readily moulded to the right. Why then should this moral seed-time be so neglected by so many of the under shepherds, on whom the great Shepherd enjoins it so imperatively—"Feed my lambs."

God said to his ancient people—"Thou shalt teach these words which I command thee diligently unto thy children" . . . "when thou liest down and when thou risest up." The quiet hour, when "he lieth down," when the day can all be calmly reviewed in the light of conscience, is the time when the door of the child's heart is most open, when evil can be best turned out of it and Christ be brought in. Lead the children directly to Jesus, rest not till you are sure they are in his arms. Never let go their hands till then.

"See Israel's gentle Shepherd stand
With all-engaging charms;
Hark! how he calls the tender lambs,
And folds them in his arms.

'Permit them to approach,' he cries,
Nor scorn their humble name;
For 'twas to bless such souls as these
The Lord of angels came."

"SANCTIFY YOURSELVES."

Sanctification is indispensable to those who would be powerful for good. Many christian people wonder how it is that they are no more useful. They pray most earnestly; they give most liberally; they manifest much anxiety for the spread of God's cause, and yet have but little success. It may be because they are not holy. Many complaints of the hardness of men's hearts, and the general indifference of the world to pure religion would be silenced, if the church were entirely holy. We should march on, and nothing would stop our progress. Neither the sea nor the river, neither difficulty nor opposition would successfully oppose the progress of those who, filled with the Spirit of God, engaged in his service.

"Sanctify yourselves." It is a personal work. There must be a personal self-scrutiny, a personal putting away of every evil thing, a personal dedication to God, an entire self-surrender, a complete renewal of heart and life. This is the best preparation for working for God. Although thought and careful study are demanded when we engage in holy toil for Jesus, yet prayer and consecration, the making clean the heart, are even more essential. . . . .

The to-morrow of sanctification is the today of wonder-working. What wonders were done among the Israelites after the command to sanctify themselves had been obeyed? The river was parted, the whole host went through on foot, the promised land was entered upon, and promises which had been made ages before were fulfilled. How quickly did the wonders occur after the sanctifying! To-morrow! How soon the hours of a night pass. But not sooner than will come wonders of divine working among those who sanctify themselves. It is God who doeth the wonders. We need have no fear whether he will be true to his work. Let us sanctify ourselves, and the promise will be gloriously fulfilled.

What wonders would the world behold if all the members of the church were to "sanctify themselves!" What power in the services! What sinners saved! What backsliders restored! What feeble saints made giants in love, purity, and grace?—Rev. W. G. Pascoe.

LITTLE THINGS.

A little thing! how oft that word
We hear from young and gay;
Events which fill our daily lives,
Are "little things," they say.
Ah! did we know the weary pain
A little fault might bring,
We'd pause a moment, ere we dared
Call it a little thing.

It may be but a hasty word,
A cross or angry tone;
The little woe that prompted it
Ere it is spoke is gone;
But to the loving heart it wounds,
The sorrow long will cling;
The pain your thoughtless words impart,
Is not a little thing.

Remember, too, the loving Lord
Looks very calmly down,
To give each action and each thought
His blessing or his frown.
That hasty word recorded is
Where holy angels sing;
Their sinless hearts are pained by it—
Is that a little thing?

A mother's kiss, a sister's smile,
A golden summer's day,
Appear but little things to us,
To cheer our onward way;
But love, and joy, and thankfulness,
These gifts were meant to win;
Your heavenly Father sent you each,
Not as a little thing.

Oh! who can tell the wondrous chain
Which on each act may hang,
Reaching from when their morning hymn
The stars of morning sang,
Through countless ages, till the time
Of which the angels sing!
Can any link of this great chain
Be called a little thing?

Know that each hour of life is fraught
With endless good or ill;
No act but with its consequence
The universe may fill;
Then, till with angel visions clear
We mount on angel wing,
Let us not dare to say of aught—
"It is a little thing."

THANKS TO THE LORD.

L. W. A. JOHNSON.

"It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to sing praises unto thy name, O Most High."—Ps. 92: 1.

It is a good thing to give thanks to the Lord, to show forth our love to him, to serve him faithfully, and to praise his great and holy name, for his good and loving kindness to us. He has been merciful to us. He has spared our unprofitable lives, while others have been cut down by death. How thankful we should be. Let us look at ourselves, and search our hearts; and what do we find? Ah! I think I can say, we do not find that sincere love which should be felt for our blessed Master. We do not think of his merciful kindness to us in the hour of need, when we were oppressed in mind and every side looked dark, and it appeared as if we were forsaken; but when we look to our heavenly Father, and ask him to lighten our burden, and make our way clear, gradually, as we pray, the load leaves us, until at last we are free, and can stand up and give thanks to the Lord.

Trials and tribulation are ours here on earth, for we cannot reach that celestial abode without a few battles. Does the soldier in battle expect to conquer the enemy without fighting? No. We must fight Satan, for he is our enemy; he is trying to undermine the christian soldiers, by throwing out to them great inducements for his own gains. But let us be firm and unmovable, as Jesus was when he was tempted. Let us pray to him to give us that faith and strength that will keep us firm; for though Satan may throw out all the inducements to you in this world, and you accept them, what will it profit you in the next? Nothing but misery; for "what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Then let us be careful how we walk, and let our lamps be well trimmed and burning brightly, ready to meet Jesus on that great and glorious day.

HOW TO FODDER.

A writer in the Christian Era presents truth in the following sensible words:—

"Don't put the forage too high. It must be accessible. Some 'under shepherds' walk on stilts and carry the fodder so high above the heads of the fold that only the taller ones can reach it. Put the food so low that all—sheep and lambs—can get at it and can get each and all 'their portion in due season.'

"Another thing—Let it be genuine fodder, the real 'herd's-grass' and 'red-top' of God's word. Not the 'witch grass' of human speculation nor the 'white weed' of human fancy, much less the 'thistles' of heresy and false doctrine.

"The great Shepherd never commissioned Peter nor any other under shepherd to feed his flock with 'mullen stalks.' None but the bright sweet hay, right from God's own meadow, will answer, all fresh, and fragrant with the smell of inspiration.

"'Feed my sheep, feed my lambs;' you cannot do this with rainbows, nor with dissolving views, nor with flowers. Fill and flood a sheep-fold with wreaths and bouquets of rarest beauty, and how soon the fleecy inmates will pine and perish with hunger. So with God's sheep. Flowers for the pulpit are well, they please the eye. But mere flowers from the pulpit are poor things. They may please the ear, but can never feed the soul. Sheep must have sheep's food.

"Still further. The sheep-feeder must deal out his provender diversely. Sheep like and need variety. Not new 'false' pabulum, not some 'strange doctrine;' but the old made new. Not the same unvaried, but varied. While some should leave the hearers beseeching for the same things the next Sabbath, we must not give them the same things; not the same, that is, in the species, but in the genus.

"Follow the Bible. Copy Christ. In God's word, as in a forest, we find unity in the genus but a vast diversity in the species. Christ addressed not one part or passion of our nature only. 'There was no one manner of address.' He put not always the same set of truths before the mind. So should it be with his under-shepherds. Like discreet housekeepers, they ought to vary their provisions. 'Change of pasture makes fat calves.' Sheep fare and feel better—the quadrupeds and the bipeds—on a variety of forage. They want something besides hay. And of hay they want and should have different kinds of it. The trouble with some shepherds is, that they put into the rack, year after year, only one kind of hay and very dry at that; so dry that the sheep are dry as well as hungry.

"God's shepherd should feed his sheep with the different varieties of provender which he has garnered for them in the rich store-house of his word. Sheep like salt. When the preacher, as an expedient to keep his people awake, suggested that they take snuff, they wanted to know if he could not put the snuff into the sermon. Put the salt there; they can dispense with snuff, but not with salt. Sheep need it; not the savorless, but the savory.

"Whether they do or do not, as Christ directs, have salt in themselves, they should have it in the sermon. They demand that in the pulpit if not elsewhere, the preacher's speech be always 'seasoned with salt.' Yes, and salt let it be, the real 'attic' scriptural salt. Not the salt of 'sensationalism' so popular with some. Salt, not pepper nor mustard, nor cayenne, nor any other mere 'pungent, appetizing substance.' But the real food seasoning, soul-satisfying, salutary substance.' The salt that has not 'lost its savor' and ought never to be 'trodden under foot of men.' He who shall thus 'feed the flock of God, when the chief Shepherd appears shall receive the unfading crown of glory.'"—Christian at Work.

THE PRESENCE OF GOD.

The habitual conviction of the presence of God, is the sovereign remedy in temptation; it supports, it consoles, it calms us. We must not be surprised that we are tempted. We are placed here to be proved by temptations. Every thing is temptation to us. Crosses irritate our pride, and prosperity flatters it. Our life is a continual warfare, but Jesus Christ combats with us.

We must let temptation, like a tempest, beat upon our heads, and still move on, like a traveler surprised on the way by a storm, who wraps his cloak about him, and goes on his journey in spite of the opposing elements.

In a certain sense, there is little to do in doing the will of God. Still it is true that it is a great work, because it must be without any reserve. This spirit enters the secret foldings of our hearts, and even the most upright affections and the most necessary attachments must be regulated by his will; but it is not constraint and contention that advance us in our christian course. On the contrary, it is the yielding of our wills, without restriction and without choice, to tread cheerfully every day in the path which Providence leads us, to fear nothing, to be discouraged by nothing, to see our duty in the present moment, to trust all else without reserve to the will and power of God. Let us pray to our heavenly Father that our will may be swallowed up in his.—Ex.

Gems.

— Many a one has kissed the trouble at parting that he met with trembling.

— What can we say more for ourselves in our prayers than He has said for us in his promises?

— Thorns and briars are but discouraged buds.

— Eloquence is reason set to music, and, like reason, should never be perverted to base purposes.

— If we lose a piece of good money, we may find it again; but if we lose a piece of good temper, it is lost forever.

— He who would reproach an author for obscurity should look into his own mind to see whether it is clear there. In the dusk the plainest writing is illegible.

— Misfortunes are troublesome at first, but when there is no remedy but patience, custom makes them easy to us, and necessity gives us courage.

— When you see a man with a great deal of religion displayed in his shop window, you may depend upon it he keeps a very small stock of it within.

— He who betrays another's secret because he has quarreled with him, was never worthy of the sacred name of friend; a breach of kindness at one side will not justify a breach of trust on the other.

— If a civil word or two will render a man happy, he must be wretched indeed who will not give them to him. Such a disposition is like lighting another man's candle by one's own, which loses none of its brilliancy by what the other gains.

— By friendship you mean the greatest love, the greatest usefulness, the most open communication, the noblest sufferings, the severest truth, the heartiest counsel, and the greatest union of minds of which brave men and women are capable.

— It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after your own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

— Happiness is like manna; it is to be gathered in grains, and enjoyed every day. It will not keep; it cannot be accumulated; nor have we got to go out of ourselves nor into remote places to gather it, since it has rained down from heaven, at our very doors, or rather within them.

THREATENED WAR.

Henry Dunat is a man well known throughout Europe as the originator of "The Red Cross," a society organized to alleviate the sufferings of the sick and wounded in war. He has lately read a paper in London, before the Social Science Association, showing the necessity of an immediate and uniform organization of the Red Cross Society throughout Europe; and his arguments have attracted a great deal of attention. The following is the main idea:—

"I believe I know the continent, and my conviction is that we are on the eve of the grandest events of this century, whether viewed from a political or social point of view. A great war is imminent, and within a few years, the continent will be overturned by a general conflict of nations."

War is always an evil in itself, even when undertaken in a good cause; but it is also an instrument of good, and the realization of the prophecy, given above, is likely to produce a permanent and much needed reform. In any event, the state of things cannot be any worse than it is now. Nearly all Europe is virtually, if not nominally, enslaved. Ireland and Poland are remorselessly chained down; the Pope and his people are imprisoned by an armed force—in a word, the people, throughout the entire continent, are ruled, not by their own choice, but by military despotism. This state of things must change; and the magnitude of the evils to be unrooted renders some great social convulsion inevitable.—Irish World.

Simplicity of the Bible.—The Bible was written for the people—the common people—the mass; and if God had not meant the word of faith to be understood in a common sense way, he would have prepared the Bible with a dictionary, and have explained the nature of believing; but as there is no such explanation given, we infer that we are to understand it just as it is understood in ordinary language among men.

THE FUTURE.

Pretty flowers, can you tell me
What my future life shall be,—
Whether bright or dark the sky
Of the mystic by and by?

Flowers point to worlds above,
Saying, "Trust thy Father's love;
Only he thy future knows—
He doth all events dispose."

Little birds that soar so high,
Can ye future things descry?
Birdies twitter in the tree—
"God hath said, 'Leave that to me.'"

Let us, children though we be,
Learn to trust as well as they;
Let us learn from birds and flowers
That to-day alone is ours.

THE THISTLE AND THE ROPE-WALK.

"Such a mite as I can do no good," is the general impression of our boys and girls, when they are urged to do what they can for the good work. But smaller, humbler instruments than you God has made use of to do great works in this world.

A great army, many years ago, invaded Scotland. They crept on stealthily over the border, and prepared to make a night attack on the Scottish forces. There lay the camp, all silently in the starlight, never dreaming that danger was so near. The Danes, to make their advance more noiseless, came forward barefooted. But as they neared the sleeping Scots, one unlucky Dane brought his broad foot down squarely on a bristling thistle. A roar of pain was the consequence, which rang like a trumpet-blast through the sleeping camp. In a moment each soldier had grasped his weapon, and the Danes were thoroughly routed. The thistle was from that time adopted as the national emblem of Scotland.

By the harbor of New London there was once a long, old ropewalk, with a row of square window-holes fronting the water. In time of war, a British admiral was cruising off that coast, and had a very good chance to enter and destroy the town. He was once asked afterward why he did not do it. He replied that he should have done so "if it hadn't been for that formidable long fort whose guns entirely commanded the harbor." He had been scared off by the poor old rope-walk.

God has his uses for even the simplest and humblest of us. Our great business should be to find out what the Lord would have us to do, and then do it with all our might, mind and strength.—Selected.

O, MOTHER MINE!

O, mother mine! God grant I ne'er forget
Whatever be my grief, or what my joy,
The unmeasured, unextinguishable debt
I owe thy love; but find my sweet employ,
Ever through my remaining days, to be
To thee as faithful as thou wast to me!

BONNIE CHRISTIE.

Two boys were in a school-room alone together, when some fire-works, contrary to the teacher's express prohibition, exploded. The one boy denied it. The other, Bonnie Christie, would neither admit nor deny it, and was severely flogged for his obstinacy. When the boys got alone again,—

"Why didn't you deny it?" said the real delinquent.

"Because there were only we two, and one of us must then have lied," said Bonnie.

"Then why not say I did it?"

"Because you said you didn't and I would spare the liar."

The boy's heart melted. Bonnie's moral gallantry subdued him.

When school resumed, the young rogue marched up to the teacher's desk, and said, "I can't bear to be a liar, sir; I let off the squibs," and burst into tears. The teacher's eye glistened on the self-accuser, and the unmerited punishment he had inflicted on his schoolmate smote upon his conscience. Before the whole school, hand in hand with the culprit, he walked to where Christie sat, and said aloud, with some emotion, "Bonnie, Bonnie, lad, he and I beg your pardon; we are both to blame!"

The school was hushed, as schools are apt to be when any thing noble is being done; so still, they might almost have heard Bonnie's big-boy tear drop on his book; and when, for want of something else to say, he gently cried, "Master forever!" the glorious shout of the scholars filled the old man's eyes with something behind his spectacles, which made him wipe them before he resumed his chair.—The Dayspring.

A LITTLE CHILD'S ANSWER.

The King of Prussia, while visiting a village in his land, was welcomed by the school children of the place. After their speaker had made a speech for them, he thanked them. Then taking an orange from a plate, he asked: "To what kingdom does this belong?"

"The vegetable kingdom, sire," said a little girl.

The King took a gold coin from his pocket, and holding it up asked: "And to what kingdom does this belong?"

"To the mineral kingdom," said the little girl.

"And to what kingdom do I belong, then?" asked the King.

The little girl colored deeply, for she did not like to say the animal kingdom, as he thought she would, lest his majesty should be offended. Just then it flashed into her mind that "God made man in his own image," and looking up with a brightening eye, she said: "To God's kingdom, sire."

The King was deeply moved. A tear stood in his eye. He placed his hand on the child's head, and said, most devoutly, "God grant that I may be accounted worthy of that kingdom."

Thus did the words of a child move the heart of a king. Little children, learn from this that even your words may do both good and harm. A pert word, from a child may wound the heart of a mother—a loving one may make it glad. My little children, let your words be kind, true and right.

Who is Little Sunshine?—The child who does not pout, or frown, or say cross words, but goes about the house laughing, smiling, singing, saying kind words, and doing kind deeds—that child is Little Sunshine.

Children can do much toward making their parents happy, or they can bring down their gray hairs with sorrow to the grave. I trust all children will be a blessing, and not a curse to their parents.

Hygiene.

"This is for your Health."—Paul.

HEALTH AS A CHEERING INFLUENCE.*

But, once more, it is impossible for a man who is an invalid to sustain a cheerful and hopeful ministry among his people. An invalid looks with a sad eye upon human life. He may be sympathetic, but it is almost always with the shadows that are in the world. He will give out moaning and drowsy hymns. He will make prayers that are almost piteous. It may not be a minister's fault if he be afflicted and ill, and administer his duties in mourning and sadness, but it is a vast misfortune for his people.

If there is anything in this world that is the product of wholesome, healthy souls, it is the hope-giver and joyful comforter. If there was ever a system of joy and hope in the world, prefigured by the prophets, and afterwards characterized by the Sun of Righteousness, it is that ardent and hope-inspiring gospel that you are to preach. You are not sent out to tell of the dungeon and the pit, the shackle and the yoke—except as redeemed by the power of Jesus Christ into rest and peace. And the very product of gospel which you are to carry to mankind is hope and cheer. It is good news.

You find men struggling with cares. They stand where a dozen ways meet, in utter perplexity, and they want the best advice you can give. Your Sunday ought to bring this witness from your flock every single month of your ministry: "If it had not been for the refreshment that I got on Sundays I never could have carried my burdens." The sweetest praises that ministers can have are from the house of trouble, from men in bankruptcy, from men hunted by perverse fortune almost to the bounds of suicide. They come to you and say, "Sir, it was the cheer and comfort of your preaching that helped me through, or I never could have endured it." That will be better than any guerdon and any compliment.

We are sent to men that are cheerless, men in distress, men who are burdened; and we have no business to have any other ministry than that which is based on the sweet teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ. We must learn ardor and fervor from St. Paul's interpretation of them. We must tell of love, hope, courage, and the cheering prospect of a blessed immortality. What business have you to turn all this into minor symphony? But you can not do otherwise, unless you keep yourself healthy, cheerful hopeful, and buoyant. You must call to your assistance all the health you can derive from the highest conditions of bodily health.

* From a Lecture by H. W. Beecher, before the Theological Department of Yale College.

BENEFICIAL RESULTS OF LIGHT.

1. There can be no persistent vitality nor healthfully-developed bodily structure without it. Compare the faces of those who work in light vs. dark rooms, and the contrast in cheerfulness is great. The forms of children brought up in dark lanes and places are stunted, and their bodies scrofulous.

2. Those who sleep in the day and labor at night are less healthy than when it is the reverse.

3. Dampness produces worse effects where there is no light than where it is abundant.

4. In the deep sea, where there is little light, animals and vegetables are low in the scale of organization.

5. Light attracts plants. They grow toward it.

6. Light rooms are more cheerful than dark ones. The light and warmth of an open fire are valuable aids to health and happiness.

7. The blood becomes more watery in those who live in the dark and damp.

8. People who live on the shady sides of streets are less healthy than those who live on the sunny side.

9. Children become scrofulous when kept from the light.

10. In short, without the light and heat of the sun, there is no life. The light and heat of the sun are the source of all the energy on our globe. Let us then not cut ourselves off from it too much, but for ever secure for ourselves enough to prevent these forms of premature decay that are occasioned by its absence.—Herald of Health.

Use of Fruit.—Instead of standing in fear of a generous consumption of ripe fruit, one should regard it as decidedly conducive to health. There are so many erroneous notions entertained of the bad effect of fruit that it is quite time a counteracting impression should be promulgated, having its foundation in common sense, and based on the common observation of the intelligent. No one ever lived longer, or freer from the attacks of disease, by discarding the delicious fruits of our country. On the contrary, they are very essential to the preservation of health, and are therefore given to us at the time when the condition of the body, operated upon by deteriorating causes not always comprehended, requires their grateful, renovating influences. Unripe fruit may cause illness, but fresh, ripe fruit is always healthful.

In croup, water as cold as ice can make it, applied freely to the throat, neck and chest, with a sponge or cloth, very often affords an almost miraculous relief; and if this be followed by drinking copiously of the same ice-cold element, the wetted parts wiped dry, and the child be wrapped up well in the bed-clothes, it falls into a delightful and life-giving slumber.—Dr. Hall.

The mere lapse of years is not life. To eat, and drink, and sleep—to be exposed to darkness and light—to pace round in the mill of habit, and turn thought into an implement of trade—this is not life. Knowledge, truth, love, beauty, goodness, faith, alone can give vitality to the mechanism of existence.

Report of the Executive Board.

Dear beloved Brethren:—Another of the last remaining years has run its round since we met on this consecrated spot to renewedly set ourselves apart for the work of self-devotion to the cause of Christ, truth, and his soon coming kingdom, and to confer together how the most good could be accomplished, under God, to save our fellow men, by the proclamation of the last message or call of mercy to this doomed generation.

It was then felt that there must be a greater effort made by our missionary society to scatter light and truth everywhere where the door could be opened. That men must be found crying the "woe" upon them so that they could not hold their peace "day nor night till Jerusalem is made a praise in the whole earth." The calls were coming from the North, the South, the East, and the West. The Macedonian cry must be heeded, or it could never be said "Well done," especially to us who are looking at the exhausted state of prophecy, and see the events—the last events, before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ being fulfilled before our eyes; unless earnest, determined, faithful effort should be made, we should be found guilty. The harvest is ripening. The crop is to be gathered and disposed of. There is no evading this conclusion.

The Board, believing this, felt it a bounden duty to improve every means possible in their power, under God, to push the battle in every direction, warning men in thunder tones of their danger, and carrying the sweet message, "Behold He cometh" into all parts of the world as a witness to all nations, being assured that then the end would come. With this assurance of faith, and a corresponding harmony of action, we commenced operations one year since in the Mission field.

At the annual meeting of the Society, Aug. 23d, 1871, there was a gratifying harmony in the body, with the spirit of work; action, immediate action, was the watchword.

The call for funds was nobly responded to, which proved successful in replenishing the treasury. The spirit of the Lord and the energy of the lovers of Jesus added much to the courage of those who had the supervision of the work. We immediately responded to Elder P. G. Bowman of South Carolina, giving him the hand of fellowship, and promising him our hearty co-operation and assistance, although the Methodist Conference had disfellowshiped him, and left him out, for believing plain Bible teaching relative to the coming of Jesus, the state of man in death, the necessity of the resurrection of all the dead to receive their reward for deeds done in the body, whether good or bad; that the righteous will come forth to receive eternal life, while the unbelieving will be doomed to everlasting destruction; that the earth will be restored, brought back to its Eden beauty, and will be the home and heaven of the righteous; this to be realized at the consummation of that "blessed hope and glorious appearing of" the Lord Jesus Christ; leaving him at liberty to labor in his own field (S. C.), or anywhere else, under that original commission—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"—as the way might open and the Lord direct.

All felt that this Southern field must be cultivated, if the right men and means could be obtained. The seed must be sown. We are happy to say, as far as we can judge, that amid the prejudice and dislike to the doctrine we love so dearly, Bro. Bowman has exerted an influence in favor of God and his blessed Word that never can be outgrown. He has been hedged up on all sides, but truth has triumphed gloriously. To God be all the glory.

Bro. Sheldon also has taken his second tour of three months out in the Southern field. His mission has been attended with prosperity. Many have heard the reasons of our hope through his agency and instrumentality. Ministers have had their minds called to this great question, the coming of our Lord from heaven, and some have commenced the cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." Others have fallen in love with it, and are telling the pleasing story. Error is giving way before the march of simple truth. The Bible is being justified, the right fulfillment is being seen. Glory be to God! Many are seeing the Son of man must soon come, and they are rejoicing and will rejoice; and if we do not see all we could wish, we will thank the Lord for what we do see. The theology of the nation is undergoing a great change through the faithful preaching of the word of life. There is a radical change rapidly going on, and the inquiry made as in former times—"What shall we do with these men?" is often heard; but stubborn truth and common sense are so interwoven together in our messages, that they find it to advantage to deal gently with us.

Others have labored successfully in the Southern field. Sister C. Tuller has done quite a work in Kentucky, familiar to the readers of the World's Crisis. Everywhere this new doctrine is finding its way, and they soon find out it is as old as the blessed Bible.

California still has its claim upon us. Bro. Read had begun to sound the alarm with others on the Pacific coast, but the cause of truth and righteousness, with the personal coming of Jesus soon to reign, had not gained an identity that made them feel that there was a difference between the doctrine our brethren preached, and that they have believed and preached for centuries past; viz., the mortality of man, with the loss of eternal life, the coming of Jesus Christ to redeem and restore life. The call for help was again heard, and it seemed imperative. And men were found ready to respond. Bro. Fassett and wife were ready at the Master's call to start for that promising field of hardship and labor. October, after a rapid journey, found them welcomed to California by their reproach-bearing brethren for Christ's sake. But this was not enough. Bro. Grant had been and spent three months, and by the blessing of God and the prayers of the church had set the coast in a blaze; light had shone, and multitudes had been searching the Bible to see if these things were so, and they must hear more from the same mouth, from the same Bible. For in his absence the ministers and churches had tried to turn the tide and bring the truth into disrepute. So our President consented cheerfully to take another trip to the Pacific coast and finish as far as possible, under God, the work he was obliged to leave undone. His cold, snow-drift journey, and his welcome reception, with his labors, are familiar to the readers of our paper.

Without giving any praise to Bro. Grant, or his co-laborers, the Lord has done a great work in California by the instrumentality of the truth. The Advent believers are concentrating their influence and labor, and it is everywhere beginning to be felt. Union and harmony with Christ we must have in order to show the world the divinity of our mission. The gospel car set in motion by the Missionary Society, under the oversight of the true Shepherd, in California, will gain rapidly in velocity, and nothing can stop its progress. So we will respond Amen, and pray for the prosperity of the gospel of the kingdom on the Pacific coast.

Kansas, also, has received attention. Bro. Himes has made inroads upon this neglected territory. He has visited many places, and by him the sound of a coming Lord has been heard by those who otherwise might never have heard of it. Bro. J. C. Smith has been there the last seven or eight months. He has found as many open doors as he could fill. He has labored as extensively as he could with his poor health, and thus the sound—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh," has spread. Some others have also been found to tell the story, and all combined by the word and Spirit of the Lord, many have heard and a goodly number received the welcome message, put on Christ by baptism, and are on their way rejoicing.

Florida has also received missionary labor. Bro. Green and some others have traveled more or less in this delightful winterage. Bro. Green has been doing all he could; new places are continually opening to him; so the people have heard the voice of warning. The watchmen have sounded the alarm, crying—The sword is coming. But, brethren, little to what ought to be done is now being done by us who look for the speedy coming of our blessed Lord. With the available means and men within our influence, the South, the East, West and North, ought to be electrified with the sweet sound of the soon return of the Nobleman from a far country. Many other places and worthy men have been helped on their way by us in this important work of getting this last message before the people. This gospel as a witness to all nations they must hear, or the guilt will be ours.

But we will not extend this report. The report of the Treasurer will show our help financially. Dear brethren, the good that has been done through your benevolence, by our agency, can never be estimated; but we doubt not many will find themselves, through these instrumentalities, in the everlasting kingdom of God, and enjoy eternal life.

With the encouraging results of the last year's labor, the suggestion comes, What shall be done the coming year? The calls are many. They are urgent. "There is a famine in the land; not a famine of bread, or thirst of water, but of hearing the word of the Lord." The cry comes to us from the old world, and from the new; from abroad and from home. And, dear believing disciples, what shall be done? Shall we turn a deaf ear? The Lord is soon coming, when we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship. We believe it. Yea, this National Campmeeting calls the believers of Christ's soon coming from the East, the West, the North, and the South, and speaks in unmistakable language our specific call, our specific work. And what is it? That of giving to this generation the signs of our Lord's speedy coming, that by the unerring fulfillment of the prophetic pen we shall soon realize our highest expectations—"He that shall come will come and will not tarry." Why these many tents, some coming many long miles to meet and associate with those of like precious faith? Why are they at this time in Springfield, in this consecrated spot, dearer to them than all others? Because the sound—"Behold He cometh" is the sweetest sound on earth they can hear. They love this cry so well they cannot stop where it is not heard. Why with cheerful sacrifices and buoyant hope have these brethren made so long journeys to reach this tented grove? Because they can hear here what they can hear from no other class of people. The very call for our national yearly feast indicates this. The Second Advent believers hear the call, and think it means them, although all others are cordially invited. The very coming together as a body shows our identity, and speaks our faith in the Lord soon coming.

The dial of time has run its yearly round since we last assembled. Some dearly beloved, and seemingly needed to the cause of Christ among the last perils, have fallen asleep in Christ. Death continues its ravages and the old pilgrim veterans are few, growing fewer; but "this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled."

Now, brethren, the Lord calls loudly for us to be holy, without spot, and blameless, and to double our efforts to save the perishing. Come, then, gird on the whole armor and unitedly make the last onset. It is a mighty conflict. The war rages mightily. Put all on the altar, if it is not there, money, talent, time, influence, all. Let the cry be heard everywhere—He is soon coming. Let us not be weary in well doing, for soon it will be home, sweet home, and we shall enjoy it eternally. L. BOUTELL, for the Mission Board.

GEO. T. ADAMS, Treasurer A. A. M. Society.

BOSTON, Aug. 16th, 1872.

I have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them correctly kept, and rightly vouched, and the balance in the Treasury of two hundred and eighty-six dollars and fourteen cents. L. BOUTELL, Auditor.

On motion, it was voted that the Chair appoint a committee of three to receive, assort, and count ballots. The Chair appointed as that committee Brn. G. A. Streeter, G. S. Harwood, John Wilson.

It was voted, that the old list of officers be read, and that the tellers have till to-morrow to report. Adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow A. M.

Friday, Aug. 23d, 1872. Met as adjourned. The President in the Chair. After devotional exercises, the committee on ballots reported the following officers elected for the ensuing year:—

President, Miles Grant.

Vice Presidents, Sidney Hall, C. S. Sherman, N. W. Wait, S. Ayres.

Secretary, A. W. Sibley.

Treasurer, G. T. Adams.

Auditor, L. Boutell.

EXECUTIVE BOARD. J. Couch, H. A. King, L. T. Cunningham.

At the conclusion of the report of the committee on ballots, Brn. P. G. Bowman, J. Couch, W. L. Himes, and H. A. King, made some very interesting remarks on the subject of mission work, and the importance of immediate action in relation to raising funds with which to spread the glad tidings—"Behold He cometh." These remarks were responded to nobly in offerings made to the Lord by those present with which to push forward the mission work another year. The meeting was characterized with harmony of action, the Spirit of God leading in the deliberations and business transactions. After singing the doxology, the meeting adjourned sine die.

A. W. SIBLEY, Secretary.

EVIDENCES FOR THE COMING OF THE LORD IN 1873.

N. H. BARBOUR.

"Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

To those who accept the Bible as the standard of truth, there can be nothing plainer than are the indications that we are on the eve of the world's dissolution. The signs in the sun, moon, and stars; the perplexity of the nations; the downfall and gradual consumption of the papacy; the disintegration of social and political organizations; all together speak in language too plain to be misunderstood, and tell us that the "times of the Gentiles" are about fulfilled, and earth's history under the curse drawing to a close. Then will come the day when Zion's warfare will end, and death be swallowed up in victory. A few more days and the grave must give up its sleeping millions; a few more days and we shall greet the loved ones who sleep in Jesus.

This being true, the history of the present time is one of interest to the prophetic student; especially that portion which refers to God's people. When the Lord comes there is to be a "waiting" people on the earth. "In the day when he takes the rebuke of his people from off all the earth, it shall be said, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." All living will come to the end of the days, but the blessing is for those who wait and come.

No one would say they were waiting for a friend if that friend should come upon them by surprise, and when they were not expecting him. O no, beloved, let no man deceive you; God will have a people, when he comes, who are waiting, not for death, as all men were before this Advent movement began, and as many are even to this day; but a people who are waiting for him. And that people have a prophetic history in the parable of the "ten virgins," which is now being fulfilled. May God give us wisdom to see and believe the truth.

The going forth of the virgins was fulfilled in the 1843 movement. "The Bridegroom tarried," and we were disappointed. "They all slumbered and slept," and hence, we have been in darkness. The 1873 cry answers to the midnight cry; and the virgins are rising and trimming their lamps. Thus the parable has been literally fulfilled, as we shall show, and only the little remnant, the last separation, and the going in of the wise virgins remains before us.

Some suppose parables ought not to be applied in detail, but teach one, and only leading idea. This, however, cannot be true, for our Lord does not so apply them. Look at that of the "tares and wheat," where every part is fully carried out in the application. Again, in the parable of the "sower." Mark 4. And the application of this one is made a sample, or rule, by which all parables are to be explained. For when asked for an explanation he says—"Know ye not this parable? how then shall ye know all parables?" ver. 13. Then follows the interpretation. The seed, the birds of the air, the wayside, the stony ground, the thorns, the scorching of the sun, choking by the thorns, want of earth, the good ground, etc. All parts have their meaning. Not a thought expressed in the parable but finds a full application. Hence, we may expect every detail of the parable of the ten virgins to be accurately fulfilled.

Let us first notice its chronology, which unlike all others is put in the future. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened," viz., at some future time. All others are given in the present tense. The kingdom of heaven is likened to a sower, to a net, to a nobleman, etc. These refer to the whole gospel dispensation; while that of the ten virgins was placed in the future, and ends with the coming of the Bridegroom, and hence is clearly located at the end of the dispensation.

This is so apparent that I am surprised at the blindness of those who try to make it apply to the whole gospel dispensation. Then again, it has been literally fulfilled by the Adventists during this present generation.

The signs in the sun, moon, and stars; and upon earth distress of nations with perplexity, were to be seen by the last generation, "and when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads." Luke 21: 28. This movement which has made us "look up, and lift up our heads," began in 1828, after the sun had been darkened, but before the falling of the stars, or when these things began to come to pass.

The first public labor of Bro. Miller, as an Adventist, began in Feb. 1828 (see his Life), and was followed by a revival. It is true he had studied the subject for many years before this; and that he did not publish his lectures until two or three years subsequent (1831); nor did he at this time call himself a preacher; but here is where he began his public work. The movement continued for about fifteen years, and ended in the great disappointment of 1843–4. Never was there such a taking of the lamp. ("Thy word is a lamp.") Everybody had a Bible, and searched to see if these things were so. Ministers read it as they had never done before. Farmers, mechanics, lawyers, and laborers, women and children, male and female, everywhere, at home and abroad. Bibles were in demand; and the near approach of the judgment stirred the hearts of the multitude. They took their lamps and went forth; some with fear and trembling, and others with joy and rejoicing. But we were disappointed—"The Bridegroom tarried."

With the passing of the time it seemed almost as if God's word had failed. We were in darkness on this subject; our unity was gone; discord and confusion seemed to reign; and these things have continued, more or less, until the present time. "While the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept." Truly this much of the parable has been fulfilled.

Objections have been raised that the 1843 movement was confined principally to this country, and therefore was not of sufficient extent to answer to the prophecy. This may also be raised against the signs in the sun, moon, and stars; for they were seen very little, if any, except by those on this continent.

The gospel began in the East, and is ending in the West. Hence the last prophecies which refer to God's people find their fulfillment here. If this movement has not been extensive enough to answer to the parable, it simply follows that its fulfillment is yet in the future, and must be enacted on a larger scale. What then becomes of the signs, and "this generation," now almost dwindled to an end?

But that 1843 movement was extensive enough; the sound went to the uttermost parts of the earth, and was more fully disseminated than were the events pertaining to the first coming of Christ during an equal period of time.

The night of this parable, or slumbering and sleeping time, is while the Bridegroom tarried, and has been so fulfilled. This has been the time of our darkness; the shut doors, Elijahs, and all the strange applications of prophecy, from which time has compelled us to retreat in almost every instance. These things may not be pleasant to talk about, but all know they are true.

Prior to the tarrying our Lord exhorts the virgins to be awake. And here let me remark what we all know to be true, that during this slumbering and sleeping, every definite time which has been preached, and every prophecy applied, has been by tearing down those things taught by the virgins before they went to sleep. Take, for instance, the 2300 days of Dan. 8. If they did not end in 1844, 1854 did as well. That time passed, and they moved them on to '67, '68, '70, '73, '75, and some to 1880.

When Bro. Miller's argument that the seventy weeks were part of the 2300 days, and ended at the cross, the only landmark God has given, was thrown away, we were all afloat. One place to end them would do as well as another. So with the "abomination of desolation," which, in 1843 times, we understood and proved was "set up" in A. D. 538, and its "dominion" taken away in 1798. These great landmarks were forsaken, while the virgins slept, and the "days" made to fit almost any place.

Now we are driven back to the platform on which the virgins stood before they went to sleep, in the application of every prophecy. And just so far as we get back we begin to see the light for 1873. The unfolding of events during the last thirty years has strengthened every application of prophecy, as it was applied at that time, and the only change has been in a few jots and tittles of light added to those positions; and every independent application of prophecy made since then has to be swept out of the way.

The mistake of 1843 was in beginning the "thousand" (Dan. 12: 11) thirty years before the abomination was "set up," or in 508, when we supposed the "daily sacrifice was taken away."

The Advent movement may be likened to a man who builds a house. He digs deep, and lays his foundation on a rock. Night comes on, and he dreams his beautiful structure is all in ruins. With the debris he essays to build again; but having no foundation, it soon falls. He moves a portion of the crumbling mass a little further on, and tries again and again, with like results. When almost in despair the morning light begins to shine. He awakens and beholds it was all a dream. The noble structure is still secure. The winds blew, the rain fell, and the floods came, but it was founded on a rock. He thanks God, and with a light heart goes back to where he left off the day before, and adds a few jots and tittles and completes the building. Would not all who beheld him know that his dreams were at an end, and that he was now awake?

Even so in this 1873 movement, it is based on the old foundation of 1843; not a stone has fallen. The dark night is passing away, and "Behold the Bridegroom cometh."

Some suppose, in order to understand this parable, we must learn how a marriage feast was conducted in the East. Christ drew upon eastern customs to illustrate this movement of the virgins, or going out of his people, the Adventists, at this time, it is true; but he presumed to have understood what he wished to illustrate, and to have drawn as many features of an eastern feast as it was necessary to complete the illustrations. We have no right to add to his parable, and say that because wedding feasts were sometimes consummated in the night, therefore Christ will come and the resurrection take place in a symbolic night.

If he had said—"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened to an eastern wedding feast, and you may fill up the picture for yourself;" then indeed we might have taken some liberty. But what he says is, that it would be likened to ten virgins who go out to meet him; he tarries, and they slumber and sleep. At midnight a cry is made—"Go ye out to meet him." A second movement. At that cry they rise and trim their lamps. He comes, and they that are ready go in, and the door is shut. Thus the parable ends with the coming and the resurrection. The night and darkness connected with the movement have been since the tarrying and slumbering and sleeping. And when the Bridegroom comes, the glorious morning of the resurrection will be ushered in. All Adventists believe this; that we are now passing through this night, and that the morning will be when Christ comes. And therefore the parable cannot end until morning. Any other conclusion is a forced one.

Midnight means the middle of the night; hence the cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him," must be made in the middle of this symbolic night, or tarrying time. Otherwise, his parable would fail of being accurately fulfilled. The midnight cry brings to view a second movement. The first one in which they took their lamps and went forth, continued about fifteen years, or from 1828 to 1843–4. Hence the last going out must necessarily consume time. He does not come when the cry is made, or begins to be made; for there is much to be accomplished under the cry; still it is the true cry in accordance with which he does eventually come, and they that are ready go in; and there is no failure or disappointment associated with it by our Lord.

Therefore the '44, '54, or '67 time, can neither of them answer to the midnight cry, as they all ended in disappointment. They may represent the "watches," as many think; but they cannot represent the true cry at which he comes. Nor have we a right to join these watches as given in Mark 13: 35, with this parable of the virgins. Both are perfect in themselves; and though they may cover the same ground, still they remain two separate and distinct parables; the midnight watch and the midnight cry having nothing in common.

In the parable under consideration there are but two movements spoken of. The first was to end in disappointment; the last in glory. "At midnight," said our Lord, this cry should be made. Hence if it is not already made, we have not yet, after twenty-nine years of tarrying, reached midnight, and the morning must be at least twenty-nine years in the future. What then becomes of this generation? The only objection to this clear and positive application of the parable is, that we make too much of Christ's words. I do not believe it, for not one jot can fail. The midnight cry has been made, thank God; and there are seven different ways of proving that this night is to be but thirty years long, and will end in 1873.

We believe the 1873 cry is the midnight cry, because we believe the Lord will come in 1873; and the midnight cry is the true cry. Hence all the evidences which go to prove that the Lord will come at that time, also proves the cry of his coming to be the midnight cry. And more than that, this 1873 cry began at midnight, viz., in the middle of this tarrying, or about fifteen years after the spring of 1844. And though small in its beginning, it has continued as a persistent cry until it has swelled to its present proportions. As with the first movement, the virgins come in slowly for many years, and at last by thousands; so it has been with this; and now the virgins are rising and trimming their lamps (examining the truth of this matter) all over the land.

Many have supposed the 1854 cry was the midnight cry, but as that ended in disappointment, and this does not, they cannot be the same. Others suppose the midnight cry is not yet made, and is to be at His appearing. This, however, is not possible, for a midnight cry cannot be made in the morning. Again, some have supposed there was to be no conversions after that "cry" was made, because the foolish get no oil. If because the "foolish" do not become "wise," proves there are no conversions under the last movement, then there have been none since 1828; for in the symbol, the five wise and five foolish started in that condition, and so remain until the end. But of course the symbol has nothing to do with individual changes. The foolish were never ready. The only way is to learn to be wise.

If it were not for the light thrown on the Advent movement by this parable, we could never expect to gain the confidence or faith of the people in another time movement. But when we are taught by our Lord so clearly that the past would be precisely what it has been, and yet there was to be a true cry on which they that were ready would go in, our disappointments, slumbering and sleeping, and confusion even, become additional evidence that we are on the right track.

The going out to meet the Bridegroom, which was to precede the disappointment, has been made. He has tarried, and have they not all slumbered and slept? Who that knows our past history, as a people, but will answer yes? The midnight cry has been made. Of this there is abundance of evidence. Some will say that 1873 was spoken of long before the midnight hour. That indeed is true. Bro. Miller said soon after 1843 passed, that he "could see no light this side of 1873," and many others might have said as much; but it was soon lost sight of, and did not begin as a persistent cry until God's time, the midnight hour, had come.

Others again insist upon it that it must be made by an angel. They are willing to admit that the cry made by the angel (Rev. 14: 6) was fulfilled in the Advent movement, while here, where nothing is said of any such personage, they expect a miraculous appearance of an angel. Again, there are others who say the movement has not been large enough either in its beginning or present proportions, and so they can all find excuses.

God's work has always been done in a way that men could find excuses, if they chose, to disregard it. But the facts of our past history have met this parable, and fulfilled it in all its details. There is nothing before us but the separation between the wise and foolish, and the coming Bridegroom. God grant that we be found among the wise. I believe with all my heart, Christ is coming in 1873. "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"—Isa. 21: 12.

S. B. MABEY.

When an invalid has been sick with raging fever, tossing about nearly all night, he often inquires, Is it not almost morning? And in some respects it is so with the Christian who is tempest-tossed, surrounded with the evil of sin in various forms. He is often sorrowful in spirit, and sighs for the morning of eternal deliverance to dawn upon the redeemed. How often does he study the old chart, inquiring, "What of the night?" to find, if possible, some ray of prophetic light to show the time of night in the world's great history. The apostle says (Rom. 13: 11, 12), "And that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Although definite time has not, seemingly, been determined, yet the prophecies of Daniel and John are for the purpose God designed them. "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

If definite time is not revealed, some may inquire, How can the prophecies benefit us? Because it seems that those truths should have manifold more weight, from the fact that the day and hour may not be revealed by inspiration. If the time was revealed, there would not be need of anxiety on the subject until the time the event was due. But as it is, the prophecy points to a space of but few years, at most; therefore, there is much the more need of watching, and being ready all the time. Truly, we can say, The morning cometh. The Savior said, "When ye see these things come to pass [referring to the darkening of the sun and moon, and falling stars], know that it is nigh, even at the doors." Those events are in the past.

We have come to the perils of the last days, described by the apostle Paul. 2 Tim. 3: 2–5. We have come to the time when the love of many waxeth cold; when many depart from the faith, and give heed to doctrines of devils (2 Tim. 4: 1), and seducing spirits are abroad throughout the land, deceiving the people, going to the kings and great men, preparing them for the battle of the great day (Rev. 16: 13), denying that the Savior is any more than a man. The apostle says (1 John 4: 1–3) that many spirits have gone out into the world. "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard, that it should come; and now already is it in the world." We may expect soon to see the sign of the Son of man in heaven; then the coming of Jesus. It will be the same personage of whom the angels spake, when they said, "This same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." When he comes, the morning of eternal day will begin. When he comes, his reward is with him, to give to every man according to his work. Rev. 22: 12. When he comes, he shall sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." Matt. 25. In the language of the poet we say—

"Oh hail! happy day,
That speaks our trials ended;
The Lord will come to take us home,
Oh hail! happy day!
No more by doubts or fears distressed,
We now shall gain our promised rest,
And be forever blest,
O hail! happy day."

O christian, awake from slumber, and let your works abound. Let it be known by your walk and daily conversation that you believe the Lord is at hand. Watchman, what of the night? The answer is emphatic: "The morning cometh, and also the night."

De Kalb, Ill.

WE want religion that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late, and keeps the dinner from being late; keeps the wife from fretting when he tracks the newly-washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and keeps the baby pleasant; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the Eastern fig tree, bearing in its bloom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit.

— When a man thinks that nobody cares for him, and that he is alone in a cold and selfish world, he would do well to ask himself what he has done to make anybody care for and love him, and to warm the world with faith and generosity. Generally those who complain the most have done the least.

The Treasurer's report was adopted. The following is the Report of the Executive Board.

Dear beloved Brethren:—Another of the last remaining years has run its round since we met on this consecrated spot to renewedly set ourselves apart for the work of self-devotion to the cause of Christ, truth, and his soon coming kingdom, and to confer together how the most good could be accomplished, under God, to save our fellow men, by the proclamation of the last message or call of mercy to this doomed generation.

It was then felt that there must be a greater effort made by our missionary society to scatter light and truth everywhere where the door could be opened. That men must be found crying the "woe" upon them so that they could not hold their peace "day nor night till Jerusalem is made a praise in the whole earth." The calls were coming from the North, the South, the East, and the West. The Macedonian cry must be heeded, or it could never be said "Well done," especially to us who are looking at the exhausted state of prophecy, and see the events—the last events, before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ being fulfilled before our eyes; unless earnest, determined, faithful effort should be made, we should be found guilty. The harvest is ripening. The crop is to be gathered and disposed of. There is no evading this conclusion.

The Board, believing this, felt it a bounden duty to improve every means possible in their power, under God, to push the battle in every direction, warning men in thunder tones of their danger, and carrying the sweet message, "Behold He cometh" into all parts of the world as a witness to all nations, being assured that then the end would come. With this assurance of faith, and a corresponding harmony of action, we commenced operations one year since in the Mission field.

At the annual meeting of the Society, Aug. 23d, 1871, there was a gratifying harmony in the body, with the spirit of work; action, immediate action, was the watchword.

The call for funds was nobly responded to, which proved successful in replenishing the treasury. The spirit of the Lord and the energy of the lovers of Jesus added much to the courage of those who had the supervision of the work. We immediately responded to Elder P. G. Bowman of South Carolina, giving him the hand of fellowship, and promising him our hearty co-operation and assistance, although the Methodist Conference had disfellowshiped him, and left him out, for believing plain Bible teaching relative to the coming of Jesus, the state of man in death, the necessity of the resurrection of all the dead to receive their reward for deeds done in the body, whether good or bad; that the righteous will come forth to receive eternal life, while the unbelieving will be doomed to everlasting destruction; that the earth will be restored, brought back to its Eden beauty, and will be the home and heaven of the righteous; this to be realized at the consummation of that "blessed hope and glorious appearing of" the Lord Jesus Christ; leaving him at liberty to labor in his own field (S. C.), or anywhere else, under that original commission—"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature"—as the way might open and the Lord direct.

All felt that this Southern field must be cultivated, if the right men and means could be obtained. The seed must be sown. We are happy to say, as far as we can judge, that amid the prejudice and dislike to the doctrine we love so dearly, Bro. Bowman has exerted an influence in favor of God and his blessed Word that never can be outgrown. He has been hedged up on all sides, but truth has triumphed gloriously. To God be all the glory.

Bro. Sheldon also has taken his second tour of three months out in the Southern field. His mission has been attended with prosperity. Many have heard the reasons of our hope through his agency and instrumentality. Ministers have had their minds called to this great question, the coming of our Lord from heaven, and some have commenced the cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh." Others have fallen in love with it, and are telling the pleasing story. Error is giving way before the march of simple truth. The Bible is being justified, the right fulfillment is being seen. Glory be to God! Many are seeing the Son of man must soon come, and they are rejoicing and will rejoice; and if we do not see all we could wish, we will thank the Lord for what we do see. The theology of the nation is undergoing a great change through the faithful preaching of the word of life. There is a radical change rapidly going on, and the inquiry made as in former times—"What shall we do with these men?" is often heard; but stubborn truth and common sense are so interwoven together in our messages, that they find it to advantage to deal gently with us.

Others have labored successfully in the Southern field. Sister C. Tuller has done quite a work in Kentucky, familiar to the readers of the World's Crisis. Everywhere this new doctrine is finding its way, and they soon find out it is as old as the blessed Bible.

California still has its claim upon us. Bro. Read had begun to sound the alarm with others on the Pacific coast, but the cause of truth and righteousness, with the personal coming of Jesus soon to reign, had not gained an identity that made them feel that there was a difference between the doctrine our brethren preached, and that they have believed and preached for centuries past; viz., the mortality of man, with the loss of eternal life, the coming of Jesus Christ to redeem and restore life. The call for help was again heard, and it seemed imperative. And men were found ready to respond. Bro. Fassett and wife were ready at the Master's call to start for that promising field of hardship and labor. October, after a rapid journey, found them welcomed to California by their reproach-bearing brethren for Christ's sake. But this was not enough. Bro. Grant had been and spent three months, and by the blessing of God and the prayers of the church had set the coast in a blaze; light had shone, and multitudes had been searching the Bible to see if these things were so, and they must hear more from the same mouth, from the same Bible. For in his absence the ministers and churches had tried to turn the tide and bring the truth into disrepute. So our President consented cheerfully to take another trip to the Pacific coast and finish as far as possible, under God, the work he was obliged to leave undone. His cold, snow-drift journey, and his welcome reception, with his labors, are familiar to the readers of our paper.

Without giving any praise to Bro. Grant, or his co-laborers, the Lord has done a great work in California by the instrumentality of the truth. The Advent believers are concentrating their influence and labor, and it is everywhere beginning to be felt. Union and harmony with Christ we must have in order to show the world the divinity of our mission. The gospel car set in motion by the Missionary Society, under the oversight of the true Shepherd, in California, will gain rapidly in velocity, and nothing can stop its progress. So we will respond Amen, and pray for the prosperity of the gospel of the kingdom on the Pacific coast.

Kansas, also, has received attention. Bro Himes has made inroads upon this neglected territory. He has visited many places, and by him the sound of a coming Lord has been heard by those who otherwise might never have heard of it. Bro. J. C. Smith has been there the last seven or eight months. He has found as many open doors as he could fill. He has labored as extensively as he could with his poor health, and thus the sound—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh," has spread. Some others have also been found to tell the story, and all combined by the word and Spirit of the Lord, many have heard and a goodly number received the welcome message, put on Christ by baptism, and are on their way rejoicing.

Florida has also received missionary labor. Bro. Green and some others have traveled more or less in this delightful winterage. Bro. Green has been doing all he could; new places are continually opening to him; so the people have heard the voice of warning. The watchmen have sounded the alarm, crying—The sword is coming. But, brethren, little to what ought to be done is now being done by us who look for the speedy coming of our blessed Lord. With the available means and men within our influence, the South, the East, West and North, ought to be electrified with the sweet sound of the soon return of the Nobleman from a far country. Many other places and worthy men have been helped on their way by us in this important work of getting this last message before the people. This gospel as a witness to all nations they must hear, or the guilt will be ours.

But we will not extend this report. The report of the Treasurer will show our help financially. Dear brethren, the good that has been done through your benevolence, by our agency, can never be estimated; but we doubt not many will find themselves, through these instrumentalities, in the everlasting kingdom of God, and enjoy eternal life.

With the encouraging results of the last year's labor, the suggestion comes, What shall be done the coming year? The calls are many. They are urgent. "There is a famine in the land; not a famine of bread, or thirst of water, but of hearing the word of the Lord." The cry comes to us from the old world, and from the new; from abroad and from home. And, dear believing disciples, what shall be done? Shall we turn a deaf ear? The Lord is soon coming, when we shall be called to give an account of our stewardship. We believe it. Yea, this National Campmeeting calls the believers of Christ's soon coming from the East, the West, the North, and the South, and speaks in unmistakable language our specific call, our specific work. And what is it? That of giving to this generation the signs of our Lord's speedy coming, that by the unerring fulfillment of the prophetic pen we shall soon realize our highest expectations—"He that shall come will come and will not tarry." Why these many tents, some coming many long miles to meet and associate with those of like precious faith? Why are they at this time in Springfield, in this consecrated spot, dearer to them than all others? Because the sound—"Behold He cometh" is the sweetest sound on earth they can hear. They love this cry so well they cannot stop where it is not heard. Why with cheerful sacrifices and buoyant hope have these brethren made so long journeys to reach this tented grove? Because they can hear here what they can hear from no other class of people. The very call for our national yearly feast indicates this. The Second Advent believers hear the call, and think it means them, although all others are cordially invited. The very coming together as a body shows our identity, and speaks our faith in the Lord soon coming.

The dial of time has run its yearly round since we last assembled. Some dearly beloved, and seemingly needed to the cause of Christ among the last perils, have fallen asleep in Christ. Death continues its ravages and the old pilgrim veterans are few, growing fewer; but "this generation shall not pass away till all these things be fulfilled."

Now, brethren, the Lord calls loudly for us to be holy, without spot, and blameless, and to double our efforts to save the perishing. Come, then, gird on the whole armor and unitedly make the last onset. It is a mighty conflict. The war rages mightily. Put all on the altar, if it is not there, money, talent, time, influence, all. Let the cry be heard everywhere—He is soon coming. Let us not be weary in well doing, for soon it will be home, sweet home, and we shall enjoy it eternally. L. BOUTELL, for the Mission Board.

I have examined the accounts of the Treasurer, and find them correctly kept, and rightly vouched, and the balance in the Treasury of two hundred and eighty-six dollars and fourteen cents. L. BOUTELL, Auditor.

On motion, it was voted that the Chair appoint a committee of three to receive, assort, and count ballots. The Chair appointed as that committee Brn. G. A. Streeter, G. S. Harwood, John Wilson.

It was voted, that the old list of officers be read, and that the tellers have till to-morrow to report. Adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow A. M.

Friday, Aug. 23d, 1872. Met as adjourned. The President in the Chair. After devotional exercises, the committee on ballots reported the following officers elected for the ensuing year:—

President, Miles Grant.
Vice Presidents, Sidney Hall, C. S. Sherman, N. W. Wait, S. Ayres.
Secretary, A. W. Sibley.
Treasurer, G. T. Adams.
Auditor, L. Boutell.
EXECUTIVE BOARD. J. Couch, H. A. King, L. T. Cunningham.

At the conclusion of the report of the committee on ballots, Brn. P. G. Bowman, J. Couch, W. L. Himes, and H. A. King, made some very interesting remarks on the subject of mission work, and the importance of immediate action in relation to raising funds with which to spread the glad tidings—"Behold He cometh." These remarks were responded to nobly in offerings made to the Lord by those present with which to push forward the mission work another year. The meeting was characterized with harmony of action, the Spirit of God leading in the deliberations and business transactions. After singing the doxology, the meeting adjourned sine die.

EVIDENCES FOR THE COMING OF THE LORD IN 1873.

N. H. BARBOUR.

"Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

To those who accept the Bible as the standard of truth, there can be nothing plainer than are the indications that we are on the eve of the world's dissolution. The signs in the sun, moon, and stars; the perplexity of the nations; the downfall and gradual consumption of the papacy; the disintegration of social and political organizations; all together speak in language too plain to be misunderstood, and tell us that the "times of the Gentiles" are about fulfilled, and earth's history under the curse drawing to a close. Then will come the day when Zion's warfare will end, and death be swallowed up in victory. A few more days and the grave must give up its sleeping millions; a few more days and we shall greet the loved ones who sleep in Jesus.

This being true, the history of the present time is one of interest to the prophetic student; especially that portion which refers to God's people. When the Lord comes there is to be a "waiting" people on the earth. "In the day when he takes the rebuke of his people from off all the earth, it shall be said, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us." "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." All living will come to the end of the days, but the blessing is for those who wait and come.

No one would say they were waiting for a friend if that friend should come upon them by surprise, and when they were not expecting him. O no, beloved, let no man deceive you; God will have a people, when he comes, who are waiting, not for death, as all men were before this Advent movement began, and as many are even to this day; but a people who are waiting for him. And that people have a prophetic history in the parable of the "ten virgins," which is now being fulfilled. May God give us wisdom to see and believe the truth.

The going forth of the virgins was fulfilled in the 1843 movement. "The Bridegroom tarried," and we were disappointed. "They all slumbered and slept," and hence, we have been in darkness. The 1873 cry answers to the midnight cry; and the virgins are rising and trimming their lamps. Thus the parable has been literally fulfilled, as we shall show, and only the little remnant, the last separation, and the going in of the wise virgins remains before us.

Some suppose parables ought not to be applied in detail, but teach one, and only leading idea. This, however, cannot be true, for our Lord does not so apply them. Look at that of the "tares and wheat," where every part is fully carried out in the application. Again, in the parable of the "sower." Mark 4. And the application of this one is made a sample, or rule, by which all parables are to be explained. For when asked for an explanation he says—"Know ye not this parable? how then shall ye know all parables?" ver. 13. Then follows the interpretation. The seed, the birds of the air, the wayside, the stony ground, the thorns, the scorching of the sun, choking by the thorns, want of earth, the good ground, etc. All parts have their meaning. Not a thought expressed in the parable but finds a full application. Hence, we may expect every detail of the parable of the ten virgins to be accurately fulfilled.

Let us first notice its chronology, which unlike all others is put in the future. "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened," viz., at some future time. All others are given in the present tense. The kingdom of heaven is likened to a sower, to a net, to a nobleman, etc. These refer to the whole gospel dispensation; while that of the ten virgins was placed in the future, and ends with the coming of the Bridegroom, and hence is clearly located at the end of the dispensation.

This is so apparent that I am surprised at the blindness of those who try to make it apply to the whole gospel dispensation. Then again, it has been literally fulfilled by the Adventists during this present generation.

The signs in the sun, moon, and stars; and upon earth distress of nations with perplexity, were to be seen by the last generation, "and when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads." Luke 21: 28. This movement which has made us "look up, and lift up our heads," began in 1828, after the sun had been darkened, but before the falling of the stars, or when these things began to come to pass.

The first public labor of Bro. Miller, as an Adventist, began in Feb, 1828 (see his Life), and was followed by a revival. It is true he had studied the subject for many years before this; and that he did not publish his lectures until two or three years subsequent (1831); nor did he at this time call himself a preacher; but here is where he began his public work. The movement continued for about fifteen years, and ended in the great disappointment of 1843–4. Never was there such a taking of the lamp. ("Thy word is a lamp.") Everybody had a Bible, and searched to see if these things were so. Ministers read it as they had never done before. Farmers, mechanics, lawyers, and laborers, women and children, male and female, everywhere, at home and abroad. Bibles were in demand; and the near approach of the judgment stirred the hearts of the multitude. They took their lamps and went forth; some with fear and trembling, and others with joy and rejoicing. But we were disappointed—"The Bridegroom tarried."

With the passing of the time it seemed almost as if God's word had failed. We were in darkness on this subject; our unity was gone; discord and confusion seemed to reign; and these things have continued, more or less, until the present time. "While the Bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept." Truly this much of the parable has been fulfilled.

Objections have been raised that the 1843 movement was confined principally to this country, and therefore was not of sufficient extent to answer to the prophecy. This may also be raised against the signs in the sun, moon, and stars; for they were seen very little, if any, except by those on this continent.

The gospel began in the East, and is ending in the West. Hence the last prophecies which refer to God's people find their fulfillment here. If this movement has not been extensive enough to answer to the parable, it simply follows that its fulfillment is yet in the future, and must be enacted on a larger scale. What then become of the signs, and "this generation," now almost dwindled to an end?

But that 1843 movement was extensive enough; the sound went to the uttermost parts of the earth, and was more fully disseminated than were the events pertaining to the first coming of Christ during an equal period of time.

The night of this parable, or slumbering and sleeping time, is while the Bridegroom tarried, and has been so fulfilled. This has been the time of our darkness; the shut doors, Elijahs, and all the strange applications of prophecy, from which time has compelled us to retreat in almost every instance. These things may not be pleasant to talk about, but all know they are true.

Prior to the tarrying our Lord exhorts the virgins to be awake. And here let me remark what we all know to be true, that during this slumbering and sleeping, every definite time which has been preached, and every prophecy applied, has been by tearing down those things taught by the virgins before they went to sleep. Take, for instance, the 2300 days of Dan. 8. If they did not end in 1844, 1854 did as well. That time passed, and they moved them on to '67, '68, '70, '73, '75, and some to 1880.

When Bro. Miller's argument that the seventy weeks were part of the 2300 days, and ended at the cross, the only landmark God has given, was thrown away, we were all afloat. One place to end them would do as well as another. So with the "abomination of desolation," which, in 1843 times, we understood and proved was "set up" in A. D. 538, and its "dominion" taken away in 1798. These great landmarks were forsaken, while the virgins slept, and the "days" made to fit almost any place.

Now we are driven back to the platform on which the virgins stood before they went to sleep, in the application of every prophecy. And just so far as we get back we begin to see the light for 1873. The unfolding of events during the last thirty years has strengthened every application of prophecy, as it was applied at that time, and the only change has been in a few jots and tittles of light added to those positions; and every independent application of prophecy made since then has to be swept out of the way.

The mistake of 1843 was in beginning the "thousand" (Dan. 12: 11) thirty years before the abomination was "set up," or in 508, when we supposed the "daily sacrifice was taken away."

The Advent movement may be likened to a man who builds a house. He digs deep, and lays his foundation on a rock. Night comes on, and he dreams his beautiful structure is all in ruins. With the debris he essays to build again; but having no foundation, it soon falls. He moves a portion of the crumbling mass a little further on, and tries again and again, with like results. When almost in despair the morning light begins to shine. He awakens and beholds it was all a dream. The noble structure is still secure. The winds blew, the rain fell, and the floods came, but it was founded on a rock. He thanks God, and with a light heart goes back to where he left off the day before, and adds a few jots and tittles and completes the building. Would not all who beheld him, know that his dreams were at an end, and that he was now awake?

Even so in this 1873 movement, it is based on the old foundation of 1843; not a stone has fallen. The dark night is passing away, and "Behold the Bridegroom cometh."

Some suppose, in order to understand this parable, we must learn how a marriage feast was conducted in the East. Christ drew upon eastern customs to illustrate this movement of the virgins, or going out of his people, the Adventists, at this time, it is true; but he presumed to have understood what he wished to illustrate, and to have drawn as many features of an eastern feast as it was necessary to complete the illustrations. We have no right to add to his parable, and say that because wedding feasts were sometimes consummated in the night, therefore Christ will come and the resurrection take place in a symbolic night.

If he had said—"Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened to an eastern wedding feast, and you may fill up the picture for yourself;" then indeed we might have taken some liberty. But what he says is, that it would be likened to ten virgins who go out to meet him; he tarries, and they slumber and sleep. At midnight a cry is made—"Go ye out to meet him." A second movement. At that cry they rise and trim their lamps. He comes, and they that are ready go in, and the door is shut. Thus the parable ends with the coming and the resurrection. The night and darkness connected with the movement have been since the tarrying and slumbering and sleeping. And when the Bridegroom comes, the glorious morning of the resurrection will be ushered in. All Adventists believe this; that we are now passing through this night, and that the morning will be when Christ comes. And therefore the parable cannot end until morning. Any other conclusion is a forced one.

Midnight means the middle of the night; hence the cry—"Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him," must be made in the middle of this symbolic night, or tarrying time. Otherwise, his parable would fail of being accurately fulfilled. The midnight cry brings to view a second movement. The first one in which they took their lamps and went forth, continued about fifteen years, or from 1828 to 1843–4. Hence the last going out must necessarily consume time. He does not come when the cry is made, or begins to be made; for there is much to be accomplished under the cry; still it is the true cry in accordance with which he does eventually come, and they that are ready go in; and there is no failure or disappointment associated with it by our Lord.

Therefore the '44, '54, or '67 time, can neither of them answer to the midnight cry, as they all ended in disappointment. They may represent the "watches," as many think; but they cannot represent the true cry at which he comes. Nor have we a right to join these watches as given in Mark 13: 35, with this parable of the virgins. Both are perfect in themselves; and though they may cover the same ground, still they remain two separate and distinct parables; the midnight watch and the midnight cry having nothing in common.

In the parable under consideration there are but two movements spoken of. The first was to end in disappointment; the last in glory. "At midnight," said our Lord, this cry should be made. Hence if it is not already made, we have not yet, after twenty-nine years of tarrying, reached midnight, and the morning must be at least twenty-nine years in the future. What then becomes of this generation? The only objection to this clear and positive application of the parable is, that we make too much of Christ's words. I do not believe it, for not one jot can fail. The midnight cry has been made, thank God; and there are seven different ways of proving that this night is to be but thirty years long, and will end in 1873.

We believe the 1873 cry is the midnight cry, because we believe the Lord will come in 1873; and the midnight cry is the true cry. Hence all the evidences which go to prove that the Lord will come at that time, also proves the cry of his coming to be the midnight cry. And more than that, this 1873 cry began at midnight, viz., in the middle of this tarrying, or about fifteen years after the spring of 1844. And though small in its beginning, it has continued as a persistent cry until it has swelled to its present proportions. As with the first movement, the virgins come in slowly for many years, and at last by thousands; so it has been with this; and now the virgins are rising and trimming their lamps (examining the truth of this matter) all over the land.

Many have supposed the 1854 cry was the midnight cry, but as that ended in disappointment, and this does not, they cannot be the same. Others suppose the midnight cry is not yet made, and is to be at His appearing. This, however, is not possible, for a midnight cry cannot be made in the morning. Again, some have supposed there was to be no conversions after that "cry" was made, because the foolish get no oil. If because the "foolish" do not become "wise," proves there are no conversions under the last movement, then there have been none since 1828; for in the symbol, the five wise and five foolish started in that condition, and so remain until the end. But of course the symbol has nothing to do with individual changes. The foolish were never ready. The only way is to learn to be wise.

If it were not for the light thrown on the Advent movement by this parable, we could never expect to gain the confidence or faith of the people in another time movement. But when we are taught by our Lord so clearly that the past would be precisely what it has been, and yet there was to be a true cry on which they that were ready would go in, our disappointments, slumbering and sleeping, and confusion even, become additional evidence that we are on the right track.

The going out to meet the Bridegroom, which was to precede the disappointment, has been made. He has tarried, and have they not all slumbered and slept? Who that knows our past history, as a people, but will answer yes? The midnight cry has been made. Of this there is abundance of evidence. Some will say that 1873 was spoken of long before the midnight hour. That indeed is true. Bro. Miller said soon after 1843 passed, that he "could see no light this side of 1873," and many others might have said as much; but it was soon lost sight of, and did not begin as a persistent cry until God's time, the midnight hour, had come.

Others again insist upon it that it must be made by an angel. They are willing to admit that the cry made by the angel (Rev. 14: 6) was fulfilled in the Advent movement, while here, where nothing is said of any such personage, they expect a miraculous appearance of an angel. Again, there are others who say the movement has not been large enough either in its beginning or present proportions, and so they can all find excuses.

God's work has always been done in a way that men could find excuses, if they chose, to disregard it. But the facts of our past history have met this parable, and fulfilled it in all its details. There is nothing before us but the separation between the wise and foolish, and the coming Bridegroom. God grant that we be found among the wise. I believe with all my heart, Christ is coming in 1873. "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"—Isa. 21: 12.

S. D. MABEY.

When an invalid has been sick with raging fever, tossing about nearly all night, he often inquires, Is it not almost morning? And in some respects it is so with the Christian who is tempest-tossed, surrounded with the evil of sin in various forms. He is often sorrowful in spirit, and sighs for the morning of eternal deliverance to dawn upon the redeemed. How often does he study the old chart, inquiring, "What of the night?" to find, if possible, some ray of prophetic light to show the time of night in the world's great history. The apostle says (Rom. 13: 11, 12), "And that knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand." Although definite time has not, seemingly, been determined, yet the prophecies of Daniel and John are for the purpose God designed them. "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief."

If definite time is not revealed, some may inquire, How can the prophecies benefit us? Because it seems that those truths should have manifold more weight, from the fact that the day and hour may not be revealed by inspiration. If the time was revealed, there would not be need of anxiety on the subject until the time the event was due. But as it is, the prophecy points to a space of but few years, at most; therefore, there is much the more need of watching, and being ready all the time. Truly, we can say, The morning cometh. The Savior said, "When ye see these things come to pass [referring to the darkening of the sun and moon, and falling stars], know that it is nigh, even at the doors." Those events are in the past.

We have come to the perils of the last days, described by the apostle Paul. 2 Tim. 3: 2–5. We have come to the time when the love of many waxeth cold; when many depart from the faith, and give heed to doctrines of devils (2 Tim. 4: 1), and seducing spirits are abroad throughout the land, deceiving the people, going to the kings and great men, preparing them for the battle of the great day (Rev. 16: 13), denying that the Savior is any more than a man. The apostle says (1 John 4: 1–3) that many spirits have gone out into the world. "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God; and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard, that it should come; and now already is it in the world." We may expect soon to see the sign of the Son of man in heaven; then the coming of Jesus. It will be the same personage of whom the angels spake, when they said, "This same Jesus . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." When he comes, the morning of eternal day will begin. When he comes, his reward is with him, to give to every man according to his work. Rev. 22: 12. When he comes, he shall sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them. "Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." Matt. 25. In the language of the poet we say—

"Oh hail! happy day,
That speaks our trials ended;
The Lord will come to take us home,
Oh hail! happy day!
No more by doubts or fears distressed,
We now shall gain our promised rest,
And be forever blest,
O hail! happy day."

O christian, awake from slumber, and let your works abound. Let it be known by your walk and daily conversation that you believe the Lord is at hand. Watchman, what of the night? The answer is emphatic: "The morning cometh, and also the night."

De Kalb, Ill.

WE want religion that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late, and keeps the dinner from being late; keeps the wife from fretting when he tracks the newly-washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and the door-mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and keeps the baby pleasant; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the Eastern fig tree, bearing in its bloom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripening fruit.

— When a man thinks that nobody cares for him, and that he is alone in a cold and selfish world, he would do well to ask himself what he has done to make anybody care for and love him, and to warm the world with faith and generosity. Generally those who complain the most have done the least.

BRIGHT OMENS.

There are bright omens for the friends of Jesus, indicating that in a little while they will see their glorious Deliverer. A review of the prophetic Scriptures relating to the four great, leading kingdoms, Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman, which were to hold sway over the world, shows most plainly that the last one has about accomplished the work foretold by the prophet; and that very soon the general wind-up of temporal things must take place. That the Babylonian was the first noted kingdom, and the one which was represented by the head of gold in the great metallic image, described in the second chapter of Daniel, and by the lion in the seventh chapter, there can be no doubt. That kingdom ended in the days of Cyrus, 491 B. C., according to the most reliable chronology connected with the Bible.

The second kingdom, the Medo-Persian, symbolized by the breast and arms of silver, by the bear in the seventh chapter of Daniel, and the ram in the eighth, ended 332 B. C. in the reign of Alexander the Great, who conquered the Medes and Persians.

This third kingdom, the Grecian, represented by the belly and sides of brass, the leopard in the seventh of Daniel, and the rough goat in the eighth, was subdued by the Romans, who next became the leading power in the world, and was represented by the legs and feet of the metallic image, and by the fourth beast described in Daniel seventh chapter, which the prophet says is "the fourth kingdom upon earth." The first Roman emperor was Augustus Cæsar, who began to reign B. C. 31. Daniel was informed that the ten horns on the fourth beast represented ten kingdoms that should arise out of that fourth kingdom; that is, the Roman empire should be broken into ten fragments. This took place in the fifth and sixth centuries, when ten savage tribes from the north of Europe invaded the Roman empire, and thus formed ten separate kingdoms, leaving only a small part of the whole empire in the possession of the Romans, in the eastern part of the empire, having Constantinople for its capital. According to the prophecy, this remnant of the empire should grow again into great power, and wear out the saints of the Most High; and after a long period of persecution, lose its dominion a short time before the coming of Christ. All this has taken place. On the 26th of Sept., 1870, the Italians entered Rome, and deprived the Pope of the last vestige of his temporal power. The last things revealed to Daniel as connected with the "little horn," before its utter overthrow, were "the great words which the horn spake." Its great words were when its head declared his infallibility in the summer of 1870, during the session of the Ecumenical Council. The next important event after this is his delivery to the "burning flame." When that takes place the saints are to rise from the dead, and behold its burning, and rejoice over their great persecuting enemy. Following this is "the marriage of the Lamb."

A short time before this, the bride of Christ, the church, is represented as getting "ready," because "the marriage of the Lamb" is at hand. The evidence is now strong to show that the special work of preparation has already begun. This fact affords bright evidence that we are certainly near the coming of Christ. We doubt whether it can be shown that since the days of the apostles, there has been such a general interest in the subject of holiness of heart, among the best class of christians in all denominations, as at the present time; and this feeling is rapidly increasing in every direction. A few days since, we had a conversation with an English gentleman, who informed us that the same work is in progress in England. It is a special moving of the Holy Spirit, causing the church of Christ to feel the necessity of being "pure in heart," if she would be ready to welcome our coming King. This feeling is deep and abiding. There is nothing boisterous, fanatical, wild or unseemly in its manifestations. It is gentle, calm, inviting, lovely, sweet as honey, and keeps saying, give all to Jesus, and let him have full control of our all. Where the consecration has not been made, the Spirit causes the individual to feel a lack, an emptiness, that is quite unsatisfactory, like that of a hungry man, destitute of food.

Whenever the Lord produces this hungering, it is certain that there is something to satisfy that longing. Only one thing can do it, and that is the gift of the Holy Spirit. When all is consecrated to Christ, without any reserve, and every thing evil is confessed and forsaken, then we put ourselves in a condition to be filled with the Holy Spirit. When filled we no longer feel condemnation, but a heavenly peace fills the heart; hatred, impatience, love of worldly honors and pleasures are gone, and perfect love fills the soul. We then have a "peace that passeth all understanding." Those who have never been in this condition can have but a faint idea of its blessedness. We then feel all ready for the coming of Christ, and have an ardent love for his appearing. All doubts and darkness are gone, the communion with the Lord is unbroken, and a clear evidence is felt that the heart is clean, because it is filled by the Holy Spirit. The feelings are uniform, the peace deep and abiding, and is not dependent upon outward circumstances. There is a consciousness of being kept by the power of God, which affords the most delightful satisfaction.

One thing is certain, this is not the work of Satan. He cannot produce such fruit. He does not lead us to love God with all the heart; but this is the only true position for the bride of Christ to occupy at the time of his coming. Let us all "present" our "bodies a living sacrifice" to God, which is our "reasonable service."

BUCHANAN, MICH.

Buchanan, Mich., is a thriving village, containing some twenty-five hundred people, who are enterprising, intelligent, courteous, neighborly, and moral in their habits. It is a nice place for raising fruits, and a good locality for a pleasant home. It is on the Michigan Central R. R., between eighty and ninety miles from Chicago. It is prospering in business, with bright prospects of a healthy growth.

The church in Buchanan looking for the coming of Christ, has a very pleasant, commodious meeting-house in the heart of the village. It has passed through deep trials this year, and is now without a pastor. We found some devoted christians, and others possessing noble hearts, who were ready to consecrate their all to Christ. We commenced meetings Saturday evening, Oct. 5th. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon us, and many were quickened. We met a brotherly, cordial reception, and found the hearts of the people open to receive the truth as it is in Jesus. There are but few places that offer a better situation for a good pastor.

While there we met Bro. and Sr. Barnhart, from Dowagiac, Mich. He was formerly a preacher among the German Baptists; more commonly known as the Dunkards. Through the labors of the late Bro. Edwin T. Himes, he was led to see the truth in relation to the mortal nature of man and the final destruction of all the wicked. For believing this he was cut off from his former church connection. We were pleased with the spirit of this Bro. and found him satisfied with his present views of what the Bible teaches. He and his amiable wife are earnestly seeking the highway of holiness. We are hoping to see much good fruit from these meetings. Sabbath evening, Oct. 6th, several came forward for prayers, seeking for pure hearts, and felt much quickened. The Spirit of the Lord was with us to increase the interest in divine things.

UNION MILLS, IND.

We spent Monday evening, Oct. 7th, with Bro. D. Mathewson, pastor of the church at Union Mills, Ind. The faithful, earnest labors of Bro. M. have been much blest at this place, and he and his devoted wife are highly esteemed by the church and people, who have just finished a pleasant parsonage for them. Their hearts are in the work of Christ. We had a delightful visit, and an interesting meeting. Several requested prayers that they might be ready for the coming of the Savior. The Spirit of the Lord rested upon the meeting, producing deep emotions in many hearts. There is an increasing interest in the deep things pertaining to christian experience. Almost every true follower of Jesus is feeling an unusual hungering and thirsting after righteousness, such as they never experienced before. It follows them by night and by day; in their shops, on their farms, and in all the avenues of life's varied scenes. It comes from the working of the Holy Spirit. Let none resist, lest the Spirit be grieved away. It is a special favor of grace to be thus prompted to seek holiness of heart, which is essential for those who wish to "see the Lord."

CHICAGO.—Our meetings in Chicago are rapidly increasing in interest. The meeting last evening (Oct. 3d) was the best we ever enjoyed in the city. The Holy Spirit seemed to fill the house, producing a solemn sweetness, that charmed the saints, and alarmed the sinners. Several have consecrated all to Christ, and have received the gift of the Spirit, producing "perfect love." The Lord is truly doing great things for us.

AFFAIRS IN EUROPE.

We find the following in the telegraphic columns of the Globe in this city:—

A prominent department officer, now in Rome, writes an interesting letter to a friend here on the situation in Europe, in which he predicts a period of violent agitation, if not revolutionary outbreak, in every leading country except Russia. The Pope is completely ignored, and among the people of Rome his pretensions are almost ridiculed. The imperial meeting at Berlin is considered a hypocritical thing, got up for effect, to quiet the political and social fermentation going on among the masses. He finds everywhere discontent, the very poor denouncing all above them, the middle classes complaining of ruinous taxation and of the cost of monarchial establishments, while the governing class are equally dissatisfied from other reasons. In England, the food supply is the question foremost. Italy is in a terrible financial disorder. Germany is still noisy in self-adoration, while Russia looks more firmly than ever to the East and the Bosphorus. France and Spain are fermenting, and the revolutionary spirit may first break out there. Concerning his Holiness he says: "Speaking of the Pope, I must confess that I was astonished to find his authority here so completely ignored. The people here hate the priests, and have seconded all the movements of the King of Italy against the Papal power. I can tell you, as a matter of personal knowledge, that the Vatican is all that the Pope has left. The Quirinal and his other palaces have been taken from him. Many of the churches have been seized and converted into offices of military barracks. Monasteries and convents have been broken up and other church buildings closed. The Papal troops have been disbanded, and the household guard, who are not permitted outside the Vatican in uniform, I learn, will also be broken up. Of seventy-two cardinals the number has been reduced to about forty-five."

The writer is a very intelligent observer, with unusual opportunities as a traveler to observe the actual facts.

CORRECTIONS.—In our editorial headed "Western Notes," in the Crisis of Oct. 9th, will be found the following—"Holiness is essential to salvation. Let us be kept no longer in the back-ground by those who are looking for the coming of Jesus." Instead of "let us," read, let it.

In the article headed, "Inquiries," answer No. 6, instead of "Before man sinned it was decided," read—"it was not decided whether he should live for ever."

ALMOST HOME.

The pilgrimage of the church has been long. Tears, trials, and death have been plentifully strewn in its pathway. But now the mellow light of coming glory begins to stream from the city of repose, telling the weary pilgrim that he is almost home. Oh, exhilirating thought! Transporting prospect! The city of God soon to come. Death to be obliterated. Tears to be wiped away. Sin to come to an end. The curse to be removed. Our dead friends who once loved Jesus so well, are to live again. Jesus himself to come once more to earth to live with his followers. The holy angels, too, are coming with him. And this scene of happiness is almost due. What a home that will be. A graveless, tearless and deathless realm. And what society we shall enjoy there—all sinless, all deathless, all happy, all in harmony.

Nor is the thought of being almost home a speculative thought. It is based upon the strongest evidence, and much of it. It is true, and cannot be invalidated. The predicted worldly empires have had their day, and next comes Messiah's return from the far country to say, "Those mine enemies that would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me"; then he will "take to himself his great power and reign"; then "the kingdoms of this world" will have "become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. "Rev. 11: 15". The signs in heaven above and earth beneath, that were to herald the dawn of that day, have been seen. We cannot shut our eyes to these facts. We have a right to feel cheered by these omens of coming redemption.

Nor is it to be wondered at that some excesses and extravagances occasionally attach themselves to the earnest movements of those who believe such a mighty truth, seeing we are yet fallible. It is a trutht hat is calculated o stir the hearts of men to their depths; and the wonder is that so few have overacted. It is truly astonishing that apathy can find a place in any heart that has ever been reached by the stirring evidence of coming deliverance from mortality so soon.

Have any grown weary of watching, and deem the time long? God's time will surely be right, and will surely bring the glorious era of eternal perfection. Let us not fall into the error of thinking that we can know little or nothing about our proximity to our long-looked for happy home. That would suit Satan. With the prophetic programme before our eyes, we have no right to be in darkness relative to our chronological whereabouts in this world's prophetic history. Prophetic events and prophetic measurements jointly proclaim the speedy dawn of a new era. These strong considerations should come home to our hearts, even though we may not be able to tell with infallible precision where to end God's chain of time. God has got such a chain, and we are surely near its end —there is our home. W. S.

SLIME OF THE DEVIL.

It is not often that I deem it best to notice the vicious assaults upon the Bible—by men of unparalleled dishonesty, Intensified with malicious aversion to inspiration, whose only redeeming quality is a disgusting shallowness of intellect; who retail the falsehoods and perversions of their superiors, in a new dress, scattering them in four-page tracts, as if they had made some new discovery that would astonish the people, and lead them at once to abandon the Bible, and accept, in its stead, the wide-spread theology of demons. My excuse for this article is the following note from New Hampshire:—

AUGUST 1st, 1872. Eld. Sheldon, Dear Sir:—Enclosed you will find a tract that is attracting much attention. If it would not be asking too much of you, I would like you to explain these things through the World's Crisis.—From a friend seeking for truth.

We have neither time nor a disposition to give a full review of this filthy document. But we will invite attention to a few of its points.

It makes an attack on David, picking up all his imperfections and sins, some of which he was censured for by the Lord, assuming that David was all the while inspired. The candid reader will remember (1) that some of David's acts which would not have been admissible under this dispensation, were not in violation of the Mosaic law under which he was living; (2) David did commit sins for which he repented, and found pardon. "Create in me a clean heart," was his earnest petition. God sent a servant to David more than once to reprove him.

If the Bible were the work of designing men, all these defects would have been covered up. But here human frailty is truthfully exhibited, and God's mercy magnified.

2. The Lord is accused of instructing Samuel to lie when he went to anoint David: "And Samuel said, How can I go? if Saul hear it, he will kill me. And the Lord said, Take an heifer with thee, and say, I am come to sacrifice to the Lord. And call Jesse to the sacrifice." Where is the "lie", since the sacrifice was a reality, and no deception?

3. The Bible is made to give itself the lie in once affirming that David killed Goliah, and afterwards asserting that Elhanan killed him; and the conclusion is arrived at by making 2 Sam. 21: 19 read thus—"Elhanan . . . . slew Goliah." The text, with the italicised words here thrown out, reads: "Slew the brother of Goliah." This effort to make the Bible give itself the lie by throwing out the italics, is followed by a taunt about the goodness of the translators to help God make the Bible read right. But unfortunately for these slimy fellows, there is another text that tells the whole story about this matter with no supplied words: "And Elhanan . . . . slew Lahmi, the brother of Goliah." 1 Chron. 20:5. So without the aid of supplied words, we here learn that Elhanan merely slew "the brother of Goliah," while David slew Goliah himself. Where is the lie that is charged on the Bible?

4. It is charged that the Bible lies in asserting in 2 Sam. 6: 23 that Michal had "no child unto the day of her death" (David's wife, the daughter of Saul), while 2 Sam. 21: 8 gives her "five sons." This last passage reads thus: "And the five sons of Michal [margin—Michal's sister], the daughter of Saul, whom she brought up for Adriel"; margin, "bare to Adriel;" Douay, "whom she bore to Adriel." As these "five sons" belonged to Adriel, who was the husband of Merab, sister to Michal, it is certain that the marginal reading is correct. That Adriel, the father of these "five sons," was the husband of Saul's other daughter, sister to Michal (Saul had but two daughters), is proven by the following text: "But it came to pass at the time when Merab, Saul's daughter, should have been given to David, that she was given to Adriel. . . . . And Michal, Saul's daughter, loved David." 1 Sam. 18: 19.

Thus these "five sons" belonged not to Michal, but to her sister, the wife of Adriel. Another failure to make the Bible clash. All this slime has been in vain.

5. It is claimed that the Bible contradicts itself in asserting in 1 Chron. 21: 1, that Satan provoked the Lord to number Israel; and in saying in 2 Sam. 24: 1 that the Lord did it. But the last text reads: "And he [margin—Satan] moved David against them to say, Go number Israel." All harmony again.

6. It is affirmed that the Bible gives itself the lie in asserting in 1 Chron. 21: 25 that David paid six hundred sheckels of gold, or about six thousand dollars, to Ornan for a chance to offer sacrifice; and in stating in 2 Sam. 24: 24 that he paid only fifty sheckels of silver, or about thirty-one dollars. Now this is not so; for the first statement referred to the purchase of the "place" entire (Mount Moriah) where the temple was subsequently built—"So David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred sheckels of gold." Afterward "Solomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in Mount Moriah, where the Lord appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshing-floor of Ornan." 2 Chron. 3: 1. The second statement referred to reads thus—"Neither will I offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God of that which costs me nothing. So David bought the threshing-floor and the oxen for fifty sheckels of silver." So for about thirty-one dollars David obtained a sacrifice and fuel to burn it; while he paid about six thousand dollars for Mount Moriah, the site for the temple in after days; paying for the former in "silver," and for the latter in "gold." So this hunt for a lie ends in a failure. Pretty soon God will hunt for liars, and he will find a multitude of them well pickled in the devil's slime, and only fit for the lake of fire, where they will realize that God has told the truth about them at all events. W. S.

A KNOW-NOTHING GOD.

Spiritualism blindly reduces God to a mere principle pervading the animate world, and thus robs him of intelligence in his early history. It is claimed that this principle possesses intelligence only as evinced through creatures of intelligence. Then before these creatures of intelligence came into existence, where was the intellect of this God-principle? It was void of intellect.

The God of the Bible knew enough and had power enough to make a world, and a man to live on it; but the God of spiritualism came into existence somehow after these earthly things were made, without any being in existence to make them—they having made themselves before they existed—and then not being able to make a man, he had to grow up from a monkey, without any God to make the monkey—possibly he made himself before he had an existence: and still wonderful to tell, this self-made monkey-man has a spirit that can outlive the body.

Which was made first, the spirit or the monkey, or whether other monkeys have such spirits, is hard to tell. But how this God of spiritualism blundered into making that monkey part mortal and part immortal, is hard to tell. Or whether all monkeys will yet turn into men, or all men yet retrograde to monkeys, is an unsolved mystery. But that monkey, at any rate, became the intellectual part of this God, who knew nothing till the monkey began to develop: so the God of spiritualism once knew nothing at all, then knew just as much as a monkey, and finally his knowledge comes to be measured by the amount and culture of human and animal brains; and this God is still going to school, with no prospect of graduating at present.

Others not liking to admit that the great-grandfather-monkey created himself, go further back to find the origin of man; and make the wonderful discovery that he was once a mere tadpole or polliwog. But this comes about as near to a reliable starting point as the ancient solution of the mystery concerning what the earth stood upon, since it could not stand without some foundation to rest upon; which mystery was cleared up by the assumption that it stood upon the back of a great turtle: and this would have remained a satisfactory explanation had not some inquisitive genius inquired what the turtle stood upon? So when we trace man back to a polliwog, we cannot refrain from inquiring where the polliwog came from? Why, from the spawn of a frog, of course. Well, most venerable great-grand-father, or great-grand-mother-frog, who made you? Who made the first frog, whose spawn produced the first polliwog, which polliwog grew to be another frog, which frog progressed to be a man? Who made that first frog? Did it make itself? If made by a law, who made the law?

So, with this claim, the time was when the God of spiritualism did not know as much as a frog, and finally has progressed, and progressed, till he knows just as much as men and animals, and no more, including disembodied men. When men throw away the God of the Bible, and try to manufacture one to suit themselves, they launch out upon a shoreless sea of speculations, to be lost forever. Will it pay? W. S.

STILL THEY COME.—A private note from a personal friend assures me that a Baptist clergyman, who has long preached in Missouri, has embraced the truth we love so much, and has commenced preaching it, intending to unite with our people. The foundations of the immortal-soul dogma are getting loose, and many who once believed it now only assent to it, this being the first step toward its renunciation. The entire system is so perforated by the arrows of truth which have been so incessantly hurled at it for a few years past, that many begin to see through it, but wish to let themselves down from the system as easily as possible.

Let us not slacken our firing, but let the arrows of sacred truth fly thicker and faster. Some are surrendering, and others are getting disheartened in their vain attempts to sustain a tottering system, while others still seem only whistling to keep up their courage. Let us press the battle! W. S.

THE TRACT FUND.

The Advent Christian Publication Society, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, Aug. 23d, 1872, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year, and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

A young man, converted to God and the Advent faith last spring in the city of Vallejo, Cal., was the means of the conversion of another friend of his by the following means. He knew this friend was an habitual reader of novels, and having tried to induce him to read some Advent publications without success, he tried the following strategem, and caught him with guile.

He took Eld. Sheldon's work, "Life beyond Death," tore off from it its own cover, and carefully pasted on in its stead the cover of one of the leading novels of the day. He then found his friend, and handing him the book said to him—"Here is an excellent and interesting book I want you to read." Looking at its cover, attractive to him from its being a novel, he thanked his friend, replying that he would certainly read it. He took it home and began to read. He saw some mystery at once. He would read a sentence or two, and then look at the cover; and then read, and then revert to the cover again. He could not see the correspondence between a religious publication and a novel. However, he began to be interested; and the more he read, the more he became absorbed, until finally he read the volume through.

Then he was not satisfied. He read it over again, and began to be awakened to its theme, its truths; and the ultimate result has been this man's conversion to the Lord. I have baptized him, and he has been a member of the church in V. for several months, and an active and zealous christian.

HUDSON MONUMENT.

I propose to call the attention of the friends of the late beloved Hudson, through the medium of the Crisis, by way of inquiry, as to the expediency of erecting a suitable monument to his memory.

His brother purchased a lot in the Methodist ground, a little back, and one side of the yard, but it proved to have a prior claim, and the owner insisted that his lot should be cleared of incumbrance. The authorities came to me for permission to remove Hudson's remains to some other lot. I first objected, but on condition that they would give me a lot in front, they might do it. I accordingly took a new deed for a conspicuous lot in front, and his remains were removed to it at their own expense.

Now, it occurred to me that if friends east and west would feel it a privilege to contribute for the purchase of a marble, that I would be at the trouble of setting it up. Any response may come through the Crisis, with suggestions regarding it. R. WILLARD.

REPORT OF THE LAWRENCE TIME CONFERENCE.

Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 26th, 1872, 2 o'clock P. M. Brethren and sisters in convention assembled, to investigate the evidences concerning the coming of our Lord for the life of his people in 1873. Bro. Israel Damman announced the arrival of the hour appointed for the opening of convention. It was suggested by him, and approved by the body, that a chairman be chosen, also that a report of this meeting be published. Bro. Israel Damman was chosen Chairman, and Bro. J. F. Nickerson Secretary. Bro. Barbour then submitted the following plan of procedure for the investigation and discussion of the subject:

1. We will take up the matter of Chronology, inasmuch as there were some present holding different views upon the same.

2. We will proceed to consider the 2300 days of Daniel 8, and after that take up the 1335 days. Each speaker shall be allowed one hour in which to bring out his argument upon this subject.

This plan met with general approval, and was adopted by the convention. It was then proposed to devote the remaining moments of the P. M. session for prayer and humiliation. This was an exceeding precious season. Words would fail to fully express the richness of this occasion. There were present quite a goodly number of people residing in Lawrence who were not in the habit of attending at the chapel. We closed the exercises at about five, and were kindly entertained by brethren and sisters; and I would here tender the thanks of all who were the recipients of this generosity at the hands of the little church of waiting ones in Lawrence, Mass.

We met again at seven, and continued in prayer and exhortation till half past, when Bro. George W. Brown, of Orrington, Me., preached from Gen. 18: 17. It is not necessary to burden the columns of any Advent paper with this discourse. The text was very appropriate, and the speaker laid a good foundation upon which was erected a convention which in tone and character partook largely of the nature of the text. No one can fail to see from the context that the great judgment then impending could not be allowed to come upon all, without first notifying such as were entitled to escape of the event. Abraham, being a friend of God, is provided for, with others of like character. It was then shown that the coming day of His wrath would not overtake the people that do know their God, and they not know it, for they like Abraham are the friends of Jesus, through whom God will finally judge the world. As the speaker proceeded he became filled with the heavenly spirit of the text, and the children rejoiced in that they received "meat in due season." Meeting adjourned at 9.30 rejoicing in the light of divine truth.

Friday morning assembled at 8.30 and enjoyed a precious season waiting upon the Lord in prayer, and exhorting one another in comforting words, in view of the fact the day was seen to be approaching. At 10, Bro. Thurman addressed the convention on the proposed subject, viz., Chronology. This great and perplexing subject was ably treated by our dear brother, who has as we all know spared no pains in adjusting the many difficulties connected therewith. Bro. Barbour followed upon the same subject, and with much earnestness presented his argument upon the same, the difference in their final conclusion as to the age of the world, from the creation of Adam, being as follows: According to Bro. Thurman, the world is 6000 years old in 1875; according to Bro. Barbour, in 1873. The morning was consumed by these two brethren upon this subject, which the reporter would plead his inability to record so as to present an interesting and profitable account.

Re-assembled at 1, and enjoyed another social meeting, which was very rich in character. Notwithstanding there were intellectual differences as well as theological, one kind, gracious and heavenly spirit pervaded the entire convention, although reported by some to the contrary.

At 2.30 the convention proceeded to discuss a number of questions, limiting each speaker to five minutes speeches; Brn. Barbour, Thurman and Cunningham being the principal speakers. The afternoon was thus profitably consumed. Our evening exercises commenced again at seven, continuing until eight, when Bro. Thurman discoursed from Dan. 12: 6. Bro. T. paused to notice (1) that all matter was under law. Man was placed under law for the purpose of development. Noticed the fact of his disobedience, which threw him out of harmony with his Creator, which caused him to hide his face from the son he had created. Since then man has been wandering over the earth in pursuit of life and happiness, but finding nothing but disappointment and death. How long was this to continue? forever? No! Here noticed that God gave Daniel a vision spanning the time reaching to his recovery, and placing him on a footing far in advance of his original state in Eden. Who were to understand this vision? All? No! Only the "wise," or righteous. He would compare the vision to a letter sealed and directed to one in the distance. It was designed for the church of God down in "the time of the end." Such was the book of Daniel; it was directed to the people of God down here.

Saturday, 8 A. M. Enjoyed another precious season of refreshment in waiting on God. At ten the meeting was then turned into one of usual discussion upon those controverted points in Daniel and John in reference to the shorter periods. A christian spirit pervaded the entire convention in all its deliberations and discussions. Bro. Jona. Cummings being present proposed the following question—"By what rule of interpretation do you make the judgment, in Dan. 7: 26, different from that in verse 22? Are they not one and the same, referring to the final judgment in behalf of the saints?" Bro. Barbour arose and replied to the inquiry, showing conclusively that they were two distinct judgments, marking two specific events,—the former being upon and against the papal hierarchy in 1798; the latter for the saints, at the end of the 1335 days. The discussion closed at twelve. Prayer meeting again at one, and at the usual hour the meeting was again open for investigation. At the commencement of these exercises, Bro. Cunningham informed the convention of his reception of a communication from Bro. Joshua V. Himes, also another from Bro. Jonas Wendell. Brethren desiring, the communications were read, after which the thanks of the convention were returned to Brn. Himes and Wendell for the sympathy therein expressed in relation to the Advent of our Lord.

Continued report by Bro. Cunningham. Upon the discussion of the term "daily," and "the abomination that maketh desolate," in Dan. 12: 11, also upon the beginning and end of the 1290 days, Brn. Brown, Couch and Cunningham took part; Brown taking the position that the daily was neither pagan idolatry nor Jewish worship, but that it was Christian worship, and that it was taken away in 538, when the papacy was established in Rome. The reason he gave for the daily being the Christian worship, was because the early church met daily for the purpose of worshiping God, which was suppressed by papacy, or by the military power acting in behalf of that system. Bro. Couch thought the daily was the worship of God, whether under Jewish or Christian dispensation, and that it was taken away simultaneously with the "abomination that made desolate." Bro. Cunningham disagreed with both Brown and Couch, he applying the daily or continual, in Dan. 8, could not apply it to the worship of God either by the Jewish or Christian church, because the daily was a power that was antagonistic to the worship of God, whether Jewish or Christian; and the daily, in connection with the desolating abomination, was to tread under foot the sanctuary and host, or God's people, and their inheritance 2300 years; and that the seven distinct kingdoms shown in chap. 8 to Daniel by the angel Gabriel were divided by the holy one speaking to Palmonia (inquiring how long the vision?) into two grand divisions, called the daily, or continual, and the desolating abomination; thus these two elements of the vision as divided by the angel can embrace nothing more nor less than the pagan governments and the papal; i. e., Persia, Grecia (with its four divisions), pagan Rome, and papal Rome. The pagan governments of Persia, Grecia, and Rome, are one grand division of this prophecy, and the papal element the other.

There was a general agreement that the 1335 years commenced in A. D. 538, and consequently will terminate in 1873, when the holy dead will re-live and the righteous living be changed from mortality to immortality, and caught away to a meeting of Christ in the air; then will commence the awful indignation on the wicked and ungodly nations of the earth, as foretold in the sure word of prophecy.

There were seven questions presented to the Chairman of the Convention by Bro. Cunningham that were not discussed, which ought to have received special attention; they related mostly to the data in the eighth and ninth of Daniel. I hope there will be another time conference called immediately, at which justice may be done to these very important subjects; some of which lie at the basis of correct chronological computation.

Two discourses were preached by Bro. Brown, one by Bro. Thurman, and two by Bro. Barbour. The first two named were in our estimation timely, and "meat in due season." While there were many good things in the other discourses, there were also some from which we should entirely dissent; and in this judgment we are not alone. I hope, my brethren, ministers of Christ, you will be careful how you handle the word of God. There is an awful responsibility resting upon us who attempt to expound that word. The apostle Paul regarded the perverting of the gospel as awful work. Gal. 1: 7–10; 2 Pet. 3: 15, 16.

The prayer-meetings were quite spiritual and deep-toned, but I think we shall see greater searchings of heart before the Lord comes. We can hardly have too many of such meetings before the coming of Jesus. I trust our brethren will awake to the importance of this work all over the land; for what is done will be done in a very brief space of time. Oh, may God help us all, dear brethren, to put forth all our energies to the great work before us, in giving a distinctness to the message now being proclaimed—The coming of Christ in 1873, to reward all his faithful servants and children with immortality, and glory indescribable, in an incorruptible and undefiled and never-fading inheritance, that is now reserved for such as are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, about ready to be revealed to the welcome vision of the whole household of faith. Amen and amen.

ELEVENTH YEARLY CONFERENCE.

The eleventh yearly conference of the A. C. church at Darien, N. Y., met Sept. 20th, at seven o'clock P. M. Meeting being called to order, D. Cogswell was elected Moderator, and S. C. Gove Secretary. After a season of prayer, Bro. Cogswell preached a short but impressive discourse from Phil. 3: 17. Saturday forenoon was devoted to prayer and conference. A great interest was manifested. The testimonies were timely. We seldom attend meetings where the true spirit of our heavenly Master prevailed more than at this meeting. At one o'clock preaching from S. C. Gove, from Matt. 9: 37. Preaching at 7½ by Bro. A. P. Moore, from Heb. 9: 27, 28.

Sabbath morning met in love-feast, in which thirty-five testimonies were given in about thirty minutes, all full of interest. Preaching by Bro. Cogswell from Rev. 21: 4. At one, preaching by Bro. C. W. Low, from John 5: 39, after which the Lord's Supper was administered to about sixty; and we could say of a truth that it was a melting time. All present realized its great lesson. Bro. A. C. Newell discoursed to a large and attentive audience in the evening, taking Matt. 25 as the basis of his remarks.

Not a discordant note was heard in the entire meeting. We were deprived of Bro. and Sr. Simmons' presence in the meetings, they having sickness in their family, which prevented them from joining with us. Again we parted reluctantly, but were cheered by the sweet promise of soon meeting where partings will be unknown.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to acknowledge with deep and earnest gratitude the following amounts received within a short time past. I am not yet well, but am gaining quite fast. Had a number of doctors during my sickness, but think the medicine prepared by Dr. Buxton was the best, every way, of all that I have taken. May the Lord reward them, and all the dear friends who have lent us a helping hand in our need. M. A. Elliott [illegible], Mrs. S. F. Hulburd $4, Lucy Harrington [illegible], Mercy M. Post $1, Mrs. E. A. Berry $1, H. W. Norville $5 and a well filled box, S. Taylor (by M. Grant) $1, J. H. Brown $2, 1M. R. $1, Worcester $1, "Clinton" $2, Haverhill 50c., B. & E. B. Browne $1, S. Stearns $4, G. Tilley $5, M. Sunderland $1, Hamblin family $4, Westfield $2, L. C. Johnson $2, Lewis Sherman $2, N. L. Pierce $1, D. L. Towle $1, J. C., Chicago, $2, L. L. M. 60c., Hachaliah Bailey $3, O. B. Town $1.

There may have been letters received during our sickness that are not here acknowledged, as we were unable to keep the record, or answer letters for quite a while. Our family is now small, as we have only one of our children (the youngest) with us. Those who are not out to work are sleeping in the grave. In view of the scenes of sorrow, sin, sickness, suffering, wo and sadness, who could not say—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." May we all be ready for his coming is the prayer of your grateful brother and sister,

Extracts from Letters.

SR. L. B. WEAVER writes:—"To-day has been one of extreme suffering of body, but my heart is still fixed, trusting in God. I have been thinking as I lay here, of the end of rest, the saints' delight, the home prepared for me; and that when once we get to the blessed heavenly land, nothing will mar our peace, or disturb us. And as my thoughts have run far over into Beulah's peace land, how I have longed to gain that eternal shore. O, I long to place my weary, aching feet upon the golden streets of the New Jerusalem. I long to bathe them in the river of the water of life; to gaze upon the crystal foot, and never feel the weariness of earthly things. I long to rest this tired, bloated, aching body, beneath the shades of the spreading boughs of the tree of life; to sit and gaze on the beauties of the new creation round, here to gather the rich fruits, and eat thereof. I long to be there, to see Him whom my soul loveth with pure and lasting love; to hear his melodious voice; to see the dear saints; to see all the ancient patriarchs and prophets of old; to see the loved ones who have fallen in death, while on the way to this city of God. Come! my dear Savior, let the day dawn, the shadows flee away. Come! and dry the tears of thy weeping ones."

Jesus is my rock of refuge and hiding-place, the one altogether lovely; the chiefest

among ten thousands. He has washed and cleansed me. He has made me his by adoption, and I cry, 'Abba, Father!' O Savior! I do bless thee; I will praise thee; I do love thee; thou art mine, I am thine. All for Jesus. No will of my own. Take me, use me as shall best please thee. Mould and fashion me in any way that shall best glorify thyself. Not my will, but thine, be done."

Bro. G. L. Teeple writes:—"I visited not long since an ancient graveyard. I was much impressed with the old inscriptions and epitaphs. They savored much more of truth than those of the present time. Perhaps the readers of the Crisis would like to read a few of them. With your permission I will send a few. The dates are from 1730 to 1800.

"From stately paths we must remove,
The narrow lodgings of the grave to prove;
Leave the fair train and the light gilded room,
To lie alone benighted in the tomb."

"God only is immortal; man not so."

"Life is uncertain; death is sure;
Sin is the wound, and Christ the cure."

"A law eternal doth decree,
That all things born shall mortal be."

"Soft sleep the saints and cease to groan;
When death has done its worst,
Christ with a glory like his own,
Will clothe their waking dust."

"Christ's dying saints will live again,
And in his kingdom ever reign."

"Weep not for me, dry up your tears,
I must lie here till Christ appears."

"In faith she died, in dust she lies,
But faith foresees that dust arise
When Jesus calls, while hope assumes
And boasts her joy among the tombs."

"Christ is the Resurrection and the Life. In him is my hope. He is the end of the law to every one that believeth."

Bro. H. K. Davis writes from Ooltewah, Tenn.:—"God is blessing the truth to the good of many hearts in the South. Some of the sleepy church of these last days have not only heard of Christ's soon coming, but it has found a place in their hearts, and is working a purity such as will fit them for his kingdom. I need your prayers. Man can do nothing without help from above. Pray I may have that help. Doors are being thrown open in every direction for the right kind of laborers. They must be men with hearts full of love for the work, and a willingness to forego all that is pleasant here. They must expect to have their names cast out as evil. Heaven send such into the field."

Sr. E. E. Phinney writes from Portland, Wis.:—"We have no other preaching than the Crisis now father has gone to preach the good news of Jesus' soon coming. I love to read its columns. I am but a beginner in the cause of Christ. When father was home this summer he baptized my sister and myself into Christ. My sister is thirteen years of age, and I am sixteen. We are striving to be prepared to meet Jesus when he comes. There are none of like precious faith here. Pray for us."

Obituaries.

Curtis. Fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 23d, 1872, in Richmond, Me., Low Curtis, in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

Bro. Curtis was a great sufferer (his disease was supposed to be cancer in the stomach), and longed to sleep and be at rest. For about twenty-eight days he was unable to take any nourishment, except a little ice water. He leaves a wife, one son, six daughters, and a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn their loss, but they sorrow not as others which have no hope. Bro. Curtis was among the first in Maine who embraced the doctrine of the speedy coming of Jesus, in which faith he lived and died. He was extensively known and highly esteemed in the community for his promptness and integrity as a business man, and as a frank, open-hearted, and open-handed christian. His house has ever been a home for the christian pilgrim.

His funeral was attended by a very large concourse of relatives and friends. Words of consolation were spoken by the writer from Rev. 14: 13.
C. Goud.

Richards. Died in Athol, Mass., Sept. 7th, 1872, Lewis Richards, formerly of Colerain, Mass., aged fifty-nine years.

His death was caused by injuries received while assisting in erecting a tent for the preaching of the gospel. He lived eight weeks after the accident, and bore his sufferings with christian patience, and rejoiced in the love of Jesus and the hope of a glorious resurrection. Bro. R. was well known by many of our preaching brethren, who always found a welcome at his pilgrim home, and received substantial blessings from his liberal hand. He sleeps in Jesus, but will soon come forth with a glorious body of immortality to meet his dear christian wife to part no more. May God bless the mourning family and save them unbroken in his everlasting kingdom, is my prayer.
J. Hemenway.

Gilpatrick. Died at Anoka, Minn., Oct. 2nd, Bro. Benjamin Gilpatrick, aged sixty years.

For many years he has been a confident believer in the doctrines advocated in this paper respecting the Second Advent, life and death, and the resurrection. An ingenious and accomplished mechanic, a man of correct taste and judgment, of industry and well-directed economy, of high honesty and purity, he commanded the respect of the community, for his sincerity and consistency as a christian. He fell asleep in Christ after a long and trying sickness, patiently borne. All his children, five sons, died before him; three of them grown to manhood sleep beside him. His widow, bereaved and alone, returns to her friends in Mass.
A. K. P.

Towsley. Died at Parkersburg, Butler Co., Iowa, Aug. 6th, 1872, of typhoid fever, Elvira E., wife of J. J. Towsley, aged thirty-eight years, eleven months, and twenty-one days.

She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her loss. Elvira embraced religion at the age of eleven years, among the believers of the Second Advent of our Lord, and was among those watching and waiting for his speedy return. Her daily walk was consistent with her faith, and she died in full faith of a glorious resurrection. Her funeral was attended by a large concourse of people. Words of comfort and consolation were spoken from Job 14: 14.
C. Churchill.

Whitcher. Died in Bolton, P. Q., July 17th, of dropsy and consolidation of the lungs, Lydia Whitcher, wife of Batchelder C. Whitcher, and daughter of James and Betsey King, of Haverhill, N. H., in the seventy-fourth year of her age.

She leaves two sons and two widowed daughters with numerous other relatives to mourn, but we laid her away in hope of seeing her again where there will be no more dying. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. John Chapman, from Mark 12: 24, 25.
D. R.

Murray. Died at Ellington, Conn., Oct. 2nd, 1872, after a long illness, Mary E., wife of Wm. Murray, aged fifty years.

Sr. M. was wonderfully sustained until the last by the grace of God, and it can truthfully be said of her, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord," for she rests from her labors. The funeral was attended by the writer.
P. S. Butler.

Wheeler. Died in Concord, N. H., Oct. 10th, 1872, Frank Edson, son of John D. C. and Almira Wheeler, aged eleven months.

The grave has closed over a bright little jewel; but when Jesus comes he will live again.
C. W. Sargent.

Hatch. Died in Sharon, Mass., Sept. 24th, 1872, Daniel H. Hatch, aged seventy-two years.

Bro. Hatch has been looking for Jesus' coming since 1843, and sweetly fell asleep in him, to await the sound of the last trump. Words of comfort by Elder Bryant.
J. Brown.

Slager. Died in Wolfboro, N. H., July 3d, 1872, Bro. Jacob Slager, aged seventy-four years.

He embraced the Advent doctrine more than thirty years ago. He lived the life of a Christian, and died in hope of soon being raised to see Jesus and living with him forever.

GREAT BRITAIN.

THE CASE OF PRINCE NAPOLEON.

The announcement that Prince Napoleon had left Paris in obedience to an order of the government was premature. His notice to depart directed him to leave at noon yesterday, but not having complied therewith, at half-past twelve o'clock he was waited upon by the secretary of the prefect of police and two agents of the government, with orders for him to follow them towards Switzerland. The prince thereupon left the city. The Princess Clothilde voluntarily accompanied him.

FRANCE.

THE BONAPARTIST EXCITEMENT.

Oct. 11. Considerable excitement has been created in Paris over the announcement, telegrahed last night, that the government had received important information concerning the powerful Bonapartist movement now on foot looking towards the restoration of the empire. As announced in these despatches, Prince Napoleon, who was discovered to be in Paris working secretly in the interest of the new movement, was yesterday notified by the government to leave the country within twenty-four hours, on pain of arrest and imprisonment. The Prince, on receiving the notification, immediately replied by an indignant refusal. Upon deliberating on the subject, he ultimately consented to leave France. He left Paris this afternoon for Turin. It is believed that his expulsion will be followed by that of a number of well-known Bonapartists now in Paris plotting against the government. The Bonapartist intrigues have increased considerably during the past few months, more especially in the northern and western provinces.

POSTAL TREATY WITH THE UNITED STATES.

Minister Washburn and the Count de Remusat have agreed on the draft of a postal treaty, which the Post Office authorities of both countries accept. It is believed that the Minister of Finance will approve of the treaty, and it is highly probable that it will receive the regular ratification before the end of the year. It fixes letter postage at eight cents for one-third of an ounce, and newspaper postage, which was eight, is reduced to three cents. Registered letters and the transmission of patterns are also provided for.

SPAIN.

REVOLT OF THE GARRISON AT FERROL.

Madrid, Oct. 12. A Republican insurrection has broken out among the troops garrisoning the arsenal in Ferrol, in the province of Corunna. The Government has dispatched troops to the towns, and summary measures will be at once adopted to suppress the revolt.

Oct. 13th. A Madrid despatch states that information received by the government to-day states that the disturbance at Ferroll is subsiding, several hundred insurgents having already submitted to the government authorities. It is thought that by to-morrow everything will be quiet. The ringleaders of the revolt will be summarily dealt with by the government authorities. It is stated, however, that many have fled. The insurrection is thought to be in the interest of Don Carlos, whose desire it is to annoy the government and keep the people in a ferment of excitement.

THE PERSIAN FAMINE.

Constantinople, Oct. 10. It is estimated that 3,000,000 of the inhabitants have died from famine in Persia.

BRIGHAM YOUNG TAKES A NEW DEPARTURE.

Salt Lake, Oct. 8. Elder Richards, in the Mormon Conference to-day, cautioned the people against the wiles of the enemy, especially against schools. Brigham Young followed, saying he differed with the speaker. He added: "Send your children to schools when free. I thank the Methodists, Episcopalians and all sects for establishing schools, and heaven will reward them." This is a new departure for the Mormon leader.

Earthquake at the West.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 10. At 9.50 yesterday this city and vicinity was visited by quite a severe shock of earthquake. The people rushed out of their houses and considerable excitement prevailed for a brief period. The shock only lasted a minute and a half, but during that time crockery and bottles were thrown down and buildings were pretty well shaken up. No serious damage was done to property.

It is reported that at Fort Randall, Dakota, it was more severe, and there was great excitement.

At Yankton the shock, although faint, was distinctly felt, but no damage was done.

Reports from other portions of Dakota show that the shock was felt more or less at the principal points.

Interesting Discoveries.—The Moabite expedition, according to a report recently read before the British Association, has discovered on the borders of the desert east-southeast from Heshbon, the ruins of a magnificent palace in an excellent state of preservation. A quadrangular wall of freestone, five hundred and ten feet on each side, encloses a brick palace. On either side of the only entrance is an architectural front of carved work one hundred and eighty feet long, and seventeen feet high. This ornamental front displays animals, birds, flowers and men, chiseled with great delicacy, and eight chambers with vaulted roofs remain. The basin of the Dead Sea was also explored, and it was discovered that while the western side is a desert of marl, destitute of vegetation, the eastern side is well supplied with water, and is covered with small plants and trees. Palm trees grow luxuriantly towards the northern extremity of the Dead Sea.

Sarah Payson Willis, wife of James Parton, otherwise known as "Fanny Fern," died Oct. 11th, aged sixty-one years, after being in feeble health for a long time.

In Brief.

—— A dozen miles from Aleppo there is a natural curiosity, called by the people, the Sunken Village. It is a pit one hundred and fifty or two hundred feet deep, and three times that in diameter. It is very nearly round, and the sides are perpendicular. It is a common idea that there was once a village on this spot, and at some time the ground opened and swallowed up the village, leaving this curious pit.——The licensed gaming-houses in the German watering-places are all to be closed, forever, on the last day of 1872.——A company is putting a tunnel under the Detroit river, from Detroit to Windsor, Ontario. This is for the accommodation of the railroads, and will have a great advantage over the present method of carrying the cars across the river on a ferry-boat. A shaft has been sunk one hundred and ten feet deep, on the Michigan side, near the Milwaukee depot, and at an opposite point on the Canada shore.——Thousands of exiles from Alsace and Lorraine have arrived at Belfast on their way to America.——The progress of the Hoosac tunnel during September was as follows: East end, 112 feet; west end, 85 feet; central shaft, 105; total, 310 feet.——The Emperor Napoleon and Empress Eugenie have left Cowes, where they have been staying, for Camden House, Chiselhurst. Both the Emperor and Empress are in enjoyment of excellent health.——News from the Hague states that more and more Jesuits, expelled from Germany, are establishing themselves near the German frontiers.——The sale of French newspapers is forbidden in Alsace and Lorraine.——William Henry Seward, long eminent as a political leader, died Oct. 10th, at the age of seventy-one.——Garibaldi speaks very harshly of Thiers in a recent letter. He accuses him of ruining France by exorbitant armaments, calls him the scourge of humanity, and reproaches him for having fought the Commune.——It is rumored that Thiers has requested Victor Emanuel to recall Chevalier Nigra, Italian Minister to France, because he is a Bonapartist.——Prince Napoleon has yielded to the peremptory order of the Government, and left Paris.——Additional military and constabulary forces have been ordered to Lisburn, Ireland, as an anti-Catholic disturbance is threatened in that town.——Mr. M. D. Conway, in one of his letters from London to the Cincinnati Commercial, makes the statement that the Emperor Napoleon during several months has been engaged in unsuccessful secret negotiations with the exiled French Communists in England and Belgium for the purpose of supplanting Dr. Karl Marx as the leader of the Internationalists.——Where women stand in the temperance movement is shown by a recent vote taken among them in Danbury, Conn., on the question of licensing the sale of liquors, which stood 457 to 2 for prohibition.——Schisms are multiplying in the once united Roman Catholic church. The patriarch of Babylon has published a protest against Papal infallibility, and his suffragans are following his example. The Catholic Maronites of Syria are also separating themselves from the church of Rome.——More trouble appears to be brewing in France. President Thiers, at a meeting of the Permanent Commission of the Assembly, expressed indignation at the treatment received by the pilgrims who flock to Lourdes to witness the miracle of the Virgin, and condemned the course pursued by Gambetta, who, he said, was trying to divide the nation.——A worthy New York lady has just retired, on account of age, from Sunday school work, in which she has been actively engaged for fifty years. She has had under her charge over five hundred children, a large proportion of whom are now members of the church. While such women exist, there is no need of discussion as to "woman's work in the church." It speaks for itself.——Information received by telegraph from Warsaw, the capital of Poland, states that cholera is raging in various parts of the country to an alarming extent. In the town of Grajiw, its ravages have been terrible and the place is almost entirely depopulated. Thousands throughout the province have fallen a prey to the disease, which has appeared in its most malignant and fatal form.

National Thanksgiving, Nov. 28.

President Grant's Proclamation.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11th, 1872.

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, The revolution of another year has again brought the time when it is usual to look back upon the past and publicly thank the Almighty for his mercies and his blessings; and,

Whereas, If any one people has more occasion than another for such thankfulness it is the citizens of the United States, whose Government is their creature, subject to their behests; who have reserved to themselves ample civil and religious freedom and equality before the law; who, during the last twelve months, have enjoyed exemption from any grievous or general calamity, and to whom prosperity in agriculture, manufacture and commerce has been vouched;

Therefore, by these considerations, I recommend that on Thursday, the 28th day of November next, the people meet in their respective places of worship and there make their acknowledgments to God for his kindness and bounty.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 11th day of October, in the year of Our Lord 1872, and of the Independence of the United States the 97th.

(Signed) U. S. Grant.

By the President,
Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State.

Notices.

To Western Friends.—We, the undersigned, deeming it important that the Western Association be placed upon a satisfactory basis, and its work properly done, do importune our brethren to rally to the appointed meeting at Norwood Park, Oct. 16th, 1872, to see what can be done to effect the desired object. D. Mathewson, Wm. Sheldon, Wm. McCullock, Dan'l. S. Clark, O. S. Knapp, Frank Burr, H. G. McCullock.

It is a great satisfaction to me to know that our Western brethren are awaking to the fact that our Western Association has not been sustained as it should have been, and has, therefore, been crippled in its work. I now anticipate better days for our cause. Let every member of the Association, and all interested in its prosperity, heed the call signed by Elds. Mathewson, Sheldon, and others, and we shall see better days, and more glorious results of our work.

I was appointed by the Lawrence Time Conference to bring before the brethren scattered abroad in the New England States, and elsewhere, the importance of another Time Conference, to be held in some convenient locality, for the purpose of still further discussing this most important subject, viz., the definite time for the coming of our Lord from heaven, and to learn or obtain the mind of any church in a convenient locality, if such a convention is desired, or would be regarded as profitable among them. Let any church that desires such a meeting, and could accommodate the brethren that would attend, send notice to the writer of the fact, and as to when it would be convenient for them that such a meeting should be held. FEAR NOT.

Is darkness round about thy way,
Can faith discern no promised ray
To mark thy pathway with its light?
Fear not—for God will lead thee right.

Does bitter sorrow rend thy heart,
And tears of anguish often start?
Fear not—but trust thy gracious God;
His gentle hand controls the rod.

Are plans for future good made void?
Thy fondest earthly hopes destroyed?
Fear not—for all things work for good
To souls once washed in Jesus' blood.

Amid the throng, art thou alone—
No friend thy heart can call its own?
Fear not—if Christ is ever near,
His loving smile thy soul will cheer.

Do fierce temptations thee assail,
And conflicts cause thy heart to fail?
Fear not, for God will give thee strength,
And conquer all thy foes at length.

Do toils seem more than flesh can bear—
Thy spirits faint from ceaseless care?
Fear not—nor be at all dismayed,
For God's right hand will give thee aid.

Dost thou recoil from death's cold strife?
Fear not—Christ died to give thee life;
The holy Comforter will bless,
And Jesus be thy righteousness.

In all the wants and woes of life,
In all its pleasures and its strife,
Fear not—but trust the mighty One
In three—the Father, Spirit, Son.

FLESH AND BLOOD.

S. WHITNEY.

In Paul's writings to the Corinthians, 15: 50, he says, "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." There are various opinions in regard to the meaning of this passage of Scripture. Some claim that flesh will inherit the kingdom without the blood. Others try to prove that neither will have a place or be admitted into God's kingdom. But Paul says flesh and blood shall not inherit the kingdom. He does not say they shall have no place there. Did Paul mean what he said, or only a part? I am willing to leave it just as Paul has written it, for I believe he knew what he was talking about and meant just what he said. Let us see what the Scriptures say in regard to the matter. Turn with me to Gen. 1: 26—"And God said, Let us make man in our own image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Now what is it to have dominion? Webster says it is power to control, use, and dispose of, at pleasure, right of possession, territory, under a government, region, country, district, governed. Man then had a legal claim, a right of possession; the territory, or the kingdom, as it may properly be called, was his; he owned it; it was his to govern and dispose of. And had it not been for a speculation that he entered into with the devil, whereby he lost his claim, possession and kingdom, his posterity, or flesh and blood, would have inherited or heired it, as we heir our father's property. But as it is, God has devised means whereby that which cannot be inherited by flesh and blood can be obtained. He has appointed his Son Jesus Christ heir of all things. Heb. 1: 2.

The lost inheritance is promised to Abraham and his seed. "He said not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ." "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. 3: 16, 29.

We want to become adopted into the family of God, become God's children, God's sons and daughters, by faith in Christ Jesus, having "the Spirit itself bearing witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." Rom. 8: 16, 17.

Now if Christ's claim of being made an heir is good for anything, ours is just as good; not of being heirs by flesh and blood but by being made heirs by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. But will flesh and blood have a place in the kingdom of God, or be admitted? Let the Scriptures speak for themselves. 1 Cor. 15: 22, 23—"For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits, afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." Christ, then, has become the first fruits of the resurrection, a sample of the harvest; then of course if we are his in the great harvest day, we must be like the sample, just like Christ,—have a body like his glorious body. I hear one say, If Christ is a sample he had no blood, for he spilled every drop while hanging on the cross. Let us see. John 19: 33, 34—"But when they came to Jesus and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs; but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water"; showing that although he was dead, still there remained a small portion of blood within his veins.

But what says David, speaking of Christ? Ps. 16: 10—"For thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One to see corruption." But did the Holy One see corruption? I hear some one say, His body did not. But is not the blood just as much a part of the Holy One as the body (admitting that it is then the Holy One did see corruption), if the blood that trickled down to the ground from the cross was allowed to turn to dust again? But can any one say that Christ did not take that blood again to himself? In Gen. 2: 7, speaking of the formation of man—"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground [the whole material man, blood, flesh, sinews, bones, etc.], and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul"; the same man that existed as a dead soul previous to receiving the breath of life. And the same man that was formed out of the dust of the ground shall return to dust again. Gen. 3: 19—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

But God, seeing man's lost condition, has promised a resurrection from the dead, which must come through the Lord Jesus Christ. He has not promised to make a new man from new particles of matter, for that would not be a resurrection; neither can it be found where he has promised to raise only a part of the dust which once constituted the man; but it is the whole organized being as it existed as a dead soul, previous to receiving the breath of life, the corruptible part; the same that Paul speaks of in 1 Cor. 15: 53—"For this corruptible [notice, it is the corruptible part, not a part of it] must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Let us now turn to Isa. 26: 21—"For behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood [margin, bloods, including the whole human family], and shall no more cover her slain." Also Joel 3: 21—"For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed, for the Lord dwelleth in Zion," speaking here of his people Israel.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

WM. C. STEWART.

"War a good warfare."—1 TIM. 1: 18.

Of all the evils of mankind, war is the most disastrous and horrifying. Who can describe the wretchedness and wailings war has produced on the earth? The earth has been made to groan to its centre under the tramp of conflicting armies, and its surface has been crimsoned with the blood of the dying warrior.

War entered the world through the passage opened by sin, and from that time until the present it has run parallel with all ages. It is, however, doomed to have a sure and everlasting close. Hence the prophet speaks of a time when men shall learn war no more. And every child that loves peace will pray, Lord, hasten the glad day. Revelation directs our attention to a warfare carried on by Satan and his hosts against God. Rev. 12: 7. Now this he still wages against God and his people on the earth. This warfare shall also come to an end. Rev. 22: 10.

Now in this conflict all human beings are concerned. All unrenewed persons who are yet in their sins are allied with the powers of Satan, and are fighting against God and his Son Jesus Christ. While on the other hand, those who have been renewed in their minds by the spirit and power of God are allied to him to resist these spiritual foes, and engaged under Jesus to contend against the powers of Satan, and war a good warfare. Now the enemies against whom the christian has to contend are threefold. First, Satan and the powers of darkness, called the "Adversary," or "Destroyer." He is compared to a roaring lion. Now this enemy we have to contend with every day. His evil influence is felt on every hand. He is powerful, and ever active, and holds countless myriads under his power. Hence, we read of "wiles of the devil," Eph. 6: 11; of the "fiery darts of the wicked" one, Eph. 6: 16; and of the "snares of the devil," 1 Tim. 5: 7. But we are sure to conquer him; for if God is for us he is more than all that can be against us. So let us war a good warfare.

The second enemy we have to contend with is the world, with its numerous evils. Now at present it is Satan's seat and empire. It is full of snares and temptations which beset us on every side. First, worldly pleasures. Second, the riches of the world. Third, the allurements of this sin-cursed earth; all of which must be overcome, if we would war a good warfare.

Third, the heart is an enemy, naturally, against God, and indisposed to all good. "In me, that is, in my flesh, dwelleth no good thing." "Out of the heart of men proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." Mark 7: 21, 22. Now this heart must be subjected to divine grace, mortified, made progressively wiser and holier. Christian soldiers, fighting for a kingdom, we must be sanctified wholly to the Lord, that we may have the indwelling influence of his Holy Spirit to lead us on to victory and eternal life. Comrades, in arms against the enemies of the cross of Christ, we are not soldiers in the camp at ease, or in the city in peace; but in the field. When we were converted the warfare commenced; and it will only end in death or the judgment.

It is a daily warfare, a constant conflict and incessant struggle, and we shall need to pray much for strength to enable us to stand fast and persevere. It is a fight of faith, and not of sight. We must be found near the Savior, leaning on his strong arm, and all will be well.

Kennebunkport, Me.

LIBERTY.

A. P. MOORE.

Some people have a strange idea of christian liberty, and have much to say about sectarianism, and putting up bars, if they cannot force some point of doctrine upon others, right or wrong. Christians are "free men in Christ Jesus," and narrow, sectarian walls cannot hold them; but their freedom or liberty is only to do right.

We have no liberty to do wrong. To illustrate. A person embraces a doctrine he thinks is true, and others look at it carefully, and compare it with the Bible, and are satisfied it is an error. He comes into the meeting and wants to force his hobby upon the brethren, and if he is not allowed to take up the time and monopolize the meeting, he raises the cry of "persecution," and cries out "bigotry" and "sectarianism." The gospel gives no man the liberty to ride over the rights of others.

Another has embraced a new hobby, and writes a book; gets it published, and scatters it broadcast as new light. Brethren examine it, and see it to be a dangerous error. He goes to campmeeting with his books, and wants to scatter them. The committee feel it to be duty before God to say no. Has he a right to set up the cry of persecution, and bigotry, and sectarianism; to stir up sympathy, and draw men around him and thus make division?

"But they might have let him sell his books, then," you say. He had no right or liberty to insist upon it. He was trampling upon the rights and liberties of the meeting.

This is just the way some men perform to get sympathy, and divide the flock, and should have a mark put upon them. I am glad some dare and feel called upon to speak out on these things.

But one man says—"The books (or tracts) are my property. Have I not a right to do what I please with my own?" Yes, provided in doing so you do not trample upon the rights of others. A man goes into his house with his boots all mud, and he goes to the stove, newly polished, and scrapes the mud off on the stove. If spoken to, he replies, "Is it not my own house, and my own stove; and have I not a right to do what I please with my own?" So he goes around leaving the cistern open to endanger the lives of the children, leaving the door-yard gate open to let the cattle and hogs into the flower-garden, saying, "Have I not a right to do as I please with my own?" No man has any liberty or right to do wrong and trample upon the rights of his wife.

No more has any man the liberty to go into our large gatherings and try to force his hobby upon those he knows are opposed to it. It is their meeting, and their rights are to be respected.

Here is a man who owns a vacant lot in a city. He has a horse die, and he draws it upon his vacant lot and there leaves it to decay, and thus endangers the lives of hundreds. Was it not his horse? Was it not his lot? Did he not have a right to do what he pleased with his own? No. He has no right to endanger the lives of others living in the neighborhood, or to trample their rights under his feet.

But, one says, on that principle there never would have been a martyr. Not too fast. Men have a right to think, preach, and write, and are responsible to God; but in doing so they have not the liberty or right to override and trample upon the rights of others.

The best regulator I know of is the Spirit of Christ, and "if any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his." There is the spirit of error as well as the spirit of truth, and it is easy to detect the difference, if we have the Spirit of the Master.

FAITH AND WORKS.

GEO. E. STREETER.

"What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? Can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled: notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body, what doth it profit? Even so faith if it hath not works, is dead being alone" (by itself.)

We see by the above quotations that faith and works must correspond. Faith must have legs to carry it. Let us show by our works that we believe God. The following lines are right to the point:—

CHILDISH WISDOM.

'Twas the hour of prayer, and the farmer stood,
With a thankful heart and a lowly mind,
And prayed to the Author of every good,
That the Father of all would be very kind,
And bless his creatures with raiment and food;
That the blessings each day might be renewed,
That every man might find relief,
And plenty for hunger, joy for grief,
Be measured by the merciful One
To all who suffer beneath the sun.

The prayer concluded, the godly man
Went forth in peace to inspect his farm;
And by his side delighted ran,
Glowing with every healthful charm,
His little son, a sprightly boy,
Whose home was love, and whose life was joy;
And the father said—"The harvest yields
A plentiful crop, my son, this year;
My barns are too small for my grain, I fear."

And they wandered on through row upon row
Of plumy sheaves; and at length the child,
With earnest look and a rosy glow
On his shining cheek, looked up and smiled
And said—"My father, do you not pray
For the poor and needy, day by day—
That God the good would the hungry feed?"
"I do, my son." "Well, I think as you plead"—
His eye waxed bright, for his soul shone through it—
"That God, if he had your wheat, would do it."

REPORT OF THE R. I. AND EAST. CONN. CONFERENCE.

Escoheag, R. I., July 3d, 1872. After the opening exercises, Bro. A. Durfee, Chairman, called to order for business. Minutes of last meeting being read and approved, the Treasurer's report was made and accepted.

Sunday school and preaching nearly every Sunday.

Preachers' reports were interesting, full of encouragement. It was voted some time ago to not give a report in the Crisis, and by so doing to burden the paper, although it might be very interesting to some readers.

Voted, that Charles W. Rathbun be a member of this conference. Voted, to give Bro. C. W. Rathbun a certificate of recommendation to preach in the name of the Lord.

Voted, to amend the Constitution so as to require but two sessions a year. Time, first Wednesday in November, and first Wednesday in May. Voted, that the May session be the annual meeting. Voted, that the report of the committee on "a preacher's conference" be received, and committee discharged.

Voted, that Bro. C. H. Sweet be dismissed from this conference, with a letter of recommendation, and held a member of this conference until he become a member of Maine conference.

Resolved, that those women who preach with us in the gospel, be invited to become members of this conference, be ordained, and have a right to act on all business and questions coming before this conference.

Voted, that Sr. E. Crumb be a member of this conference. Voted, that Sr. A. Smith be a member of this conference. Voted, that Sr. H. B. Hastings be a member of this conference.

By a request of the Escoheag church, Voted, that Sr. E. Crumb be ordained to the gospel ministry. The ordination was performed July 5th, 1872. Ordination prayer by Bro. E. Wood. Charge given by Bro. E. Bellows. Right hand of fellowship by Bro. E. Wood.

Although it was extremely warm, this conference was well attended. The time that was not occupied by business was employed in preaching and social meetings. The Fourth of July was entirely devoted to religious exercises. At the close of the meetings a vote of thanks was given to Bro. J. P. Hazard for his generous hospitality.

Adjourned to meet at Coventry Centre, R. I., the first Wednesday in Nov., 1872.

MARRIAGE MAXIMS.

The very nearest approach to domestic felicity on earth is in the mutual cultivation of an absolute unselfishness.

Never talk at one another either alone or in company.

Never both manifest anger at one time.

Never speak loud to one another unless the house is on fire.

Never reflect on a past action, which was done with a good motive and the best judgment at the time.

Let each strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.

Let self abnegation be the daily aim and effort of each.

Never find fault, unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed, and always speak lovingly.

Never taunt with a past mistake. Let bygones be by-gones.

Never allow a request to be repeated.

Never make a remark at the expense of the other.

Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence.

Never meet without a loving welcome.

Never let the sun go down upon any anger or grievance.

Never consider any fault you have committed settled, until you have frankly confessed it and asked forgiveness.

Never forget the happy hours of early love.

Never sigh over what might have been, but try to make the best of what is.

Never forget that marriage is ordained of God, and that his blessing alone can make it what it should be.

Never be contented till you know you are both walking in the narrow way.

Never let your hopes rest upon any thing this side of the eternal home.—Selected.

LOVE IN THE FAMILY;

Winning the Hearts of Little Folks to Jesus.

"Love is the little golden clasp
That bindeth up the trust;
Oh, break it not, lest all the leaves
Shall scatter and be lost."

The heart of a child is easily won. Love begets love. Love children, and they will love you. Let children feel that you care for them, that you are interested in all that interests them, that you sympathize with them in all their little sorrows, rejoice with them in all their little joys, that you are their friend and you have the key to their hearts. Teachers, do you wish to be loved by your pupils? Love them. Children read hearts intuitively.

We have not half confidence enough in the power of love to disarm the violent and to reclaim the vicious. The fault begins in our families. Parents lose the confidence of their children, never to be regained, by injustice, selfishness, and the absence of love. Love is the grand secret in domestic education. Give your children a genial, loving atmosphere in which to grow. Love precludes not decision or correction, but is prompt in the execution of both.

Deal with your children as God deals with his. Do not meet their anger with your anger, their petulance with your own, or their obstinacy with wilfulness still greater. Overcome evil with good. When God called himself a father, he chose a name which he designed to be significant of overflowing love, tender mercy, and long-continued forbearance. "Parents, provoke not your children to wrath."

What will not love do? Who can describe its powerful, subduing influences? Who ever accomplished anything by reproaches, or violence, or harsh measures? You gratify a private and dark passion in your own heart, and arouse a darker one in another bosom. Oh, try the mighty efficacy of love. One smile of genuine sympathy is worth all your purse to the beggar. "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God." 1 John 3: 7.

Parents, commend your little ones whenever they do right, perform that which is good and praiseworthy. Whenever they are quick to obey cheerfully, express your grateful approbation; tell them how well you are pleased, how exceedingly gratified you are at any improvement in well-doing.

Let a mother approve of her child's conduct whenever she can. Let her show that his good behavior makes her sincerely happy. Let her reward him for his efforts to please, by smiles and affection. In this way she will cherish in her child's heart some of the noblest and most desirable feelings of our nature. She will cultivate in him a lovely and amiable disposition and a cheerful spirit. Your child has been very pleasing and obedient through the day. Just before putting him to sleep for the night, you take his hand and say:

"My son, you have been very good to-day. It makes me very happy to see you so kind and obedient. God loves children who are dutiful to their parents, and he promises to make them happy."

This approbation from his mother is to him a great reward. And when, with a more than ordinarily affectionate tone, you say, "Good-night, my dear son," he leaves the room with his little eyes full of feeling. And when he closes his eyes for sleep he is happy, and resolves that he will always try to do his duty.

"Good-night is but a little word,
Yet beautiful though brief,
And falls upon the gentle heart
Like dew upon the leaf."

— Do not keep in a fret about things that may be annoying, or worry about things you cannot help. Troubles are not lightened by fretting. The true remedy is to keep cool and try to master the difficulties, and not let them master you.

— Charity should begin at home, but not end there.

— A person once said to his minister that it was impossible for a man to carry on business in this imperfect world, and be honest and get a living. "Die, then," was the emphatic reply.

— Self-sacrifice is but the saint's first step on the ladder to heaven. The higher he goes, the less he knows of it; for his will conforms to his Lord's, and it becomes no sacrifice to do whatever his King requires.

— The means by which temptation may be resisted and overcome, are the word of God and prayer.

— It is not enough that we swallow truth; we must feed upon it, as insects do on the leaf, till the whole heart be colored by its qualities, and shows its food in every fibre.

— Diligence in business must not destroy fervency of spirit, or prevent activity in the service of God.

— The strongest temptations are no warrant for the commission of sin.

— Doctrines are of use only as they are practiced. Men may go to perdition with their heads full of truth. To hold the truth and fight for it is one thing. To be sanctified through it is another.

— The great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps, with perfect sweetness, the independence of his soul.

— Many lose the opportunity of saying a kind thing by waiting to weigh the matter too long. Our best impulses are too delicate to endure much handling. Speak promptly when you feel kindly.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?

"Go to work to-day in my vineyard," is God's command, addressed to every son or daughter of his in the world. It is what he says to you, dear reader, this day. You may not think of this. You may look upon it as addressed to others, not to you. But it is addressed to you, and you must decide whether you will do it or not. What have you been doing these many years past in the Lord's vineyard? What are you now doing? What do you intend doing? Are you working, or loitering? If working, is it in God's vineyard or your own? Are you cultivating the tender grapes of righteousness, or the sour grapes of sin? Are you chasing and capturing and destroying the little foxes that are spoiling the vines, building up walls, or gathering out the stones? "Son, go work to-day in my vineyard."

It is not merely go into my vineyard to sit, or stand, or lie down, in the shadow of the vines, nor eat the choice grapes. This is all many are willing to do. But it is workers that are needed, men and women who are not afraid of soiling their hands, spoiling their complexion, or straining their muscles. It is to-day they are wanted. There is pressing and immediate need. The vines are suffering, the grapes are going to loss. It is to-day you are wanted. There is nothing said about to-morrow. This night you may be called to your reward. This may be your last day of work. You may die, and there is no work in the grave. Then go now, work in God's vineyard.—Ex.

SOME two years ago, two gentlemen were riding together, and, as they were about to separate, one addressed the other thus—

"Do you ever read your Bible?"

"Yes, but I get no benefit from it, because, to tell the truth, I feel I do not love God."

This answer produced such an effect upon his friend, that, to use his own words, it was as if one had lifted him off the saddle into the skies, so great was the truth it opened up to his soul.

AUNT JANE'S PARTY.

Almost every man, woman, and child in the town of W—— knew the Aunt Jane whose party I am to tell you about. She was aunt to a dozen or more boys and girls in particular, and to all the rest in general. Her whole name was Jane Elizabeth Tompkins.

Aunt Jane bestowed a great deal of care and thought on her relatives, and all the time they did not claim was devoted to the wants of others; and it was a great wonder to all that she accomplished so much. She kept house by herself in a quiet way, yet not exactly alone; for children and poor persons not happy at home sought her dwelling, where they were sure to receive sympathy in all their troubles, or, if in need of food or clothing, were kindly provided for. She helped many persons who believed they were suffering in consequence of others' faults to recognize that much of the blame was at their own door, and she helped them to see that patience was the thing they most needed; and to others she made it appear that their own selfishness had caused all the trouble.

She taught them to rely upon that divine help, without which our own efforts are fruitless; to overcome and conquer those grievous faults which so much mar our pleasures here.

Well, I had almost forgotten that I was going to tell you about her party.

She was always doing "something queer," as the people called it; but, for all that, everybody loved her, and approved of every thing she did when they fairly understood it.

The party was to be on Wednesday afternoon, and the invitation was given the Saturday before.

Some children who had no brothers or sisters felt quite slighted because they were not invited; for she invited them all by pairs,—only two from any one family, if there were a dozen children.

The children's parents thought it a strange thing to do, but said there was probably a moral in it, as we say of a story.

The long expected day arrived. It was thought quite a large party for that place, there being about twenty boys and girls present.

They played games; looked at books and pictures, and toys, of which Aunt Jane seemed to have an inexhaustible supply; but every child felt that the good lady had "her eye upon them," as they called it.

After being bountifully supplied with refreshments, which she knew so well how to provide for little folks, they were called to look at a large box of pictures, something on the plan of a stereoscope, which could be seen by only one child at a time, and that while standing in a chair. The first boy who looked at it rushed eagerly towards the chair, fearing some one would be there before him; and the rough push he gave his sister hurt her considerably; she, provoked by it, pulled his hair, and called him "a great ugly thing."

It was some minutes before quiet was restored.

Finally, all had seen it except a brother and sister named Charles and Mary Ellis, who were ten and eight years old; yet not one of them all had asked another to look first; but they had pushed and pulled each other in any thing but a loving manner, and two little girls had their dresses quite badly torn.

Charlie and his sister had waited patiently until the last; and, seeing that they had indeed a right to see what the others had seen, Charlie placed a chair in the best light, and said,—

"Now, Nellie, it is your turn. I know you will like it; for they say it is full of pictures."

"Oh, no!" she said. "You look at it first; I am in no hurry."

Some one by their side said, "You can take it home, and look at it as long as you like."

Looking up, they saw Aunt Jane, who said,—

"I had intended to give a present to every brother and sister who did not get provoked with another; but I have watched you all since I entered the room, and have noticed that Charles and Mary Ellis are the only children who have not shown signs of anger and selfishness. This present is a reward for brotherly kindness and affection. Do you think I have given it to the two who are most deserving?"

"Yes, yes!" they all exclaimed; and we hope they resolved to treat each other more kindly in future.

Their kind hostess helped them to put on their things; and, as she affectionately kissed them "good-by," she gave each one a card, on which was printed in beautiful colors these words: "LOVE ONE ANOTHER.—Well-Spring.

"IT IS TOO LATE, NOW, PA."

During a series of religious meetings held in a school-house of a small village, a very little girl became much interested for the salvation of her soul. Her father, a hater of holiness, who lived next door to the place of meeting, and who had at one time solicited the prayers of christians for himself, strictly forbade her again entering the "house of prayer."

The poor little girl was much oppressed, and knew not what to do, but obeyed her father until the next meeting was nearly half through, then, slipping out without his knowledge, and getting through a hole in the back-yard fence, she hastily ran to the meeting. It was some time before her father missed her; but when he found her gone, he went immediately to the meeting, where she was on her knees with others for whom the people of God were praying. So enraged was he, that he went directly forward, and took her in his arms to carry her from the place. As he raised her from her knees, she looked up with a heavenly smile and said—

"It is too late now, pa; I have given my heart to the Savior."

This was too much for the hardened sinner. He, too, sank on his knees, while God's children united in prayer; and very soon he found that Savior whom he had in vain attempted to shut out from his own and his daughter's heart.

— Nothing is so hard but search will find it.

— To know how to wait is the great secret of success.

— A lie has no legs and cannot stand; but it has wings and can fly far and wide.

A LIE STICKS.

A little newsboy, to sell his paper, told a lie. The matter came up in Sunday-school. "Would you tell a lie for three cents?" asked a teacher of one of her boys.

"No, ma'am," answered Dick, very decidedly.

"For ten cents?"

"No, ma'am."

"For a dollar?"

"No, ma'am."

"For a thousand dollars?"

Dick was staggered. A thousand dollars looked big. Oh! would it not buy lots of things? While he was thinking, another boy roared out, "No, ma'am," behind him.

"Why not?" asked the teacher.

"Because when the thousand dollars are all gone, and all things they've got with them are all gone, too, the lie is there all the same," answered the boy.

It is so. A lie sticks. Everything else may be gone, but that is left, and you will have to carry it around with you, whether you will or not; a hard, heavy load it is.

WHAT does happy mean? A little girl lately said it is "to feel as if you wanted to give all your things to your little sister." You smile, but I scarcely see why you should. This little girl felt that to be happy she must be unselfish. She was right, and you know it. Did you ever feel happy when you had selfish feelings active in your breast? I guess not.

THE LORD IS KINDLY WATCHING.

The Lord is kindly watching
Above my path to-day,
To guide when I am tempted
From rectitude to stray.

He knows what strong temptations
Each step I take beset,
And shows me in his kindness
How each one may be met.

If words unkind are spoken,
He gives me grace to bear,
And for the erring brother
Lift up sincerest prayer.

As God is kindly watching,
So watchful may I be,
That he no word or action
Unkind or sinful see.

SANITARY NOTES.

ADVICE TO OLD PEOPLE.

The lives of old people are often very valuable, and often worth preserving. There are sometimes cases of extreme old age with utter imbecility, where the perpetuation of life seems worth but little. But among the aged, we have often friends, the most highly prized for their knowledge and experience, their gravity and gentleness, their wisdom and affection, their cheerful society and venerable aspect. They have neither outlived their usefulness nor their agreeableness. How nobly the assemblies of the righteous are sometimes crowned and adorned with the tranquil and benign dignities of age! We beg, therefore, to submit a few hints in regard to certain dangers which constantly beset the old, and threaten to terminate their existence, or to render the remainder of their days irksome and painful.

First of all, is the danger of personal injury, and especially of fractured bones. The aged become more and more liable to this, especially if averse to inaction. The dread of sedentary life may arise both from habits of previous activity, and from a desire to promote health by exercise. So then, old people, be careful how you step, especially in the winter when the walks are slippery. Always have a care; you cannot be too cautious. If necessary, have the soles of your shoes a little roughened with nail heads. Carry a trusty cane or two. Look sharp how or where you place your feet, and be all the more careful, since objects are less clearly seen, and distances less quickly and surely reckoned, than in former years. It is especially true with you, that haste makes waste. Having done your share of work in your younger days, and sometimes walking fast and far, slack your speed, and be careful now. Old folks need seldom be in a hurry, we conclude.

Broken bones are very slowly if ever united in the case of old people. This is a fact sufficient to beget circumspection. The gelatin is partly absorbed, and is less in proportion to the lime, in the composition of the bones, and there is accordingly greater brittleness. There are these two things then; 1. the bones are more readily fractured; and 2, they are less readily re-united. In fact, sometimes a very slight injury will break a bone, such as a sudden jerk, or a fall on the floor. How many persons have dragged out a helpless and wretched existence on account of fractures that would not unite. Especially unfortunate and frequent are fractures of the femur or thigh bone, at the neck, near the joint, or even within the capsular ligament. Such cases are almost invariably hopeless of remedy or relief. We have known instances of individuals who had attained a good old age, and still had vitality enough apparently for ten or twenty years more of pretty robust life, years that should be comfortable and enjoyable, and who by one mis-step were suddenly rendered helpless, or nearly so.

One very hearty and cheerful old man of my acquaintance, who took long journeys on foot over a hilly road, and whose sleep was as tranquil and refreshing almost as in childhood, in climbing a fence, fell and fractured his thigh. He was obliged to creep half a mile or so to reach home. His great vitality gave him still some years of existence, but alas, how changed. Another,—an old lady was attempting to shut a large barn door, and a gust of wind threw her down, and she became a cripple. Another tripped in the carpet and fell, living but a short time afterwards. As a case of incaution that was peculiar, I might mention the fate of a man of about seventy, who was riding on a load of hay that rested on barrels arranged underneath, in the way of an extemporized rack. Suddenly the foundation swayed, and the man glided backwards to the ground, striking on the posterior part of the neck. The brittle ligaments snapped, and the spinal cord was probably ruptured, or strained. Death was instantaneous. Old men would rarely venture such a ride willingly, as they are indeed "afraid of that which is high," even though on a more secure support than a few standing barrels.

Feebleness, sometimes joined to corpulency and great weight, dimness of sight and hardness of hearing, all combine to enjoin the necessity of caution. Beware of icy streets, noisy crowds, rickety vehicles, vicious animals, passing railway trains. Beware of sudden or violent exertion. Age is the season for tranquility and repose. A sudden emotion of anger is dangerous, since the weakened blood-vessel is so easily ruptured in the brain, or the action of the heart may so surely be arrested by rupture or paralysis. There is not overmuch power either to resist the poison of malaria, or to overcome the sinister action of disease. If a limb has been shattered, it is a great question if there be vital force enough to endure the shock of an amputation. There is comparatively little endurance of cold.

A word upon the subject of diet and digestion. Of course the digestive power is lessened in old age, in common with other functions of the body. Intestinal action is weakened, always, as a rule. The teeth are generally poor (not always), and mastication is more difficult. The old should therefore eat, and will commonly prefer food that is not hard or tough. The habitual costiveness of old age may be relieved by a diet of coarse bread. And with the old, as indeed with those of all ages, it is indeed true that cheerfulness helps digestion. Away with every sort of dismal talk at the table. He who lugs in some disagreeable or exciting subject at meals, is a foe to the family welfare. O, the blessed influence of cheerfulness! Better, far better, is silence than agitation or contention, and better yet is social sympathy, freedom, and even a little innocent laughter, than melancholy, or grief, excitement, annoyance, or worry. If worry must come, bid worry begone at meals, and if possible for an hour afterwards.

A PLEA FOR YOUR CATTLE.

M. MUNGER.

Many who keep cattle and horses are not aware that the reason cattle and horses this time of year are so anxious to get to apples is, because they need them as medicine. The old theory is that apples hurt them. This is not correct, any more than that water will kill a sick patient in a fever when he wants it and pleads for it. In such a case nature calls for it and should have it. Doctors have learned this fact, and order it. Just so about giving cattle apples when they plead for them.

I saw last week three men who had cured two gargety cows by giving them apples, recommended by an old farmer. Another case of a two hundred dollar horse, turned out to die, or live, as he had been doctored and given over. This horse got to an apple tree and eat what he wanted, and began to gain. He was fed a peck a day, as long as he would eat them, and he got well in a week. Another was cured of worms with two meals of sour apples, when all other medicines failed. I saw three cows tied up in a barn mourning for something. I asked what they wanted. They said apples. As there was a pile in sight, I gave the three cows half a bushel, and they were soon peaceable, and went to eating hay.

An old farmer told me he had lately learned that his cattle would do much better to give them what apples they would eat in the fall, which is but a few daily, after they get one meal of them. Why they have hurt milk cows is, because they hankered so after them. If they get a chance they eat too many. Feed them out with discretion, and you will see the old superstitious notion of hurting them vanish, while your cattle would thank you, if they could speak. Try it. If you have none, your neighbors have plenty. Buy them. You can afford it as well as any thing else. I write this for the sake of the cattle, and hope it will be a blessing to them.

SOMETIMES children, who have gone to bed apparently well, wake up after a while in the greatest terror, making exclamations as if some fearful thing was impending; so alarmed sometimes that the parents are not recognized, and distressing shrieks alarm the whole house, sometimes subsiding in a few minutes into a sound sleep. This affection is almost always the result of costiveness, of not having gone to the privy for several days, or from derangement of the stomach in consequence of eating too heartily, or of a late supper. The best treatment is to soothe the child, take it into the lap and rock it awhile, or change the position of the body in the bed so as to start the circulation. Wipe the face and hands with a soft rag dipped in cold water, and let the child have its sleep out in the morning. These attacks may come on every night or two for weeks and months, but can be easily prevented by promptly using some of the means ordinarily employed to secure a daily action of the bowels; by eating thrice a day, nothing between meals, and only bread and butter, with weak tea for supper, and spending most of the day out of doors in active play and amusements.—Hall's Journal of Health.

HERE IS MY HEART.

Here is my heart—my God, I give it thee;
I heard thee call and say—
"Not to the world, my child, but unto me";
I heard, and will obey;
Here is love's offering to my King,
Which in glad sacrifice I bring—
Here is my heart.

Here is my heart—it trembles to draw near
The glory of thy throne;
Give it the shining robes thy servants wear
Of righteousness thine own;
Its pride and folly chase away,
And all its vanity, I pray—
My humble heart.

Here is my heart—teach it, O Lord, to cling
In gladness unto thee;
And in the day of sorrow still to sing,
"Welcome my God's decree;"
Believing all its journey through
That thou art wise, and just, and true—
My waiting heart.

Here is my heart—O Friend of friends, be near
To make each temper fly;
And when my latest foe I meet with fear,
Give me the victory.
Gladly on thy love reposing,
Let me say, when life is closing,
"Here is my heart!"

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

A Short Sermon on an Important Subject.

WM. SHEPHERD.

1. The fact of his coming.
2. The manner of his coming.
3. The object or design of his coming.
4. The time of his coming.
5. The necessity of his coming.
6. Those who shall abide the day of his coming.

1. There are two comings of Christ mentioned in Scripture. His coming to suffer, and his coming to reign. His coming in humiliation, and his coming in exaltation. His coming as the Lamb of God, and his coming as the Son of the tribe of Judah. His coming as an offering and sacrifice to open a way in the divine economy that a fallen and dying race might have life, and his coming to confer upon them all those inestimable benefits and blessings—the result of that offering. Consult Gen. 3:15; Num. 14:17; Isa. 9:6.

1. The fact of this coming is set forth in the most explicit terms in Scripture. He is presented there repeatedly as the one who will "surely" come, and as the one who will not "tarry" when the appointed time has arrived. Heb. 10:37; Rev. 22:20; Heb. 2:3. Almost all the inspired writers, especially those of the New Testament, call our attention to this important subject.

2. The manner of the coming of Christ is not less explicitly presented in Scripture than the fact of his final advent to earth. There can be no difficulty in determining the nature of this in the least, if we are willing to be be guided by God's word, which is "quick and powerful dividing, asunder," etc; i.e., separating the wheat from the chaff. We are well aware that popular theology teaches that Christ is to come as an nonentity, or, as they term it, spiritually, and never again in person; that he comes at death, in his providence, and, various ways; but this is absurd, inconsistent, and contrary to Scripture. However sincere and honest these "learned divines" may be who preach such notions, we should not entertain them for a moment. God speaks in symbols and in figures it is true sometimes, and in language occasionally "hard to be understood;" but when he says that he will send his Son from heaven—send Jesus; when he says that that "same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" (1 Thess. 1:10; Acts 3:20; 1:10, 11); we should think that this should be sufficient to end all controversy forever in regard to the manner of Christ's coming. We might enlarge here under every head, but we purpose to be very brief and to the point. Let it suffice here, then, that the manner of our blessed Lord's advent will be in person, clothed with power and great glory, accompanied to earth with myriads of holy angels. Dan. 7:10; Zech. 14:5; Math. 24:30, 31; Mark 13:26; Rev. 19:11-16.

3. The object or purpose of our Lord's coming. It is to accomplish that which the Father hath appointed him to do. It is to finish the work of human redemption in a more material point of view; i.e., the work that is now before him will be more of a physical and material character in which he will be engaged than when he first came. When our Lord exclaimed upon the cross—"It is finished," the work here accomplished was simply the work of offering, of suffering, of dying, to atone, to open up a way for a sinful and dying world, that they might have that condemnation removed and live. The work is to complete that redemption in the regeneration of the world which involves its general revolution, for in the coming of the just One there will be a terrible uprising of that rebellious portion of mankind, who will include the majority, who, incited by the sentiment, "We will not have this man to reign over us," will attempt to resist his authority and right to rule the world, whose efforts prove futile and utterly abortive, as seen in Ps. 2; Luke 19:27; Rev. 17:14. "God hath appointed a day wherein he will rule or govern the world in righteousness," etc. And "He must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet," etc. 1 Cor. 15:25. "And the Lord God will give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." In his coming then we find there will be a universal upheaving of thrones in rebellion against his righteous government. "And he will rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers." Rev. 2:27.

The design of his coming, then, is to abolish this present corrupt, degenerate and ungodly state of things, to reconstruct the world on the solid basis of truth and righteousness. He comes to raise his dead saints, to change his living ones, conferring upon them immortality and eternal life; transforming their vile bodies like unto his glorious body (1 Thess. 4:14-17; 1 Cor. 15:52-54; Phil. 3:20, 21), and crown his waiting church with ineffable gladness and unutterable splendors. Eph. 5:27. He comes to destroy the wicked, to root out of the world all their works, to bind "the strong man armed," or the devil, who has usurped the rule of the world so long; but now he ceases to deceive the nations, and is consigned to the abyss a prisoner for one thousand years at least, as prophecy declares. Rev. 20. He comes to gather Israel, to establish Jerusalem, to build up Zion, to restore the waste places and desolations of many generations, to erect his kingdom, and reign with his saints, to reward those saints with those honors promised according to their works, when they will enter upon their reign with him in the "regeneration," sitting upon thrones assigned them, and positions as their several abilities may prove fit. Matt. 19:28; 25:14-30; Rev. 11:18; 20:4. We now proceed to notice briefly as purposed,

4. The time of our blessed Lord's return to earth. This we say cannot be definitely ascertained without a special and divine revelation. We know that many have assumed to have discovered that time, i.e., the very day when Christ would come, but time has proved that they were in error. We do not for once question the honest sincerity of many of those writers. They had sought diligently, they had studied deeply, and labored to know the time, and thought that they had found it; but, alas! were sadly mistaken. I do not mean by this that we shall not know the day, and even the hour, neither do I say but what we shall know the time sufficiently near that we shall not be taken by surprise, or he come suddenly and unexpectedly upon us, who have been waiting, who are waiting and anxiously watching for his coming. We shall know. Yes; bless God, we shall not be left in the dark in reference to this, that that day should overtake us as a thief. This promise is to the church not in darkness, and we may believe it with all confidence. 1 Thess. 5:1-8; Rev. 16:15; 3:3. This implies if we do watch, we shall know the hour.

Thank God, then, we shall not be left in the dark. The promise is sure. "Watch ye, therefore." In the meantime, however, our Lord gives us a parable, whereby we may learn the near approach of that day to a certainty, together with the signs the prophets and apostles have given as harbingers of his coming. We refer to the parable of the fig tree. Matt. 29:32. Here our Lord in this connection mentions a number of things which will occur prior to his coming again, such as the rising of kingdom against kingdom, nation against nation, persecution against the church, falling away from the faith, strange phenomena on earth, the darkening of the heavenly luminaries, the falling of the stars, the shaking of the powers of the heavens, the sign of the Son of man; and then refers us to the fig tree that we may know that summer is near, when we see her begin to bud and putting forth leaves. "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near [or He is near—margin], even at the doors." This being the case, we have every reason to believe that we are on the eve of that great day, and that our absent Lord will soon come. Let us be ready, wait, watch, and pray. Amen. We now pass to remark on

5. The necessity of his coming. The moral, religious, social, and physical condition of the world demand it to a greater extent than it did at his coming in humiliation. The whole creation groans and travails in pain for that event, and the consequent deliverance which it brings. Rom. 8:22. We see the necessity of his coming in the condition of the sleeping saints, as their resurrection depends upon this, and the establishment of God's kingdom. 2 Tim. 4:1. It is the christian's only hope, the crowning point and time of his reward, the hope of the waiting church. 1 Thess. 2:19; 2 Tim. 3:8; Rev. 22:12. The condition of the world is fearful to contemplate. Crime is on the increase, and extending on every hand. Mankind as a general thing are declining more and more from God and his truth. The nominal church is willing to put up with her externals, and outward gifts, and feasts of various kinds, while the gospel feast is uncalled for. They have departed from the truth-accepting fables; thus they resort to the house of Dagons, and worship the golden calf, while the ark of the covenant lies unnoticed as it were. Thus while He tarries the world grows still older in sin. The ancient landmarks are still further removed, and even the waiting church grows weary, cold and desponding, for "while the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept." Matt. 24.

Hence we observe the absolute necessity of his appearing. The blood of martyred saints demands it; injured innocence calls for it; the countless number of wrongs committed require it; the secret crimes and the glaring acts and blasphemous utterances of men would hasten it.

The widow's appeal to be avenged, the cry of the martyrs under the altar, the sigh of the saint, the tear of the pilgrim, the poverty of many of God's little ones, the misery of the lower animals, the wrongs enacted, the misery, the wretchedness, degradation and ruin accomplished by the traffic of intoxicating liquors, the deception and hypocrisy among men, the thousand other things in our midst, all demand and call in silent or in thunder tones for the coming of our blessed Lord to judgment and to reign.

6. Those who shall abide the day of his coming. This is the most practical and important point to us. The question contained in the text—"Who shall abide [or survive] the day of his coming [or time], and who shall stand [or bear inspection, so as to be accepted and approved—Matt. 22:11], when he appeareth?"

Let us notice those who will not be able to stand when he appeareth. We shall point out several characters which the Scriptures present. "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous." Ps. 1:5. These embrace all classes of the wicked which we shall enumerate. The extortioner, those who oppress the hireling in his wages, the fornicator, sorcerers, thieves, idolators, revilers, haters of those who are good, covetous persons, the effeminate, adulterers, whoremongers, drunkards, and drunkard makers, blasphemers, hypocrites and deceivers, bigots and backbiters, the fearful and unbelieving, the rejectors of the gospel and all liars and false professors of religion, with false teachers of religion. See Mal. 3:5; Gal. 5:19-21. For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness, men who hold the truth in unrighteousness, who, being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness . . . . full of envy, murder . . . . malignity, whisperers, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding; covenant breakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful, who, knowing the judgment of God, that they which commit such things are worthy of death." Rom. 1:18. Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Consult 1 Cor. 1:9, 10; 2 Pet. 2; 1 Pet. 4:17; Rev. 6:14. See what Jude predicts. St. John speaking of the holy city, and the character of those who are forbid to enter those pearly gates—"For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Rev. 21:8. Those classes are clearly defined who will not survive or abide the day of his coming. See Mal. 4, and Ps. 9:17.

And now let us look for a moment. Who are the characters that shall stand in the judgment? Who shall survive the day of His coming? We answer, or the Scriptures answer, the righteous, the meek, the sanctified in Christ Jesus, the willing and obedient, the doers of God's word, those who keep his commandments, those whose citizenship is in heaven, those who are kept through the power of God by faith, those who are washed from their sins through the blood of the Lamb, those who have given all for Christ, who have come out from the world, taken up their cross daily, who have confessed themselves pilgrims and strangers here, who have pursued the course of well doing, those who have been sealed and have the earnest of the inheritance, who have on the wedding garment, who watch and pray, who keep themselves unspotted from the world, who are looking for that blessed hope, "who love his appearing," who are ready as in Matt. 25:10, who are waiting as the Thessalonians that they come behind in no gift. 1 Cor. 1:7.

In a word, those who take heed to the solemn warnings and exhortations of the Lord Jesus speaking to the church down here,—"And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of all the earth." "Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21:34-36. May the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be sufficient in this hour.

TO THE WEEPING ONES.

S. WOODRUFF.

I read in Rev. 21:4—"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." The christian has many hours of joy and rejoicing here. God has given him an understanding of the way of life, and especially while he feels his heart yielding to the demands of the gospel, forming a life and character requisite to meet the approaching day, his whole being becomes enlightened and quickened through the power of Christ unlocking his mind to the living word of God and its precious promises of the coming future, at times losing sight of things here; bathed in the Spirit of his divine Master, he soars in the things of God till lost in thought, and for a little seems carried beyond the reach of the slanderer's tongue and the wild confusion of a giddy world and drunken nations, who are doomed to the bar of God to meet the vindication of his righteous judgments.

But amid all this ecstasy of joy, we find ourselves in the waiting assembly, not having passed as yet this night of weeping. Our loved ones are dying. We stop for a moment to weep because our little ones are not, but we hear the Master saying, "Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears; for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord, and they shall come again from the land of the enemy." But as we go forth bearing the precious news of salvation and eternal life, we can but weep over the lost and perishing of earth, and implore them by all that is good and lovely to seek a refuge in Jesus, a shelter beneath that Rock which is higher than they. We hear a voice saying, "Sow in tears, and reap in joy." "He that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him." Ps. 126:5, 6.

Weeping fathers and mothers, the little mound in yonder grave-yard speaks that we have a little treasure there hid from our view to-day by the clods of the valley; but let us be comforted; the grave cannot always hold them; the voice of our dear Redeemer will burst the silence of the tomb; "for the hour is coming," said Jesus, "when all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." Then let us not weep for the dead, but for the living.

We are living in an awful time. Lord! save our children from the waywardness of the wayward. Nothing but thy power, oh Lord, can save them. Send thy truth, that it may reach their hearts.

Weeping ones, be ye the Lord's, for this night of weeping is near its close, and the morning of joy will soon be ushered in, when God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and the days of our weeping be ended; for there will be no dying in the paradise of God.

EVIDENCES FOR THE COMING OF THE LORD IN 1873.

N. H. BARBOUR.

"And from the time the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination of desolation set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days. Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand and three hundred and five and thirty days. But go thou thy way till the end, for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days."—Dan. 12:11-13.

No prophecy of the Scriptures is of any private interpretation"; that is, no prophecy can be fully understood alone and by itself; each one hinges on another. Hence the understanding of the whole truth, especially on so great a subject as the time for the coming of the Lord, has been a progressive work. Prophecies which we once thought contained the whole matter, we now learn gave us but a part of the truth. Our text can only be understood from the basis of the "time, times and a half" of the seventh chapter. Hence the angel has brought it forward in this connection, as found in the preceding verses.

"THE DAILY."

"And from the time the daily sacrifice shall be taken away." This word "daily" occurs in Dan. 8:11, 11:31, and in our text; and refers, as we shall try to show, to the Jewish daily sacrifices. In the eighth chapter, the 2300 days are given in answer to the question—"How long the vision concerning the daily sacrifice and the transgression of desolation?" The vision covers the daily and the transgression of desolation; and seventy weeks of this vision were "determined" on the Jews, as a dispensation based on a "continual" or daily sacrifice. Therefore it seems very arbitrary to refer the first part of this vision—"the daily"—which was determined on the Jews, to something which has no connection with the Jewish dispensation, or the seventy weeks.

Some suppose the "daily" refers to paganism. If so, the seventy weeks would not be long enough to measure it. And yet the natural division is, "the daily, and the transgression of desolation"; not the "abomination of desolation"; that was papacy; while "the transgression of desolation," to my mind, refers to both pagan and papal Rome.

Another view held by some is, that the "daily" refers to the true worship. But that was never taken away by force of arms, either in Rome or in any other place. Being in the heart, and not with outward form, it can neither be taken away nor established by human laws. Oh no, beloved friends, this "daily" was the Jewish daily sacrifice. It ceased when Christ made an end of sacrifice, but was not taken away by force of arms until Jerusalem was destroyed. "Arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and they shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." Dan. 11:31. God's people had forsaken the holy covenant, and he let the Romans pollute their sanctuary of strength, and take away their "daily." (When taken away it was not a sacrifice, but an abomination.) "The daily was taken away and the place of his santuary [the temple] cast down." Dan. 8:11. "The days shall come upon thee that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee, because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." Luke 19:43, 44. "The people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary." Dan. 9:26.

It may be asked if the daily was taken away at the destruction of Jerusalem, and the abomination of desolation not set up until some centuries after, would there not be a break, a want of connection, in the prophecy? If the abomination refers to papacy, or the man of sin, I answer, No! "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work," said St. Paul, even in his day; "only he who letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way; then shall that wicked be revealed." The abomination began to grow before the daily was taken away, and continued to enlarge until he that "let" (pagan Rome) was taken out of the way; then the Roman arms "set up" this abomination in the seat of the dragon.

"THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION."
